Ind 115:332 S 19 '25 20w

"While her new book is very far from being 'A Great Novel—A Great Mystery—A Great Romance' as the publisher's extremely 'blurby blurb' calls it—it is a very good mystery story, well written and well developed, with some eerie and some thrilling moments, and a puzzle which perplexes the reader up to the very end." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p678 S '25 850w

"Comes about as near to fulfilling all the requirements for a bang-up mystery yarn as any one could ask. It is a tangled, a fascinating, a gloomy path the story takes, lightened here and there with touches of romance and young love. In addition to her unusual gift for contriving ingenious tales of this sort, Mrs. Rinehart portrays her characters with skill, she writes always with intelligence, and in a style that need not offend the most fastidious." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p2 Ag 15 '25 250w

"Mrs. Rinehart's new tale deserves all the readers it is sure to have. There is mystery enough between its covers to supply the fabric for a dozen stories of ordinary patchwork quality. In addition to the fundamental business of building up a maze from which the reader finds no certain exit until the last page has been reached, she has clothed her tale with the shivery qualities of an excellent ghost story, introduced just enough speculation of a spiritist kind, and drawn into the web of her mystery a group of people in which one can readily believe."

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 9 '25 1250w

"Mrs. Rinehart's mystery technique is practically perfect. She provides a triple-ply plausibility without a single hole in the logic. . . 'The Red Lamp' has many other merits. It has humor and pleasant characterization and philosophy." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Tribune p4 Ag 16 '25 950w

"'The Red Lamp' is one of those books that found or reinforce the fear that most of us have of strange noises, lights or silences when the sun is down. It robs housewives of interest in food, clothes, sweeping, conversation, bridge and tennis until the mystery has been solved."

+ N Y World p5m O 11 '25 100w

Pratt p46 autumn '25

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 23 '25 280w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p701 O 22 '25 140w

Wis Lib Bul 21:232 O '25

RINNE, FRIEDRICH WILHELM BERTHOLD.

Crystals and the fine-structure of matter; tr. by Walter S. Stiles. 195p il $4.20 Dutton [10s 6d Methuen]

548 Crystallography. Matter 25-5689

Written by the professor of mineralogy in the University of Leipsic the book is an attempt to deduce from the properties of crystals the main characteristics of the fine-structure of matter. It is illustrated with many explanatory figures.

"Although agreeing with Professor Rinne in the great and growing importance of the interrelations between chemistry, physics and crystallography, the reviewer does not feel that the treatment of the subject in this book is at all comparable with that in other recent publications. Nevertheless, if one cares to read through many pages devoted to such things as proof of the self-evident fact that the properties of crystals differ in different directions, he will find quite a few items of chemical interest, especially in the chapters on 'Crystal Growth and Solution,' 'Chemical Actions on Crystals,' and 'An Attempt to Form Some Idea of the Course of Chemical Reactions from Observations on Crystals.' M. L. Huggins

+ Am Chem Soc J 47:1783 Je '25 220w

Boston Transcript p5 My 9 '25 200w

"The book is commendable in that it can be read with ease, but at the same time there is nothing superficial about the style of treatment."

+ Chem & Met Eng 32:448 Ap '25 120w

"According to the preface the book was written largely for the general reader, but discussion of a large number of aspects of the subject has necessitated much condensation, and it is doubtful if much of the matter will be intelligible to the layman. The matter is very well selected and furnishes most stimulating reading; the book should prove most useful as an introduction to a detailed study of any aspect of crystallography. The later chapters, dealing with crystals and chemical reactions, are particularly suggestive. The book is well illustrated, though there is, on occasion, insufficient reference to diagrams in the text."

+ Nature 116:204 Ag 8 '25 230w

New Statesman 24:514 F 7 '25 350w

St Louis p125 My '25

"The volume is a little disappointing. The author professes to cater for the general reader, but makes quite extensive demands on technical knowledge. . . But the book should prove stimulating, for it covers a wide ground, and many of the figures are new, and represent much work in the drawing."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p62 Ja 29 '25 420w

RITTER, MARGARET TOD. Mirrors. 97p $1.25
Macmillan

811 25-9002

Sonnets and lyrics with a group of narrative poems make up this volume of verse.

"Shows a precise touch, a melodic sense, and an adequate grasp of the sonnet form. She makes her mistake in pseudo-Irish poems about leprechauns, may, and witchcraft. For all the writer knows, Miss Ritter may be Irish, but that does not change the bogus quality of her attempts at Celtic expression." H. S. Gorman
+ — Book 61:597 J1 '25 200w

"All of the ingredients of true poetry are here, nicely apportioned. There is a delicate sense of poetic values coupled with mature insight; there is color and warmth expressed with a proper degree of sensuousness; there is a subdued undercurrent of emotional feeling; and there is a good choice of words and forms." W. B.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 10 '25 600w

"She writes with the unformulated longings of youth, but we realize that a first book is to cut one's teeth upon, and in many of the poems Miss Ritter's wisdom teeth are strongly evidenced. She is mistress of the technique of poetry, and her sonnets are of even and excellent form." V. T. McC.
+ Cath World 121:570 J1 '25 220w

"Pretty good verse, on the whole, with some admirable sonnets and here and there an arresting touch."

+ Ind 114:619 My 30 '25 40w

"Ordinary poetry is either empirical or frankly imaginative, but a writer of Miss Ritter's caliber seems to tap the universal stream of consciousness, unlimited by age, or sex, or time or space. 'Mirrors' is a true reflection of the human heart, and its appeal must be as broad as humanity." Mildred Wasson
+ Int BK R p670 S '25 650w

"Margaret Tod Ritter has given us a first volume of verse that compares favorably with any of the other 'firsts' of recent years." W. B.

+ Lit R p10 J1 3 '25 300w

"Miss Ritter, though occasionally making a whimsical pirouette, prefers the grand manner, life with a capital L, beauty with a capital B, and the simulacra of anguish which are not infrequently fashioned by girls inexperienced in pain. Her opening sonnet is the least hysterical, as it is also the most evocative and quotable thing in the book." Babette Deutsch
Nation 121:261 S 2 '25 180w

"Although there is some inequality in them all the sonnets have dignity and originality. The book contains some poems of other types, songs with varied and felicitous meters." G. H. Busey

+ N Y Tribune p8 Je 7 '25 200w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman

+ — Outlook 140:113 My 20 '25 100w

"Like so many current collections of verse, this book is strikingly uneven in quality. At her best the author displays a thin but authentic lyric strain; at her worst, she descends to the commonplaces of mere prose. And yet in places her work manifests an appealing sincerity of emotion and flashes of real poetry; and in places she exhibits a singing quality which, while linked to no great distinctiveness of expression, may be taken as the sign of fulfilment of a genuine poetic impulse."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:52 Ag 15 '25 160w

RIVERS, WILLIAM FALSE RIVERS. Social organization; ed. by W. J. Perry. (History of civilization) 226p $4 Knopf [10s 6d K. Paul]

301 Sociology. Society, Primitive. Social psychology 24-16623

For descriptive note see Annual for 1924.

"Social Organization is a book which no student of institutions can do without. It is the last word of a most able student, one of the master minds of sociology. It is characterized by a charming lucidity, for which the reader will be grateful to both author and the editor." E. W. Gifford

+ Am Anthropol 27:319 Ap '25 900w

Reviewed by B. Malinowski

Nature 116:38 J1 11 '25 450w

"This important volume is based on the MS. used by Dr. Rivers for lectures at Cambridge three or four years ago and now very carefully revised by Mr. Perry. It deals clearly and succinctly with the foundations of society."

+ New Statesman 24:546 F 14 '25 220w

"So long as Dr. Rivers confines himself to the task of distinguishing between, describing, defining and classifying the various kinds of human grouping he is illuminating and convincing. But when he passes from the static study of social organization to chronological reconstructions and dynamic interpretations, he hypothesizes so many unverifiable factors that the discriminating reader is forced to conclude that here we have brilliant guessing, but not scientific explanation." R. G. S.

+ — Pol Sci Q 40:492 S '25 400w

ROBB, CARROLL E. Lion tamer. 321p $2 Harper

25-5961

When Mart Bannister was still a sensitive, freckle-faced high-school boy, Westport acclaimed him as a hero on the day he jumped into the arena of a circus and, strengthened by terror, grappled with an escaping lion. From that day he was spoken of as the lion-tamer. Ten years later Martin Bannister and his fiancée, Belle Cory, a cool, resolute young lady are on board the "John Christian," an excursion boat, when there comes the terrifying cry of "Fire." In the panic which follows Mart and Belle become separated. Mart jumps overboard and is picked up by a rescue ship. The next day Belle, who had been saved by Mart's rival upbraids him for his cowardice, the town takes up the cry, and Mart is driven from Westport in humiliation. But one day Mart returns to his town to stay, to fight for his place if he must, for he had learned the true value of courage.

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 25 '25 150w

"It is hard to know just how to appraise this first novel. It has many of the faults of the beginner, but it has good points, too. Although the subject has great possibilities, one's final feeling is that the author has not made enough out of it to warrant a full-length novel. It reads more like a padded short story. The characters lack either the depth or the breadth to carry conviction." Helen Wallerstein

+ — Lit R p10 My 9 '25 250w

"In the opening chapters of 'The Lion Tamer,' he can write with liveliness and a sense of narrative and decent style. But after getting off to this flying start in 'The Lion Tamer,' matters move on, if credibly enough, so slowly and uninterestingly that the conclusion seems always far in the distance. And it is, quite apart from its manner of telling, a hundred pages further off than the events demand."

+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 22 '25 500w

"One becomes so conscious of the same rhythm in the speeches that the people themselves become entangled and dim. But the descriptive scenes, the terror of fire, of death, are done with amazing passion and vividness."

+ — N Y Tribune p7 Ap 26 '25 460w

"'The Lion Tamer' is a very nice little experiment in giving the sense and the feeling of psychological drama in the novel form, with the reader and the writer sitting, as it were, side by side, looking on. Only rarely—these are the slips—does the writer slip away for a little saunter behind the scenes, where the reader may not go. But more than in most novels the omniscient author and judge is conspicuous by his absence. By now the novel has reached the stage where it is in sore need of a few good strong rules to hold its sprawling body within decent bounds; and Mr Robb seems filled with a real curiosity to test out a few on his own." Edna Kenton

Sat R of Lit 1:661 Ap 11 '25 600w

Wis Lib Bul 21:113 Ap '25

ROBERTS, CECIL EDRIC MORNINGTON.
Love rack. 376p $2 Stokes

25-19725

The love story of a young musician. Guy Fauvette and his mother live in semi-seclusion at Rapallo. They are utterly devoted to one another, and have never been separated until Guy's first concert tour which carries him to Geneva. There he has a chance encounter with an English girl who leaves for London before he learns her name. Several months later they meet again and the mutual interest swiftly ripens into love. Those who know his mother's unhappy secret seek to prevent Guy's marriage to Clare. But the love of the young couple triumphs over obstacles and reaches its happy conclusion in a rock-bound villa on the Italian coast.

"For a thoroughly good love story, 'The Love Rack' is to be commended heartily. Mr. Roberts has devised an absorbing plot; he has set his scene for the major part in a well-loved Italy and he has peopled the tale with a group of plausible and likeable human beings." F. A. G.
+ Boston Transcript p8 N 21 '25 520w

"A very pretty, pleasant little tale."

+ N Y Times p9 O 25 '25 460w

Sat R of Lit 2:264 O 31 '25 50w

"If his story is based on a frankly sentimental convention, the fact does not detract from his obvious ability. He describes quite credible people and frequently displays a nimble and pretty wit. For the rest, his story is concerned rather too exclusively with the pains and joys of sweetheating."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p754 N 12 '25 350w

ROBERTS, LEO BOND. Topographic mapping. 150p $1.50 Society of American military engineers, 810 Mills bldg., Washington, D.C.

526.98 Relief-maps

25-4967

"The opening chapters of his book deal with the instruments used in map making, chiefly the plane table. This is followed by a discussion of the methods of showing relief on maps and then chapters on the general subject of mapping and on topographic ground forms, showing by illustrations those features of terrain which the experienced topographer learns to recognize and work into his map without difficulty, but which cause frequent trouble for the novice. The last chapter discusses aerial photography as related to topographic mapping, and outlines briefly the major points in this relatively new method of preparing maps."—Eng N

Eng N 94:699 Ap 23 '25 170w

ROBERTSON, JAMES ALEXANDER. Hidden romance of the New Testament. 267p $2 Doran

225 Bible. New Testament

The author has set himself the task of unveiling the mystery in which at many points the New Testament narrative lies shrouded. With imagination guided by research he thus builds up the story of Joseph of Arimathea, identifies the house of the 'upper room,' linking with it the lives of Mark and Barnabas, points to the probable author of the letter to the Hebrews, and in the same manner offers a solution to other problems which have long puzzled Bible students.

"A delightfully imaginative and scholarly study, 'replete with spiritual suggestion.'" W. J. C.

+ Bookm 62:xxviii S '25 160w

"An interesting bit of romantic pragmatism."
J Religion 5:658 N '25 30w

ROBINSON, BEN CARL. Muskellunge fishing. 116p il $2 Appleton

799 Fishing. Muskellunge

25-6321

A practical guide book for fishermen that deals exclusively with the hardest fighting and most vicious fresh-water game fish of our northern waters. The author gives accurate information about the range of the muskellunge and how it can be differentiated from other species. Lines, hooks, rods and reels are also dealt with. The book contains some interesting photographs.

Booklist 21:332 Je '25

"The book is copiously illustrated with many photographs, which greatly enhance its value."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 25 '25 380w

"An authoritative account of the gamiest of the denizens of Northern lakes and rivers."

+ N Y Tribune p9 Mr 29 '25 130w

Wis Lib Bul 21:140 My '25

ROBINSON, BENJAMIN WILLARD. Gospel of John; a handbook for Christian leaders. 275p $2.25 Macmillan

226.5 Bible. New Testament—Gospels—St John

25-9323

A book which aims to embody in a single, comprehensive critical commentary the results of the prolonged and searching study which ever since the appearance of Westcott's commentary over forty years ago, has been applied to the Gospel of John.

J Religion 5:442 Jl '25 20w

"Dr Robinson is recognized as an authority in this field. He interprets the symbols freely used in the gospel, but occasionally seems to get lost in the maze."

Springf'd Republican p10 S 1 '25 380w

ROBINSON, BEVERLEY WILLIAM. With shotgun and rifle in North American game fields. 387p il $3.50 (15s) Appleton

799 Hunting

25-6323

Out of a wide experience covering every American game field and every species of game the author writes his book for fellow sportsmen and for the interested uninitiate. Part I is devoted to small game, the feathered quarry of forest, field and shore. Part II describes big game hunting in the West and North. The book is well illustrated and contains many practical suggestions to the hunter concerning his equipment and the range and habitat of the hunted.

Booklist 21:369 Jl '25

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 25 '25 250w

N Y Times p26 Mr 29 '25 380w

N Y Tribune p7 Je 7 '25 220w

"He is an able raconteur and enhances his tales with intimate descriptions of the country in which he has hunted. Just for the knowledge of outdoor life and good sportsmanship that is imparted, the book is worth reading, in addition to the thrills of the hunts."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 19 '25 240w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p303 Ap 30 '25 160w

ROBINSON, DAVID MOORE. Sappho and her influence. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 272p il $1.50 Marshall Jones [5s Harrap]

884 Sappho

25-1867

"In this account of the Lesbian poetess, Dr David M. Robinson of Johns Hopkins university tells with a wealth of stimulating allusions the story of her life, and the influence of those 191 fragments of hers upon later literature, art and music. He analyses the 'legendary fringe' of scandal which has

ROBINSON, DAVID MOORE—Continued
haunted Sappho's name. And he gives a genial and spirited interpretation of Sappho's poetry, with translations and adaptations copiously quoted, which serve as well as may be to convey to the non-classical lover of poetry the magic of the original Aeolic.—Springf'd Republican

"The general reader can find no more adequately condensed appreciation and account of the life and influence of the Greek poetess."

+ Booklist 21:270 Ap '25

"The book contains much that is new, especially in the recently discovered poems and in the chapter on 'Sappho in Art.' Much scholarly research also appears in the discussion of her influence on later ages. . . A work of undoubted value because of its scholarly and interesting treatment of the world's greatest woman poet." M. H. Swindler

+ Lit R p12 Mr 14 '25 600w

"The historical estimate of Sappho in different literatures of the world given by Dr. Robinson is almost encyclopedic. It includes the literature of Greece and Rome, of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, as well as Italian, Spanish, German, French, English and American literature, with a reference also to the Russian. . . One of the finest things in the book is the critical dealing with Sappho in art and music." M. M. Patrick

+ Modern Philol 20:168 Ap '25 720w

"This is the worst book in the series."

— Nation and Ath 38:sup250 N 14 '25 80w

"Prof. Robinson has a wonderfully wide knowledge of the translations and imitations of Sappho, and produces many not familiar in this country, as well as an Appendix of illustrations of the poetess in ancient art. . . The professor is so steeped in Sappho that he cannot bear a word against her and yields to sheer sentimentalism."

+ — New Statesman 25:266 Je 18 '25 150w

Reviewed by A. S. Pease

N Y Tribune p12 Jl 19 '25 650w

"Professor Robinson's book on Sappho is particularly interesting as biographical speculation, as literary history and criticism, as the study of legend and fact, and as a pretty complete account of the important things which have been said, written, imagined, painted, and sung about a famous and mysterious personage. He seems to cover the whole range of his subject, and his chapters on Sapphic translations and allusions in the literatures of the world are especially charming."

+ Outlook 140:304 Je 24 '25 180w

"The latest addition to the series, Our Debt to Greece and Rome, will be useful, no doubt; but it is astonishingly loose in construction and naïve in tone. The greatest value of the book is as an anthology of English translations."

+ — Spec 134:812 My 16 '25 460w

"One may differ with Dr Robinson's judgment on several points and yet recommend highly the volume to both students and general readers for its exact scholarship, its wealth of references and its inviting translations." W. R. Agard

+ Springf'd Republican p7a F 15 '25 560w

ROBINSON, EDGAR EUGENE. Evolution of American political parties; a sketch of party development. 382p $4 Harcourt

329 Political parties, United States—Politics and government 24-25538

The author, who is professor of American history in Stanford university, presents briefly and in the order of their appearance the succession of political parties thru which public opinion has expressed itself in the United States. Particular attention is given to the tracing of party origins. The American electorate is represented as divided into two great groups, neither of which is a political party in the sense of men bound together by a common doctrine or a specific program, but which have the habit of acting together on election day for the purpose of accomplishing certain definite results. It is also shown how small bodies of men under the cloak of their parties are able to control the government.

"A useful historical sketch of the development of parties in the United States since the establishment of the government under the constitution. The earlier chapters are more stimulating than the later chapters. The narrative of the early stages of development is less severely compressed, and shows clearly the advantages that come from added fullness of statement." A. P. U.

+ Am Econ R 15:308 Je '25 80w

"In his thoughtful book, the author considers and analyzes the various movements and periods of American party history. Events are intelligently related, and in consequence, their significance is clearly indicated. Party crises are analyzed, party changes accounted for. The volume is brief and sketchy, as of necessity, with the numberless topics brought under consideration. While it is descriptive, it is not the product of an effort at a sustained narrative but rather it is of the run-and-touch type of essay. However, the quick touch is nearly always suggestive and at times illuminating."

+ — Am Hist R 30:607 Ap '25 980w

"Except incidentally, and in the introduction and last chapter, the treatment cannot be called analytical or philosophical to any great degree. It is in the main historical, but selectively historical. All in all this book will constitute a welcome addition to the existing material dealing with the American party system and has the merit of being comprehensive in the extent of the period covered."

+ Ann Am Acad 121:190 S '25 1150w

Booklist 21:183 F '25

Reviewed by F. E. Haynes

Ind 113:577 D 27 '24 870w

Lit R p11 Ja 10 '25 70w

"His book will have much value as a systematic historical résumé of changes in party organization and control from the colonial period onward."

+ Nation 121:241 Ag 26 '25 60w

"It is the most thoroughly documented work that has appeared in its field. Despite the tone of scientific dispassionateness that pervades the work, one gets a pretty strong impression that it is a plea for a new party movement."

+ New Repub 42:78 Mr 11 '25 1000w

Reviewed by A. S. Will

N Y Times p7 D 21 '24 2050w

"To write a history of American political parties without at the same time writing a political history of the American people since parties began is assuredly no easy task. If Professor Robinson has not done the thing beyond cavil, he has at least done it appreciably better than anyone else who has attempted it, and his carefully written and admirably impartial book deserves the attention of all those, whether readers or students, who want to see what our political history on its party side is like."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:15 Ag 1 '25 320w

"Scholarly and brilliant study." Walter Nelles

+ Survey 55:256 N 15 '25 360w

Wis Lib Bul 20:288 D '24

ROBINSON, EDWIN ARLINGTON. Dionysus in doubt. 117p $1.75 Macmillan

811

25-7496

Mr Robinson's latest volume contains four long poems, two of them in dialogue form, and several sonnet groups.

"When George Meredith, a decade or more ago, challenged the literary world with his cry for 'Brain! More brain!' Robinson was the tardy and triumphant answer of the Muses. A scorn for the mentally inexpensive—a scorn which burns hotter and whiter in his latest book, Dionysus in Doubt—is the salient quality of his meticulous art. Linked with a superb craftsmanship and a nipping irony, it produces a first-water poet who, while reminiscent of Browning at his subtlest, remains inimitably himself." Virginia Moore

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '25 350w

Booklist 21:373 J1 '25

"'Dionysus in Doubt,' it is to be suspected, will grieve some of his readers and delight others. For lovers of poetry it will prove one of those rare treats which Mr. Robinson prepares so quietly and so well. And—here is where the grievances come in—the reader will find 'Dionysus in Doubt' and 'Demos and Dionysus,' two poems that are in themselves rather disconcerting accusations directed at an over-legislated land where the privilege of independent living has become a mean dependency of an organized Drive for Salvation." H. S. Gorman

+ Bookm 61:595 J1 '25 550w

"In 'Dionysus in Doubt' Mr. Robinson has made an estimate of life without once trailing the white garment of poetry in the often-muddy puddle of preaching. It is gratifying to have Mr. Robinson come forward with so much new material in his best manner. All the brilliance, preciseness, restraint, soberness of his best work of former days is here." J. R. S.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 4 '25 860w

Dial 79:261 S '25 180w

"This volume will not add appreciably to the already adequate recognition of Mr. Robinson as a poet of ideas and technique. The poem from which the volume takes its name is a rather labored diatribe on the blindness and folly of the poet's native land. It is reasonably good satire, though crabbed and wordy in the saying—and that is all."

+ Ind 114:563 My 16 '25 250w

"The sonnets included in this volume are a group of fine lyric quality. Always there are the careful, workmanlike lines, full of delicate, subtle tracteries of thought; always the rich, delicately etched perspective with its deep, philosophic implication. . . . It is the deep, rugged quality of the poet, the large native nobility, the broad-based humanity with its sure insights and awareness that give peculiar pointedness and power to this volume." Mary Siegrist

+ Int Bk R p586 Ag '25 1100w

"In the sonnets of the present volume Mr. Robinson is at his best, and—in compression, in psychological suggestion and in difficulty of comprehension—most like Browning. Where the poet, mastering the psychologist, turns from man's anguished soul to more contemplative moods he wins an austere beauty." J. T. Shipley

+ Lit R p5 Ap 4 '25 750w

"The deadly quiet tread of these irregular rhymes is the tread of a poet whose accomplishment at its height has always been uncanny. But the body of the piece is a sermon by Dionysus on the perils of false democracy, and the rhymes neither fit such a subject nor compel it to fit them. It remains a refractory, almost a trivial, subject in the fine hands of one who has never, it seems to me, been impressive as a philosophical poet." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 120:428 Ap 15 '25 560w

"Mr. Robinson, doubtless, has many shortcomings. His is not a prophetic voice; and the greater part of his work—with such an exception as his sonnet 'The Sheaves'—lacks what Pater called so happily 'mystic perfume.' But there is ever a finely repressed anguish of thought; and if he permits no lustre to his lines, no accessory beauties, his style is not open to the accusation of hardness." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 29 '25 1900w

"This volume is the work of a poet whom I esteem above all the other poets of his country; yet it is not a pleasant task to write of it, for in its supposedly major portions there is little I can praise. But, happily, this volume has a middle as well as a beginning and an end; and in that middle section there is much that will delight the lover of Mr. Robinson's highly individual art." B. R. Redman

+ N Y Tribune p4 S 6 '25 850w

Reviewed by Joseph Auslander

N Y World p7m Ap 26 '25 250w

"The four dialogues, distinguished as they are in condensed style and dramatic detail, fail to admit the reader to any closer acquaintance with his philosophy than is found in other books of his. In the sonnets, on the other hand, I feel—illogically, it may be—a new poignance, as of violins with muted strings." G. H. Conkling

No Am 222:159 S '25 280w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman

Outlook 140:112 My 20 '25 230w

Pratt p26 autumn '25

"If sonnets can assume the proportion of dramatic narratives, Robinson's have achieved this almost impossible feat. And—though here and there the poet allows his turn of cryptic implication to seem a too frequently performed trick—if anything is needed to disprove the charge that Robinson is allowing his idiom to dictate itself, this volume is a complete and cumulative answer." L. Untermeyer

Sat R of Lit 1:741 My 9 '25 1000w

ROBINSON, GIL. Old wagon show days. 250p il $2.50 Brockwell pub. co., 20 E. Commerce st., Cincinnati, O.

791 Circus

25-4968

The writer is the son of a pioneer showman, John Robinson, who founded his circus in 1824 and travelled with it over a new and rough country. He was not only a circus proprietor, but manager and performer, and a famous horse rider. His son describes growing up with the circus, travelling experiences thru the West and South and many incidents and characters of the old show days.

Booklist 22:20 O '25

"The book has not been edited. It is just as Mr. Robinson wrote it, without literary embellishment, and its charm is enhanced by the sincerity of its language."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 18 '25 250w

"Any boy who ever beat the sun up to greet a circus or who hung around the cook tent, listening to the wild tales of the 'razor backs,' will find in 'Old Wagon Show Days' a door opening into a delightful past." E. A. H.

+ Lit R p10 Mr 14 '25 220w

"It is a simple narrative, simply told, of the romantic, golden age of the circus in America, and for those who care about romance and adventure it will have a fascination like that of a novel."

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 29 '25 460w

"The original John emerges from the son's pages as one who fully deserves the detailed treatment here received."

+ N Y Tribune p8 Mr 15 '25 160w

Outlook 139:660 Ap 29 '25 300w

"As a sidelight upon an interesting phase of early American amusement, the book deserves a place in research libraries, but will be more popular with a different class of readers."

+ Spring'd Republican p5a Je 14 '25 250w

ROBINSON, LENNOX, ed. Golden treasury of Irish verse. 346p $1.75 (7s 6d) Macmillan

821.08 Irish poetry—Collections. English poetry—Irish authors 25-6345

"It is the selection by a man of sensitive appreciation of poems which may gratuitously be called Irish (and then only because they were written by Irishmen), but which are memorable chiefly because their appeal is somehow of no particular locality but is universal. The selection reaches significantly not often beyond the eighteenth century. From then on to the present day Irish poets have sung their lustiest. There are many translations from the Gaelic,

ROBINSON, LENNOX, ed.—Continued
and among the later and modern poets represented are to be found Oscar Wilde, Lionel Johnson, Katherine Tynan, J. M. Synge, Francis Ledwidge, W. B. Yeats, James Joyce, Padraic Colum and many others."—Lit R

"Scarcely any poetry in the world is so passionately racial, so deeply rooted in the primal earth. Because Mr. Robinson's collection demonstrates this fact more strikingly than any other we have seen, and because it comes nearest to our ideal of 'pure poetry' in the largest sense, we have no hesitation in recommending the book to all poetry lovers."

+ Bookm 61:709 Ag '25 220w

"Mr. Robinson has made a very complete and satisfying job of it. There can be few quarrels on account of forgotten authors or overlooked favorites. The present volume is well worthy to take its place on the ever-widening shelf of golden treasures."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 1 '25 150w

"On the whole the anthology affords an eminently satisfactory conspectus of Irish poetry in English, or, to adapt MacDonough's phrase, English poetry written by Irishmen. But in the face of the editor's protest that he has not tried to be 'representative' there persists the wonder why the devotional poetry of a passionately devout people should here be so conspicuously scant." E. M. K.

+ Cath World 121:713 Ag '25 350w

"It is a beautiful little book, packed with music and dreams."

+ Lit R p13 My 2 '25 160w

Nation and Ath 37:212 My 16 '25 60w

"A book of lyrics alive with melody, and abounding in the imaginative patterns as well as in the mystic ardor for which Celtic poetry is renowned. The fact that the inclusions are not chronologically arranged, nor yet pedantically fenced off by subject matter, serves to heighten the charm of the book." Babette Deutsch

+ New Repub 43:354 Ag 19 '25 350w

"The present selection, in general excellence and compass, rivals the well-known compilation by T. W. Rolleston and Stopford Brooke, which only included the earlier work of such pioneers of the modern school as Mr. W. B. Yeats and Mr. George Russell (A. E.). This anthology will be a permanent pleasure to most readers. By choice and proportion it is also excellent criticism."

+ New Statesman 25:48 Ap 25 '25 780w

"Here you will find in abundance perfect simplicity and directness and naturalness in expression with all the magic of indefinable and ever lovely implications." Arthur Guiterman

+ Outlook 140:113 My 20 '25 220w

"The collection is up to moment, for the work of the younger poets is well represented. As is inevitable, gravel as well as gold has escaped through the careful riddle."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p218 Mr 26 '25 550w

ROBINSON, WILLIAM HEATH. Bill the minder; il. by the author. new ed 254p $3 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

25-13001

"Written and illustrated for boys and girls in their early teens. Bill is the young nephew of Chloe, wife of old Crispin, the mushroom grower. Crispin ate so much jelly that he could not mind the children, ten of them, and it was necessary to find some one to look after them. Various minders were tried but they all failed and Bill was called in as a last resort. He proved to be such a capable minder that he succeeded in keeping the baby quiet until all his teeth were cut. And at the annual Minding Tournament held by the Duke, Bill won all the prizes and became so well known and so successful that he was soon the only minder in the whole countryside."—Lit R

"I was delighted with 'Bill the Minder.' And Mr. Robinson's drawings will please every one who has any taste in illustrations inspired by humor and imagination." G. W. Douglas

+ Lit R p12 D 27 '24 520w

"'Bill the Minder' was first published some dozen years ago, but it is still just as charming and quaint and amusing and delightful a story as it was before the war had made a different world out of this blood-soaked earth."

+ N Y Times p7 D 7 '24 250w

ROBSON, EDGAR ILIFF. Wayfarer in Czecho-Slovakia. 211p il $3 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen] 914:7 Czechoslovak republic—Description and travel 26-929

"The author tells you the best way to reach Czecho-Slovakia, how to meet the language difficulties, how to travel to the best advantage within the country, what to eat and drink, and the places of interest to visit, especially in Prague. In addition he gives a short history of Bohemia, with biographical sketches of two of her great men, John Hus and Jan Zizka."—Publisher's note

"It is an interesting book even if the traveller only travels in his armchair."

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 21 '25 380w

Reviewed by Helen Wallerstein

Lit R p4 N 7 '25 120w

"He writes agreeably and carefully, especially when dealing with historical associations; and his volume, while it will be enjoyed by hearthside tourists, is primarily designed as a practical handbook for actual wayfarers in Czecho-Slovakia."

+ Nation and Ath 37:601 Ag 15 '25 70w

New Statesman 25:578 S 5 '25 150w

"His book is the everlasting hodge-podge which has led to the disheartening disrepute from which one must struggle to rescue the travel book." Blair Niles

— N Y Tribune p24 O 25 '25 220w

"Mr. Robson breaks ground which will be fresh to most readers; even those who knew Bohemia well in pre-war days will find much that is new and entertaining in this record, the value of which is greatly enhanced by the admirable pencil drawings of Mr. J. R. E. Howard."

+ Sat R 140:352 S 26 '25 120w

"This should prove a good practical guide-book to a country whose new name has lately advertised it to the serious tourist. Mr. Robson's pages are pleasantly interspersed with historic chat and charming drawings."

+ Spec 135:501 S 26 '25 50w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p515 Ag 6 '25 120w

ROBSON, WILLIAM A. Relation of wealth to welfare. 176p $2.25 Macmillan [7s 6d Allen & U.]

331 Wealth

[25-1213]

The writer conceives of income as that which comes into the life of the individual in the shape of various elements of human welfare. He examines these elements one by one—health, art and its appreciation, education, work—and considers the effect in the life of the individual of private wealth on the one hand and of collective action and public expenditure on the other. His conclusion is that the power of private wealth to increase the welfare of its possessor is comparatively small. The book is an evaluation of income in terms of welfare rather than of wealth.

Booklist 22:11 O '25

Boston Transcript p6 N 14 '25 180w

"Mr. Robson has written a book that we hope will stimulate thought, but he should beware of the American habit of piling up quotations from all the authorities he can lay hands on."

+ — New Statesman 24:426 Ja 17 '25 670w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p715 N 6 '24 170w

ROCHE, ARTHUR SOMERS. Pleasure buyers. 321p $2 Macmillan

25-10692

"Palm Beach provides the stage-setting and explains the title of Arthur Somers Roche's new mystery story, 'The Pleasure-Buyers.' For here to this luxurious, semi-tropical place come those who depend on their money to provide them with amusement."—N Y Times

"The plot is skillfully planned, with an elaboration of detail which will make its climax—surprising—as it will prove to most readers—paradoxically anti-climax to others. If surprise be the paramount necessity in the climax of a detective story—well—Mr. Roche has provided it generously." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 24 '25 650w

Ind 115:192 Ag 15 '25 80w

"While 'The Pleasure-Buyers' is a very long way from ranking with the best among recent stories of the type, it is an amusing narrative, pleasantly told, with some neat little twists to help it along."

+ — N Y Times p8 Je 14 '25 420w

"The story would be an excellent detective yarn if Mr. Roche would leave it alone. He tries to combine incompatible offices; those of a writer of thrillers and a commentator on the American social scene. He is a skillful writer of thrillers."

N Y Tribune p10 Jl 19 '25 280w

Outlook 140:433 Jl 22 '25 50w

"Crude in construction, careless in style, platitudinous in its moralizing, this book is without literary life."

— Sat R of Lit 2:52 Ag 15 '25 100w

ROCKOW, LEWIS. Contemporary political thought in England. 335p $5.25 Macmillan [15s L. Parsons]

320 Political science. Great Britain—Politics and government [25-18668]

"Mr. Rockow's aim is to discuss contemporary political thought with the practical object of improving our political institutions. He is keenly alive to the bearing of psychology in democratic politics, and his book opens with a survey of McDougall's work. Bolshevism is discussed in the central chapter, and Mr. Rockow has no difficulty in exposing its inapplicability to British conditions. His criticism leads him to a sympathetic treatment of the philosophy of compromise and to the cautious conclusion that the social implications of ownership will become more prominent and that the democracy of tomorrow will make full use of expert advice."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"The chief defects in Mr. Rockow's book are those which arise from the orientation of his own thought and the lack of inclusiveness of his work. While fair minded, his judgments are colored by his background and outlook, which are obviously those of the philosopher and moralist." H. E. Barnes

+ — Nation 121:359 S 30 '25 1200w

"Mr. Rockow has written an honest and comprehensive survey of contemporary political thought in England." Kingsley Martin

+ Nation and Ath 37:491 Jl 18 '25 1050w

"A very good book might be written on this subject; but Mr. Rockow has not written it. He goes the wrong way to work. In a series of chapters, each devoted to one or two writers he makes a painstaking and usually accurate summary of the views of the thinkers he has chosen, and then follows up his summary with some sort of comment. This is in most cases scrappy and inadequate, and there is very little attempt to pull the disconnected chapters together into a coherent whole."

— New Statesman 25:236 Je 6 '25 280w

"There are one or two misprints in this book, and a few lapses into ungrammatical English, but on the whole Mr. Rockow has presented the pageant of theory with singular lucidity."

+ Spec 135:77 Jl 11 '25 520w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p387 Je 4 '25 160w

RODD, SIR JAMES RENNELL. Social and diplomatic memories (third series) 1902-1919. 401p $7.50 Longmans [21s E. Arnold]

B or 92

The third volume completes this series of social and diplomatic memories, and tells in interesting detail the story of Sir Rennell Rodd's experiences as ambassador at Rome from 1908 thru the years of the World war.

"Sir Rennell Rodd is a man of letters and writes well."

+ New Statesman 26:supxxii D 12 '25 70w

"Most entertaining and diverting book. All through these pages we get an impression that the writer intensely enjoys social life as seen from the Embassy. This enjoyment he has the skill to pass on. He leaves his reader with that indefinable sense of mental refreshment which is more often associated with good company than with books."

+ Spec 135:1043 D 5 '25 1450w

"Sir James Rennell Rodd in the course of his memoirs has a good many occasions to pass judgment on his colleagues, and it is to be noted that they are almost invariably devoid of malice. It is not easy to agree with all of his opinions, or even with some of his actions."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p845 D 10 '25 1700w

ROE, VINGIE EVE (MRS RAYMOND C. LAWTON). Splendid road. 303p $2 Duffield [7s 6d Cassell]

25-6946

In "The splendid road" are pictured the days of '49 when the Oregon trail was the path of history and the highway of romance. The dominant character in the story is an extraordinary woman, whose beauty, courage and assurance in the face of trials and hardships earned for her the respect of men, and the enmity of women, for Sandra Denault was different from her drab fellow-travelers. In her blood ran the wild joy of gold—to find it—to possess it. Her claim was rather a meagre one, so she frequented Dan Clehollis's gambling hall where "winner's luck" awaited her—all in accordance with Dan's purposes. The tide of fortune turns with the coming of a daring young rider, who brings into Sandra's life love and tragedy.

Boston Transcript p4 Je 10 '25 240w

"The action of the tale sometimes seems a little clogged with scenery, but there is action aplenty involving quaint characters, desperadoes, gamblers and women." E. A. Hackett

+ — Lit R p9 Ap 18 '25 380w

"Miss Roe is a competent craftsman in her own domain, but 'The Splendid Road' has been subjected to such heavy travel in past decades on the part of popular writers that it ought to be indefinitely closed to further traffic."

+ — N Y Times p27 Je 14 '25 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Je 11 '25 80w

ROGERS, CLARA KATHLEEN (BARNETT) (MRS HENRY MUNROE ROGERS) (CLARA DORIA). Your voice and you: a practical application of psychology to singing. 125p $1.75 Ditson

784.9 Singing and voice culture 25-5194

"Mrs. Rogers here sums up her study of what the singer should do. The book is a direct, practical and compact message from one who knows to the many students of song who are eager to know. That the work stresses the

ROGERS, CLARA KATHLEEN—Continued
psychological aspects of singing rather than its physiological processes is in accord with the major trend of today."—Publisher's note

"Excellent advice on the technic of singing."
+ Booklist 22:21 O '25

"More singing and less psychology would have made a better combination. The psychology is of the inspirational sort. The practical advice to singers is excellent."

+ — Nation 120:722 Je 24 '25 20w

ROHMER, SAX, pseud. (ARTHUR SANSFIELD WARD). Dream detective. 309p $2 Doubleday [2s Jarrolds]

25-9821

Here are ten episodes of crime each one concerning the mysterious history of some relic of ancient times. Scotland Yard is puzzled and seeks the services of Morris Klaw, an eccentric old gentleman, whose acute psychic sensibilities give him the peculiar power of recovering ideas thrown out by the scheming mind of the criminal. By this method which he terms "odic photography," Klaw tracks down the cleverest of criminals. The first tragedy occurs in the Greek room of a museum where an attendant is found murdered beside a case containing a priceless Athenian harp which evidently has been tampered with. Klaw intervenes in time to prevent another horrible murder and by his singular method of mind photography solves the problem.

"Sax Rohmer is perhaps the one writer of mysterious tales whose name approaches an unqualified trade mark in writing. Since the beginning days of Dr. Fu Manchu, he has successfully met the tireless thrill-hunger of his readers."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 18 '25 100w

Reviewed by L. Moore

Int Bk R p474 Je '25 100w

"No doubt each story adequately served its purpose in a magazine, but when the ten are gathered together, the machinery, similar in each case, becomes painfully evident. A great deal of ingenuity has been expended on each tale, but there is not enough verisimilitude to make it go down."

— Sat R of Lit 2:32 Ag 8 '25 260w

ROLFE, FREDERICK WILLIAM (FRED-ERICK BARON CORVO, pseud.). In His own image; with an introd. by Shane Leslie. 421p
$2.75 Knopf

"Frederick Rolfe, some time Fr. Rolfe and some time Baron Corvo, 'spoilt priest' and literary trickster, had almost been forgotten were it not for this book of his stories which have just now been resurrected. And this would have been unfortunate. For Frederick Rolfe alias Baron Corvo is certainly one of the most fascinating of those various literary curiosities of England between the Victorian and the Georgian periods. To these resurrected stories
Mr. Shane Leslie has written an interesting introduction on the life of Baron Corvo. He was,
if you will, the incarnation of the Yellow Book,
with his literary perversities and his opera bouffe antics."—Sat R of Lit

"'In His Own Image' is not the sort of book that could attract widespread interest, neither is it so striking a literary achievement that it must, despite its type, command the attention of literary circles. It is not that it fails to create interest, nor that the workmanship is without merit; the book is both entertaining and well-written. But that very quality which best serves to maintain the interest of the reader for the moment—its eccentricity of form and of matter—must inevitably detract from its permanence." B. P. H.

— + Boston Transcript p3 My 23 '25 620w

"The book which has long been out of print is worth reading for its own sake and also for presenting a strange, abortive talent and personality to readers of the present day."

+ Ind 114:704 Je 20 '25 120w

"Corvo copied the affectations of his age and followed its intellectual fashions, but there seems to be no evidence that he even intuitively understood their direction or their meaning. If Wilde was a forerunner he, it would appear, was scarcely more than a characteristic by-product. In another age he could not have existed, and in his own he was hardly noticed."

J. W. Krutch

Nation 120:694 Je 17 '25 920w

"Of In His Own Image we need hardly say more than what James Douglas said of six of them when they appeared in the Bodley Booklets: 'The most amazing, fantastical, whimsical, bizarre, erratic, and hare-brained of books.'"

Sat R of Lit 1:809 Je 6 '25 220w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p865 D
18 '24 1450w

ROLLAND, ROMAIN. Annette and Sylvie;
tr. from the French by Ben Ray Redman.
331p $2.50 Holt

25-3849

"Annette and Sylvie" is the prelude of a work in several volumes entitled "The soul enchanted." Six months before the story opens Annette Rivière had lost her father and she is still crushed by her loss. She is alone in the world but well equipped financially and intellectually. In going over her father's papers Annette discovers that she has a sister living in Paris, unacknowledged by her father.
She immediately seeks out Sylvie and brings her home to live. The story has to do with the relations of the two sisters and with Annette's first love affair, begun most happily but terminated, tho not before she had given herself completely to her lover, because she feared his egoism and possessiveness.

"He is the Beethoven of the novel. He is a composer whose scores happen to be written in prose. His every work is symphonic. Annette and Sylvie is the first movement of another symphony." Lucien Price

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf My '25

Booklist 21:304 My '25

"If it does not reproduce the choppy style of the original, it is vastly more agreeable to read. To deliver judgment on a work after reading the prelude would be rash, so let it be said that 'Annette and Sylvie' is very much more readable and entertaining than the second volume, 'Summer,' which is just about as dull and old fashioned a piece of French melodramatic fiction as I have ever tried to read."

Ernest Boyd

+ Bookm 61:222 Ap '25 300w

"It is no wonder that Annette interests us, no wonder she interests Romain Rolland with his clarity of vision, his power of analysis, his deep insight into the workings of human nature. Most remarkable of all is the almost uncanny understanding he possesses of women. Many men have written of women, but not as Romain Rolland has written. With neither Jean Christophe nor Colas is his touch more sure. Annette lives and we know her—just a little bit better than we know ourselves!" D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 14 '25 1600w
Ind 114:423 Ap 11 '25 70w

Reviewed by C. de Kay

Int Bk R p262 Mr '25 1750w

Reviewed by Donald Douglas

Lit R p3 F 21 '25 1000w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 120:496 Ap 29 '25 150w

Reviewed by J. Carter

N Y Times p5 F 8 '25 1850w

Reviewed by R. T. House

N Y Tribune p4 Mr 1 '25 850w

"'The Soul Enchanted,' of which this present volume is the first part, offers (though it is obviously a lesser work) richness of promise comparable to that of the first volume of 'Jean Christophe.' " Kenneth Fuessle

 + — N Y World p7m F 8 '25 700w
 Reviewed by H. W. Boynton
 Outlook 139:346 Mr 4 '25 500w
 Reviewed by Jean Catel
 Sat R of Lit 1:662 Ap 11 '25 450w

ROLLAND, ROMAIN. Summer; tr. from the French by Eleanor Stimson and Van Wyck Brooks. 365p $2.50 Holt

25-18060

Summer is the second volume of "The soul enchanted." When the story opens, Annette is absorbed in the coming of her child. Her determination to bear, acknowledge and support him, after refusing to marry the father, shocks the bourgeois world in which she lives. Society is closed to her. But her passionate courage does not falter. Poverty, hard work, rebuffs, these are easy to bear for her son. But as she reaches the full tide of glowing maturity, loneliness and lovelessness are more difficult to put down. Her very capacity for life at its utmost in loving and suffering is at once her strong ally and her relentless enemy. Julien and Marcel she is able to resist, but with the coming of Philippe love and passion are not to be denied. Yet from her yielding she once more wrenches victory.

"The skill of this is uncanny. Such work can have been done only by deliberate reliance on intuitional meditation. Imagine a Henry James able and willing to write simply and to feel keenly with human beings not of one class only but of all classes; a Henry James dowered alike with subtlety and with simplicity. Add to this the deadly cut and stab that go with the practised swordsman of socialist thinking; for, unlike the average mere story-telling novelist, M. Rolland is able to score the melody of his narrative above a ground-base of economics, statecraft, art, and science." Lucien Price

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf O '25 630w
 Booklist 22:74 N '25

"'Summer' will probably send the reader back to 'Annette and Sylvie,' but it is in no sense dependent upon the earlier volume. Its own form is at once sufficient unto itself and, by virtue of technical genius, perfectly suited to become a portion of a whole." Will Cuppy

+ Bookm 62:213 O '25 500w
 Boston Transcript p5 S 19 '25 1200w
 Cleveland p123 D '25

"One puts down 'Summer' with the feeling that, for M. Rolland, no sex barrier exists; that his intuition enables him to understand the heart of Woman no less than that of Man. His daring in undertaking the epic of Woman is supported by a clairvoyance too astonishing almost for belief." Harry Salpeter

+ Int Bk R p58 D '25 980w

"'The Soul Enchanted,' in its present unfinished state, cannot fairly be compared with 'Jean-Christophe,' but it shares many of the admirable qualities of that masterpiece; it has a certain imposing breadth and depth. There is the fascination of following every inner turn of a human life, in particular the life of an unusual woman, and this reader, at least, who has enjoyed every word of the two books already published cannot see how any one, having gone with Annette through her early and her middle years, can bear to let her go without reading her story to the last word." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p2 S 19 '25 600w

"With the pith of a relentless logic and the embellishment of a superb literary facility, 'Summer' is a tract against current morality, which bears promise of developing, in its next instalment, into a remorseless assault upon patriotism. Its conclusions are to be treated lightly only so far as the evidence adduced is unsound, and the only defect in Romain Rolland's case for his super-woman is the very fact of her superiority." J. Carter

N Y Times p10 O 11 '25 960w

"'Summer' is a great epic, the 'Paradise Lost' of a strong, noble and honorable woman. And the successive crises come into line in a great unity, a great progress, which is more easily felt than formulated. As a matter of fact, Rolland's books are almost like life because they are almost as elusive as life." R. T. House

+ N Y Tribune p1 S 27 '25 1650w

"After reading 'Summer,' one knows that Rolland has fashioned in Annette Riviere a mate for Jean Christophe. However we may differ about certain things in the novel, I believe it must be plain to all that Rolland has added a great character to the gallery of French—if not of world—fiction." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p6m N 8 '25 1100w

"Annette is the idealist of sex, and, like all Rolland's idealists, she not only gets the worst of it, but is regarded by her creator as all the better on that account. His sympathy for minorities and lost causes has come to seem little better than a glorification of defeated revolt, for defeat's sake. The slavery of revolt, of liberty conceived not as a right but as a duty—it is this which renders lifeless and depressing Romain Rolland's studies of free souls." Ernest Boyd

Sat R of Lit 2:119 S 12 '25 1050w

ROLT-WHEELER, FRANCIS WILLIAM.
 Hunters of ocean depths. (Museum ser.) 303p
 il $1.75 Lothrop

Ocean 25-8112

A narrative of an oceanographical cruise in which the marvels encountered are explained to Bernard, the young boy of the party by Professor McDree, Chu Ting the Chinese artist, and the other members of the expedition. Bernard learned much fascinating marine biological lore, some of it necessarily technical. But doubtless long after he had forgotten the technicalities he remembered the fight between the whale and a giant squid, his plight in the Sargasso sea, his adventure with the polar bears and other thrilling episodes of the cruise.

Booklist 22:37 O '25

"As few know much of the study of oceanography, and Dr. Rolt-Wheeler is an authority on the subject, the book will make an appeal to both boys and their elders."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 16 '25 120w

"More interesting and less technically specialized than was the author's recent 'The Gem-Hunters.' It is an instructive story for boys and girls on life down in the ocean. There are a few thrilling experiences for the boy in the book, but I wish the conversations were not so stilted." M. G. Bonner

+ — Int Bk R p59 J1 '25 120w

Spring'd Republican p7a Je 21 '25 200

Wis Lib Bul 21:233 O '25

ROMAINS, JULES, pseud. (LOUIS FARI-GOULE). Lucienne; tr. by Waldo Frank. 255p
 $2.50 Boni & Liveright

25-5458

The outward Lucienne is a beautiful, serene, well-bred young woman, by virtue of talent a musician and by virtue of necessity a music teacher. It is really the inner Lucienne—extraordinarily sensitive and keen, seeing thru to the heart of things—whose portrait is etched here. She is engaged to give piano lessons to the two daughters of a provincial French family, and is almost immediately involved in the rivalry of her pupils for the attentions of their personable cousin Pierre. The emotional contest is seen thru the eyes of Lucienne, who describes it with subtle characterization and brilliant philosophy. The interest lies not so much in the tale itself as in the manner of its telling.

Booklist 21:384 J1 '25

ROMAINS, JULES, pseud.—Continued.

"There is a curious fascination in the telling of this banal story which will make the reader who expected more of Jules Romains continue out of an old allegiance, while its very lack of originality will endear it to the new reader in search of an exciting story." Ernest Boyd

Bookm 61:353 My '25 330w

"A very pleasant romance, of a not too original plot, and padded perhaps a trifle too much with words meant to describe the emotions of the principals. There is a superabundance of psychology in the novel which clouds the action and, to our mind, at least, falls entirely to add to the interest of the story." K. S. — + Boston Transcript p3 Mr 14 '25 850w

Cleveland p82 JI '25

"It is not a great novel—it is not aimed at greatness. It is deliberately kept small, minor, and exquisite. The moments, the scenes of his story are very few, very simple. They are not calculated for any largeness of effect. They are sufficient, because M. Romains brings to each of them an absorbed and exquisite consciousness. The real beauty of the story is precisely in this flowing consciousness." Conrad Aiken

+ Dial 79:60 JI '25 1700w

"The story unfolds as naturally as a flower, and—like a flower—it celebrates the whole mystery of life in its simplicity. Romains belongs to the mystical tradition of French literature, being an artist who—having plunged into deep pools of emotion—emerges with a clarity of vision which gives luster to his ideas." Lisle Bell

+ Nation 120:605 My 27 '25 700w

"M. Romains is nearly always over-explicit: if he is trying to give you a collective feeling about a certain event, and the subtle reverberations of that event in many minds, he never forgets the goal and its method. Lucienne, which is not equal to his best work, suffers from this old habit." J. Eversharp

— New Repub 43:352 Ag 19 '25 320w

"As a simple skillful story infused with mystical suggestiveness and related with a beautiful economy of material, with admirable dignity, directness and clarity, this novel of Jules Romains deserves high praise for its workmanship and textures."

+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 8 '25 780w

"A simple, dull story, smothered in words. With the simplicity of the tale I have no quarrel, but my gorge does rise at the manner of its telling." B. R. Redman

— N Y Tribune p11 Ap 26 '25 600w

Outlook 140:114 My 20 '25 150w

"All lovers of good literature are under a debt of gratitude to Mr. Waldo Frank for the admirable translation he has made of this masterpiece." Llewelyn Powys

+ Sat R of Lit 1:723 My 2 '25 550w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 2 '25 120w

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE, and LODGE, HENRY CABOT. Selections from the correspondence of Theodore Roosevelt and Henry Cabot Lodge, 1884-1918. 2v 546:573p $10 (42s) Scribner

B or 92 Lodge, Henry Cabot 25-8869

Mr Lodge edited these selections from the correspondence between Theodore Roosevelt and himself thru 1909. From that point his secretary went on with the editorship. The correspondence was continuous from May, 1884, to December, 1918, with no intermissions except in the period when both the writers were living in the same city. The letters are concerned largely with public affairs, but they deal as well with family and friendly matters and with the writers' common interests in the life of the time. Mr Lodge's letters are a small part of the whole.

Reviewed by C: R. Lingley

Am Hist R 30:341 JI '25 1250w

"These two handsome volumes interest from quite different angles: They abound in the personal element that makes reading easy; they give us more than glimpses of two cultured, charming households; they disclose the characters of two of the most influential statesmen of our time; and they throw light on not a few of the eventful happenings in the third of a century ending with the World War. As source material for history they will rank high." Robert Luce

+ Am Pol Sci R 19:827 N '25 500w

"There are several ways of reading these intensely interesting volumes. One can read them straight through from cover to cover and get a vivid picture and revelation of one of the remarkable friendships of the past two generations. Another way to read them is to read them topically either as to individuals or events and thus get an inside view, in many instances of amazing frankness." C. R. Woodruff

+ Ann Am Acad 122:265 N '25 280w

Booklist 21:338 Je '25

"The letters which passed between Roosevelt and Lodge from 1884 to 1918 furnish an excellent commentary on the fortunes of the Republican Party during this period and reveal the aspirations of the writers in a manner which dispenses with the biographer."

Bookm 62:94 S '25 160w

"As historical documents covering a series of critical epochs in American history during more than thirty years, these letters are of more than passing interest. They are in fact of permanent value, for they are of the material of which history is made." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 4 '25 1150w

"These letters make up one of the outstanding books of the season, and one which will be read with delight by everyone interested in American politics and personalities." D. R.

+ Ind 114:477 Ap 25 '25 1100w

"It is not possible to make a simple criticism of these two volumes which shall comprehensively apply. As a study in biography they are of intense interest. As an appendix to history, as an X-ray film of history's vitals in the years they cover, the letters are, on the whole, disappointing. This should not be misunderstood; the words 'on the whole' have their face-value." P. A. Hutchison

+ — Int Bk R p415 My '25 1600w

"The printing of the Roosevelt-Lodge letters in two large volumes is one of those historical events in publishing history which excuse the issue of a lot of lesser works necessary to keep the publishers going." G. W. Douglas

+ Lit R p5 My 2 '25 550w

"If the Senator wished to give an idea of his own influence over Roosevelt, he has succeeded. If he wished to prove a certain identity of purpose and even of thought, he has done much to prove it. But if he desired to show how he and Roosevelt dealt with public questions as statesmen the record is most imperfect. The gaps are too glaring." W. C. Ford

+ — Nation 120:693 Je 17 '25 360w

"Has been done with taste, circumspection, and propriety. As a human document this work has an immense appeal. Letters exchanged by men so powerful in their time cannot fail to make a furor among those who love memoirs, reminiscences, and footprints of old days. To the historian, however, in quest of new and searching light on the great issues and events of the time, the work will prove a disappointment." C: A. Beard

+ — New Repub 43:103 Je 17 '25 2350w

"Senator Lodge printed relatively few of his own letters; and that is just as well. The editing is extraordinarily poor. Masses of trivial stuff are admitted. A few hundred of explanatory notes are needed, even for fairly well-informed American readers. It is interesting to note that Lodge and Roosevelt join in abusing Democracy, a once famous American novel, neither of them knowing, more than twenty years after publication, that the author was their intimate friend, Henry Adams."

— New Statesman 25:262 Je 18 '25 900w

Reviewed by Horace Green

N Y Times p1 Ap 5 '25 2000w

"Mr. Lodge clearly intended the collection to illustrate the various aspects of the relationship between him and his friend and their families, and to have a wide human interest, apart from public affairs. It has that. So far as Roosevelt is concerned, it is enormously expressive, entertaining and revelatory. Mr. Lodge suppresses his own part in the exchange of letters, sometimes giving ten of Roosevelt's to one of his own. The result is that, so far as their relative prominence goes, the two men figure here as Richard III and Buckingham figure in Shakespeare." S. P. Sherman

N Y Tribune p1 Ap 5 '25 2950w

"On the personal side the letters are charming and vivid. Those written by Lodge from Europe have all the fascination of his 'Early Memories.' The letters of Roosevelt fall short of his friend's in this respect. These volumes will have a permanent value for historians of the future, revealing, to considerable extent, the minds of the writers." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p6m Ap 5 '25 1150w

"This collection of letters, with little editing or accompanying notes, will hardly prove of widespread popular interest. It requires too full a knowledge of the people and times. But when one reads between the lines, it serves as an extremely valuable index to many of the most important events of the past four decades, as well as a remarkably revealing, and also appealing, record of the characters and friendship of two of the outstanding men of American history." W: S. Myers

+ — No Am 221:729 Je '25 1650w

"While these volumes have a value for the political student that will increase with the passing years, there will always be some curiosity on the part of the instructed reader as to the principles upon which Mr. Lodge made the selections."

R of Rs 71:557 My '25 400w

"The letters are allowed to tell their own story, but it is a very incomplete and even disjointed story. The volumes will prove disappointing to many." Max Farrand

— Sat R of Lit 1:725 My 2 '25 850w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p375 Je 4 '25 2200w

Wis Lib Bul 21:199 Jl '25

"We feel that the two volumes form a memorial of personal friendship rather than a full revelation of the attitude and aims of either of the two men." S: McC. Crothers

Yale R n s 15:395 Ja '26 480w

ROOT, ELIHU. Men and policies; addresses collected and ed. by Robert Bacon and James Brown Scott. 509p $5 Harvard univ. press [21s Milford]

973.91 United States—Biography. Law—Addresses, essays, lectures. European war, 1914-1918—Addresses, sermons, etc. International law and relations 24-29760

"This volume of collected essays and addresses by Mr. Elihu Root extends in period from the written instructions that he gave as Secretary of State in 1907 to the delegates of the United States to the second Peace Conference at the Hague down to an address delivered in April, 1923 on the Permanent Court of International Justice." (Spec) "In addition to his addresses on various notable Americans (including Hamilton, Lincoln, Roosevelt, Cleveland and Choate) the present volume contains many of his war speeches, likewise his well known Carnegie Hall address on the Constitution of the United States." (Am Pol Sci R)

Am Hist R 30:621 Ap '25 650w

Am Pol Sci R 19:215 F '25 50w

Booklist 21:231 Mr '25

"The relationship of Mr. Root with the conditions and incidents of his time is painted in with an almost noble simplicity that gains much from the subtle directness with which this volume of papers marches forward from its opening series of personal remembrances to a study of law and its administration and thence the war and readjustments." W: E. Harris

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 10 '25 2150w

"Reading this volume does a great deal to dissipate the conventional imaginary portrait of Mr. Root as an austere, almost inhuman intellect dispensing light but not warmth, a man without humor or genial humanity. Doubtless, the effect of his addresses is different in the written from that in the spoken words, but certainly in reading these speeches one is conscious of a well-rounded human personality rather than an abstract mind." D. R.

+ Ind 114:618 My 30 '25 850w

"This volume recalls again the extraordinary breadth of Mr. Root's interests and the range of his influence. But Mr. Root's contributions, eminent to the conservative cause, are compact of compromise and sometimes even of confusion."

Nation 121:288 S 9 '25 250w

"A record which takes high value as historical source material." A. S. Will

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 4 '25 1250w

"A few of the items are rather slight and there are repetitions. After those small criticisms let us say that we hope the book will be widely read in Europe. For it will be an admirable inducement to the study of international law which is going to assume greater and greater importance. Its broad principles are the subject of a large part of the book."

+ — Spec 134:331 F '23 '25 750w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p106 F. 12 '25 80w

ROSENBERGER, JESSE LEONARD. Rochester and Colgate. 173p $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press 378.7 Rochester, New York. University. Colgate university, Hamilton, New York

25-9373

Following a brief history of the towns of Rochester and Hamilton, the book describes the founding of Madison university at Hamilton, the sharp dissension arising in the Baptist Church over the proposed removal of the university to Rochester and the subsequent founding of the present Baptist university in the latter city.

Reviewed by W: H. Allison

Am Hist R 31:183 O '25 320w

"This little book has interest for students of the history of education as well as for the alumni of the two universities it commemorates."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 3 '25 180w

J Religion 5:448 Jl '25 30w

"The author has presented the situation impartially, drawing largely from contemporary sources."

+ N Y Tribune p12 Jl 5 '25 150w

ROSENFELD, PAUL. Men seen; twenty-four modern authors. 380p $2.50 Dial press

814 Authors. American literature 25-9426

"Mr. Rosenfeld is no mere critic of the odd. 'Men Seen' includes a number of analytical summaries of forces in contemporary letters. His essay on James Joyce is surprisingly good and impartial. There is much to be said for his brief study of Marcel Proust. Even that astonishing personality, Guillaume Apollinaire is revealed with a sympathetic tact. But it is in his consideration of the group of American writers that the most emphatic values of 'Men Seen' are to be found. If we place this group (it includes Waldo Frank, Alfred Kreymborg, Wallace Stevens, Marianne Moore, Marsden Hartley, E. E. Cummings, James Oppenheim, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Jean Toomer and Albert Jay Nock) beside the Steiglitz group considered in 'Port of New York' we may see how extensive Mr. Rosenfeld's sympathies are and yet how logically they spring from a movement various, perhaps, in itself, but loosely connected because of its emphatic disparity from old, traditional impulses of American letters."—N Y Times

ROSENFELD, PAUL—Continued

"In so far as his labour is one of definition, it is, whenever the subject is worth his pains, admirably performed. And in any case the style is adroitly adapted to the impression he intends to convey." J: P. Bishop

+ — Dial 79:157 Ag '25 2000w

"Occasional purple passages, occasional keen, subtle comments, combine with obscure modernisms to make a book which will be caviar to the general."

— + Ind 114:675 Je 13 '25 150w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Ind 114:702 Je 20 '25 950w

Reviewed by R: Le Gallienne

Int Bk R p699 O '25 950w

Nation 120:722 Je 24 '25 10w

"The style of 'Men Seen' is a distinct improvement on that of 'Port of New York' in that a certain lushness of style and weakness for coined words and phrases has been pruned away. There is sounder criticism here, and a saner balance. . . 'Men Seen' is a distinctly admirable addition to the critical works of the day, and no reader who pretends to study that fluctuating maelstrom from which the definitive art of today and tomorrow is to rise can ignore the book. It is a point of vantage and observation in the whirling waters."

+ — N Y Times p2 Ap 26 '25 1800w

"Here surely is creative criticism. It is creative in that it uses an author or a book merely as the springboard for a soaring verbal flight toward unpredictable ends. The critic, absorbed in his own exciting activity, forgets the author. And exciting that activity unquestionably is; it is the favorite sport of an entire school of younger writers." B. R. Redman

— N Y Tribune p4 Je 7 '25 680w

"He must, if he is to play his elected role successfully, give us something more than information, enthusiasm, dislikes, and likes. But 'Men seen' does not measure up to these difficult requirements. Psychologically, it is too close to being a record of a lover's infatuations and quarrels to qualify as a work of criticism." G. B. Munson

— Sat R of Lit 1:871 Je 4 '25 500w

ROSS, EDWARD ALSWORTH. Civic sociology, a textbook in social and civic problems for young Americans. 365p $1.80 World bk. [7s 6d Harrap]

300 Sociology 25-11579

"Professor Ross has written a new kind of textbook in so far as he has combined a concrete statement of certain major social problems with a presentation of what are commonly called civic problems. He has chapters on the family, child welfare, education, standards of social distinction, social defense against crime, poverty and its relief, and the social side of business. In the section devoted to civic problems Professor Ross has something to say about personal freedom, obedience to law, freedom of speech, religious freedom, the promotion of peace among nationalities, the place of party, the citizen as voter, and other subjects which in our day have a definite bearing upon the success of American democracy."—R of Rs

"The great strength of the book lies in its equipment of teaching materials. At the end of each chapter is a list of questions on the text, some splendid suggestions for classroom discussion of current problems related to the text, good suggestions for investigations and reports, and collateral reading lists." F. K. and W. R. Hepner

+ Am J Soc 31:395 N '25 350w

Am Pol Sci R 19:866 N '25 70w

"Professor Ross's splendid equipment as a sociologist has ensured the success of this effort to expound social and civic problems with a view to the promotion of good citizenship. The volume is addressed to the graduates of our American high schools, but it abounds with material which makes it of high value for general readers." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 27 '25 720w

"I do not know of any more stimulating text to put into the hands of teachers and students and to lead toward an honest American realization of the purposes of schools of the public, for the public, and by the public." W: McAndrew

+ Educ R 70:159 O '25 1150w

"'Civic Sociology' is well written and provides the young student with material not previously handled by Elwood or Burch and Paterson." H. Silverman

+ Lit R p13 D 12 '25 120w

"Intended mainly for high-school students and college freshmen, the book should be the means of stimulating interest in the vital problems of American society and should have its part in producing a sane and rational leadership in our political life. Professor Ross has given many years to the study of the subjects treated in this book, not only in America but in other lands as well."

+ R of Rs 72:111 J1 '25 220w

"Professor Ross has done a fine piece of work in writing this civic sociology for young people."

+ Wis Lib Bul 21:228 O '25

ROSS, EDWARD ALSWORTH. Roads to social peace. (Weil lectures, 1924) 133p $1.50 Univ. of N.C. [7s Milford]

304 Social problems 25-83

"Prof Ross treats of 'The Avoidance of Sectionalism,' 'The Quenching of Sectarian Strife,' 'The Promotion of Peace Among Nationalities,' 'The Mitigation of Class Struggle,' 'The Allaying of Town-Country Conflict.' Each chapter concludes with a series of possible solutions for immediate trial."—Spring'd Republican

Am Pol Sci R 19:421 My '25 160w

"The book is one that every thoughtful voter will do well to read and ponder."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 24 '25 350w

"Professor Ross is the outstanding popularizer of sociological material, and he continues this popularizing of social theory in this book. There is nothing new in it for the widely read person. For any one whose interest in social problems is just awakening, it will serve as a good introduction to the subject matter." M. M. Willey

+ Lit R p11 Mr 14 '25 260w

"One of the genuine fruits of a gifted understanding and a golden eloquence."

+ Nation 120:49 Ja 14 '25 200w

"It is a slim little volume, read through in an hour or easily slipped into the pocket for perusal on the train. But it contains a deal of sound common sense on homely subjects, set forth in a clear and convincing manner."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 D 26 '24 600w
Survey 53:491 Ja 15 '25 90w

ROSS, SIR JOHN, bart. Years of my pilgrimage; random reminiscences. 304p $6 Longmans [18s E. Arnold]

B or 92

24-29869

"In July, 1922, the Four Courts of Dublin were destroyed, and with that stately building there passed an ancient judicial system. Sir John Ross, the last Lord Chancellor of Ireland, has attempted to recall the spirit of that Bench and Bar which he knew so well. His book is not founded upon diaries, and has in consequence a somewhat haphazard air. But a number of worthies live again in his pages: famous judges, clever pleaders, witty speakers, and story-tellers of the circuits. . . There are some noteworthy character-sketches of the famous political personages with whom the writer came in contact, particularly one of the late Lord Salisbury."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Entertaining and yet disappointing book."

+ — New Statesman 24:240 N 29 '24 880w

"Interesting and lively." H. W. Horwill

+ N Y Tribune p11 F 8 '25 650w

"Sir John Ross in his extended career achieved many remarkable things, but none more noteworthy than the writing of these memoirs without a bitter word. Yet he was throughout life an active politician and, where politics entered, a fierce partisan. Half-a-century's gossip and jokes and politics are preserved here. This is a book one could talk about for a week."

+ Spec 134:244 F 14 '25 650w

"We can forgive the writer a certain lack of continuity for the sharpness of his sketches and the humour of his tales."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p675 O 30 '24 920w

ROSSI, WILLIAM HARRISON, and ROSSI, MRS DIANA ISABELLA (POWERS), comps. Personnel administration; a bibliography. (Human relations ser.) 365p $5 Williams & Wilkins

016.658 Employment management—Bibliography 25-4573

A bibliography of about 2750 titles, containing both books and magazine articles, and covering the whole field of personnel administration—selection and placement of employees, health and safety, education and training, research, welfare work, wages and rewards, and joint relations.

"Covers in an easily read bibliography the much debated subjects of employment, health and safety, education and training, research, employee service, rewards, administrative correlation, and joint relations. To some, the word bibliography carries with it a forbidding sound, but because of a very happy choice of type and arrangement, this one should be a very useful source book to anyone interested in the subject."

+ Am Management R 14:204 Je '25 80w

"Although this list is not complete, it contains all the more important titles on each subject, enough certainly to present any personnel administrator with a practical working knowledge of the current literature on any subject."

+ Management and Adm 9:293 Mr '25 170w

ROSTAND, EDMOND EUGENE ALEXIS. The far princess (La princesse lointaine); a drama in four acts. 169p $1.75 Holt

842 25-8502

Rostand's poetic drama, "La princesse lointaine" which was written two years before "Cyrano de Bergerac" appears here in a new translation by John Heard, Jr., which Stark Young in his introduction calls the best rendering in English.

"Nothing in modern times, it is probable, has so completely mirrored the mood and the age of the troubadours as this beautiful play."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 6 '25 300w

"Mr. John Heard Jr. has done a good job, and those who like the sort of thing Rostand's play is will like this English version of it. But that probably few of the new generation can stand this sort of thing is one sign surely that the world does move." W. P. Eaton

N Y Tribune p16 Je 14 '25 100w

"The verse of Rostand is in places curiously unflexible, but never without its beauty of great melody and a resonance like that given to the softest chords by the lustrous, seasoned belly of a Stradivarius. Mr. Heard's translation was no easy task since he had a too mellifluous note to avoid yet one to preserve whose quality was rather sweetness than strength. The result is a distinguished achievement." Cameron Rogers

+ Sat R of Lit 2:124 S 12 '25 450w

"This new rendering by John Heard, Jr., is a beautiful thing in itself and entirely worth while on its own account. Mr. Heard has honestly sought to render Rostand in content and spirit, and as a matter of fact he does not avoid Rostand's rhymes as most translators do, but contents himself with varying them, with happy results."

+ Spring'd Republican p14 O 23 '25 280w

Wis Lib Bul 21:197 J1 '25

ROTH, SAMUEL. Now and forever. 156p $1.75 McBride

296 Jews. Zionism 25-11607

This rather pugnacious discussion of the Jews, their problems and their future, is in the form of an imaginary dialog between Mr. Roth and Israel Zangwill. Much of the discussion is devoted to the Zionist movement and the prospects of a new era of Jewish national life in Palestine. There is an 18-page preface by Israel Zangwill.

"There is rare entertainment in this volume." W. J. C.

Bookm 62:xxvix S '25 50w

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 1 '25 750w

"The conversation is somewhat incoherent, but always animated. Mr. Roth alternates between the dreams of a poet and the most brutally abrupt rationalizing. No one will agree with everything he says, but everyone who reads the book will be stimulated—at least as far as the mental process of denial."

+ — Ind 115:136 Ag 1 '25 80w

"Mr. Roth, apparently, likes to say things that are calculated to startle his hearers. He has a pretty wit, and he is fully aware of it. He is convinced that the smart things he says are worthy of being preserved for posterity, and, rather than entrust the recording of them to other hands, he becomes his own Boswell."

N Y Times p2 Ag 23 '25 950w

Outlook 140:595 Ag 26 '25 10w

ROTHAFEL, SAMUEL L., and YATES, RAYMOND FRANCIS. Broadcasting, its new day. 316p il $2 Century

654.6 Radio broadcasting 25-7653

In this enlivening discussion of the new art of broadcasting such subjects are dealt with as the methods and direction of broadcasting studios, the planning of radio programs, radio drama as entertainment, the political and international aspects of broadcasting, the possibilities in education and religion, the problem of who is to pay for broadcasting, etc.

Boston Transcript p4 My 20 '25 420w

Cleveland p97 S '25

"Delightful book on radio broadcasting and the art of radio communication generally. A careful, thoughtful and sincere reading of this book, and—it will stand reading many times,—can not but add to one's enjoyment of radio programs and the operation of a receiving set, and at the same time bring a clearer insight into a public utility of which Herbert Hoover has said, 'It will some day outrank all other public utilities.'" C. H. Van Housen

+ Lit R p5 J1 18 '25 260w

"The book is a serious, practical, scientific discussion of the present achievements and problems of radio and of its probable possibilities. But even in the matter of these possible future developments the authors do not indulge in unbridled imagination; they consider soberly the probable achievements to which present research in radio matters is likely to lead."

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 12 '25 500w

Outlook 140:304 Je 24 '25 20w

ROTHAFEL, S: L., and YATES, R. F.—Cont.

"At the price of a light novel and of much more substantial merit than many such, the book deserves the popularity which the number of its potential readers would indicate."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:843 Je 20 '25 250w

Wis Lib Bul 21:166 Je '25

ROUSSEAU, VICTOR, pseud. See Emanuel, V: R.

ROWE, HENRY KALLOCH. History of religion in the United States. 213p $1.75 (8s) Macmillan

277.3 United States—Religion 24-23151
For descriptive note see Annual for 1924.

"Professor Rowe's interpretations are suggestive and, I believe, sound. Perhaps he underestimates the strength, or at least the bulk, of the Fundamentalist movement and of the Catholic Church." C. B. Coleman

+ Am Hist R 30:829 Jl '25 600w

Booklist 21:181 F '25

Bookm 60:adv D '24 80w

"As a work evidently intended for layman rather than for trained historians, Professor Rowe's contribution will serve highly beneficial ends." P: G. Mode

+ J Religion 5:431 Jl '25 720w

"Mr. Rowe's 'History' is written with much spirit and contains some fine generalizations. The first chapter is especially dramatic. Faults of omission are of slight importance compared with the great mass of well-digested material furnished by this interesting volume." Woodbridge Riley

+ Nation 121:74 Jl 8 '25 600w

N Y Times p23 Ap 12 '25 680w

"A broad and sympathetic interpretation."

+ R of Rs 71:112 Ja '25 100w

ROYDEN, AGNES MAUDE. Church and woman; with a chapter on the evangelical and free churches by Constance M. Coltman. (Living church ser.) 256p $2 Doran [6s J. Clarke]

396 Woman—History and condition. Women as ministers [25-3241]

Miss Royden's plea for women's ministries in the Church begins by showing that the outstanding fact in the history of women has been their universal subordination to men—a subordination held to be based on real inferiority and accepted by men and women alike. Among the great religions it is only in the teaching of Christ that the assumption of their inferiority is entirely absent, the differences between the sexes ignored and the same standards required of both. Miss Royden believes that the cause of this subordination is women's inferiority to men in physical strength and the great importance which men and women alike have attached to physical as opposed to spiritual power. She believes that women can have great influence in the ministries of the church and that they should make this final claim to equality.

"The subject, though not exhaustively treated, is systematically presented and in a way to interest the lay reader. Bibliography."

Booklist 21:329 Je '25

"Miss Royden sees clearly that ordination is the crucial question in dispute, but she seems to attach little weight to consistent Christian tradition, and we doubt if her exegesis of such passages as Matt. xxviii. 16-20 and John xx. 19-23 can be contextually justified."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p714 N 6 '24 250w

ROYDEN, AGNES MAUDE. Life's little pitfalls. 153p $1.25 (3s 6d) Putnam

252 Sermons. Conduct of life 25-15885

In these practical and helpful talks Miss Royden points out some pitfalls that surround us all—faults of character and temperament that continually get us into trouble and prevent us from making life what it might be for ourselves and others. Contents: Youth; Middle age; Old age; On being sorry for oneself; On being a failure; Easy ways of being good; Temperament; Lonely people; On setting a good example; On making good resolutions.

Booklist 22:52 N '25

"She writes neither up nor down, nor does she write at you, but just out of her own experiences as though she were thinking aloud." W. J. C.

Bookm 62:xxxv O '25 80w

Boston Transcript p6 O 31 '25 500w

"The book makes evident the reasons for Miss Royden's repute as a preacher, for the sermons all show clarity of vision, a sweet and gentle and understanding spirit, a high and ardent desire to aid men and women to realize the best that is in them and to make their Christianity a practical daily matter."

+ N Y Times p26 Ag 30 '25 320w

N Y World p4m S 20 '25 100w

"The preacher's art partly consists in telling us things that we are already dimly aware of but cannot express, and in these ten addresses Miss Royden admirably displays it."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p287 Ap 23 '25 100w

ROYDE-SMITH, NAOMI G. Tortoiseshell cat. 287p $2.50 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d Constable] 25-23588

Gillian and Lilac share a little flat in Mayfair. At the opening of the story Gillian is instructress in English at a correct school for girls. Her enthusiasm for her subject betrays her into an indiscreet choice of lines for study that to her mean nothing more than sheer beauty of sound. To Mrs Lysaght, and to the horrified parents they mean something quite different. Gillian's connection with the school is severed. Her second venture is a secretaryship to Winona, Lady Bottomley. The change is exciting but not altogether satisfying. At this time Lilac marries Toby Bottomley and leaves her sister alone in the flat. Then there comes into her life a new influence as perplexing as it is profound. With only an academic appreciation of love, and with no knowledge whatever of life, Gillian falls under the spell of an older woman who is all too tragically experienced in affairs of the kind. There is a disastrous termination to the friendship and Gillian's awakening is sharp and complete.

"It has its moments of brilliancy and its other moments of daring, but as a whole it is far from being a clever novel. The people do not appeal to us as real people and the situations are strained and unnatural."

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 19 '25 160w

"The sequence of events is natural, the characters are real, the style light and graceful with occasional touches of real beauty. At least one of the situations is new to modern fiction." L. D. Alfau

+ Lit R p5 D 19 '25 220w

"Miss Royde-Smith's novel is of the type of modern English fiction, in which the asperities and whimsicalities of English character are gaily brought together. The book is properly called modern—also daring because among the threads of passion runs that of homo-sexual love. This is handled with a reserve made natural by the innocence of the altogether delightful heroine."

+ New Repub 45:143 D 23 '25 160w

"The Tortoiseshell Cat is Miss Royde-Smith's first novel; but she brings to the task a poise, a sureness, an expertness, a skill, which few novelists of long standing possess. And she can create character. Some of her minor characters, indeed—Mrs. Lysaght, the bullying headmistress with the conversational manner of Alfred Jingle, and the rich widow who was 'very obstinate about names' and always called Hyde Park Corner the Marble Arch—are permanent additions to one's comic portrait gallery." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 25:230 Je 6 '25 300w

"Of original stuff throughout is 'The Tortoiseshell Cat.' Readers 'fed up' with much of the output of the Mayfair and pseudo-Mayfair school will turn to this novel with a chuckle of relief. They will find it well imagined and well set down. Miss Royde-Smith's prose has the hall mark of excellence upon it. She isn't cursed by an ability to write glamorous shoddy."

+ N Y Times p8 N 15 '25 520w

"If this is not a first novel, it has all the earmarks of one. More than a trifle wobbly as to structure, whimsically epigrammatic in style, and consciously but honestly 'daring' in theme, it may be called clever without any invidious accent, and promising, without adopting airs of patronage."

+ N Y Tribune p16 Ja 10 '26 600w

"It is enchanting to discover in a first novel such a mellow wit; such a sympathetic understanding; such a delicious humor. There are certain subtle, keen, affectionate, and malicious portraits of women in this novel that no man could have equaled. In this novel she has chosen to develop an extremely difficult and unpleasant situation. This particular situation like any other in life, is perfectly proper material for the novelist—if he can swing it!" Hulbert Footner

+ Sat R of Lit 2:459 Ja 2 '26 550w

"In theme the book is as modern as could be; but Miss Royde Smith conducts her novel with immense discretion, so that no one could well blush at any point in the story. Miss Royde Smith is at her best in the grotesque portrait of Winona Lady Bottomley (title created 1906); and we are convinced from it that if Miss Royde Smith would turn her hand to pure farce she would be unusually successful. We must correct a previous statement; quite frequently we blushed at a supposed epigram. Next in our detestation is Gillian's taste in poetry."

+ Spec 134:896 My 30 '25 280w

"Miss Naomi Royde-Smith writes with a crisp touch and a kind of friendly gaiety; it responds with a sparkle to the humour of life but is not afraid of the shadows. With an obvious relish for character and the freshness of quite ordinary things, she likes to execute variations that give them a twist to the whimsical or unusual."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p398 Je 11 '25 500w

RUCK, BERTA (MRS GEORGE OLIVER). Immortal girl. 342p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

25-10696

"Her heroine is forty-five when she meets an obliging old gentleman, who hands her the prescription for a drug warranted to renew youth 'in ladies only.' It does even more than he claims, for not only does it carry her back, physically, to the age of twenty-two, but it appears also to make her much prettier and more attractive than at her first experience of that age. Having inherited a comfortable fortune she sets out in quest of the lover for whom she has always longed in vain, and the fact of her rejuvenation rather sinks into the background."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Beston Transcript p7 N 11 '25 340w

Lit R p17 D 5 '25 80w

"Those who fear or feel the fleeting years, especially women and girls, will enjoy this improbable yarn because the situation is so cleverly handled."

+ N Y World p4m O 4 '25 50w

"Despite the utter absurdity of the tale, it is cheerful enough."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a O 25 '25 140w

"Her love story is amusing, and not oversentimental, and the bright impertinences of a bevy of ultra-modern 'flappers' and their attendant youths form an entertaining accompaniment."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p385 Je 4 '25 200w

RUCK, BERTA (MRS GEORGE OLIVER). Lucky in love. 287p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

24-14172

A masquerade ball, a love charm, a Cinderella, a red haired prince charming—and thereby hangs the tale. Cinderella-by-day is Marie Louise Threadgold, a petite, bobbed-haired apprentice in a beauty parlor. The knight of the rusty locks is a mechanic at a nearby garage. A modern fairy god-mother achieves the ball and the gown, the Marie Antoinette charm lives up to its reputation, the prince charming mechanic pursues his lady with determination and success, and of course they are "lucky in love."

"The tale is so charmingly written, so naïve, colorful and glamorous that one soon loses all desire to find fault with its essential lack of originality." E. C. B.

+ Lit R p10 F 28 '25 280w

Nation and Ath 35:301 My 31 '24 150w

"Incurable romance flits over her pages with unfailing sprightliness, and though there is sugar in her plot of love and its excursionists it is spun sugar offered in well-bred carnival spirit. Vivacity and humor blend charmingly in its serving and the disappointments of her characters really are not more rueful than the mild adventure might be of not drawing coveted favors from a wedding cake."

+ N Y Times p14 F 22 '25 550w

Sat R of Lit 1:732 My 2 '25 160w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p342 My 29 '24 100w

Wis Lib Bul 21:113 Ap '25

RUGG, HAROLD ORDWAY. Primer of graphics and statistics for teachers. (Riverside textbooks in education) 142p $1.60 Houghton

371 Educational measurements. Education—Statistics. Graphic methods 25-8843

This little handbook tells how to prepare and use many different kinds of graphs and charts.

"The text and illustrations are excellent. How and why to use the graphic method is told in persuasive, everyday language. Most teachers and most children enjoy the use of pictorial means of showing growth, advance, success. Rugg has a large number of bright and engaging samples." W: McAndrew

+ Educ R 70:153 O '25 80w

"A study of this book should give teachers an understanding of statistical references and a clearer conception of the bearing of certain simple statistical concepts on their classroom work. It should enable them to find and graph measures of tendency in their test scores. The chapter on school marks will perhaps lead many teachers to assume an entirely new attitude toward marking. The book should find a place in the general training of undergraduate students of education and as a manual for teachers in the field." D. E. Scates

+ El School J 26:151 O '25 400w

RUSK, RALPH LESLIE. Literature of the middle western frontier. (Columbia univ. studies in English and comparative literature) 2v 457;419p $7.50 Columbia univ. press 810.9 American literature—The West. American literature—Bibliography 25-11215

The associate professor of English in Columbia university has made a thoro study of middle western pioneer literature, tracing it back to its cultural beginnings and treating in turn and with considerable detail the different forms of literary expression. Nearly the whole of the second volume is given to bibliographies.

RUSK, RALPH LESLIE—Continued

"The technique of the author is simple and satisfying. We need more books like this, dealing with the bed-rock of Western fact." F. L. Paxson

+ Am Hist R 31:366 Ja '26 350w
Booklist 22:152 Ja '26

"Professor Rusk has produced a well-written and highly informing narrative. While it is true that considerable portions of the content are familiar, or at least easily accessible, the work in comparison with any other secondary source is more inclusive, better organized, and brings to light a wealth of hitherto hidden facts."

+ Hist Outlook 16:340 N '25 220w

"A comprehensive bibliography of Western publications occupies the greater part of the second volume. Both this and the historical chapters will be invaluable to every future student of Western American literature. With these aids and this incentive it may be expected that other workers, it is to be hoped under Mr. Rusk's guidance, will soon resolve some of the critical questions that he has refrained from discussing." W. B. Cairns

+ Nation 121:sup433 O 14 '25 1100w

"Professor Rusk has performed his task with the system and the skill in research of which the subject is worthy. He has expanded the historical envisagement of the frontier in a way which seems destined to leave a lasting impression on the treatment of that theme by future investigators." A. S. Will

+ N Y Times p10 S 6 '25 1900w

"Mr. Rusk has written a brilliant book of very great value to close students of American literature. He has diligently explored the field encompassed by his title and reported his findings in a style that is clear and lively." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 11 '25 1250w

"That the conclusions to be drawn from Dr. Rusk's able study of cultural beginnings in the Middle West are, on the whole, negative, seems to prove both the sincerity and the genuine value of his work. With the utmost thoroughness and impartiality, Dr. Rusk has traversed every department of literature within his period. His painstaking bibliography will be of permanent value to students of early American literature." C. H. Gaines

+ No Am 222:354 D '25 1200w

Sat R of Lit 2:319 N 21 '25 180w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p621 S 24 '25 40w

RUSSEL, ROBERT ROYAL. Economic aspects of southern sectionalism, 1840-1861. (Studies in the social sciences) 2v 325p ea $1 Univ. of Ill.

330.975 South—Economic conditions. South —Politics and government 24-16008

"In his Economic Aspects of Southern Sectionalism, 1840-1861, the author has examined a wealth of material in an attempt to discover to what extent divergent economic interests and conditions, other than slavery, were responsible for the growth of sectional rivalry during the decades just prior to the Civil War. His labors, which represent primarily a study of southern public opinion, throw a flood of light not on the extent of the economic disparity of the North and the South, but on what southern leaders thought to be the causes and the remedies for this disparity. He shows quite conclusively that while southern leaders generally agreed that the South was economically dependent on the North, they were by no means agreed as to the cause of this dependence nor the means that should be employed to render the South economically independent. Those who believe that slavery and the political doctrine of states rights were the only causes for southern secession will do well to read this monograph."—Hist Outlook

"To the reviewer it seems that the author's judgments are not always good and righteous altogether. It is to be doubted if any considerable part of the South was ever hostile to slavery, if there was any great importation of slaves after 1808, if DeBow could justly be called a disunion leader. But the final judgment must be that the book is a distinct contribution to the discovery of the old South." R. S. Cotterill

+ Am Hist R 30:402 Ja '25 350w

Reviewed by H. J. Carman

Hist Outlook 16:183 Ap '25 180w

"Mr. Russell's study of the South, in the light of economic facts, has been made with great diligence, and with access to much first-hand material that has not been utilized in a similar way by any preceding writer. No author, perhaps, has so well and carefully presented the facts as to the Southern attitude on protection and free trade as Mr. Russell succeeds in doing." A. S.

+ R of Rs 71:556 My '25 270w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM. A B C of relativity. (Harper's modern science ser.) 231p $2.50 Harper [4s 6d K. Paul]

530.1 Relativity (physics) 25-22292

By the frequent use of analogy, simile, and vivid word picture, Mr Russell has made a difficult, abstruse subject intelligible and interesting to the lay reader. His first chapters serve as an introduction to his exposition of the theory of relativity. Later chapters discuss Einstein's law of gravitation, the universe, finite or infinite, and the philosophical consequences of relativity.

Booklist 22:147 Ja '26

"Bertrand Russell's book is happy reading for everyone who thinks." G. L. Wendt

+ Nation 121:236 Ag 26 '25 50w

"Mr. Russell's powers of exposition are so great, his illustrations so frequent and ingenious, and his respect for the educated plain man's fear of symbols and formulæ so considerate, that there is less reason to-day for failure to grasp at least the bearings of the theory than has previously been the case. Hence, if we are prepared to take a little trouble, we shall find that we need no longer feel as ashamed of ourselves as we ought to have done since 1919."

+ Nation and Ath 38:190 O 31 '25 750w

"There are innumerable popular accounts of the theory of relativity," writes Russell, "but they generally cease to be intelligible just at the point where they begin to say something important. Such, in fact, is precisely my criticism of Russell's book. I know of no popular book on relativity which is even as good as Russell's, which, I am afraid, is simply another way of saying that they are all very bad. There is, however, a chapter in Russell's book—the final chapter—which ought not to be dismissed so summarily." B. Harrow

+ N Y Times p15 Ja 10 '26 620w

Spec 135:602 O 10 '25 20w

"Even Mr. Russell, with his unique powers of popular exposition, is not so clear as we could wish."

+ Spec 135:1099 D 12 '25 450w

"Excellent little book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p690 O 22 '25 1000w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM. What I believe. (Today and tomorrow ser.) 87p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

170 Life. Ethics

25-9225

In this little book Bertrand Russell says what he thinks of man's place in the universe and of his possibilities in the way of achieving the good life. Contents: Nature and man; The good life; Moral rules; Salvation: individual and social; Science and happiness.

Reviewed by F. N. House

Am J Soc 31:271 S '25 70w

Am Pol Sci R 19:867 N '25 30w

Booklist 21:357 J1 '25

Bookm 61:xxviii J1 '25 80w

Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '25 400w

Int J Ethics 36:221 Ja '26 100w

"Mr. Russell shows little understanding of the power and significance of socialized mores. His clean-cut rationalism, with all sentimental nonsense eliminated, stands opposed to current ideals, instead of furnishing practical guidance for a possible evolution of morals."

— J Religion 5:444 J1 '25 100w

Reviewed by McAllister Coleman

Lit R p10 Je 20 '25 120w

+ Living Age 325:479 My 30 '25 350w

Nation 121:494 O 28 '25 20w

"One of the most brilliant and thought-stimulating little books that I have read." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 37:106 Ap 25 '25 350w

"Simply and brilliantly written, and will well repay reading by those who are really trying to understand ideas which, consciously or subconsciously, appeal to many men of science and to a far larger number of persons whose beliefs are influenced by scientific conclusions."

J. S. Haldane

+ Nature 115:667 My 9 '26 600w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres

New Repub 43:80 Je 10 '25 360w

"In his 'Icarus' Mr. Russell expressed his fears for the future; in 'What I Believe' he expresses his hopes. In 'Icarus' he made a negative valuation of science, and in the present handbook he attempts to assay its future value positively. The two taken together form a kind of confession of faith at 60—a confession of exceptional value to any one who wishes to know the problems and beliefs, simply stated, which are troubling or inspiring the thinking world today, at the end of a half century of marvelous scientific progress."

N Y Times p22 Je 7 '25 1100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Tribune p16 My 31 '25 800w

Outlook 140:268 Je 17 '25 10w

"In spite of his unorthodox views, which in some subjects like birth control he does not hesitate to rub in, there is a wholesome—an almost evangelical—note in this essay of Professor Russell. The logic of the book is, it need hardly be said, one of its strong merits. Some of the excursions into topics not on the main line, like the relation of man and nature, fact and value, life according to nature and unnatural innovations, are equally interesting." H: J. Cadbury

+ Sat R of Lit 1:873 J1 4 '25 350w

"Mr. Russell has obviously written rather unmethodically and hastily."

— Spec 134:563 Ap 4 '25 200w

Spec 134:935 Je 6 '25 450w

"The cogent thinking and brilliant writing make this a book to be considered by anyone seriously concerned in studying a man's place in the universe."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 28 '25 800w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 54:500 Ag 1 '25 450w

World Tomorrow 8:382 D '25 540w

RUSSELL, DORA WINIFRED (BLACK) (MRS BERTRAND RUSSELL). Hypatia; or, Woman and knowledge. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 81p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

396 Woman—Social and moral questions. Feminism 25-15238

Mrs Bertrand Russell's book is a feminist's militant reply to Ludovici's "Lysistrata." She admits that there is a sex war and that the women began it and she invokes the intelligence of Hypatia to settle the quarrel. She believes that "the important task of feminism is to accept and proclaim sex." Admitting the mistakes the women have made she states their case against the men and the conditions which feminist mothers have a right to demand. Her conclusion is that men and women must lay aside hostility and seek in love a full understanding of each other.

Booklist 22:12 O '25

"Mrs. Russell, although somewhat annoying at times, utters a great many thought-provoking albeit somewhat bitter, truths." L. S. K.

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 22 '25 500w

"From the doctrinaire point of view, she assuredly leaves nothing to be desired, and she uses her arguments and her English with an ability more flattering to the claims of feminism than does her indignant Lucy Stone League critic." Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 115:218 Ag 22 '25 520w

"Stimulating and often amusing discussions, which, however, like nearly all on similar themes, seem often to be carried by personal bias beyond the real evidence presented."

+ — J Home Econ 17:727 D '25 60w

Nation 121:201 Ag 19 '25 400w

"It is a pity that the book is written in so polemical a vein, for no intelligent woman would disagree with Mrs. Russell's essential position or fail to admire her courage, but its defiant tone may alienate or amuse others whom it is more necessary to convince. . . The book has many flashes of intuition which are not followed up. If Mrs. Russell will proceed further and avoid reading articles in the Sunday papers which rouse her passions, she may yet produce the real exposition by Hypatia."

+ Nation and Ath 37:244 My 23 '25 480w

"Mrs. Russell opposes a cool and grave front, worthy of the Alexandrian philosopher herself, to Mr. Ludovici's heat and dust. To his general attribution of all the evils of society to the feminists, she replies calmly that these were what history and tradition made them." R. M. Lovett

New Repub 43:350 Ag 19 '25 480w

Reviewed by C. W. Thompson

— N Y Times p1 Ag 9 '25 1000w

"Mrs. Russell is no academic debater. Her logic is straight, and her attack is direct. An understanding of the labor problem, political and economic conditions, the personal lives of modern women, especially working women, give her argument abundant vigor and relevancy." K. A. Porter

+ N Y Tribune p14 N 8 '25 160w

"Of course, Mrs. Russell may well have felt that if she succeeded in keeping her temper, and merely advanced a few mild protests, she was doing all that Mr. Ludovici called for. But her 'Hypatia' is dull. All the gallantry, the fire, the spirit of the woman rebel, is either unknown to her, unguessed by her, or she thought it wise for some reason to keep it to herself." Ruth Hale

— N Y World p3m Ag 2 '25 500w

Spec 134:684 Ap '25 120w

"Mrs. Russell burns with indignation regarding the 'subjection' of women throughout the ages, both extols the feminist movement and deplores its direction, and offers little that is novel, or relatively novel, except a doctrine of emotional license which harbors not even a remotely social aim and is virtually a glorification of promiscuous self indulgence."

— Springf'd Republican p10 J1 29 '25 250w

"Reading this little book, we have the uncomfortable feeling that Mrs. Russell has come 'too late for the fair.'"

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p355 My 21 '25 150w

"Whether or not one agrees with all of Dora Russell's answer, any one, man or woman, is

RUSSELL, DORA WINIFRED—Continued
 stirred by her pungent explanation of what Feminism really means. She writes a chapter on Men which men will do well to read." G. H.
 World Tomorrow 8:282 S '25 280w

RUSSELL, GEORGE WILLIAM (A. E., pseud.). Voices of the stones. 61p $1.25
 Macmillan

821 25-11217

A volume of mystic verse written, in the words of the poet, "half from the hidden world and half from this."

"The world of A. E. is for the most part seen 'through a glass, darkly,' but it is nevertheless a world of exquisite coloring and rare, though dimly perceived beauty. These poems are full of genuine mysticism, and are an enrichment to the literatures of both England and Ireland. They will, however, have a limited appeal."

+ Booklist 22:65 N '25

Reviewed by Hildegard Fillmore

Bookm 62:79 S '25 400w

Boston Transcript p6 S 9 '25 250w

Dial 80:69 Ja '26 60w

"In the present volume, A. E. continues in the tradition of mysticism which has given him his sure place in Irish literature. A collection of charming verse."

+ Ind 115:52 JI 11 '25 50w

"His newly published volume confirms his preeminence as a writer of verse of curiously iridescent loveliness, through which the pearl-gray mists of his own Ireland seem to drift, filling it with strange wistfulness and eerie
 grace." B. E. Stevenson

+ Int Bk R p659 S '25 620w

"Fellowship in the company of the great mystics cannot be denied to Æ. He stands definitely with Donne and Crashaw and Vaughan and Blake. But he is not only a mystic; he is an Irish mystic. And it is the Celtic color of his mysticism, the essentially Irish quality of his vision, the glamorous tone and accent like horns heard from a green gap in the woods or silver bells under water—it is these things, rather than the radiant wash over the verses, that commends him greatly to us." Joseph Auslander

+ Lit R p3 Aug 1 '25 400w

"The first impression I get is the great healthiness of the verse as verse, the poise, balance, and strength of it: on the mere technical side, his capacity for getting the right verse-unit for the thought, for carrying the argument across the stanzas without spilling or stopping; his concealed use of alliteration, one of the most happy poetic arts." Robert Graves

+ Living Age 325:691 S 26 '25 500w (Reprinted from Irish Statesman)

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren

Nation 121:170 Ag 5 '25 250w

"He feels that a world in which the only beautiful things are stories and dreams is, after all, but a poor creation, and—in his later even more than in his earlier poems—he is haunted by a sense of helpless bewilderment.
 It is when he is expressing such feelings as these that 'A. E.' is at his best. In his other mood, when he has shut himself up in his day-dreams, he writes delicate, well-worded poems, but they are too unsubstantial to be satisfying."

+ — Nation and Ath 37:464 JI 11 '25 500w

Reviewed by Allen Tate

New Repub 44:209 O 14 '25 250w

"An English review of 'Voices of the Stones' made the prophecy that 'A. E.' would take a high place among English mystic poets.
 George William Russell will take high place among English poets—but not as a mystic.
 Mysticism there is; such mysticism as is latent in the philosophy of Plato. But as such it is mainly intellectual; true mysticism involves an emotional sublimation which is largely lacking both in 'A. E.' and in Plato." P. A.

 Hutchison

N Y Times p7 JI 5 '25 2000w

Reviewed by Irwin Edman

N Y Tribune p5 S 13 '25 650w

Reviewed by G. H. Conkling

No Am 222:158 S '25 180w

"I find in the poetry of Padraic Colum a definition and a power that I cannot seem to find in this book dedicated to him, 'A. E.'s
 'Voices of the Stones.' 'Michael,' the longest and last poem in the volume, is a noble mystical interpretation of patriotism, yet when it is thoroughly analyzed an interpretation that those of us disillusioned with human warfare are beginning to doubt." W. R. Benét

— Outlook 140:404 JI 15 '25 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p428 Je
 25 '25 900w

RUSSELL, ISAAC K. Romance of the holes in bread; a plea for recognition of the scientific laboratory as the testing place for truth. 156p il $1.50 Chemical pub.

Pasteur, Louis. Micro-organisms 24-17690

"Beginning with the common and apparently commonplace process of bread-baking, Mr. Russell takes up the nature and functions of the yeast-plant, and from it the general qualities of bacteria, incidentally at the same time describing the obstacles encountered by men who in earlier ages realized that we know nothing whatever of the universe, save that which through the ages we have found out, not thought out, to be true. All this leads to a record of the life and work of Louis Pasteur, greatest of Frenchmen and one of the noblest figures of all time. Phases of the work of Pasteur and of his disciples are indicated graphically in chapter headings: 'Finding the source of plagues'; 'From ferments to sanitation'; 'Bake oven to bandages'; 'From poultry to vaccination'; 'The conquest of hydrophobia'; 'Back to the bakery.'"—Science

"This little book is meager in its treatment of bread itself, but in sketching the pioneer work of Pasteur it develops the significance of this for the scientific control of certain phases of bread-making. So great a story is not allowed to tell itself. When it grips the reader he feels the author's nudge reminding him that, if the news value had not departed years ago, this would make good 'copy.' This will offend those who do not associate romance with a journalistic style and it will please those who like to read 'snappy items.'" W. M. Clark

Ind & Eng Chem 17:327 Mr '25 250w

"A modest but thoroughly wholesome bit of popular science." D: S. Jordan

+ Science 61:446 Ap 24 '25 150w

RUSSELL, JOHN RUSSELL, 1st earl. Later correspondence of Lord John Russell, 1840-
 1878; ed. by G. P. Gooch. 2v 361:408p il $10.50
 (32s) Longmans

B or 92

25-23602

The later correspondence of the great Whig statesman who was twice prime minister of England, from 1846 to 1852, and again for a brief period twenty years later, supplements the collection of his early correspondence published in 1913. His letters are an important contribution to the history of British politics and diplomacy during the first half of the Victorian era.

"These volumes lose none of their interest from the fact that they do little more than supplement already published material regarding Lord John Russell and his public career."
 E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 26 '25 1200w

New Statesman 26:210 N 28 '25 1500w

"The historical introduction to the correspondence is written by Professor Gooch with caution and candor. Mr. Gooch is too able an historian and too experienced an editor to indulge in indiscriminate adulation. He explains away many of Russell's mistakes, but because he is scrupulously fair, the two volumes are not the familiar eulogies of a political tombstone, graceful but untrue." A. L. Sachar

+ N Y Tribune p13 Ja 10 '26 900w

"These volumes are not intended for the general reader, and the general reader is not likely to find much amusement or interest in them. True, Mr. Gooch provides an admirable general introduction, but Lord John Russell, who had many gifts, had not that of writing lively letters upon public affairs. Nor, it must be admitted, had his colleagues." Godfrey Elton
+ Spec 135:988 N 28 '25 1000w

"The importance of the correspondence of this Whig leader, who as prime minister and foreign minister helped to make world history, is not to be questioned."

Spring'd Republican p5a N 22 '25 80w
"Mr. Gooch has immense learning in the political history of the last hundred years; he writes well; and he is in general sympathy with the Liberal attitude towards political questions of which Lord John was all his life the chief spokesman till he handed over his place to Gladstone. And yet, in spite of all these qualifications, or perhaps on account of an excess of one of them, Mr. Gooch has not been completely successful."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p683 O 22 '25 1650w

RUSTICUS, pseud. Bucolic beatitudes. 111p il $1.50 Little

814 Country life. Animals 25-6911

In these chapters Rusticus sums up his blessings. The objects of his beatitudes are his animal friends: Cerberus, the one-eyed dog, the pig, "humorist of the farm," the hen, the cow and the horse. His garden is also included among his blessings.

"He makes the quiet life very attractive as he stands with elbows on a fence and talks to the pig, or watches the hired man rub down a horse or milk a cow, or prepares to whitewash the henhouse, or indulges in his one excitement of a glorious ride with the children." R. M. Gay
+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Jl '25 320w

Booklist 21:374 Jl '25

"A book that, despite hallowed strictures of absolute criticism militating against use of the word, demands as its most fittingly descriptive term the adjective 'delightful.'" F. W. B.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 11 '25 680w

"For many a day we have not seen a book of such agreeable quality."

+ Ind 114:619 My 30 '25 50w

Reviewed by Helen Wallerstein
Lit R p10 My 2 '25 250w

"In spite of its apparently sophisticated title, is one of those rare books wherein simplicity of style and of subject matter is combined with a warm humor and a warm humanity; it is one of those books that leaves one in a smiling mood at the same time as it fills one with a sense of the beautiful and of the wisdom of simple things, and it is written with a whimsicality of manner, an ambulatory ease and an occasional wit that are but the mask for an underlying but never obtrusive seriousness."

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 12 '25 600w

N Y Tribune p12 Jl 12 '25 400w

Outlook 139:661 Ap 29 '25 30w

"He writes engagingly. His style is crisp and clear and well modulated; his humor is quaintly infectious."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:883 Jl 4 '25 280w

"In spite of the general aloofness the work reveals subtlety in looking at things, occasional piquancy of expression, and always a leisurely serenity. 'Rusticus' writes of real blessings, and says grace very prettily."

+ Spring'd Republican p12 S 17 '25 260w

Wis Lib Bul 21:141 My '25

RYALL, WILLIAM B. See Bolitho, W., pseud.

RYAN, FRANKLIN WINTON. Usury and usury laws; a juristic-economic study of the effects of state statutory maximums for loan charges upon lending operations in the United States. (Hart, Schaffner and Marx prize essays) 249p $2.50 Houghton

332.8 Interest and usury 24-29414

Usury is considered from the social, economic business and legal point of view. The study is chiefly concerned with the problem of the small loan and the expediency of state laws in the United States which fix general limitations on interest rates. Mr. Ryan argues for the repeal of the typical state usury law now in force and the enactment of the uniform small-loan law.

Harvard Business R 3:383 Ap '25 350w

"The author has succeeded in gathering within the limits of a small volume enough of the material in connection with the problem of usury to make its intelligent consideration possible, and has presented it in a very readable form, with the exception of the first part, wherein there is a little too labored effort to achieve a precise formulation of the author's 'problem' and his 'method of approach.'" Chester Rohrich

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 18 '25 750w

"Most valuable contribution to the insufficient literature on an important subject. This book is probably the most important recent contribution to the discussion of usury and related problems. Its facts add to our materials and its conclusions are stimulating." R. F. Bergengren

+ Survey 55:250 N 15 '25 360w

RYAN, JAMES HUGH. Introduction to philosophy. 399p $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

191 Philosophy 25-351

"The author, who is a member of the Faculty of Philosophy in the Catholic University of America, defines his own position as that of a dualistic realist. That is to say, he believes firmly in the reality of an extra-mental world and in the validity of our perceptions of it. He is a dualistic realist in this, that he looks upon the distinction between subject and object, spirit and matter, man and God, as primary and fundamental to all metaphysics." From this position Dr. Ryan approaches the fundamental problems of philosophy. The method of his book is to present these problems one by one, outlining and discussing the positions taken by the various schools of thinkers. He has intended his book to be used as a handbook as well as a textbook for college students. To this end the text is accompanied by ample lists of authorities accessible in most college and university libraries."—R of Rs

"The opinions expressed show not the slightest sectarian bias, and the material in which they are buttressed has been gathered impartially from many sources. On the other hand, like many Protestant interpreters of philosophy, the author makes it clear that he is opposed to merely mechanistic trends of thought, finds it needful to distinguish between soul and body, and demands a place in any system of metaphysics for religion as well as for science."

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 31 '25 500w

Cath World 121:424 Je '25 420w

Reviewed by E. S. Ames

Int J Ethics 35:443 Jl '25 130w

"His method is to first state the most representative arguments against the position which he wishes to defend and then refute them in the exposition of his own. Some of these dogmatisms are irritating and many of them are unintelligible without some sort of explanation. Mr. Ryan's ex cathedra manner is hardly suitable in teaching a subject which his predecessors presumed to originate in doubt." Gail Kennedy

+ J Philos 22:361 Je 18 '25 130w

RYAN, JAMES HUGH—Continued

"Father Ryan's book gives one of the best formulations of Catholic philosophy which has been given for a generation and may well supplant in many schools the almost classic works of Father Rickaby. Perhaps for a knowledge of the 'isms' with which Father Ryan disagrees a student might more profitably turn elsewhere; but for a clear understanding of the Thomistic view of current issues no better book could be wished for." S. P. Lamprecht

+ N Y Tribune p5 Ap 19 '25 430w

"The plan of the book is logical and it has been skilfully developed."

+ R of Rs 71:447 Ap '25 180w

"One of the best things of its kind in English for the ordinary educated reader who desires to obtain a clear general view of the great structure of scholastic teaching raised on the foundations of Aristotelian metaphysics. The author's methods deserves special praise. It consists in viewing philosophy, as in actual practice it proves itself to be, as a series of problems demanding close examination and such solution as the philosopher can offer in accord with his fundamental principles."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:246 O 24 '25 380w

S

SABATINI, RAFAEL. Carolinian. 414p $2
Houghton [7s 6d Hutchinson]

25-5390

An American historical romance which has its scene in South Carolina during the days of the Revolution. The hero of the tale is Harry Latimer, an ardent young rebel whose loyalty to the Sons of liberty terminates his engagement to beautiful Myrtle Carey, daughter of a rabid Tory. Harry's arrest is ordered by the British governor but he is given three days in which to make his escape. His refusal to leave Charles Town places him in the hands of his British rival in love. Into the subsequent fortunes of Latimer, in which love and war are strangely intermingled, are also woven some strands of Carolinian history.

Booklist 21:304 My '25

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p4 F 28 '25 1850w

Cleveland p83 Jl '25

"Perhaps the outstanding feature of 'The Carolinian' is the vividness with which it is written, the tone of utter fidelity to fact even when analysis may prove such fidelity not to have been attained. The author is master of the art of making his situations graphic; he describes just minutely enough to enable the reader to visualize without being cloyed with surplus detail." S. A. Coblenz

+ Int Bk R p254 Mr '25 1000w

"Rafael Sabatini is happier in his tales of pirates, sword-swinging scalawags and the Borgias than he is in this American tale. He has been painstaking enough in his researches and the 'local color' is painstakingly accurate, but somehow the spirit of the yarn is not quite as free and swinging as in most of the Sabatini stories." C. M. Morrison

+ Lit R p14 Ap 11 '25 400w

"Mr. Sabatini admirably succeeds in conveying the equivocal state of affairs before the combat. All shades of opinion are indicated; and the prevailing tone is developed in broad, sure strokes. It seems rather a pity that he found so little of rousing and romantic adventure among other annals of the United States, and contributed so little to the period he has chosen."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 8 '25 650w

N Y Tribune p9 My 3 '25 100w

"Sabatini is a good workman. His plot-structure is as well integrated as a game of chess. He handles men, women and their shibboleths skilfully. You must have a keen eye to see the wires move. To be honest about it, you probably won't." P. F. Sifton

+ N Y World p6m Mr 1 '25 1050w

"It is full of adventure, love-making, and excitement, and the historic background has been as carefully studied and is no less faithfully presented than if Mr. Sabatini had been one of our native novelists, born and bred in the best traditions of the great G. W. and the cherry tree. But we think he made a mistake in naming his heroine Myrtle."

+ Outlook 140:371 Jl 8 '25 150w

"Has all the qualities which we greeted with delight in 'Scaramouche' and 'Captain Blood'—to wit, a well-seen and carefully built historical setting, rapid action working through the pattern of an alluring plot, and characters who walk with the authentic swing of romance." Gerald Chittenden

+ Sat R of Lit 1:612 Mr 21 '25 220w

"The author draws rather neat portraits of leaders, particularly John Rutledge, the calm, logical revolutionary governor of the state. In the careful tracing of the changing sentiment of the colonists from an attempt to have grievances redressed to outspoken demand for political separation Mr. Sabatini indicates that he has given the subject unbiased study."

+ Springfield Republican p7a Mr 29 '25 500w

"Mr. Sabatini has historic knowledge and a historic sense which raise his books far above the ordinary level of this kind of fiction, and he has not betrayed his reputation in the present instance."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p121 F 19 '25 250w

Wis Lib Bul 21:113 Ap '25

SABATINI, RAFAEL. Strolling saint, rev ed
442p $2 Houghton [3s 6d S. Paul]

25-26900

Agostino is destined by his mother to become a priest. He goes to study with the learned Doctor Fifanti and remains to be seduced by the doctor's beautiful and faithless wife. Discovered, he struggles with the old man and kills him, but since the crime covers the attentions of a more influential man Agostino is not brought to trial. The remorseful youth seeks expiation in the life of a wandering friar. There is a movement in Italy against the infamous Pier Luigi, son of the Pope and Duke of Parma. Agostino, who has suffered heavily at the Duke's hands, enlists in the cause. Against the background of the Italy of the Middle Ages in the grip of a decadent priesthood is written this richly embroidered tale of love and hate, jealousy and swift revenge.

Booklist 22:74 N '25

"The present story is much better than the last one or two because it lives up to what we expect of him. There is little bloodshed, and that not of a gory nature. There are 'sins sinned in a grand manner,' but by no means camouflaged as virtues, for all that. Best of all, there are a good two dozen characters carefully done." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 29 '25 1750w
Cleveland p124 D '25

"The characters stand out clear-cut and distinct, men and women strong in good or evil, living fully, if often tempestuously. Contrasted with many of the drab tales of to-day, this romance is like a piece of splendid brocade, shot through with threads of silver and of gold, placed beside a bit of washed-out cotton." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p741 O '25 450w

"It is a good tale. War was war, in those times. The book has a gallant swing that will delight all those who love sword play and night riding, lovely women and perfumed villainies of scented villains." C. M. Morrison

+ Lit R p3 S 26 '25 360w

"Although Agostino is not worth the pages devoted to him, yet he does have the shadow of a personality." Fitzhugh Gray
— + N Y Tribune p14 N 1 '25 640w

SABIN, EDWIN LEGRAND. White Indian. 320p
$2 Jacobs

25-4212

A romance of the plains in the middle 1830's, at the time of the opening of the Oregon trail. "White Indian" is a young Englishman who having had an unfortunate love affair becomes a trapper in the far West. He marries a comely young Indian woman. The unexpected appearance of the girl who had jilted "White Indian"—the meeting of the two women, and the tragedy which follows brings the story to a climax.

"This odyssey of an elder day and its heroes is like the folklore of a primitive people synchronized to the pulsing of a pioneer heart." E. A. H.

Lit R p9 Mr 7 '25 130w

N Y World p6m Mr 1 '25 100w

"It is a vivid and entertaining narrative of the beaver trappers, white and Indian, who plied their trade amid the dangers of hostile tribes and the rigors of Nature. The adventures, resourcefulness and courage of 'Old Glory' in leading his companions in miniature battles and outwitting crafty enemies will afford the reader great satisfaction."

+ Spring'd Republican p5a S 13 '25 300w

SACKVILLE-WEST, EDWARD. Piano quintet. 311p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Heinemann]

"A string quartet with a pianist start on a short European tour in Paris, Germany and Vienna. The second violin, a young widow, is in love with the first violin. But the love that she wants is not the love that he will give, and what he can give she will not have. The result of the tour is simply the working out of the relations between Imogen Fairtree and Aurelian Poller from uncertainty to bitter clarity; and to this working out Lionel Bunce contributes his cold, proud knowledge, Melchior Riltarath, the pianist, his tortured sensibility, and Barnaby Sparks, the viola, his cheerful serenity."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"We lost the way occasionally, but we doubt if that matters. It is all very much alike, a dim radio-esque rendering of the great symphony which the young man feels in his heart and would broadcast to us. But between him and his audience there is too much static. The heavenly voices are lost and a weird buzzing penetrates our wistful consciousness."

— Boston Transcript p2 O 10 '25 280w

"Edward Sackville West has stamped this first novel with a terse, calm appeal to reason, while seeming to disregard any stimulation of the emotions. The result is unique. . . . Tho not thoroughly satisfying, this story is nevertheless quite readable, presenting an original, stimulating view, and arousing interest in any possible further accomplishments of its author." Sidney Shultz

+ Int Bk R p123 Ja '26 400w

"Seriousness and solidity of imagination is Mr. Sackville West's most remarkable gift. It is seen very clearly in his dialogue (and good dialogue is a sure sign of concreteness of treatment), which for a young writer shows a remarkably mature sense of artistic values. It is not realistic dialogue; it does not tell us what the characters really said so much as what they felt, what their problems were and their reactions to them." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 37:600 Ag 5 '25 600w

"He has actually been able to reproduce in words the aura that surrounds the term 'neurotic.' And, equally rare, to write a first novel as valuable in fact as in promise; one which without thought of futures, lifts him well outside the swarm of those who chatter in print." Betsy Greenebaum

+ New Repub 45:170 D 30 '25 350w

Reviewed by P. C. Kennedy

New Statesman 25:396 J1 18 '25 950w

"An adroit and sophisticated comedy of contemporary manners with implications of irony." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Times p2 D 6 '25 100w

"Chronicled in a cool, chaste style, it colors with cameo-like effect a stark and vivid picture of varied phases of artist life."

+ N Y Times p16 D 27 '25 650w

"'Piano Quintet' gives forth a vague and scattered charm, like a piece of modern music which is untrammelled by time, signature or tonality." Janet Ramsay

+ N Y Tribune p15 N 1 '25 750w

"That he possesses remarkable gifts is evident enough from the quality of his writing, and that he has something difficult and delicate to say is evident from the fact that, with all his cleverness, he does not quite succeed in saying it. Three obstacles confront the reader: lack of structural co-ordination, thinness of characterization, and a certain prolixity, not of style but of incident." Gerald Bullett

+ Sat R 139:676 Je 20 '25 200w

Reviewed by Rebecca West

Sat R of Lit 2:207 O 17 '25 700w

"In many ways an exceptional performance, Mr. Sackville-West's first novel introduces a talent disciplined to the exact accomplishment of its intention. His talent is served by a responsible technique and fortified by discriminating intelligence. And his novel completely expresses the value of its material. A comedy in the ancient sense, 'Piano Quintet' has the final effect of irony, civilized and sophisticated and a little wistful." Lloyd Morris

+ Sat R of Lit 2:292 N 14 '25 700w

"Very remarkable first novel."

+ Spec 135:113 J1 18 '25 700w

"His skill is remarkable, but his power of communication is wanting in suppleness. That is why the experience of reading his book is needlessly complicated and, at times, even a little irritating, as if one were trying to find one's way in a fog."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Je 4 '25 620w

SACKVILLE-WEST, VICTORIA MARY (MRS HAROLD GEORGE NICOLSON). Seducers in Ecuador. 73p $1.50 Doran [4s 6d Hogarth press]

25-12986

"A pair of coloured spectacles transforms the world for a fairly ordinary, idle man. It gives him a different set of working desires, as well as a new world to operate on. In this new world he marries a woman who has, he believes been deserted by her seducer, and, out of friendship, kills a man who has an obsession that he is suffering from an incurable disease. But he has to suffer for all this in the everyday world, and, without his spectacles, he is tried and hanged."—Nation and Ath

Booklist 22:35 O '25

Boston Transcript p4 J1 3 '25 1050w

"A rather strange book, even as modern strange books go, but one with a certain mastery in its self-control."

Ind 115:136 Ag 1 '25 100w

"It is an amusing story well told, which can do more in an hour's reading to make the reader think and meditate on the value of what he considers realities than a great many novels do." Joseph Collins

+ Lit R p2 Ag 1 '25 800w

"Miss Sackville-West's fantastic psychological study is a beautifully finished piece of work. The story is summary, cruel, calmly diabolical, but the objectivity of the art with which it is set down neutralizes, as art should,

SACKVILLE-WEST, V. M.—Continued
the natural emotions which the content would of itself arouse. . . A more technically difficult theme could hardly be imagined, and Miss Sackville-West has treated it with absolute competence and in amazingly small compass." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 36:302 N 22 '24 250w

"Reduced to its essentials, Seducers in Ecuador is happy-go-lucky nonsense, decorative entertainment, achieved with quick, unsistent skill."

+ New Repub 44:52 S 2 '25 180w

Reviewed by J: Franklin

New Statesman 24:206 N 22 '24 250w

"The scene is not laid in South America, neither is there a seducer. The seducer, if any, is a pair of tinted spectacles. The colored spectacles in themselves are a rather mechanical stunt, and the exploitation of even their limited resources does not always carry the release of complete realization. 'Seducers in Ecuador' is provocative and stimulating, but not altogether satisfying." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y Times p13 J1 5 '25 720w

"Miss Sackville-West is obviously and brilliantly clever, and her little story is easy and pleasant to read for its incidental effects. That is why I call it promising. As a story, it is a conclusion rather than a promise—the end of a convention which, though so new, is already dead, since it consists in striving after originality instead of saying what you mean. Saying what you mean is, after all, the only kind of originality there is." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 138:476 N 8 '24 300w

"Disappointment is the strongest emotion after reading 'Seducers in Ecuador.' The first few pages lead one in high excitement to the hope of perfection, the perfection of an ironical fantastical trifle the hope perhaps of, on a different plane, another 'Prancin' Nigger,' but at the end the sum total is a delightfully written and completely hollow book."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:244 O 24 '25 220w

"Miss Sackville-West has broken out into a new manner in this little book. Instead of her full-length dramatic and rather old-fashioned novels, we get a slim, fantastic conte in the best Bloomsbury manner—something of the form of 'Lady into Fox.' Readers will consider this an advance or a regression, according to their tastes; but at any rate they must all admit that Seducers in Ecuador is in its own way and on its own standards about as good as it could be, and if they disapprove, like us, of those standards, they will forget their disapproval in the enjoyment of reading the book itself."

+ Spec 134:20 Ja 3 '25 100w

"A prose entertainment of seventy pages, sparkling with terse, amusing irony and occasionally vibrant colour, and hinting mysterious abysses. When we are in doubt we are generally meant to be. Allusiveness can be effective and amusing when it is surrounded by clear narrative; and the author frankly employs it here to make her atmosphere."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p794 N 27 '24 500w

SADLEIR, MICHAEL. Obedience (Eng title Noblest frailty). 316p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Constable]

25-7193

Mr Sadleir's novel concerned with English manorial life in the eighteen-sixties, stresses the clash of ideals between the older and younger generation of that decade. The conflict is between an obdurate old squire and his younger daughter whose determination to live her own life overcomes every obstacle in her way. Sir Harry Ormond graciously chooses an elderly man of social influence and considerable wealth as a prospective husband for his daughter Catherine. Catherine openly defies her father's wishes, informing him that she is already the promised wife of Frank Martindale, a young veterinary surgeon. There is a violent scene between father and daughter the consequences of which are far-reaching and furnish the dramatic episodes of the story. When every attempt to stave off this preposterous marriage fails, Sir Harry is convinced that his daughter's independent spirit cannot be broken, that her love for Frank Martindale is stronger than all social barriers, and that her happiness is, after all, the essential thing.

"He does not try to write in Victorian style, as he is stupidly criticized for not doing. He merely makes the Victorians come alive, and so shows what a jolly race they were. Let us whisper it. They had quite as much fun as we!" I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 29 '25 1100w

"There is an old-fashioned charm about this simple narrative that, at times, recalls the books of Jane Austen; while all through the story runs that love of gardens and flowers, of wooded hills and lush green pastures, innate in the soul of every Englishman." A. Z.

+ Int Bk R p428 My '25 400w

"'Obedience' does not bear the mark of a great artist, nor does it give any indication that the author will ever be a great artist. This does not prevent it from being an excellent, absorbing tale." Dawn Powell

+ Lit R p3 My 2 '25 500w

Living Age 324:719 Mr 28 '25 400w

"The novel as a whole is lacking in vitality."

+ Nation 121:100 J1 15 '25 120w

"His subject-matter is transparently simple, far too simple to be real; his treatment of it lacks subtlety; the movement of his desires is naively apparent—he punishes evil and rewards virtue with all the old unctious; yet his style is involved and precious, with many of Meredith's vices and with none of Meredith's psychological finesse." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 36:752 F 28 '25 300w

"The conventional melodrama of the theme is nothing against it; any theme will do if you have something to convey. What is objectionable is to take a theme that is equally good for any time or place, to drape it in historical trappings and affected fine writing, and then to persuade yourself that you have evoked a particular atmosphere. That any man of intelligence and education should so delude himself, even to the point of talking about medallions, is a phenomenon so queer as to suggest that he must have his tongue in his cheek. The style is the man, and Mr. Sadleir's style is that of an innocent; it suggests a solemn boy, rather pompous and patronising, who takes himself quite seriously. This quality becomes laughably apparent when his prose is read as blank verse, a measure into which it is perpetually falling." J: Franklin

+ New Statesman 24:570 F 21 '25 380w

Reviewed by H: L. Stuart

N Y Times p9 Ap 12 '25 750w

"The novel is well poised and continuously entertaining. Mr. Sadleir has a high regard for the language in which his ideas are clothed; his style is firm yet flexible."

+ N Y Tribune p11 My 3 '25 250w

"Somehow Sadleir fails to bring home the brush in this story although he has painted with skill scenes glowing with local color. It is in the realization of character that he has failed. Emulating the 'great tradition of Jane Austen and Trollope' (to quote the blurb), Sadleir forgot that the Bennett family had sympathetic appeal whereas the Ormond family are merely a stupid, uninteresting group with neither thought nor feeling of consequence."

+ N Y World p6m My 3 '25 200w

"Surely the creator of certain vile plotters who figure in 'Desolate Splendor' must have had his tongue in his cheek when he wrote this simple tale of love and faithfulness."

Outlook 140:31 My 6 '25 120w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 139:191 F 21 '25 1100w

"Michael Sadleir is too aware that he writes of the Mid-Victorian Era. Thus he takes himself and his subject with a seriousness almost amounting to pomposity. It gives a sense of artifice destructive to those touches of reality which are needed to make a vanished day once more vivid. This is, then, just a pleasant story."

— + Sat R of Lit 1:634 Mr 28 '25 360w
Springf'd Republican p7a My 31 '25 180w

"The tale is a good tale and well told; slighter than 'Privilege,' closer to common human nature than 'Desolate Splendour,' and like both touched with the rich autumn hues which this mind sees where some see the green of spring. The prose is good prose, but for one thing, Mr. Sadler's excessive fondness for iambs. The monotonous beat of them spoils the reader's comfort, and 'blank' verses are frequent."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p102 F
12 '25 400w

Wis Lib Bul 21:201 J1 '25

SADLER, WILLIAM SAMUEL. Americanitis—blood pressure and nerves. 176p $2 Macmillan
612.14 Blood—Pressure. Nervous system—Diseases 25-11248

"Dr. Sadler says, in his introduction to 'Americanitis,' that he used the term in an address which dealt largely with high blood pressure twenty years ago, and that in the interval he has enlarged the theme to include the 'high tension of nervous origin, as well as the excitability which results from chemical or toxic irritation.' He now describes it as a 'restless, feverish, anxious urge, which, taken as a whole, constitutes this thing we call Americanitis, or modern high tension.' Heredity on the one hand and our living practices on the other are concerned in the general background of modern high tension, which is presented in three aspects, toxic tension, nervous tension and blood-pressure tension."—N Y Tribune

"While the book is written in popular style and contains a number of anecdotes collected from personal practice, which appeal to the human interest side rather than to the scientific, it contains a great deal of good advice." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 15:1007 N '25 220w
Boston Transcript p4 Ag 8 '25 100w

"Dr. Sadler covers the ground adequately; his discussion of Toxic Tension, Nervous Tension and Blood Pressure Tension is couched in terms intelligible to laymen and is yet sound scientifically. The tone of the book is injured somewhat by the jocosities of the author who writes a good deal like a Chautauqua lecturer addressing a hot-weather audience of weary morons."

— + Ind 115:80 J1 18 '25 70w

"Americanitis, as a disease entity, is not very clearly established by the book, but this is a minor detail, for it is avowedly a piece of popular writing. Dr. Sadler rambles through his subject like a preoccupied professor in springtime who has his hour to fill but has left his notes at home. However, he gives throughout his frank opinion on matters which are vital, and he registers very definite protests against our habits of unhealthful thinking and the vices of unhygienic living." L: Johnson, M.D.

— + N Y Tribune p10 S 20 '25 550w
Outlook 140:501 Ag 5 '25 10w

SADLER, WILLIAM SAMUEL. Essentials of healthful living. 481p $3.50 (15s) Macmillan
613 Hygiene 25-8721

"An American physician who has written a great number of books on health here deals with personal and general hygiene and with practical methods of preventing individual diseases by hygienic practices."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"The book before us is written for the layman and covers a wide range of subjects. In the main, the facts are correctly stated in an acceptable manner. There are, however, certain statements which lead to confusion. The book is well printed and pleasant to read, but contains no illustrations." M. P. R.

+ — Am J Pub Health 15:1007 N '25 200w

"It will appeal to those who are opposed to drugs fully as much as to those who favor them. It is without illustration and has a very complete index, which makes its great fund of facts readily available." L: C. Johnson, M.D.

+ N Y Tribune p8 Ag 9 '25 700w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p510 J1 30
'25 40w

SADLER, WILLIAM SAMUEL. Personality and health; a talk to business women on efficiency. 128p $1.50 Am. health bk. concern, 533 Diversey parkway, Chicago

612 Woman—Health and hygiene. Hygiene 25-975

In a series of simple and informal talks to women a physician discusses the mental, physical and moral factors making for success.

"No one to whom the book is addressed can read it without receiving good."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 6 '25 180w

SAFETY FIRST LEAGUE. Safety for twenty million automobile drivers; avoid accidents and escape the traffic court; knowledge, concentration, humaneness, science, caution, application; driving an automobile from the mental standpoint, not mechanical. [by Joseph Grondahl]. 236p il lea $12.50
The league, 256-260 W. 38th st., N.Y.

629.2 Automobiles—Accidents 24-20273

"By means of clear instructions and a large number of illustrations, the author explains the fundamentals of intelligent (and therefore safe) automobile driving."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:421 J1 '25

SAFFORD, MOSES VICTOR. Immigration problems; personal experiences of an official. 280p $2.50 Dodd

325 Immigration 25-8824

An official with thirty years' experience in the immigration service is the writer. Beginning with a picture of the old Ellis Island of the early nineties he shows the steady growth of the immigration problem. He is especially interested in immigration legislation and in the medical inspection of aliens.

"Mr. Safford's book is the fruit of years of personal experience; it abounds in reminiscences and anecdotes that lend life and color to the exposition; it is entertaining at the same time as it is authentic, and informative at the same time as it is soberly critical."

+ Bookm 61:709 Ag '25 150w

"The experiences of twenty years of actual contact with the heterogeneous influx of peoples to the ports of Boston and New York gives the author a thorough understanding of the works and worries of the department. In addition, Dr. Safford has the faculty of so writing a book of this nature that it is endowed with a continuous interest."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 29 '25 200w

"There is much that is entertaining in his reminiscences of his years of service."

+ N Y Times p20 My 17 '25 450w

N Y World p4m My 17 '25 100w

Outlook 140:34 My 6 '25 30w

R of Rs 72:110 J1 '25 100w

"The important function of deciding which aliens will probably make desirable citizens, and those who are likely to become a public charge, rests with our officials at Ellis Island. The various duties and serious questions confronting these men are interestingly set forth in this popular, though illuminating book."

Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 14 '25 400w

ST JOHNS, ADELA ROGERS. Skyrocket. 322p $2 Cosmopolitan bk.

25-7665

"The skyrocket" is a story of Hollywood, after the conventional design. Here all the familiar characters of the movie world live and move and have their being according to the best Hollywood tradition. Sharon Kimm, the heroine, is one day little, forlorn, despised; the next, skyrocketed to glory and a place among the stars. She goes the way of desire, vanity and debt, and finds ultimate haven in the Right Man's arms.

"A tale of this kind might breed discontent by arousing yearnings in restless youth but doubtless it will escape disapproval where a sincere and earnest play such as 'Desire Under the Elms' did not."

— Boston Transcript p2 My 16 '25 140w

"A novel about Hollywood might easily have been melodramatic. Instead, this belongs to the literature of power." Rupert Holloway

+ Lit R p3 J1 3 '25 350w

"At best a commonplace yarn, verging at times upon the ridiculous."

— N Y Times p19 Je 7 '25 350w

N Y Tribune p11 Ap 12 '25 120w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p676 O 15 '25 180w

ST NICHOLAS. Salt-water stories, retold from 2 St Nicholas. 225p il $1.25 Century

25-22115

A collection of stories and short articles about the sea. Contents: Tom Robbins, pilot, by J. T. Rowland; Some queer craft, by G. Kobbé; The West Wind's last cruise, by F. H. Converse; Old figureheads, by D. A. Willey; The wreck of the Markham, by E. F. Kimball; The viking ship, by J. O. Davidson; The new whistling-buoy, by C. A. Lawrence; Abroad the Northern Light, by J. T. Trowbridge; A wreck and a rescue, by W. O. Stevens; From ship to shore, by J. M. Ellicott; Erasmus Small, surfman, by C. H. Claudy; The captain's story, by L. Lyndon; Margery and the captain, by Anna A. Rogers; Electric lights at sea, by J. O. Davidson; Bonnie Jean, by N. W.; The Plimsoll mark, by J. M. Ellicott; The gyroscope compass and repeater, by M. Lewis.

"Will help meet the demand of stories to read aloud."

Booklist 22:123 D '25

"Of great variety of plot and incident, but of uniformity in interest." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p746 O '25 80w

SAINTSBURY, GEORGE EDWARD BATE-MAN. Collected essays and papers, 1875-1923. 332p $4.25 Dutton [10s 6d Dent]

824 French literature

The fourth volume of Mr Saintsbury's collected essays is devoted to critical papers on French literature. Contents: Charles Baudelaire; Gustave Flaubert; Chamfort and Rivarol; Saint-Evremond; A frame of miniatures; Ernest Renan; A paradox on Quinet; The contrasts of English and French literature; The end of a chapter; A French man of letters of all work [Théophile Gautier]; Anatole France.

"The reputation of George Saintsbury as learned and urbane critic is already well established. The fourth volume of his 'Collected Essays and Papers, 1875-1923', which contains those on French literature, merely reaffirms, therefore, his breadth of scholarship and his peculiar insight into the Gallic mind. With the exception of the judgment of Anatole France (for which full apology is made in the final essay) Professor Saintsbury's sprightly criticism stands as sound as it did when much of it was written, fifty years ago."

+ Bookm 62:91 S '25 150w

"As a critical work this book is very important. Few writers of the period possess Professor Saintsbury's knowledge combined with his clear analytical manner of writing which opens to the readers a wide field of understanding."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 1 '25 350w

"Saintsbury runs true to form. Throughout the volume he is sane, shrewd, and keen, with his not unkindly eye firmly fixed upon permanent values." J. J. R.

+ Cath World 121:563 J1 '25 250w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Ind 114:244 F 28 '25 1300w

"It is amusing to watch the enthusiasm with which he is read and quoted today when one remembers how exasperating he seemed to those of us who were growing up twenty years ago. Nowadays, not only does his conservatism please but his extraordinary English passes unnoticed or is defended as part of his charming idiosyncrasy. These peculiarities, coupled with the violence of Mr. Saintsbury's social and political prejudices, make him perhaps the worst teacher to whom uncritical and undeveloped minds could be exposed. At the same time, he is the most admirable guide and companion in literature, provided one be armed with other ideas to serve as a check upon his misrepresentations."

Ernest Boyd

+ Lit R p2 Je 27 '25 650w

"Of all these writers he speaks with his accustomed knowledge, though occasionally we are reminded that some of the essays were written a good many years ago."

Nation and Ath 36:194 N 1 '24 750w

"Saintsbury, always notable for literary common sense, never displays more of this sense than when he deals with such minor figures as Rivarol, Chamfort and Saint-Evremond; for he manages to evaluate and interpret them fairly without investing them with a false importance, and in doing this he resists a temptation that is yielded to by many critics when they deal with the second, third and fifth ranks in literature." B. R. Redman

+ N Y Tribune p3 Ap 5 '25 900w

"Here on every page is the plunder of a long life of reading. Here is that kindness, that enthusiasm for literature, and that solid fact which may make other critics despair. No one can read Mr. Saintsbury without feeling ignorant; no one can read him without feeling the reality of the world of literature; and no one can read him without wishing to say the same things more simply." S. T. Williams

+ — No Am 222:187 S '25 750w

Outlook 140:224 Je 10 '25 10w

Spring'd Republican p14 Mr 20 '25 500w

"It is characteristic of Mr. Saintsbury's criticism, that in spite of its being based on erudition it is always alive with personal feeling. In the present volume as in the work of which it represents such a modest slice, there is a perfect adaptation between the power of feeling and the material with which it has to work."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p665 O 23 '24 1050w

SALTUS, MARIE (GILES) (MRS EDGAR EVERTSON SALTUS). Edgar Saltus, the man. 324p il $3 P. Covici

B or 92 Saltus, Edgar Evertson 25-19858

"This life of an American man of letters is written by his wife. Edgar Saltus was the son of a brilliant father, the inventor of a rifled steel cannon. As portrayed by Mrs. Saltus he seems to have been a man of versatility and originality, unconventional and eccentric, boastful and irritable, yet of a kindly, generous nature and considerable mental gifts."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"A rather astonishing book this. Candor is its great virtue."

Bookm 62:504 D '25 220w

"A very readable, excessively sentimental and obviously biased biography of America's once greatest pessimist, and a startling portrait of the 'Pocket Apollo.'" K. S.

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 30 '25 750w

"A strange story; a curious biography; at times appalling in its frankness; rasping the nerves in its utter lack of reticence; likely to leave the reader disturbed and puzzled at a revelation which is, perhaps designedly, as much a revelation of author as of subject." A. B. Maurice

N Y Times p2 O 25 '25 520w

"Although this biography is not well written—several passages are so clumsily put together that the meaning is obscure—it is nevertheless a remarkable document. Mrs. Saltus is at times naive, her theosophical leanings often cast a sentimental blight on these pages, her modest sense of construction frequently fails her; nevertheless, she has painted a portrait of her late husband which makes it quite plain why he did not become a greater writer, why he did not become even a better known writer. This book, therefore, must be regarded as a remarkable document. Whatever faults it possesses, at least it makes Edgar Saltus human and understandable." Carl Van Vechten

+ — N Y Tribune p4 O 11 '25 1000w

"His wife's biography is encased in an orange slip-cover which announces melodramatically that it is 'an extraordinary revealing life.' It is; but I doubt that what it reveals will serve to resuscitate poor Saltus. The man who emerges from it is simply a silly and hollow fellow—a mass of puerile pretensions and affectations; vain of his unsound knowledge and full of sentimentalities." H. L. Mencken

— N Y World p4m O 11 '25 1350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p676 O 15 '25 80w

SANFORD, HUGH WHEELER. Business of life. 2v 475:476-959p $10 Oxford

330 Economics. Evolution. State, The

25-1384

"The author, a practical manufacturer, has worked out in his own mind a clear picture of the relation of political economy to human existence and presents it in a way that will appeal to other practical business men. The first part is 'devoted to political economy, finance, business fluctuations and the laws of production and distribution under a competitive regime.' Following this is an attempt at a philosophical explanation of economics, involving fundamental questions of biological evolution. The last part describes proper conduct for the ideal state."—Management and Adm

Bookm 61:adv Ap '25 120w

"These two volumes whatever may be thought of the conclusions they formulate, bear testimony to a gift of expression, a range of knowledge and an interest in the promotion of human welfare rarely surpassed even by men in whom such qualifications have flowered out into fame." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 7 '25 800w

"The work is written for business men and in language that will help to clarify many hazy ideas concerning broad aspects of political economy."

+ Management and Adm 9:289 Mr '25 170w

"He is often unduly speculative; at times, as it seems, he is lacking in human comprehension. But in the main he is sane, right-thinking and profound. And he has the range of a set of scientific and philosophic concepts undreamed of by Spencer." J. Corbin

+ — N Y Times p7 Ap 5 '25 1400w

N Y World p9e Ja 25 '25 250w

SANTAYANA, GEORGE. Dialogues in limbo. 193p $3 Scribner [10s 6d Constable]

104 Philosophy 25-27452

"The fundamental issue with which Mr. Santayana is concerned is what is generally known as materialism. In the first series of dialogues, those between Democritus and other shades and a Stranger, representative of the modern world, the materialistic theory is discussed. In these dialogues that theory takes the form that 'atoms and the void' are fundamental realities and the cause of all that is. Man's thoughts and desires are merely products of the movements of atoms. . . . What Mr. Santayana really has in mind emerges more clearly in the second set of Dialogues, where Socrates is introduced. Mr. Santayana is pleading for a realistic treatment of man, his appetites and desires. . . . In the third and final set of dialogues Avicenna appears and discourses on the true meaning of Aristotle."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 22:142 Ja '26

"His simplicity, his grace, his deftness of touch, clothe his ideas in a garment at once inviting and reassuring."

+ Bookm 62:619 Ja '26 200w

Boston Transcript p5 D 19 '25 1350w

"For all their richness in nourishment, the chief impression left on the banqueter is of the choice flavor of the viands, the delicate bouquet of the wine. Mr. Santayana's style, always unique, is here at its best." C. W. Stork

+ Lit R p2 N 7 '25 500w

"He, like Plato, is a writer by instinct and training, and in this book his writing is at its best." G. L. Dickinson

+ Nation and Ath 37:650 Ag 29 '25 1500w

"Mr. Santayana's gift of satire, richly as it is revealed in these more metaphysical dialogues, is not, however, exerted in its full power." P. A. Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p2 O 18 '25 1750w

"These dialogues are the perfect exhibition of a union of virtues that are rare enough in literature, and, with the exception of Santayana, unheard of in contemporary philosophy." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Tribune p1 N 15 '25 1300w

"Here we may find urbane and philosophical discussion of diverse matters, from madness to self-government, and from the vivisection of a mind to the 'secret of Aristotle.' Our enjoyment of the book hangs upon our relish for the Santayana personality, its lambent wit, its fruitful irony."

+ Outlook 142:77 Ja 13 '26 360w

"Mr. Santayana's style is a perfect instrument for such semi-philosophical writings as these. It charms us by its demure wit, melancholy cadences and vivid imagery, and it succeeds, as none more ponderous could do, in precisely expressing abstract thought without recourse to a technical vocabulary." H. C. Harwood

+ Sat R 140:165 Ag 8 '25 800w

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p519 Ag 6 '25 1400w

SANTMYER, HELEN HOOVEN. Herbs and apples. 397p $2.50 Houghton

26-135

The story follows the career of Derrick Thornton from the time when as a very little girl she decides that she will one day be famous, thru her school years, on to college and finally to New York, where she tries to pursue her literary calling. Quite without intending it, Derrick falls in love, but the war takes Jack from her and he does not come back. She struggles on in New York for a time but eventually gives up striving for laurel leaves and accepts the herbs and apples of life in her Ohio town.

Boston Transcript p6 N 11 '25 250w

"The novel is sincere and a vivid achievement." A. C. A.

+ Lit R p9 D 12 '25 180w

"Miss Santmyer is lacking in the ability to sift her material so as to make it sustain her theme, and the narrative drags accordingly. Yet scattered through this oddly compounded book are passages of a breath-taking delicacy and poignancy, of insight and power beyond cavil." E. B. H.

+ — New Repub 45:198 Ja 6 '26 120w

SANTMYER, HELEN HOOVEN—Continued

"This, Helen Hooven Santmyer's first novel, is a dignified piece of writing, whose seriousness of purpose bears a promise for the future. But, like most first novels, it is overcrowded with minutiae."

+ — N Y Times p17 S 13 '25 320w

"One phase of Derrick Thornton's psychology—a recurring experience which she identifies as an 'intimation of immortality'—is described by Miss Santmyer with poignant apprehension of a mystical adventure. Miss Santmyer may be counted upon for a better novel than 'Herbs and Apples,' because she has written so persuasively of an illusive emotional state."

+ N Y Tribune p24 O 25 '25 400w

Sat R of Lit 2:301 N 14 '25 400w

"While at times the story drags a little, the characters are sufficiently alive to hold the reader's interest. The novel repays careful reading."

+ — Springf'd Republican p5a N 22 '25 200w

SAPPER, pseud. See McNeile, C.

SARETT, LEW R. Slow smoke. 104p $2 Holt

811

25-17897

Poems expressing a close communion with wild nature and a fine appreciation of the American Indian and the untamed West.

"Delicate lyric poetry."

+ Booklist 22:111 D '25

"He is something more than a lusty translator. In 'Slow Smoke' he emerges as a poet in his own right. 'Feud' is marked by an intensity that is as vivid as it is racial; 'Four Little Foxes' is a lyric that is tender without a trace of mawkishness; 'To a Wild Goose over Decoys' sounds a personal excitement beneath its transparent symbolism. Sarett's growth is manifest on almost every page of his latest collection." L: Untermeyer

+ Bookm 62:496 D '25 280w

"In his poems of nature, Mr. Sarett is often very fine indeed. Suggestive, original, sincere, he paints a picture as vivid as it is true. He is not so successful with his poems about persons."

+ — Ind 115:654 D 5 '25 80w

"In 'The Box of God,' Lew Sarett revealed a vigorous masculine singing, with a sensitive command of fresh and subtle rhythms. 'Slow Smoke' is written as well as the best of the former book, and crests on a more definite and personal utterance than the earlier collection." Clement Wood

+ Lit R p4 N 28 '25 250w

"You need have no special interest in either the red man or his surroundings to be captivated by the charm of the book, although its descriptive passages must have added meaning for those who also have camped beside pools. Mr. Sarett writes of what he knows and feels, and with full power of communication." Arthur Guiterman

+ Outlook 141:286 O 21 '25 250w

"His stories of the Indians are poignant and have been written with vivid sympathy. He can see in their life, as few white men could, lights that are beautifully universal shining through a thwarted and sometimes decadent humanity. But even better than the stories of Indian life we like the lyrics, especially those that have to do with animals."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:417 D 12 '25 450w

SASS, HERBERT RAVENEL. Way of the wild. 321p il $2.50 Minton, Balch & co.

Animals—Stories and legends 25-18151

Dramatic incidents of wilderness life in which the furred and feathered creatures of the woods move as protagonists. The setting of the stories is the picturesque marsh and mountains of the Carolina coast. The illustrations in black and white are by Charles Livingstone Bull.

"There is none of the mawkish sentimentality about these which makes valueless too many wild-animal stories. Neither Colonel Roberts nor Stewart Edward White have ever reproduced more starkly those processes by which the wilderness laws of 'crashing hoof and ravening claw' are pitilessly carried out."

+ Boston Transcript p7 O 31 '25 600w

"An excellent [book] for older boys and girls, and for adults, too, with far greater interest than its somewhat threadbare title might suggest." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p813 N '25 100w

"He is not only a good story-teller but a first-rate naturalist, and his tales lose none of their accuracy for being charmingly written and readable." Carey Jeffreys

+ Lit R p2 O 24 '25 50w

"He must have had years of experience and close observation of the 'way of the wild' folk thereabout or he could not write of them with the intimacy, the realism and the convincingness shown in this collection of stories. He is skilful with his pen, also, backgrounding and setting his action vividly and selecting and recounting his incidents with dramatic feeling. There have been no better animal stories than these within recent years and readers who enjoy tales of this sort will hope that his first book will be followed by many others."

+ N Y Times p21 O 11 '25 500w

N Y Tribune p17 N 15 '25 150w

"Mr. Sass writes well, clothing his stories better than he contrives them, out of a rich knowledge of the South Carolina wilderness."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:262 O 31 '25 220w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 6 '25 150w

SAURAT, DENIS. Milton, man and thinker.

363p $4 Dial press [15s J. Cape]

B or 92 Milton, John

25-7388

"The aim of Mr. Saurat's study is 'to determine the human and lasting element in Milton's thought.' To this end he endeavors to strip off the integument of Milton's Puritanism, to disengage his great principles from their application to the special problems of the time, to convert the terms of theology into the terms of philosophy, to exhibit, in short, in his ideas an interest susceptible of universal appeal and as important for our time as for Milton's own. The result is the picture of a mind intransigent and modern, bursting the inherited formulæ within which it pretended to confine itself, playing havoc with dogmas as disastrously as those who have done their thinking entirely outside of them. Saurat's Milton is not a Calvinist with variations, or indeed a dogmatic theologian at all. His heresies are the dynamic and essential elements of his thought. They are passionately held convictions which permeate his intellectual and emotional life and which animate his eloquence in prose and verse."—N Y Tribune

"I should say that Mr Saurat's concerns are decidedly peripheral to those aspects of Milton's poetry which recommend it to modern readers; but in this peripheral territory his work has been extensive, and should prove of most value to students and producing scholars, all those for whom Milton is less a poet than a task." Kenneth Burke

— + Dial 79:429 N '25 700w

"A book of the first importance for anyone who wishes to know how the classics may be kept alive. It stands as one of the chief contributions thus far to the scholarship which over nearly a decade in Europe and America has been making a new person out of Milton." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 120:358 Ap 1 '25 620w

"The book is crammed with interest for anyone prepared to enjoy it." G: Saintsbury

Nation and Ath 37:178 My 9 '25 1300w

"After Mr. Saurat's book little remains of the Puritan Milton of convention. Instead emerges a world mind of far greater scope and more varied meaning. And in place of Milton as the supplement to the Bible and popularizer of Christian mythology we have one of the great philosophic poets, to be ranked with Lucretius, Dante and Goethe." R. M. Lovett

New Repub 42:346 My 20 '25 1400w

Reviewed by S. F. Damon

New Repub 44:sup2 S 30 '25 580w

"His very positive and modern ideas will certainly arouse contradiction and controversy; but there are few who, after reading his volume, will not take down Milton from their shelves and revive their memories of the first book of 'Paradise Lost' or the first speech of Samson, with a new sympathy for the poet and a more alert attention to his message."

+ New Statesman 25:137 My 16 '25 1650w

"Denis Saurat, until recently Professor of English in the University of Bordeaux, is perhaps the leading student of Milton in France. Between 1920 and 1922 he published three studies of Milton, and in this volume, which contains the substance of his former investigations he shows himself master of his material. Accuracy of thought and clarity of expression mark every page. . . On the whole, his interpretation is surprisingly accurate and just; it is a real achievement for a French mind to enter so accurately and so thoroughly into the mind of such an intense Englishman as Milton." W. H. Dunn

+ N Y Times p2 My 24 '25 1050w

"In the biographical chapters there is little that is new in the way of fact, much in the way of interpretation." J. H. Hanford

N Y Tribune p3 My 17 '25 1250w

Pratt p26 autumn '25

"Dr. Saurat cuts short his section on the facts and traditions of Milton's life, and dwells on his thought as shown in his writings. Here he is an acute and learned interpreter, having waded through the waste of those controversial writings which are now only redeemed by their occasional eloquence. He is equally searching and ingenious when he comes to the big poems, and discovers much of Milton himself, not always aptly introduced."

+ Sat R 139:465 My 2 '25 560w

"M. Saurat has written a provocative and valuable book; he has read widely, has worked hard, and he offers many new ideas. These are bound to be attacked and not a few of them will go down under attack; others will be modified. But they will stimulate thought and investigation in new directions and will lead to a better understanding of Milton." R. D. Haven

+ Sat R of Lit 2:276 N 7 '25 700w

"The book has great merits; it introduces us to the sources from which Milton drew his cosmology and his ethics; it points out his debt to the Kabbalists; and it includes a brief study of Robert Fludd, the greatest of English occult philosophers."

+ Spec 134:636 Ap 18 '25 80w

"Dr. Saurat's life of Milton and his exposition of the ideas implicit in his writings are both admirable. Indeed, it is hard to think that a better introduction to Milton could have been written." Alan Porter

+ Spec 135:881 N 14 '25 1250w

SAUTER, JOHANNES A. Among the Brahmins and pariahs; tr. from the German by Bernard Miall. 241p $3 Boni & Liveright [10s 6d Unwin]

915.4 India—Social life and customs

[24-12771]

"Here are colorful and intimate glimpses into the daily life of the Hindu people as interpreted by one who though alien lived for many years among them and by transfusion became a blood brother of Arun the Brahmin. . . The author seeks to create an Indian atmosphere. He does it by eliminating all externals of the customary Occidental interpretations of the Orient. His readers are brought at once without warning into the Brahmin home, into the Calcutta opium den, to the temple of celebration, into the cemetery of the plague-stricken village, into the school of the yogi, and into the gossip and lore of the Road."—Sat R of Lit

Boston Transcript p7 D 10 '24 880w

"Since he writes all with an apparent desire to tell with detached and strict truthfulness that which he remembers, his book carries no complaints, no remedies and no prejudices. He is obviously too wise and experienced in his knowledge of the subjects on which he writes to hold any delusions of permanently bettering such conditions." E. C. Beckwith

Lit R p13 N 8 '24 350w

N Y World p9e O 26 '24 100w

"Since the days of Kim no writer has so widely opened the doors of India to Western eyes or so sympathetically shown us the Indian mind at work on the daily tasks and age-old problems of this intensely interesting people. The translator has carried over into English the graceful and forceful style of the original, a feat which adds much to the atmosphere of the work." C. A. Kofoid

+ Sat R of Lit 1:580 Mr 7 '25 350w

"The strange places and people of which he writes are presented to us vividly and objectively, without the irritating and obscuring intervention of the average tourist mind."

+ Spec 132:885 My 31 '24 400w

"Not even Mukerji, to whom India is home, succeeds in bringing out of that land of mystery and fire and passion a clearer picture, a more acceptable interpretation."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a F 15 '25 970w

"Sketches often vividly drawn and sometimes, as in the case of the visit to the Chinese opium dens, dealing with unusual experiences. The doubt remains whether the book was worth the trouble of translation for the sake of these few incidents."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p258 My 1 '24 1000w

SAVAGE, WINFIELD A. Graphic analysis for executives. 141p $4 Codex bk.

651.563 Graphic methods 25-787

The book describes the construction and use of graphic charts as applied to problems involved in the management of a business. Administration control, sales, costs, budget control, routine and organization are analyzed and visualized by means of illustrative charts taken from actual examples which have been found effective in various lines of business.

"The text is clear; explanations are concise; and the charts are practical and not fanciful."

+ Am Econ R 15:557 S '25 70w

"A large number of charts are used, some of them colored. The book is concise and should be a valuable handbook for executives in search of definite ways for graphically presenting facts about their business."

+ Management and Adm 9:290 Mr '25 60w

"A very useful little book."

+ N Y Times p16 F 1 '25 200w

SAVIGNON, ANDRE. Sunken gold; tr. from the French by Edgar Jepson. 261p $1.75 Appleton [7s 6d Harrap]

25-11074

Daniel Prigent, a young French country lad, tells this story of his terrifying experiences aboard the wrecker Ragueur. Daniel's godfather is captain of as wild a crew as ever shipped under a pirate flag. M. Mengham, owner of the Ragueur, is real master of vessel and crew; only the captain, Corsen and Calais, giants, all of them, are in his confidence. The apparent object of their voyage is the innocent one of salvage, but the furious brawl which marks the lad's introduction to the crew suggests a more sinister purpose. His fears are confirmed when he hears seditious murmurs among the men. If the master is out for treasure they mean to share it. After days of sullen rebellion and exhaustive work, they hoist from the ocean bed, not the anticipated steel plate, but a huge chest that bursts in a cascade of gold over the deck. The sight of the gold arouses in every heart all that is bloodthirsty and avaricious. There follow such appalling scenes of sheer terror that Daniel is glad to escape with his life.

SAVIGNON, ANDRE—Continued

Boston Transcript p4 J1 25 '25 420w
Cleveland p87 S '25

"The book rises toward a climax that is awesome and bloody, for M. Savignon spares no pain to bring everything to a violent head. Written compactly and with a certain degree of insight into character, the story is different from the usual American adventure yarn." H. S. Gorman

+ Int Bk R p682 S '25 400w

"Mr. Savignon has done nothing particularly new, but his seas are foamy, his sea dogs facilely and veristically delineated. How the actions of a group of men grew to be governed more and more completely by greed and how this greed defeated its own ends are set down in a story which makes a pleasing addition to the literature of its perennially popular genre." H. A. Jaggard

+ — Lit R p5 Ag 15 '25 200w

N Y Times p13 J1 12 '25 800w

"Those persons who (allegedly) read 'Treasure Island' once a year are advised, unless their interest is partisan and exclusively Stevensonian, to sample André Savignon's version of the buried treasure complex. Slighter in most respects than its elder brother, this account of a boy's experiences with a pirate crew demands attention from all confirmed users of sea tales, chiefly rascally."

+ N Y Tribune p12 J1 19 '25 160w

"Mr. Savignon's knowledge of the English Channel is excellent, and so is his understanding of the French fishermen and wreck robbers. He draws his characters well, and apparently without effort. A few words of description, an unconscious, self-revealing remark—and there is a character, living and individual."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:920 J1 18 '25 220w

"The surprising echoes from Stevenson do not avail to give to the book that genial horror, that warm picturesqueness, which delight us in 'Treasure Island.' It is very intelligently written, but it lacks magic."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p105 F 12 '25 180w

SAWYER, MRS HARRIET PRICE, ed. Library² and its contents. (Classics of American librarianship) 471p $2.25 Wilson, H.W.

020 Library science. Bibliography—Best Books 25-21198

A collection of reprints of papers and addresses on book selection, book buying, classification, cataloging, accessioning, shelf lists, inventory and book binding. The papers range in date from 1853 to 1920 and the writers include some of the best known names in the library profession.

Booklist 22:100 D '25

Wis Lib Bul 21:227 O '25

SAYLER, OLIVER MARTIN. Inside the Moscow art theatre. 240p il $4 Brentano's

792 Moscow art theatre

"The volume is by no means limited to the so-called Moscow Art Theatre Musical Studio and the company of 'singing actors' from Russia who are now playing in New York a repertory extending from Aristophanes through Offenbach and Bizet to Rachmaninoff. Sayler takes account of a number of other matters

... [but] the part of Sayler's book which concerns Nemirovitch—Dantchenko's present offerings on our boards naturally commands the most immediate interest hereabout."—N Y Times

"Mr. Sayler presents, with all timeliness, a close picture of the most engaging company of actors of this modern day."

+ Lit R p8 Ja 9 '26 150w

"This very industrious, thorough and serious author has made a book which is full of instruction on the whole subject of the relation of the Russian experiments to the stream of art and the philosophy which attempts to correlate art with life. It is not only a thorough but a readable book, in spite of its learning. The chief faults of the book are direct consequences of its construction out of material already partly used in newspaper articles, or result from the intrusion of the advocate into the province of the reporter and appraiser. Mr. Sayler is both. But he is an honest advocate and a fair appraiser." H. I. Brock

+ — N Y Times p11 D 27 '25 2100w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Tribune p3 D 20 '25 700w

N Y World p6m D 27 '25 50w

SAYLES, MARY BUELL. Problem child in school; narratives from case records of visiting teachers; with a description of the purpose and scope of visiting teacher work, by Howard W. Nudd. (Publication no. 4) 287p $1 Joint com. on methods of preventing delinquency, 50 E. 42d st., N.Y.

136:76 Children, Abnormal and backward. Visiting teachers 25-11013

When teacher, parent and child arrive at an impasse thru the delinquency of the latter, the visiting teacher is called in. She seeks first to win the confidence of the recalcitrant pupil and its parents, and then to bring them to a mutual understanding of the problem and the way to set it right. Thru her sympathetic and intelligent management the child is often cured of anti-social tendencies or hurtful habits and becomes a normal, useful, happy member of society. The cases described in this volume, chosen because of their universality, and the completeness of available data, show the visiting teacher at work.

"Obviously, a great teacher or parent understands intuitively the psychology of a difficult child, but most of us ordinary people will be helped by the methods and examples given here of how to find out the causes for erratic behavior or unhappiness. The Joint Committee is doing a constructive work of great importance."

+ Ind 114:704 J1 20 '25 150w

"The reader of this book, whether teacher, social worker, or parent, can find many a lesson within its pages, too valuable to be missed." Winifred Rand

+ J Home Econ 17:665 N '25 600w

"Despite its pedagogical slant, the book is not only for teachers and those interested in the application of psychological methods to education. It should be read by every parent with a child problem, and even more by those who think their children present no problems." D: Seabury

+ N Y Tribune p11 N 22 '25 1000w

Outlook 140:342 J1 1 '25 20w

Sat R of Lit 2:414 D 12 '25 300w

"The peculiar charm and impressiveness of this little book lie in its direct and simple narration of the careers of a number of children who, for one reason or another, stumbled in the path of their school adventure, and in the discussion in simple and clear language of the resources and techniques to which the various visiting teachers had recourse in their efforts to help these children over their difficulties." Bernard Glueck, M.D.

+ Survey 54:638 S 15 '25 520w

SCARBOROUGH, DOROTHY, and GULLEDGE, OLA LEE. On the trail of Negro folk-songs. 289p $3.50 Harvard univ. press; for sale by Baker & Taylor

784.7 Negro songs

25-19922

"Miss Scarborough discusses the pretty sharply defined groups—dance songs, ballads, lullabies, work songs and the rest—and devotes a chapter to an added interesting phase; namely, the Negro's part in transmitting the traditional songs and ballads which reached America from England and Scotland. It is odd, yet wholly natural and explicable, for instance, to find Negroes in several Virginia counties possessing a version of the familiar ballad of 'Barbara Allan.' It has undergone little alteration, though obviously such terms as 'howdy' and 'parlor' were not incorporated into the ballad until it reached this side of the Atlantic. In most instances Miss Scarborough reproduces the airs of the songs she quotes." —Springf'd Republican

"Dorothy Scarborough seems to have a hard, but happy, time trailing her Negro folk-songs back to their American beginnings, but the results are most satisfying to the reader. If you are the least bit interested in that sort of music or in folk-lore or in Negroes or in rural life in the South, or in Creole New Orleans, you will enjoy reading this book, and if you read it you will want to add it to your library. If it were indexed—which it is not—it would make an excellent reference book for students of folk-lore." J. W. M.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 24 '25 700w

"Noteworthy and invaluable addition to the growing literature of the American folk-song. A collection of rare fascination, not complete, of course. But she, like others in the field, has at least made a brave beginning." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p2 O 10 '25 350w

"To the specialist this book commends itself as a document of permanent authority. Other readers will value the volume as highly for its musical and poetical substance, for the humor and enthusiasm of Dr. Scarborough's comments, and for the charmed style in which she relates her quest." Janet Ramsay

+ New Repub 45:168 D 30 '25 360w

Reviewed by Muna Lee

N Y Times p7 O 18 '25 800w

"Immensely important in adding to our knowledge of the great variety of this material and of its aesthetic and ethnological value, but it seems to me that the final word on this subject must be spoken by a Negro. It is utterly impossible for any white man; even an educated Negro occasionally finds himself at a loss, consistently to comprehend the ignorant Negro's point of view and it is to the ignorant Negro that we are indebted for these songs." Carl Van Vechten

+ — N Y Tribune p2 O 25 '25 480w

"The volume is one that deserves to be highly prized by those interested in either the Negro race or the native music of this country."

+ Outlook 142:78 Ja 13 '26 260w

"One of the most extensive and discriminating collections of Negro folk-songs ever made. Especially grateful should we be for the retention of their homely vitality and native charm by the simple and familiar tone and detail of Miss Scarborough's commentary, as well as for her assurances that the spirit of this folk art is still very much alive." Alain Locke

+ Sat R of Lit 2:339 N 28 '25 700w

"Years of painstaking scholarship have come to fruition in recent months in the publication of collection after collection of American folk-songs and folk-lore. All of this effort has been sincere and intelligent, most of it thorough. And in no case have the results been given to the world in dryasdust fashion. Admirably illustrative of these conclusions is 'On the Trail of Negro Folk-Songs.'"

+ Springf'd Republican p12 N 6 '25 300w

SCHAEFFER, MRS EVELYN (SCHUYLER). Fortune's yellow. 248p $2 Scribner

25-5848

The principal characters in this tale of love and adventure are two charming women, Kitty Neil, unconquerably young for her white hair and sixty-eight years, and Tony Westcote, a blithe young person of twenty-five. Kitty has become the beneficiary of a mysterious legacy and on her way to California in the interests of her fortune, makes the acquaintance of Tony, whom she employs as her secretary. Strange events which follow bring Kitty's faith in her secretary to a severe test—but gradually the love story of Tony unfolds itself and brings into the scene Kitty's mysterious benefactor.

"We may thank the author for the joy-of-life note, throughout 'Fortune's Yellow.' It is so hard to find cheerful books, free from mental and protoplasmic contortions of characters. Since it is intended to be amusing and entertaining, we cannot justly decry the story for lack of profundity." J. R. S.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 21 '25 330w
Cleveland p83 J1 '25

"'Fortune's Yellow' is a pleasing story. It makes no pretense to do anything more than to amuse, and it is successful in this." Oliver Claxton

+ Lit R p9 Ap 11 '25 120w

"It is a gentle novel, though its plot is unusually active for its type."

N Y Times p16 Mr 8 '25 700w

N Y Tribune p11 My 31 '25 160w

N Y World p7m Ap 26 '25 100w

"There is no discordant note to jar an amiable tale. Precisely the idea which some jaded people will like to hypnotize themselves with on a languid spring or a sultry summer day."

Sat R of Lit 1:714 Ap 25 '25 100w

"The reader seeking something novel in romantic fiction will find it in 'Fortune's Yellow' which is a bit of an adventure story, though the love theme dominates. Present-day types of people and conditions make 'Fortune's Yellow' realistic. It is a thrill in itself to find the heroine 68 years old and not playing second in the least to the complicated modern girl who charmingly furnishes the adventure element."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 16 '25 300w

Wis Lib Bul 21:202 J1 '25

SCHAUFFLER, ROBERT HAVEN. Peter 2 Pantheism. 215p $2 Macmillan

814

25-22482

A group of essays on a variety of themes, written with much of the elfin humor its title implies. Contents: Where ignorance is bliss; Unborn words; The most important book; On the trail of charm; Cupid in kilts; Cupid in knickerbockers; Timesquarese; Jazzy Anna; Jack Tar products; A word for Adam's costume; Woods honor.

Booklist 22:153 Ja '26

"In a world wearied with problems of 'all things and a few others,' the liting messages of courage and optimism these essays bring are for the reader as if, plodding or fighting his way along uncharted and shadowy trails, he suddenly came upon a sunlit river drowsing between reedy margins, and heard clearly for a little happy space the pipes o' Pan." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 12 '25 680w

"Mr. Schauffler's attitude of petrified horror at modern language and magazine matter is sustained too long. Two essays, 'On the Trail of Charn' and 'Woods Honor,' are comparatively free from affectation."

SCHAUFFLER, R. H.—Continued

+ Ind 115:743 D 26 '25 120w

"One is tempted to say that in 'Peter Pantheism' the author is schauffler than ever. It is needless to add that, as a verb, 'schauffle' means to write easily, charmingly, and amusingly on any and every subject under the sun."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:451 D 26 '25 350w

"All the essays are pleasant, clever, chatty, and if they contain little that is memorable, they are at least full of catchy thoughts, phrases and bons mots."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ja 8 '26 460w

SCHAUFFLER, ROBERT HAVEN, comp.
'Poetry cure; a pocket medicine chest of verse. 414p $2.50 Dodd

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections 25-23610

Mr Schauffler offers the poetry cure for mental ills. Here are carefully compounded prescriptions for the dark or the dull moods; for the bitter, dissatisfied, harsh, or unhappy hours that overtake mankind. In the essay which prefaces the poems Mr Schauffler explains the origin of the idea of the poetry cure and the psychological principle behind it. In his "medicine chest" there is to be found tonic or sedative, stimulant or anodyne, to suit the patient and his need.

"Mr. Schauffler has launched a very interesting experiment, and he deserves considerable credit for his pioneer effort and for his skill and his pains in preparing such a novel undertaking." W. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 9 '25 350w

Lit R p13 N 21 '25 100w

SCHAUMANN, AUGUST LUDOLF FRIEDRICH. On the road with Wellington; the diary of a war commissary in the Peninsular campaigns; ed. and tr. by Anthony M. Ludovici. 440p il $7.50 Knopf [25s Heinemann]

B or 92 Peninsular war, 1807-1814 [25-4188]

"August Schaumann was the son of a Hanoverian lawyer who tried clerking for a few years after the completion of his military service, found it highly irksome, and enlisted in the King's German Legion for service in the Peninsula. He reached Portugal in August, 1808. He was at once appointed to clerk in the British Commissariat, and went through the whole campaign up to Wellington's triumphant entry into France in 1813. Schaumann seems to have kept an ample diary of his experiences, and in 1827 he expanded this into a full relation of his life for the perusal of his family. An abridgment of his autobiography was published in German two years ago, and Mr. Anthony M. Ludovici has shortened this still further and translated it into English."—Sat R

"As a thrilling human interest story of warfare there is much in the book that will command attention." F. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 28 '25 680w

"Always cool, always unimpassioned, but always written in the most interesting fashion." C: W. Thompson

+ Lit R p2 Mr 28 '25 1400w

"Mr. Ludovici has a deplorable habit of hanging up his nominatives, which may or may not be due to the original Schaumann's attitude towards grammar, but is, however it be caused, a sore trial to the English reader, yet even this illiteracy cannot destroy the fascination of Schaumann's own lively and direct narrative style."

+ New Statesman 24:539 F 14 '25 1070w

"Schaumann was not consciously literary; he never wrote a line for publication in his life. But he had the diary habit. The book shows that he could see and he had powers of narrative and description of which any professional writer might be proud." James Luby

+ N Y Times p15 Ap 19 '25 2050w

Reviewed by W. J. Ghent

N Y Tribune p10 Mr 29 '25 800w

"Without adding greatly to our historical materials, it affords a lively and apparently truthful picture of a famous campaign, as it was seen by a hard-working subordinate in Wellington's supply service." W. E. G. Fisher

+ Sat R 139:57 Ja 17 '25 500w

Spec 134:248 F 14 '25 200w

"On the whole the work of translation and compression is well done, but there should have been an index and a sketch map to help the reader to follow the movements. Some rather crude but interesting little sketches by the author add to the value of the diary."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p34 Ja 15 '25 1050w

SCHECTER, FRANK ISAAC. Historical foundations of the law relating to trademarks; with foreword by Munroe Smith. (Columbia legal studies) 211p il $6 Columbia univ. press

347.7 Trade marks

25-10169

The first volume in the projected series of Columbia legal studies is a study of the sources and historical development of trademark law. The book deals with merchants' personal and proprietary marks in the Middle Ages, the typical craftsman's marks, trademarks in the cloth and cutlery trades, the beginnings of the modern trade-mark law and some of the problems of the law. Bibliography. Index.

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 1 '25 220w

"This volume is the first of the 'Columbia Legal Studies,' and a very hopeful herald of what is to come. Also, in all mechanical respects, including illustrations, the book is worthy of its origin."

+ Ind 115:136 Ag 1 '25 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p418 Je 18 '25 400w

SCHERER, JAMES AUGUSTIN BROWN. First forty-niner, and the story of the golden tea-caddy. 127p il $1.50 Minton, Balch & co.

B or 92 Brannan, Samuel. California—History 25-21782

"Sam Brannan, adventurer, sailed through the Golden Gate with a cargo of three hundred Mormons on the last day of July, 1846. In Yerba Buena, which was to become San Francisco, Brannan was a leader from the first. After preaching the first sermon and solemnizing the first marriage and occasioning the first jury trial there, he set up and operated the first California flour-mills and gave his town its first newspaper. He was the first herald, to a skeptical San Francisco, of the discovery of gold in 1849. Through the colorful years that followed he retained his gift of leadership, which flowered in the forming of the Vigilance Committees."—Publisher's note

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

Bookm 62:613 Ja '26 100w

Ind 115:685 D 12 '25 60w

"A slight but entertaining footnote to the great epic of gold."

+ N Y Times p7 N 15 '25 600w

"His book is full of fire and vigor and haste and excitement. In it there are the color and the noise and the nervousness of a boom town. The valueless has been left out and the superfluous cast aside. It's marvelous reading, and it rings true." C: J. Finger

+ N Y Tribune p5 D 27 '25 700w

"Mr. Scherer did well to limit his tale of the first forty-niner and the golden tea-caddy, for no one who picks it up will be able to put it down again without reading it through. The rush of the subject pervades the narrative, and the haste of the gold-seeker engulfs the reader."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:385 D 5 '25 300w

SCHILLER, FERDINAND CANNING SCOTT. Tantalus; or, The future of man. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 66p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

901 Civilization. Eugenics. Man 25-532

The Cro-Magnons seem to have been the finest race of human beings that has ever existed. Since evolution reached its peak with them, some thirty thousand years ago, the physical powers of man have steadily declined. If with the great races of antiquity man reached his highest mental development, it has been with the aid of education that modern man has preserved what he has of culture and knowledge. Mental and physical progress has long since ceased, due largely to the indiscriminate preservation of the weak with the strong, of the inferior with the superior. The author sees but one way to arrest the inevitable decay of the race, discrimination against the inferior thru the practice of eugenics, and the application of psychology to the modern problems of man.

"The scientific reader who is interested in the reaction of biological ideas on the mind of an intelligent outsider, or wishes to see the case for eugenics briefly stated without the display of too much class or racial prejudice, would do well to buy this little essay." J. B. S. H.

+ Nature 115:219 F 14 '25 360w

"Dr. Schiller offers us nothing but a pious ejaculation tied to the end of a terrible threat." J. Langdon-Davies

— New Repub 42:161 Ap 1 '25 1200w

"An amusing and provocative little book." H. M. Parschley

+ N Y Tribune p12 Ap 19 '25 660w

"The reviewer believes that he could have thought of enough facts to present a case against each of the theories, but he is not optimistic enough to believe that he could have rendered Dr. Schiller speechless in reply, nor will he deny that he found great value in the book as supplying a generous fund of subjects for talky-talk." W. F. Stead

Sat R 138:362 O 11 '24 950w

"Dr. Schiller's essay, though not lacking traces of sprightly facetiousness, is not equal to its predecessors in novelty of matter or in power of imagination; but he states his case concisely and interestingly."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 F 13 '25 500w

Reviewed by P. W. and A. R. Whiting
World Tomorrow 8:283 S '25 350w

Reviewed by Ellsworth Huntington
Yale R n s 15:180 O '25 120w

SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER. Political and social history of the United States, 1829-1925. 576p $3 Macmillan

973 United States—History. United States
—Politics and government 25-10818

This book, with its companion volume covering the years 1492 to 1828, by Homer C. Hockett, forms a continuous history of the United States in its political, social and economic aspects. The history is intended primarily for college students and each chapter is provided with bibliographical notes.

"A volume which students of government will find extremely helpful and interesting."

+ Am Pol Sci R 19:856 N '25 150w

"An authoritative work marked by breadth and thoroughness of knowledge which give it encyclopædic value."

+ Bookm 62:221 O '25 90w

"Excellent not only as a textbook, but for the shelves of a small and carefully selected library."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 18 '25 180w

"There is a coherent outline, the material has been well selected, the style is clear, and the temper unprejudiced. In fine, this work is not only an adequate text, but also a step toward the synthesis of American History." R. F. Nichols

+ Hist Outlook 17:36 Ja '26 250w

"The author has accomplished what he set out to do. Undoubtedly, the present author, in covering so large and so complex a record in such restricted limits, has been obliged to omit a good deal and to pass over with very brief comment important developments in American life and history." W. M.

+ — Ind 115:79 Jl 18 '25 190w

"An excellent history of the United States." C: A. Beard

+ New Repub 44:311 N 11 '25 80w

"Professor Schlesinger has inclined, on the whole, to the suppression of the personal or local incidents which, if not of great substantive importance, has nevertheless done much to make the national past seem real and even vivid." W: MacDonald

N Y Times p14 Jl 26 '25 720w

"Occasionally Dr. Schlesinger is awkward in his division of his subject matter. But in general the work is subject to little criticism. The bibliography is full and pointed and distinguished by numerous and well planned maps." A. N.

+ — N Y Tribune p8 S 27 '25 550w

"The chief defects of a generally admirable work are found in the second volume, by Professor Schlesinger, which contains some misapprehensions so extraordinary as to challenge curiosity and bewilderment as to their origin." W. F. Johnson

+ — No Am 222:179 S '25 350w

"Eminently suitable for use as a text-book in the higher schools and in colleges. Scholarly and for the most part clear."

+ Outlook 141:128 S 23 '25 40w

"An admirable account of the transformation of the United States from a primitive frontier country to a great political and industrial Power. In the final section, entitled 'Greater America,' Professor Schlesinger traces, with remarkable skill and freedom from bias, the successive steps in the rise of the United States as a world Power."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p837 D 3 '25 280w

SCHMOE, F. W. Our greatest mountain; a handbook for Mount Rainier national park; with an introd. by Stephen T. Mather. 366p il $3 Putnam

917.97 Mount Rainier national park. Rainier, Mount 25-16135

"The structure of geological features of Mount Rainier, its glaciers, snowfields, trees, flowers, animals; its discovery by the white man, the story of the first ascents, the description of its roads and trails, and how one can best enjoy all its beauties and grandeur, the account of how the park is administered—all these matters, and others also, Mr. Schmoie includes in his handbook. The chapter on the human history of the mountain contains the stories of the first attempts to reach its top."—N Y Times

Booklist 22:69 N '25

"Besides giving his readers an intensely vivid and informative description of the mountain and its glaciers, the author delves deeply into the mysteries and the beauties of the national park, its administration, its flora and fauna, and its legends which delight the ear of the trapper or the naturalist."

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 5 '25 400w

"Mr. Schmoie's description of the mountain, while very simple and matter-of-fact, will surely hold an enticing lure for any reader who rejoices in mountain scenery."

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 16 '25 850w

SCHMOE, F. W.—Continued

"Mr. Schmoë, park naturalist to the great mountain, and his associates who have compiled this handbook have an enthusiasm that is infectious."

+ N Y Tribune p18 O 11 '25 180w

"Such a book should be in the hands of all who visit Mount Rainer National Park."

R of Rs 72:336 S '25 60w

"Extremely interesting and impressive work."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:113 S 5 '25 160w

Springf'd Republican p6 S 7 '25 360w

"There is a chapter on the various roads and trails which should be of use to tourists. The photographs, which include many of birds and animals in their natural surrounding, are of unusual excellence."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p743 N 5 '25 230w

SCHMUCKER, SAMUEL CHRISTIAN. Man's life on earth. 299p il $2.25 Macmillan

571 Man, Prehistoric. Evolution. Archeology 25-11282

A résumé in clearly understandable form of what is now known of the life of prehistoric man, profusely illustrated with photographs, and drawings by the author's wife. The author's fine faith, deepened by years of scientific inquiry, is evidenced thruout the book. He closes with a brief statement which epitomizes the scientist's articles of faith.

Booklist 22:59 N '25

"He describes in ordinary language, and with great skill, the history of man's ancestors."

Bookm 62:97 S '25 200w

"Of the making of books on evolution there is now no end, and one of the most welcome of them is that which here modestly and yet illuminatingly pictures the long process that, beginning with the physical and chemical elements, culminated in man." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 1 '25 620w

Cleveland p71 J1 '25

"Dr. Schmucker is skilled in the art of popular exposition. From this point of view his little book leaves little to be desired. His treatment of the early stages of man's history up to the beginning of the Neolithic period is both fuller and more satisfactory than it is for the later periods, where he is uncritical and not always exact."

+ Nature 116:860 D 12 '25 220w

"Dr. Schmucker, in 'Man's Life on Earth,' shows evident desire to treat fairly both sides of a question that has for the scientific mind but one side. He does not pin his faith to the re-established Java-man, nor to the questionable coltho, which may or may not have been fashioned by a primitive man. In general, he rehearses the long story of evolution somewhat briefly but clearly, and seems disposed to accept the theory largely because of its inspirational influence."

+ N Y World p4m Je 28 '25 450w

"Professor Schmucker has written a book that is a round peg in a round hole. His book is only three hundred pages in length; thus when we read it we can keep our sense of continuity and proportion. It is a good book." A. G. Ingalls

+ Outlook 140:472 J1 29 '25 180w

Pratt p13 autumn '25

St Louis 23:430 D '25

SCHNITTKIND, HENRY THOMAS, ed. Poets of the future. 287p $2.50 Stratford

811.08 American poetry—Collections

The seventh volume of the College anthology covers a period of two academic years, 1922-1924, and represents about ninety colleges.

"Nearly everybody agrees that the chief merit of college verse lies in its tendency to die without mourners or the need of a funeral. I am not so sure that Professor Schnittkind's attempt to prolong the agony is not merely another way of working on the sympathy of the public to provide a printed coffin." Hervey Allen

— Bookm 61:95 Mr '25 120w

"Selections seem to be evenly divided between the sexes, and to have been made with stricter canons in mind than those which ruled over previous volumes. If there is nothing here to set a Thames afire, there is not a little to warm a corner here and there." I. G.

Boston Transcript p3 N 29 '24 1050w

Lit R p11 Mr 7 '25 150w

SCHNITZLER, ARTHUR. Fräulein Else; tr. from the German by Robert A. Simon. 145p $1.50 Simon & Schuster

25-21494

"It is the old tale of a girl in reduced circumstances, who is humiliated by being forced to borrow money from a bounder. Fräulein Else, the daughter of a Viennese lawyer, is spending her vacation at a resort, when word comes to her that her father is in need of money to save him from prison. She must get this money from a wealthy acquaintance, whose insulting proposition, made in reply to her entreaty, drives her through various emotional stages to a catastrophic doom."—Int Bk R

"We may be wrong, but we believe very strongly the success of Mr. Schnitzler—and in part he is very successful—does not overcome the natural distaste for his trite and unnecessarily gross fable."

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 21 '25 200w

"An old theme in a new setting, but exquisitely done from all points."

+ Ind 115:619 N 28 '25 60w

"Throughout this latest story there is a deep sincerity, an earnestness which penetrates to vital truth; a richness of untainted clarity, as tho from intense brooding, lies in its unfoldment." Sidney Shultz

+ Int Bk R p66 D '25 380w

"Leaves one with an impression of bigness and power. It is of such intensity one doubts whether a reader would suffer the book to be longer than it is; indeed, it is doubtful whether any author could sustain over many more pages this nervous, emotional elevation. Violent as the story may seem, it is in no sense offensive." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p4 N 7 '25 250w

"Schnitzler's somewhat lurid novelette is in mood a little closer to the sentimental scabrousness of 'True Stories' than is grateful to my taste. Its rather tearful picture seems to me quite unconvincing and its elaborate psychology false. Undoubtedly there is skill in the telling and every precaution is taken to disguise the banality of the incident, but it remains, however dressed or undressed, a silly story." J. W. Krutch

— Nation 121:580 N 18 '25 100w

"At its stands 'Fräulein Else' is not only painful to our feelings, but wellnigh meaningless as well. It is one of Herr Schnitzler's failures." Edwin Muir

— Nation and Ath 38:440 D 19 '25 320w

"Fräulein Else is at once an extremely difficult technical tour de force and an exciting, often moving story."

New Repub 44:312 N 11 '25 200w

"For Herr Schnitzler I have always felt great admiration. Several of his works have previously been translated into English, and all of them have been good, and all good in different ways; his range of wit, of sympathy, of psychological understanding, is extraordinary. Yet I am not sure that he has not, in Fräulein Else, attempted something beyond even that range. Certainly the sketch is brilliant; but the girl herself baffles credulity." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 26:178 N 21 '25 220w

"As an outpouring of one girl's thoughts, as an approach to death with the last falling recollection of one suspended over the abyss of death, 'Fräulein Else' is literature of the first water." Laurence Stallings

+ N Y World p6m N 1 '25 650w

"However unpleasant the theme of Schnitzler's latest novel may be the book is an artistic triumph. Within the brief compass of its less than one hundred and fifty pages it presents a kaleidoscopic portrayal of the doubt, despair, and agony of a soul which volumes of description could make no more poignant." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 2:335 N 28 '25 280w

"This is not a happy specimen of Arthur Schnitzler's work. The psychology of the tale is fairly characteristic; it exhibits the large, sprawling emotions which arise from a minor crisis. But Schnitzler's subtlety is expended on rather crude material."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p773 N 19 '25 300w

SCHOELLKOPF, MRS ANNA. Don José de San Martín, 1778-1850; with a preface by Honorio Pueyrredon. 142p il $2 Boni & Live-right

B or 92 San Martín, José de. Peru—History 25-4443

The story of the career of José de San Martín, a South American general distinguished for his services in the war of independence in South America.

"The author narrates in a dramatic and vivid fashion the part which General de San Martín played in the liberation of the Spanish-American colonies, his break with Bolívar, the renunciation of his command in Peru, and his long and sad exile abroad."

+ Am Pol Sci R 19:658 Ag '25 100w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 11 '25 330w

"One feels that only partial justice is here done to a subject that offers, if one ever did, splendid material for a portrait in the best heroic manner. It is only an outline, awaiting some later hand to fill in the solid detail; but even as such its value cannot be inconsiderable should it incite to other studies of the history and peoples in the republics to the south, whose careers in so many respects have paralleled our own." F. W. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 6 '25 520w

"Because it is good for us to be reminded of these things, which are pan-American in significance, we should welcome this brief sketch." Muna Lee

+ N Y World p4m Je 21 '25 450w

Outlook 140:71 My 13 '25 10w

"Compact and effective. It places clearly before us the figure of a great military genius, a great patriot, a greater man."

+ Springfield Republican p6 Mr 16 '25 350w

SCHOTZ, SCHACHNO PEISACH. Synthetic organic compounds. 412p il $12 Van Nostrand [45s Benn]

660 Chemistry, Organic. Chemistry, Technical [25-1473]

"This is a collection of readable descriptions of the processes of manufacture, properties, and uses of a variety of organic compounds, in the production of which chemical reactions are involved. Each chapter opens with a general view of the field which it covers. The individual topics are taken up historically and the chief patents are listed. Usually several methods of manufacture are given, sometimes in general terms, but more frequently with definite directions for carrying out the process. The advantages of contrasting methods are set over against each other and an effort is made to point out which is the best practice and why. Suggestions for improvements of existing processes are often made."—Ind & Eng Chem

"The size of the page makes the volume somewhat cumbersome to handle, but this was probably unavoidable on account of the numerous illustrations and large diagrams. Both paper and presswork are excellent. The proof reading has been remarkably well done and but few typographical errors occur. The book is reasonably up-to-date, and presents compact, clear and readable surveys of many important fields. It should prove useful to all organic chemists." M. T. Bogert

+ Am Chem Soc J 47:1480 My '25 560w

"In order to secure accuracy, first-hand information has been obtained from the industries and the proof has been submitted to technical chemists. It is avowedly written from the British standpoint, illustrations and information being drawn from British plants and references made chiefly to British and American sources. This makes it interesting to the Britisher as a record of a national achievement, while to others it is valuable as a picture of British practice. The author's ideas of limits in esterification as effected by catalysts are hazy." E. E. Reid

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:547 My '25 380w

"The book has entailed the exercise of great industry and skill in its compilation, and it is evident that the author possesses a wide knowledge of the many intricate subjects with which he deals. It is readable, and the printing and paper leave nothing to be desired. It contains a great deal of information which will be useful to the general reader, although some of the statements made may anger the expert. As a scientific treatise it is of little value, and as a technological handbook it is in many respects misleading." J. F. T.

+ Nature 116:6 Jl 4 '25 1250w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:24 Ap '25

SCHREINER, OLIVE (MRS S. C. CRONWRIGHT-SCHREINER) (RALPH IRON, pseud.). Letters of Olive Schreiner: 1876-1920; ed. by S. C. Cronwright-Schreiner. 410p il $5 Little [21s Unwin]

B or 92

25-26172

For descriptive note see Annual for 1924.

Booklist 21:273 Ap '25

"In practically every letter Olive Schreiner has something to say, and she says it with such conviction that one is neither surprised that she styled herself a 'freethinker' nor doubts that she fully justified the implications of the term."

Bookm 61:361 My '25 380w

"Every page of this book is a human document. It is not merely a supplement to her husband's biography of her. It is complete in itself." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 7 '25 2100w

"The reader will be disappointed if he searches for any lightness, any blitheness, or any extensive optimism in the letters. It is not to be found. These epistles are stark, often painful to read, and they consistently reveal a personality eager in itself for mental conquest, but continually buffeted by illness, doubt, long fits of depression, and melancholia that seems congenial." H. S. Gorman

Lit R p4 My 9 '25 950w

Reviewed by Virginia Woolf

New Repub 42:103 Mr 18 '25 1100w

"Her letters have their ring of intensity and naturalness, for one reason because they are altogether bare of literary art."

+ N Y Times p26 My 3 '25 660w

"Any one undertaking a study of the egocentric type of personality would find priceless data in these letters. They have also a measure of literary interest and a certain individual charm." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p1 Mr 29 '25 1300w

N Y World p4m My 17 '25 200w

SCHREINER, OLIVE—Continued

"These letters are as brilliant as anything that she ever published, even though here and there one may find sentences which an editor with a keen sense of humor might have been tempted to delete."

+ — Sat R 138:548 N 29 '24 660w

Reviewed by Amy Wellington

Sat R of Lit 1:644 Ap 4 '25 1100w

Spring'd Republican p10 Je 24 '25 680w

SCHUHLER, ALBERT AUGUST. Electric wiring; a textbook of applied electricity for vocational and trade schools. 361p il $2.50 McGraw

621.315 Electric wiring 24-28680

"Provides systematic courses of instruction in splicing and soldering of conductors, and in wiring for bells, annunciators, burglar alarms, electric lighting, telegraph, and telephone."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:165 Mr '25

SCHULKERS, ROBERT FRANC (SECKATARY HAWKINS, pseud.). Stormie the dog stealer. 293p $1.75 (6s) Appleton

25-5155

Another Seckatary Hawkins story that boys of all ages will enjoy. The fat jolly Seckatary and his famous club are here called upon to ferret out "Stormie", the mysterious dog stealer who every day steals one of the best dogs in town—he really has no use for curs. Even old Judge Granbery's handsome collie disappears and when the judge asks the "junior police" to take care of the matter Seckatary Hawkins and his faithful henchmen spring into action. Startling messages, a mysterious boat and secret caves have their part in this boy and dog story.

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 11 '25 80w

"It abounds in conversation, also in adventures, and is sure to be popular among boys from nine to fourteen." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p420 My '25 50w

"The story will enchant most boys and many grown people because of the fantastic idealization of youth which youth delights in and age likes to believe in."

+ N Y Tribune p9 Je 14 '25 260w

"The earlier chapters, quite good, wholesome stuff in their way, exhibit an amount of sameness which is likely to bore the reader, and the flashes of real humour are all too few. In the last few chapters the book brightens up and it is possible to get up a mild sort of excitement."

— + Sat R 139:443 Ap 25 '25 120w

"Dogs and boys—what they do and how they companion together—that is what it is all about. A writer who understands 'us fellers' did this book."

Sat R of Lit 2:92 Ag '25 60w

SCOGGINS, CHARLES ELBERT. Proud old name. 138p $1 Bobbs

25-15266

The proud old name belongs to Don Santiago Moreno, Spanish grandee, owner of the Mexican hacienda in its setting of green fields and cattle ranges, and father of the delectable Elena. Jimmy, grandson of plain old man Brown, is about to marry Elena and make the proud old name his. But just then Gene turns up, a level-eyed, slangy, indomitable child in short hair and knickers. Jimmy's old partner in the mine tells the engaging and humorous story of how Gene spills the beans.

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 19 '25 200w
Cleveland p88 S '25

"Mr. Scoggins tells this charming little story of old Mexico in a most entertaining manner." R. I. Goddard

+ Lit R p5 S 26 '25 250w

"This short novel is slight, but mellow of spirit. It has about its telling the nostalgic fragrance of a happy incident long remembered. Something about its familiar theme has a piquance removed from the commonplace."

+ N Y Times p9 S 6 '25 620w

"The fun, the action, and the characters are what make it a capital story packed into short space. The author makes every sentence tell, yet he artfully gives the impression of writing leisurely and humorously." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 141:98 S 16 '25 320w

"Although the tale is said to be irresistibly comic, and we laugh without much provocation, its mirth for us was non-existent."

— Sat R of Lit 2:415 D 12 '25 220w

Spring'd Republican p7a S 6 '25 180w

SCOTSON-CLARK, GEORGE FREDERICK. ² Half hours in the kitchenette; a self-help for small families; with a preface by Ethel Scotson-Clark. 145p $1 Appleton

641 Cookery

26-1703

These recipes have been written for the kitchenette cook with limited time, space and income, and are planned to serve from two to four people.

"Original, tempting recipes for piquant dishes and a rigid observance of economy, not only of money but of space, time and labor—these are peculiar to this little volume. The confidential easy style in which he writes unconsciously augments the domestic mood. The title might be, 'An Answer to a Housewife's Prayer.'" Leslie Shaw

+ Lit R p8 D 26 '25 160w

"It will prove a boon to young apartment dwellers and the newly-wedded of the Great City. Bachelors will also call the author blessed! The book almost slips into one's vest pocket, but the wealth of suggestion therein will tickle one's appetite and at the same time conserve slender financial resources for many a day."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:263 O 31 '25 120w

SCOTT, MRS CATHERINE AMY (DAWSON). Turn of a day (Eng title They green stones). 283p $2 Holt

25-7199

Three characters and the events of a single day make this story of the Cornish coast, but the turn of that autumn day, while her husband was away at market, changed the whole course of life for Pamela Kerthewy. On that day Malachi Ludgian, an old sweetheart, returned on leave from the front to find Pamela married. While she was entertaining him like the old playmate that he was Rhod, her husband, came upon them unawares and his jealousy flamed up. Words led to blows and Malachi accidentally killed Rhod. To cover the deed, Malachi proposed impersonating Rhod, whom he curiously resembled. So he stayed on at the farm as Pamela's husband, and the some of their neighbors surmised that things were not just as they seemed, they never let on that they knew.

"She tells her tale somewhat impressionistically and all in the events of a single day. We doubt if even the sharpest of psychological domestic dramas would unfold its subtler moments in so short a time."

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 12 '25 160w

Ind 114:591 My 23 '25 30w

Lit R p4 O 10 '25 100w

"The brilliance and skill of handling which subjects the characters too obviously to the author's desire make the complete acceptance of the book impossible. One wonders why a novel which is so excellent in many ways is not better."

+ — Nation 121:261 S 2 '25 120w

"In style this story of the Cornish Downs has a distinct charm, due to the flavour of dialect and to the picturesque description, but the suspicion aroused in the first chapter that Mrs. Dawson-Scott is constructing rather than observing the folk of the Duchy, quickly becomes a certainty as the plot reveals itself."

+ — Nation and Ath 36:690 F 14 '25 200w

"To write a novel that holds the reader tense until the very last line is a literary feat of no mean order. When, added to that, the action of the tale is encompassed within the limits of a single day, there results a brilliant tour de force. These two things Mrs. C. A. Dawson Scott has accomplished in her latest book, 'The Turn of a Day.'"

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 5 '25 700w

"It is a good, strong, human sort of story, but rather bare as to background. Though it is not long, what there is of it could have been told in half the space, and more effectively."

+ — N Y Tribune p10 Ap 12 '25 500w

Pratt p40 autumn '25

"Once one does get going, one cannot help realizing that the conventions are subdued to a unity by an art both strong and sincere. The people, fantastic as their acts and motives must seem if judged, say, by the same canons as Mr. Jeffery's, move real and impressive in their own world. The writing is not strained to fit the atmosphere; it is apt and therefore admirable. There is in it a lyric strain, a sort of natural wildness, beauty and excitement." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 139:413 Ap 18 '25 330w

"Described in the rich rhythm of Cornish phraseology—a natural and picturesque running accompaniment to the tale. One feels that here is the very soul of that little-known corner of England and that in these people and their characteristics, some of the ruggedness and strength of their own spreading country-side is expressed."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:712 Ap 25 '25 250w

"Mrs. Dawson-Scott tells her story well, and makes it seem veracious by her obvious, but not obtruded, knowledge of farm-life. Her story of Pamela Kerthewy, and her relations to the two men, is carried through with insight, and a kind of hidden wit: it is the more unfortunate that she needed a melodramatic plot to keep the story going."

+ — Spec 134:166 Ja 31 '25 150w

"Yet another psychologically improbable tale. . . . The story is written quite simply, almost in the thoughts and words that flit through Pamela's mind, intelligibly Cornish. It is a clever piece of work, and the epilogue is not the least clever chapter."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p70 Ja 29 '24 400w

SCOTT, MRS EVELYN. Golden door. 275p $2.50 Seltzer

25-8264

Bonds of any sort are intolerable to Paul, who might have loved May better if he had not married her. And now there is Nina. Thru a fog of bewilderment and pain May gropes her way, trying to accept the fact and to make Paul's theories her own. The book analyzes the mental processes of these three, caught in an age old situation.

"The defects of Mrs Scott's latest novel seem to derive from her having apprehended character and situation too well with the intellect and not well enough with the imagination. The style is staccato and marked with the Joycean ellipsis. It is very smartly of the latest model. What a pity that Mrs Scott does not always write in her own way, as in her descriptive passages, which carry so effectively and legitimately into prose the best qualities of poetry!"

+ — Dial 79:173 Ag '25 160w

"May attains a momentary humanity; but beyond this the book, its values altogether psychological, seems false as well as unreal. . . . Mrs. Scott only exposes her characters. She has no warmth of feeling for them; they are specimens to her. . . . She takes possession of their personalities, but remains an alien; peers at them with eyes that, unendurably, never close; and furtively records her observations as theirs." Eva Goldbeck

— Lit R p3 My 9 '25 750w

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons

Nation 121:76 Jl 8 '25 750w

"In The Golden Door, Mrs. Scott has brought the characters of Narcissus another stage on their painful journey. For Mrs. Scott's people realize themselves through pain. As the objective realist finds his most convincing appeal in the ugliness of the external world, so the subjective realist finds it in the suffering, especially the self-torture of his characters, and Mrs. Scott's spare themselves nothing." R. M. Lovett

New Repub 42:243 Ap 22 '25 260w

"It would be difficult to discover three more tiresome and futile people within the pages of any one book. The novel contains some admirably done descriptive passages, and 'Aunt' Julia, the middle-aged, subtly erotic woman, with her jealousy of youth which found expression in an attempt to despise the young, has been, for the most part, cleverly portrayed; she is more interesting than any other character in the book. Cut down to short-story length, this satire might be made effective; as a novel it is too repetitious to be other than monotonous."

+ — N Y Times p22 My 3 '25 620w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

— N Y Tribune p8 My 17 '25 600w

"The first conclusion that one reaches about her newest book is that she had nothing to say and she said it badly. She attempts something, but whatever that something is it is without basis and foundation. . . . We move among a number of people who are unhappy, dissatisfied, unreal and impossible. There is not one touch of reality in the volume; all the thoughts, conversations and settings are artificial and stilted; none of the characters enlists our sympathy or deserves our hatred; they are like wooden images passing through the dream of a madman." Joseph Collins

— N Y Sun Ap 14 '25 820w

"'The Golden Door' is a merciless exploration of the complex and obscure but potent motive forces of modern life."

N Y World p7m Ap 19 '25 460w

Reviewed by J. W. Crawford

N Y World p4m My 10 '25 50w

"Superlative praise is a dangerous thing, but this reviewer knows of no writer upon rain, animal passion, grief, hogs, mud, sweat, and futility, who can hold a stylistic candle to Evelyn Scott."

Sat R of Lit 1:796 My 30 '25 380w

SCOTT, GEOFFREY. Portrait of Zélide. 222p $3.75 Scribner [12s Constable]

B or 92 Charrière, Madame de Saint-Hyacinthe de (Isabelle Agnes Van Tuyll)

[25-16478]

"Isabella van Tuyll (Zélide) was brought up in a severe Dutch home, and lightened her darkness with diligent pursuit of learning. She was precocious and witty, apt to learn and apter still to criticize. Her sex debarred her from a career; she could but inspire the careers of others. She might have married James Boswell and been the lady of Auchinleck. She had many suitors. The grave wooing of the cautious Scot is perfectly narrated; so, too, is the anticlimax of the marriage to a dull and dutiful citizen of Neuchâtel, M. de Charrière, her brother's tutor. Later on Zélide, the wasted daughter of the age of reason, inspired, tortured, aided, and lost that erratic son of the age of romance, Benjamin Constant. The contrast of the two ages is subtly suggested by her biographer, who builds up the atmosphere of the time with an easy mastery of background."

—Sat R

SCOTT, GEOFFREY—Continued

"Much of the charm of this character study is due to the appreciation and creative power of the author of this book. He has taken this eighteenth century woman, who was the friend of many famous people and he has lifted her from the mists of the past and set her before us a living, charming figure."

+ Boston Transcript p6 J1 15 '25 450w

"This book is richly suggestive. It is history, or as much of the past as remains, ornamented with the crispness and the sparkle of a novel. Here is characterization subtly and pungently executed. It is the story of a personality unique in her time, a time of many arresting personalities." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p8 My 23 '25 500w

Living Age 325:125 Ap 11 '25 350w

Nation 121:100 J1 15 '25 20w

"It is difficult not to be unfair to this book. The publisher to begin with, sets us against it by proclaiming it 'a model biography'—a bit of poor taste in any case. So far as we can make out—our author is too fine a psychologist to do more than indicate his authorities in a final and perfunctory note—no new source of information has been tapped."

— Nation and Ath 36:861 Mr 21 '25 900w

"Zélide" is a consummate analysis, a perfect, synthesis."

+ New Statesman 24:668 Mr 14 '25 1000w

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey

N Y Times p12 My 24 '25 1850w

"A book of marked distinction, a work of art." Jacob Zeitlin

+ N Y Tribune p6 My 31 '25 950w

Reviewed by C. G. Bowers

N Y World p4m My 10 '25 620w

"Mr. Scott's portraiture is a very tender piece of imaginative impressionism. Here is none of those tedious chronicles which aim at achieving everything by the devastating process of leaving out nothing. His method, at once sympathetic and ironical, brings back to life a very brilliant woman of the eighteenth century who might, but for her sex, have been as great in public action as she was in private influence."

+ Sat R 139:248 Mr 7 '25 450w

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey

Spec 134:811 My 16 '25 1600w

"An analytical biography, as acute, brilliant, and witty as any that has appeared in recent years."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p168 Mr 12 '25 1850w

SCOTT, GEORGE GILMORE. Science of biology; an introductory study. 617p $3.50 Crowell
570 Biology 25-11306

About one-half of this college textbook is taken up with an account of the various types of plants and animals, the characteristics of each group and its subdivisions. The rest of the book is given to a discussion of general biology—comparative anatomy, embryology, physiology of animals, distribution of animals in space and time, heredity, evolution and man's place in nature. Each chapter has a list of selected references.

Bookm 62:95 S '25 50w

"Professor Scott is to be congratulated on having furnished students and general readers with this timely book. It could be called a summing up, in popular language, of the facts with which biological science concerns itself." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p2 J1 25 '25 680w

"A very thorough, comprehensive presentation in one volume of biology with regard to plant and animal life. Elaborately and intelligently illustrated, with a valuable bibliography attached to each section."

+ Ind 115:24 J1 4 '25 100w

N Y World p4m Je 28 '25 60w

Reviewed by A. G. Ingalls

Outlook 140:469 J1 29 '25 50w

R of Rs 72:336 S '25 60w

Sat R of Lit 2:15 Ag 1 '25 80w

SCOTT, JAMES BROWN. Sovereign states and suits before arbitral tribunals and courts of justice. (James Stokes lectureship on politics) 360p $6 N.Y. univ. press

341 Sovereignty. United States. Supreme court. Hague. Permanent court of international justice. Hague. Permanent court of arbitration 26-1480

"The aim of this unique course of lectures is a practical contribution to the cause of peace, advocating arbitral and judiciary means in place of armed conflicts. To prove that this aspiration can be realized with a general goodwill, the lecturer points to our forms of Government and particularly to the United States Supreme Court. What has been successfully tried and achieved on this continent between the States of the American Union can, at least in some measure, be accomplished between the nations of the world. A real union of the States of Europe is not openly suggested, but rather hinted at as a possibility. The first part of the book, after having defined the legal meaning of State and the conception of sovereignty according to the modern and epoch-making idea of it, deals with the early history of our governmental institutions."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p2 N 14 '25 800w

N Y Times p9 Ag 23 '25 700w

"Mr Scott has labored diligently among the precedents and has put all students of both the history and working of American government and international arbitration heavily in his debt by the definitive treatment he has given this aspect of the supreme court's functioning."

+ Spring'd Republican p14 O 23 '25 600w

SCOTT, JOHN ADAMS. Homer and his influence. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 169p $1.50 Marshall Jones

883.1 Homer

25-10991

"In successive chapters, Dr. Scott examines briefly the story and structure of the Iliad and of the Odyssey; the vast scope of the genius of Homer; the transformation of Homeric mythology into the literature of all succeeding ages; the influence of Homer among the ancient Greeks; the influence of Homer upon Roman Italy and upon Roman literature during the Middle Ages; the Homeric origin of the Renaissance in Europe, and the abiding Homeric influence upon mankind."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 22:24 O '25

"As vividly appealing by his sympathetic grasp as solidly valuable by his scholarship and admirable method of presentation." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 13 '25 850w

"In his comparisons of Homer with Virgil and with Milton are to be found the most successful portions of the last half of the book; in other places the arrangement of details might be clarified by the transposition of paragraphs or even of whole chapters." A. S. Pease

+ N Y Tribune p12 S 27 '25 200w

SCOTT, LEROY. Heart of Katie O'Doone. 2 386p $2 Houghton

25-21773

Being the triumphal progress of a rowdy little Irish girl of the slums to beauty and fame and stardom on Broadway. Katie O'Doone was only twelve when her mother died. The child fled at once from her tenement home, from the truant officer who would march her back to school and the father who would drink up all her earnings. She had then no definite ambitions for a Broadway career, but fate was determined; kind friends and even her enemies, compelled by her "devastating charm" and Irish pluck, pushed her step by step on her starward way. Arrived at the top, Katie O'Doone reached out her hand to her father and helped him up beside her. An attempted self-abnegation in love gave further proof of what the heart of Katie O'Doone was like.

"Katie O'Doone has been made irresistible by Leroy Scott. You don't think of her as a character in fiction at all. She's somebody you know and love and grow angry with and forgive and love more than ever. She has you with her, body and soul." J. W. M.
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 11 '25 700w

"Mr Scott is a skilled weaver of the plausibly possible with the possibly plausible and few, if any, can rival his knowledge of the underworld. This is a typical Leroy Scott super-thriller, and those who have read him and enjoyed him will know just what that means!" H. A. J.

+ Lit R p10 N 28 '25 180w

"Mr. Scott has set down a narrative which lacks every literary virtue. It is neither well-written nor well-told; its characters are transparently one dimensional and false; its plot, particularly in connection with its characters, is altogether improbable, and what is worse, neither engrossing nor dramatic."

— N Y Times p19 N 22 '25 250w

Outlook 141:610 D 16 '25 70w

SCOTT, REGINALD THOMAS MAITLAND.
Black magician. 244p $2 Dutton

25-13519

A further adventure of the invincible Secret Service Smith. In the Grayson case, he is pitted against a criminal of extraordinary cunning and diabolic skill, an unknown poisoner who has terrorized two continents. The wife of a wealthy New Yorker has fallen a prey to this man's black art. The effort to rescue her taxes the utmost powers of Smith's shrewd mind and nimble body, and carries him into fresh peril with every chapter.

"A thoroughly exciting story."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 26 '25 280w

"Great statesmen and intellectuals will be kept from the service of their country by this entertaining unreality."

Ind 115:304 S 12 '25 80w

Reviewed by J. S. Griffith

N Y World p3m Ag 9 '25 130w

SCOTT-STOKES, HENRY FOLLIOTT. See Stokes, H: F. S.

SCUDAMORE, FRANK. Sheaf of memories. 299p $5 Dutton [15s Unwin]

B or 92

[25-14322]

The author of these memories is an English war correspondent whose work has taken him to most of the places where British armies have fought since 1875, when he went to Turkey as a boy of sixteen. He was with Kitchener in the Russo-Turkish war of 1877 and in his Sudan campaign and covered the Greco-Turkish war of 1897. He went to Erzeroum to investigate the Turkish atrocities and he saw the battle of Omdurman. He also includes memories of some of his brother correspondents—Archibald Forbes, George Henty, Christie Murray and others.

"He tells of historic happening and intimate episodes. On the whole, he has written a quick-paced, colorful narrative of charm and interest."

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 12 '25 200w

"A singularly fascinating volume."

+ Ind 115:136 Ag 1 '25 160w

"Mr. Scudamore is an easy and entertaining story-teller, and his style is agreeable, though discursive." Muna Lee

+ Lit R p3 O 31 '25 260w

"Mr. Scudamore knocked up against all kinds of interesting people all over the Near East, and his appreciations of them are not the least valuable part of his book. But its chief merit is that it preserves the memory, from the pen of their doyen, of the departed race of war correspondents whose now almost incredible duties called them 'over the top.'"

+ New Statesman 24:632 Mr 7 '25 220w

"Scudamore is amusing, even brilliant, but superficial, a good fellow but not profound in his interpretation of what his eye was quick to see." P. W. Wilson

+ — N Y Times p11 Ag 23 '25 2000w

"From a war correspondent with a record like Mr. Scudamore's one would have expected something with more point to it; but if the style is a true guide he has been impressed with the company he kept rather than with the events he was witnessing, and it is only fair to add that he is a master of the art of story telling." T. J. C. Martyn

— + N Y Tribune p14 O 11 '25 500w

"I have returned to it again and again, reading in it here and there, and have found it one of the liveliest and best of its kind." Edmund Pearson

+ Outlook 141:26 S 2 '25 420w

R of Rs 72:334 S '25 30w

"Excellent autobiographical sketches."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:199 O 10 '25 160w

"It is a pleasant book written in a kindly spirit. The style is attractive and the manner humorous. Few collections of reminiscences of busy days are so free from error and so full of good stories."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p96 F 12 '25 1000w

SEABURY, DAVID. Unmasking our minds. 429p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

150 Psychology

24-29776

For descriptive note see Annual for 1924.

Booklist 21:258 Ap '25

"The book does a real service. Modern psychology is introduced freed from the jargon of any particular school, and made thoroughly entertaining with a quantity of excellent contemporary illustration."

+ Bookm 61:98 Mr '25 140w

"The book is written in a jargon of journalistic and Freudianism and offers a tempting program to the man in the street who would explore his mind and unlock his potentialities." Woodbridge Riley

New Repub 44:sup10 S 30 '25 200w

+ N Y Times p10 F 15 '25 700w

N Y Tribune p4 J1 26 '25 150w

"The cover blurb warns that Mr. Seabury is 'now recognized as a foremost authority in Applied Psychology.' The publishers may really think so, but they really need enlightening if they do." D. A. Laird

— Survey 53:773 Mr 15 '25 220w

Wis Lib Bul 21:165 Je '25

SEARS, JESSE BRUNDAGE. School survey; a textbook on the use of school surveying in the administration of public schools. (Riverside textbooks in education) 440p $2.25 Houghton

371 Educational surveys. School management and organization 25-5408

The problems of school administration and organization, the weaknesses and faults of existing systems, may best be discovered, presented, and understood thru use of the school survey. Since 1918 the writer has conducted a course in school surveys at Stanford university. This book, which is the outcome of that course, tells "how to organize and conduct a school survey, what to look for, how to collect and interpret data, and how to set forth the results of the investigation." It is a text for all educationalists, whether administrators or teachers.

SEARS, JESSE BRUNDAGE—Continued

"Although Sears's treatment of the problem has limitations, actual experience has demonstrated conclusively the usefulness of the book in courses both on school surveys and on public-school administration. It should prove most valuable in the hands of any superintendent who contemplates constructive studies of his problems. It contains a wealth of suggestions concerning current problems and methods of studying them and enumerates the principles which should be considered in modifying present policies and practices or in adopting new ones." W: S. Gray

+ — EI School J 26:310 D '25 580w

Reviewed by J: D. Wolcott

School Life 10:160 Ap '25 120w

SEARS, MINNIE EARL, comp. Children's catalog; a dictionary catalog of 4100 books. (Standard catalog ser.) 3d ed rev and enl 644p $12 Wilson, H.W.

028.5 Children's literature—Bibliography
25-26803

"This Catalog is based primarily on well-selected library lists and is arranged under author, title and subject, with annotations under the author entry. In addition, it has analytical entries for 363 titles. In this, the third edition of the Children's Catalog, are included about 4100 titles of books which are recognized by experienced workers in children's libraries and schools as desirable books for children's departments of libraries. The Catalog is planned to meet two needs of a library: (1) Use as a catalog, (2) Use as a buying list, showing the best titles for public and school libraries to buy in building up collections of children's books. For this latter purpose the information about publishers, prices and editions has been gone over very carefully. For the former purpose much analytical work has been done."—Preface

Booklist 22:5 O '25

Library J 50:752 S 15 '25 160w

Wis Lib Bul 21:227 O '25

SEARS, MINNIE EARL, comp. Children's catalog; a dictionary catalog of 1200 books. (Standard catalog ser.) 3d ed rev and enl 228p $3 Wilson, H.W.

028.5 Children's literature—Bibliography

"In this edition of the Children's Catalog are included about 1200 titles of books which are recognized by experienced workers in children's libraries and schools as desirable books for children's departments of libraries. In addition, it has analytical entries for 272 titles. The Catalog is dictionary in form, with author, title and subject entries in one alphabet, thus following the form of the previous edition familiar to its users."—Preface

"Small and middle-size libraries will do well to test the use of this twelve hundred title edition with a view to discontinuing the time-consuming work of keeping up a children's card catalog. If this tool might permit them to devote the time thus used to personal work with and for children, it would be a boon indeed." C. B. W.

Library J 50:752 S 15 '25 160w

SECKATARY HAWKINS, pseud. See Schulkers, R. F.

SEDGWICK, ANNE DOUGLAS (MRS BASIL DE SELINCOURT). Franklin Winslow Kane. new ed 369p $2 Houghton

Reprint of a novel first published fifteen years ago. For descriptive note see Book Review Digest, 1910.

"One cannot any longer regard literary craftsmanship of this kind, so deft, so smooth, but so entirely lacking in creative imagination, as anything else than superficial and unimportant. Never for one moment does the inherent mysteriousness of human nature take on flesh and blood in this clever ethical study of opposing types."

+ — Dial 79:350 O '25 120w

"It has in it at least two characters that are made so real as to produce in the reader deep resentment and sorrow at the fate which so ironically kept them apart." Helen Wallerstein

+ Lit R p6 Ag 1 '25 280w

"'Franklin Winslow Kane' is as full of vitality today as when it was first written. Its people are real now as they were then, and if some of them were essentially the products of that old order which died so gallantly in the World War, they are none the less interesting, none the less vivid. . . It is a remarkable, a beautiful and an exceptionally interesting novel."

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 26 '25 980w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

N Y Tribune p2 Je 28 '25 720w

"The time which has elapsed since it was first published gives it an effect of novelty. In it Miss Sedgwick has assembled an astounding gallery of pathetic, rootless American women in Europe, and has set at their head the selfish, shallow, earnest Althea Jakes. The sober dignity and enduring worth of Franklin Kane is at once a reproach to the expatriated women and a sympathetic justification of the American man. . . 'Franklin Winslow Kane,' is a remarkable psychological achievement."

+ N Y World p7m Ap 26 '25 430w

Outlook 140:160 My 27 '25 30w

"This novel falls midway in Miss Sedgwick's work. She has written stronger and more robust works, but nothing subtler and finer. The chief strength of the book lies in its presentation of Franklin and Helen, two persons of remarkable nobility and power, yet strikingly unlike. The book's chief defects are its mechanical pattern, its descent into sheer sentimentality near the close, and its combination of diffuseness and slightness." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:927 Jl 25 '25 750w

"No one but an American could have written such a book—no one but an American with a broad European background; for in 'Franklin Winslow Kane' Mrs de Selincourt has done much to draw together in understanding the old world and the new, with truth, with tenderness, and with the insight of the cosmopolite."

+ Springfd Republican p7a Je 28 '25 280w

SEELIG, MAJOR GABRIEL. Medicine; an historical outline. 207p il $2.25 Williams & Wilkins

610.9 Medicine—History 25-5666

"This work consists of eight lectures which were delivered at the Washington University in St. Louis. These discourses were given with the aim of interesting the senior students of the medical school in the all-important but very much neglected subject of the history of medicine."—Science

"The book is most readable and is well illustrated with forty-eight half tones, portraits of some of the masters of medicine. It could hardly fail to awaken the student unless he were entirely anesthetic to the subject. Unfortunately Major Seelig did not go over his manuscript very carefully before publishing it, else he had not allowed so many errors to remain." John Ruhräh

+ — Science 62:223 S 4 '25 320w

SEITZ, DON CARLOS. Uncommon Americans. 328p il $3 Bobbs

920 United States—Biography 25-18477

In a foreword the author writes: "Henry Adams once wrote a relative that he had learned the easiest way to succeed. It was to conform! This volume is devoted to sketches of individuals who did not, and made their marks." Among the twenty-two arresting personalities whose portraits are presented, there are many well known names and a few perhaps that are not known at all. Contents: Joseph Smith; Brigham Young; Martin Scott; Lord Timothy Dexter; Peter Cartwright; Charles Grandison Finney; Israel Putnam; Nathan Bedford Forrest; John S. Mosby; Susan B. Anthony; Red Jacket; George Francis Train; Tecumseh; Ethan Allen; James Abbott McNeil Whistler; Edmund Fanning; John Ledyard; Hinton Rowan Helper; Henry George; Mary Baker Glover Eddy; Edwin Forrest; David Crockett.

Booklist 22:160 Ja '26

"His narrative is mainly factual, sometimes anecdotal. But he does not seem to have tried, or at any rate to have succeeded, in penetrating imaginatively into other days, other ways. In fact his style, while pleasantly free from affectation and excess, saunters on in pedestrian fashion at times when one wishes ardently for a brisker stride." G. H. Carson

— + Bookm 62:497 D '25 650w

Cleveland p112 D '25

"Mr. Seitz is not the Lytton Strachey of America, but his facts are shrewdly assembled, and his book is discriminating." D. R.

+ — Ind 115:588 N 21 '25 120w

"Those who look for classic form, style and diction in their biographies; for a philosophy of action behind the light of common day, will not find it here. Rather it is in a diversity of aspect, a fresh angle of vision, which seizes swiftly if not deeply upon the imagination, that the absorbing interest of this book lies." Martha Bayard

+ Int Bk R p31 D '25 1500w

"Mr. Seitz will hardly expect that his judgments will all stand unchallenged. It is a grasping book, one that will not let you go. Its author says it is a book of 'sketches of individuals who did not conform, and made their marks.' Our history is full of men of whom the same could be said, but this is a thrilling selection." C. W. Thompson

+ — Lit R p1 O 10 '25 1500w

"It is for three reasons a striking book; first, because of his rapid, objective, journalistic treatment of character; second, because among recent publications it is excellent proof of the fact that the most satisfactory approach to the history of a given period is via the actions of the leading men and women who lived it; and third, because of the author's philosophy that the shortest road to success is to differ bluntly from the humdrum herd, and, keeping one's self in the foreground, to shout about that difference." Horace Green

+ N Y Times p1 S 27 '25 1550w

"As one looks over the contents of Mr. Seitz's collection, one expects an exceptional feast, but when one sits down to table one is disappointed. The bill of fare is good, but the cuisine is not so good, and a mediocre cook can spoil the best materials. Mr. Seitz's treatment of the characters he portrays lacks sufficient interpretative coloring and dramatic skill to make his book live up to the expectations his subjects create." M. R. Werner

— + N Y Tribune p11 N 1 '25 500w

N Y World p4m S 27 '25 500w

"This is an admirable book for a gift, and will please any man interested in American history or in the oddities of human life."

+ Outlook 141:640 D 23 '25 200w

"All these figures are picturesque and they are all 'humanized' in Mr. Seitz's pages."

+ R of Rs 72:663 D '25 220w

St Louis 23:438 D '25

"Mr Seitz has not tried to rise to any dramatic peaks and depths in the representation of these people. The result is faithful adherence to the outstanding facts, without much sparkle." S. G.

Springf'd Republican p6a D 6 '25 350w

SEITZ, DON CARLOS. Under the black flag.

341p $4 Dial press

910.4 Pirates

25-10554

The second volume of the Rogues' library is a history of piracy. Among the famous pirate captains whose exploits are narrated are Thomas Pound, Captain Mission, Stede Bonnet, John Gow, Thomas Tew, Edward Teach, Samuel Burgess, William Kidd, and Thomas White.

Booklist 22:160 Ja '26

"The proof of Mr. Seitz's book is in the reading, and there is no need to say much about it, beyond the mere recommendation that it is far superior to the rank and file of the novels published nowadays, and that there is nothing of the milk-and-water quality in its pages." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 16 '25 600w

"An admirable volume in the Rogues' Library. It contains the stories, briefly and graphically told, of some forty-odd pirates, most of them little known."

+ Dial 80:69 Ja '26 70w

"The attempt to cover the whole history of piracy in one volume is an ambitious one. It has been done with good humor and a comparative success."

+ Ind 115:136 Ag 1 '25 150w

"One can hardly say enough for the rollicking though accurate account of these incredible men and women by Mr. Seitz." F. O'Brien

+ Lit R p1 J1 18 '25 680w

"Here is a man most cunning in his work, who captivates the imagination, who parades no fine sentiments as do inefficient workmen, who paints vice and folly and recklessness in true colors, who exerts neither patronage nor favoritism, who tells his tale with enthusiasm and is a stranger to wearisome ennui; a very noticeable man indeed to write a book of deriding-do." C. J. Finger

+ Nation 121:sup439 O 14 '25 560w

N Y Times p5 Je 21 '25 780w

"Mr. Seitz has given us the best, most vivid, most authoritative portraits of these dare-devils of the deep yet written." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p4m Je 14 '25 1400w

"Under the Black Flag," despite its romantic title, is a pretty sober history of the pirates, and should be consulted with this fact in mind."

Sat R of Lit 2:143 S 19 '25 280w

SEITZ, DON CARLOS, ed. Monogatari; tales from old and new Japan. 327p $2.50 (12s 6d) Putnam

895 Japanese literature—Collections 25-199

"These thirty-five tales tell us something of Japan that we cannot derive from the most assiduous reading of newspapers. Beginning with the account of the forty-seven Ronins, from which John Masefield created his play, 'The Faithful,' and ending with 'An Account of the Hara-Kiri,' every page, almost, yields some kernel of enlightenment about a people whom we cannot really understand until we know their traditions and their folk-lore. This book clarifies for us the (comparatively speaking) widespread resort to suicide among lovers crossed by their parents and explains, to a degree, why the Japanese, in 1905, defeated the Russians."—N Y World

"After a careful reading of these old and new stories of Japan, it would seem that their most dominant teachings are those of the right of personal vengeance and the privilege, when not the duty, of committing hari-kari. Many, perhaps most of the stories are woven about these themes. To most Occidental readers perhaps "The Heroism of Torri Katsukata" will be most popular. It is a brave tale." F. B.

SEITZ, DON CARLOS, ed.—Continued
Boston Transcript p4 Ja 28 '25 750w

"The person who wishes to understand Japanese mentality, the strange mixture of old and new things hidden behind the mask of ageless courtesy, will get more from this book than from a dozen volumes of travelers' tales."
+ Ind 114:190 F 14 '25 120w

"Not all the tales are of equal interest, but most readers will find several of prime readability in Mr. Seitz's collection. It is quite true, as he says, that 'to understand a people one must know their literature.' It is highly important that we understand the Japanese, and a good beginning may be made by the careful perusal of these tales." Herschel Brickell
+ Lit R p3 Ja 3 '25 550w

N Y World p9m Ja 4 '25 250w

Outlook 139:117 Ja 21 '25 40w

Pratt p15 spring '25

St Louis p123 My '25

Reviewed by Riusaku Tsunoda

World Tomorrow 8:189 Je '25 720w

SELBIE, WILLIAM BOOTHBY. Psychology of religion. (Oxford handbooks of theology) 310p $4.20 Oxford [12s 6d Milford]

201 Religion—Psychology 25-2167

"Dr. Selbie discusses religious consciousness among primitive people and all the way up to Christianity, the emotional element in religious consciousness and its place in the same. In studying the idea of God, he goes into the whole psychology of belief, the relation of belief and credulity and the gradual emancipation of man from superstition. Prayer, sin and repentance, mysticism and the hope of immortality are all ably considered in the light of modern psychology."—Boston Transcript

"While Dr. Selbie is writing chiefly for students of theology, it is a book for the philosopher and psychologist to reckon with. It is constructive, scholarly, candid and yet corrective of some absurd claims and extravagant statements." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p7 D 6 '24 630w

J Religion 5:104 Ja '25 30w

"One finds unmistakable evidence of a mind judicious, reverent, and finely sensitive to spiritual values. Hence the book will prove highly enlightening and stimulating to all whom it first introduces to the psychology of religion. It should have exercised greater care in discriminating between genuinely divergent conceptions and theories that receive mention or discussion. Contradictions, too, are not infrequent. A fundamental difficulty is that even such basic and constantly used terms as 'abnormal,' 'conation,' and 'instinct' are given vague, loose, or inconsistent meanings. Limitations of the sort pointed out are serious in the eyes of specialists in the subject, and one ought not to minimize their gravity. On the other hand, they should not blind one to the valuable features of the book and to the effectiveness with which it will doubtless minister to various existing needs, both theoretical and practical." E. L. Schaub
+ — J Religion 5:204 Mr '25 900w

"The volume has weight, dignity and insight. One must confess, however, that in most respects it is a reiteration of results of studies as yet too meager in a field of inquiry that threatens to reduce itself to a sort of cult while it is still in its infancy. The style of the book is clear and forceful; in temper it is genial and unbiased." E. D. Starbuck
+ — N Y Tribune p3 Ja 11 '25 580w

"The book contains the substance of two courses of lectures delivered under the Wilde Foundation at Oxford, and takes such a wide and discriminating view of the subject that we believe it will be generally welcomed for its sound guidance in a study which is too frequently hindered by extravagant theories."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p80 F 5 '25 850w

SELEKMAN, BEN MORRIS. Employees' representation in steel works. (Industrial relations ser.) 293p $1.50 Russell Sage foundation

331.15 Employees' representation in management. Colorado fuel and iron company 25-4884

A study of the industrial representation plan of the Colorado fuel and iron company in its steel mills. The book describes the method of introducing the plan and its essential features, the character of the steel industry, the movement for the shorter work-day in the industry, the methods followed by these steel works in establishing wage rates, adjusting grievances and encouraging the initiative of the workers. A chapter is given, also to the strike of the Minnequa steel workers in September, 1919.

"The studies should constitute an extremely valuable contribution to the published concrete data available to industrial relations." F. N. House
+ Am J Soc 31:409 N '25 150w

Reviewed by S. H. Slichter

Ann Am Acad 120:171 J1 '25 350w

"There are points on both sides. But that the book contains an array of facts, carefully stated and of pertinent significance to current problems, will be admitted by all." F. L. B.
+ Boston Transcript p4 J1 11 '25 750w

Reviewed by P. B. MacDonald

Chem & Met Eng 32:514 My '25 300w

"A model of descriptive research." B: Stolberg
+ Nation 121:666 D 9 '25 230w

Reviewed by Harry Propper

N Y Tribune p11 My 31 '25 350w

Outlook 140:159 My 27 '25 20w

"The Russell Sage Foundation's delays in publishing its reports may be said to amount to a mild national scandal. Excellent research work is thus marred. The opportunity given for the claim that conditions are entirely different now and the information no longer applicable has been effectively used by the firm in the present instance." Herman Feldman
Pol Sci Q 40:642 D '25 620w

"Perhaps hardly a matter of general interest to the people of Great Britain. Nevertheless, for those who take a special interest in co-partnership and 'Wage-earners' participation in management,' Mr. Selekman's careful and detailed account of its effects in practice in steel-works employing over six thousand men is deserving of attention."

Sat R 139:443 Ap 25 '25 130w

Sat R of Lit 1:731 My 2 '25 220w

"In following through the workings of the Plan of Industrial Representation. In the steel works Mr. Selekman has made a highly significant contribution to the literature of the subject." H. B. Davis
+ World Tomorrow 8:251 Ag '25 500w

SELEKMAN, BEN MORRIS. Sharing management with the workers. (Industrial relations ser.) 142p $1.50 Russell Sage foundation

331.15 Employees' representation in management. Dutchess bleachery, Wappingers Falls, New York 25-3562

This is a detailed study of the partnership plan of the Dutchess bleachery, Wappingers Falls, New York. Under the old regime of unsympathetic management, the employees of the Dutchess bleachery had grown sullen and bitter and while they were too phlegmatic by nature to rise to open revolt, there was an undercurrent of hostile criticism when the new owners took charge in 1909. The present study is an outline of the efforts, of these new owners to improve relations between employer and employee. There is a description of the bleachery, its operation and operatives, its position in the community, and an account of the origin and application of the partnership plan, the difficulties which it has encountered, and the progress which it has made.

"The volume makes a distinct contribution to the literature on industrial relations. Whether one agrees with the conclusions and interpretations or not, recognition must be given to the facts presented." F. S. Deibler

+ Am Econ R 15:526 S '25 450w

"Nearly the whole book is devoted to a straightforward description of the industrial experiment at the Dutchess Bleachery. Too little space is allotted to an evolution of the plan, but the book should be valuable for one seeking information as to the steps taken in putting the experiment into operation." Malcolm Keir

+ Ann Am Acad 121:197 S '25 80w

Booklist 22:12 O '25

"A valuable little volume, both as a discussion of living questions and as a record of actual experience." F. L. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 11 '25 650w

"The author has included the essential statistical data relating to wages, profit-sharing and working hours and the book is really a practical manual for those interested in the management of personnel."

+ Chem & Met Eng 32:449 Ap '25 200w
Econ J 35:450 S '25 250w

"Barely three years of the partnership plan in actual operation are covered by Mr. Selekmán's report, so that it can serve only to point out an exceedingly interesting and significant experiment giving considerable promise." Harry Prop- per

+ N Y Tribune p9 Ap 5 '25 700w

Reviewed by H. E. Gaston

N Y World p7m Mr 15 '25 130w

SELEKMAN, BEN MORRIS, and VAN KLEECK, MARY. Employees' representation in coal mines. (Industrial relations ser.) 454p $2 Russell Sage foundation

331.15 Employees' representation in management. Colorado fuel and iron company
25-4885

The study is published simultaneously with "Employees' representation in steel works," a similar study of the industrial representation plan of the Colorado fuel and iron company in its steel mills. The company, which operates twenty-five coal mines as well as steel works and a railroad, instituted this plan about ten years ago. It was the forerunner of many similar plans in a variety of industries. The book sets forth history, statistics, purposes, methods, testimony and opinion concerning the success of the plan.

Reviewed by F. S. Deibler

Am Econ R 15:526 S '25 450w

"The studies should constitute an extremely valuable contribution to the published concrete data available to students of industrial relations." F. N. House

+ Am J Soc 31:409 N '25 150w

Reviewed by S. H. Slichter

Ann Am Acad 120:171 J1 '25 350w

"No one who examines the volume containing the results of this study can doubt that the work has been done with great care. The volume is well equipped for reference, with an extensive table of contents and an adequate index. Every phase of the subject is examined. Very likely opinion will differ as to the conclusions, but the value of the study will not be denied." F. L. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 27 '25 750w

"Granted that the plan is worth an analysis of nearly five hundred pages of a book, rather than an article or two in a technical magazine, it must be admitted that the authors have done a careful and judicial piece of work. Their point of view is not that of the late Russell Sage, but there is no necessity that it be."

P. B. McDonald

+ Chem & Met Eng 32:640 J1 '25 250w

"Mr. Selekmán, who undertook the field surveys for this study, did a man's size job that may well set a standard for all future studies of the relations between employer and employee." McAlister Coleman

+ Lit R p9 J1 3 '25 350w

"A model of descriptive research." B: Stol- berg

+ Nation 121:666 D 9 '25 230w

Reviewed by Harry Prop- per

N Y Tribune p11 My 31 '25 350w

Outlook 140:159 My 27 '25 20w

"The Russell Sage Foundation's delays in publishing its reports may be said to amount to a mild national scandal. Excellent research work is thus marred. The opportunity given for the claim that conditions are entirely different now and the information no longer applicable has been effectively used by the firm in the present instance." Herman Feldman

Pol Sci Q 40:642 D '25 620w

Reviewed by H. S. Raushenbush

World Tomorrow 8:250 Ag '25 350w

SELTZER, CHARLES ALDEN. Channing comes through. 429p $2 Century

25-19168

A tale of the West in which Channing, the strong and silent type of cowboy gentleman, plays a long game of watchful waiting while little Eve grows up, engages herself to another man and finally becomes disengaged in time to discover Channing's secret. Eve's stepfather Bassett is one of many bad men in the book to meet a merited end in a bullet from Channing's gun. When the necessary killings are over, the attendant excitement subsides and leaves the survivors very happy indeed.

"Mr. Seltzer is one of the few writers of tales of the Great West in which the characters are real, the plot is clear and well worked out, the incidents not only possible but probable and the story so well told that interest never flags." C. P. S.

+ Lit R p7 N 7 '25 180w

"Mr. Seltzer presents this new variation on an old theme with his customary lavishness of action and his equally customary vividness of local color."

N Y World p6m O 18 '25 160w

SELTZER, CHARLES ALDEN. Last Hope ranch. 335p $2 Century

25-8737

Within twenty-four hours of his arrival at Last Hope Ranch, the home of Lizbeth Stanton and her father, Templin performs two services for his prospective hostess and exacts one in return. He first quells her drunken assailant and next rescues Lizbeth herself from a gang of ruffians who storm the ranch and try to carry her off. By that time the habit of helpfulness has become fixed. The intrepid ex-outlaw, finding Stanton and his daughter hard pressed by their enemies, offers himself and his ready gun in their defense. The next few weeks furnish frequent opportunities for him to use it. As she sees him with gay courage repeatedly risk his life for her, Lizbeth's militant prejudice against this man of questionable career gives way to admiration and something more. When their difficulties are over and Templin would leave the ranch, Lizbeth makes up her mind to change his.

Reviewed by Donald Douglas

Int Bk R p655 S '25 130w

"A fine galloping story in which unpleasant characters intrude into almost every chapter, only to sink into blood-stained graves before the next begins."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p742 N 5 '25 80w

SELTZER, CHARLES ALDEN—Continued
 "Story of the Mexican border that will meet the demands of readers of Western fiction."
 Wis Lib Bul 21:200 J1 '25

SELVER, PAUL. Schooling. 368p $2.50 A. & C. Boni [7s 6d Jarrolds]

"Schooling, a first novel, describes with photographic accuracy the details of life at a third-rate boys' school in the southern suburbs. The masters live in, and the point of view is that of their common-room; what is important is not the boys' psychology but the bickerings and intrigues of the masters. A stale, sticky vulgarity pervades the scene, from which the only escape is amatory adventure in London of the kind called sordid."—New Statesman

"A remarkable piece of thoroughgoing realism. Readers who like slices of life will find the book fascinating; it is quite unpretentious, without affectations, with no ideas and with no message, but with a direct sense of life and of fun." J. Franklin

+ New Statesman 24:82 O 25 '24 180w

"Written with a verve, force and humor which put it far above the average routine 'fearless studies of life,' and which in no way detract from its meticulous observation of the pertinent facts."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 8 '25 1000w

"'Schooling' seems to be a young man's novel, and it is still more apparently autobiographical. But it shows a refreshing sense of the value of limitation, a strict selection and economy of material which greatly intensify its effect." Homer Woodbridge

+ N Y Tribune p3 My 10 '25 450w

"Mr. Selver writes with such energy and humour that it is difficult to stop reading his story once you begin it. His allusive and facetious style sometimes defeats itself: sometimes it appears to be modelled on Mr. Wells at his more quizzical." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 138:426 O 25 '24 300w

"There is not in this book a single worthy character, man, woman, or boy. In spite, therefore, of certain clever bits of characterization and an occasional flash of wit, the book is shallow and unconvincing."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:714 Ap 25 '25 130w

"It is one of the most entertaining stories of school life we have read. It is also one of the most depressing. To what extent the author intended it to be depressing we do not pretend to know. But he has made an almost complete sacrifice of artistic intention to his gift for comedy, and has omitted from his novel everything that would have saved it from being a one-sided and slightly malicious commentary on school life."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p666 O 23 '24 480w

SERGEANT, PHILIP WALSINGHAM. Court-ship of Catherine the Great. 337p il $3.50 Brentano's

B or 92 Catherine II, czarina of Russia

Mr Sergeant assigns to Catherine the Great ten favorites, major and minor, during the thirty-four years of her reign. His book is devoted to her relations with these men, no attempt being made to give a complete account of her life and reign. In the concluding chapters her claims to the title of "The Great" are examined.

Boston Transcript p4 D 9 '25 260w

"Mr. Sergeant lets us draw our own conclusions on vexed points. Hems, haws and quotations supply the place of original research." Will Cuppy

N Y Tribune p4 D 27 '25 620w

SERNER, GUNNAR. See Heller, F., pseud.

SETON, GRACE (GALLATIN) (MRS ERNEST THOMPSON SETON). Yes, Lady Sahib; a woman's adventures with mysterious India. 370p il $4 Harper

915.4 India—Description and travel. India—Social life and customs 25-19845

Snake charmers and sacred cows; social life and politics; pearl bazaar in Bombay; jungle hunt in Assam; temple, burning ghat, and palace: the whole glittering pageant of the Indian scene streams across the pages of this book. The author has vividly recounted her own unique and exciting experiences and in so far as is possible to the western mind, she has sought to interpret the meaning of the pageant as it passed before her eyes. The many illustrations in the book are from snapshots and photographs.

Booklist 22:157 Ja '26

Boston Transcript p4 D 9 '25 600w

"How so much could have been crammed by one lady journalist into six months is a miracle even in this day of feminine prodigies." E. Vincent

New Repub 45:118 D 16 '25 320w

"Mrs. Seton displays the colorful efficiency of an American painter, sympathetic, impressionist, rapid. She is a searchlight thrown on many externals and some recesses of the age-long India structure." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p3 O 18 '25 1550w

"Her narrative, warmly personal in tone, never fails in animation."

+ N Y World p7m D 20 '25 80w

"India comes alive in these pages and one feels the pulsating, organic life of a land, age-old, yet still in its infancy. There is breadth in Mrs. Seton's vision and she brings together many of the diffused elements which have so long made India an enigma." Dale Warren

+ Sat R of Lit 2:412 D 12 '25 130w

SEYMOUR, BEATRICE KEAN (STAPLETON) (MRS WILLIAM KEAN SEYMOUR). Unveiled (Eng title Romantic tradition). 329p $2.50 Seltzer [7s 6d Chapman & H.]

25-9293

The story is about the married life of Enid Carr and Kennedy Armfield, and is told by a childhood friend of Armfield's who is somewhat involved in the affairs of this young couple. Enid regarded her marriage to Kennedy as "a marriage of true minds," and tho this couple is much in love they each see life from an entirely different angle. Naturally there is conflict. Their first contention is over Enid's mother, a woman of doubtful character whom Enid endeavors to idealize, and whom Kennedy cannot abide. The breach widens with the death of the baby, and Kennedy leaves his wife. Then follows his brief affair with Sophie, a woman, strange to say, whose character was similar to that of his mother-in-law. The book ends in tragedy.

Boston Transcript p4 Je 20 '25 280w

"It a curious thing about Beatrice Kean Seymour's new and very worth-while novel, 'Unveiled,' that while one at least of the important characters never seems really to live at all, and another possesses only a fluctuating sort of life, the book itself conveys a complete sense of reality. We believe it all happened, every bit of it." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p548 J1 '25 700w

"Beatrice Seymour is successful; she intrigues us by her subtle handling of a deft device into accepting these men and women as actual, into sharing her moods over them, into liking them and growing irritated at them." J. T. Shipley

+ Lit R p3 Je 13 '25 500w

"Mrs. Seymour examines the treacle tradition, such as it is, with a characteristic thoroughness that resembles impartiality. Despite her rather voluminous style, she is shrewd, witty, incisive in observation. Her story of the married life of Ken and Enid is a serious and admirable study in contrast."

+ Nation and Ath 36:784 Mr 7 '25 250w

"Altogether, although the artistic intention in Unveiled is obvious, its execution is not worthy of the fine and capable hand which wrote Intrusion, and The Hopeful Journey." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 43:79 Je 10 '25 280w.

"Unveiled develops a plot whose minor convolutions are full of subtlety and individuality, and at the same time converts a time-worn method of narration into something so pertinent to the plot that it often becomes almost a component. If one feels that sometimes 'Unveiled' is roundabout and verbose in the telling, one comes to perceive that it is one of those books which, though you doubt that everything is done the best way possible, still are done in such a way that any other method is beyond your vision."

+ N Y Times p8 My 17 '25 900w

"It is rather a pity that the structure of the book is lumpy and the handling rather awkward. It is told as in the first person, by a subsidiary participant in the events, by which it loses immediacy and dramatic effect. And Miss Seymour has not yet developed a prose style, but she has insight, sincerity and sympathy; in short, she has something to say." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p8 My 24 '25 740w

"The only defect in Mrs. Seymour's finely wrought psychological structure seems to one reader to be in her insistence upon making her observer, Adela Stokes, a novelist, and bringing into her novel one of those clever circles of London Litterateurs."

+ N Y World p4m Je 7 '25 260w

"This is a good novel, and would be better without its moral."

+ Sat R 139:219 F 28 '25 900w

"The story is a little artificial: it creaks occasionally. The developments seem too rigidly predetermined, the characters run too true to type, without life's curious and consoling deviations. Yet it holds attention throughout. Mrs. Seymour has insight and comprehension, especially when her own sex is concerned: then, indeed, she is often very illuminative. Her treatment of marital and domestic episodes is refreshing." C: Vale

+ Sat R of Lit 1:819 Je 13 '25 720w

"The novel is tiresome. It maunders through pages of 'Good-days' and 'Good-byes,' so to speak, and the lack of importance and of 'furthering' in the conversations is most notable. The characters display a good deal of frankness and no honesty; they overstate their emotions in platitudes, and behave, all of them, in unrealistically stupid ways."

— Spec 134:296 F 21 '25 120w

"A book with many good scenes and much good writing in it comes out, as a whole, rather strained and rather vague."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p102 F 12 '25 450w

SEYMOUR, HARTLAND. Agitating, stirring and kneading machinery. (Chemical engineering lib., 2nd ser.) 139p il $2 Van Nostrand [6s Benn]

660 Mixers

25-10391

"This book is a companion to 'Mechanical Mixing Machinery,' as it overlaps in the field covered, but the method of presentation is distinctly different. The author has classified problems of mixing into: (1) the mixing of two liquids, (2) the mixing of two solids, (3) the mixing of a solid and a liquid. The first is termed agitating or stirring, the second mixing, and the third kneading. The descriptive text includes paddle, gate-type, propeller, helical, spiral, turbine, air-lift, and adjustable paddle agitators; double-motion and jacketed stirrers, kneaders, pan mills, emulsifiers, 'colloid' mills' agitator drives and paint mills. The quantitative tables give air and power characteristics of Dorr agitators, reduction in Plauson mills, and the capacity of Universal kneading machines."—Chem & Met Eng

"There is an admixture of description and quantitative operating data that makes the book useful as a reference for the plant engineer. The author has done well a difficult task of classification and description."

+ Chem & Met Eng 32:514 My '25 180w

"The chemical engineer in search of the most suitable machine to solve his particular problem will here find practically all of the more important styles of mixers passing in review, and ably, if briefly, described; yet he may be disappointed at the end to find his question unanswered."

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:544 My '25 300w

"It should be useful to those to whom it is addressed, and is well illustrated."

+ Nature 116:277 Ag 22 '25 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:24 Ap '25

SEYMOUR, ST JOHN DRELCINCOURT, comp. Tales of King Solomon. 192p il $2.50 Oxford [7s 6d Milford]

398.2 Solomon, king of Israel [25-7247]

"The power, magnificence, and wealth of King Solomon, we are reminded by the author, were greater than those of all the kings who were about him. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that many traditions should have come to envelop his royal figure. Many things, seemingly, besides his proverbial and proverb-condensed wisdom have impressed the ages, for a whole host of legends illuminate his amorousness, his strangely unpractical outlook, his daring exploits in peace and war. To his association with the Queen of Saba, or Sheba, and to that with the daughter of Pharaoh are devoted two whole chapters, and in them is enough material for a hundred romances. The reader will regret to learn at the close of the book that the salvation of so great a lover was pronounced against by Saint Augustine and the Latin Fathers."—Living Age

"The mass of legends will prove quite amazing to the general reader for whom the book is written. They are gathered from many sources; some very old, others modern; but all interesting." W. J. C.

+ Bookm 61:adv Ap '25 130w

"The author has consulted many authorities, with the care of a scholar devoted to his task. He disclaims that the book was written wholly for the scholar. Theologians may read it to advantage; Masonic students will find information of value to the craft; readers of Oriental literature will enjoy the recognition of Solomon among the great characters of their ancient legends; and the general reader will be amazed that there is so much preserved in the literature about the man who was said to be the wisest of his time."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 23 '25 320w

"Mr. Seymour retells the stories with admirable clearness and simplicity."

+ Living Age 324:625 Mr 14 '25 280w (Reprinted from Manchester Guardian)

"Unique and quaint, amusing and interesting."

+ N Y Times p20 F 1 '25 430w

"It might be supposed that an entire book devoted to so old a character as Solomon would prove monotonous and boring; but most of these stories are so full of the marvelous and the exotic, and so enlightening as to the peoples who created them, that they acquire a unique interest. It is true that the book cannot pleasurably be read through in one sitting; but to dip into it at random is rather refreshing."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:638 Mr 28 '25 280w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p98 F 12 '25 400w

SHANKS, EDWARD BUXTON. Bernard Shaw. (Writers of the day) 128p $1 Holt [2s Nisbet]

B or 92 Shaw, George Bernard [24-28730]

A brief, critical biography of Shaw as novelist, critic, dramatist and philosopher, with a bibliography.

Booklist 22:31 O '25

"Although Edward Shanks's 'Bernard Shaw' cannot truthfully be said to answer any pressing literary need or to cast much new light upon the by no means dim planet with which it deals, it serves nicely to carry on the attractive 'Writers of the Day' series."

— + Bookm 61:603 J1 '25 280w

"Excellent biographical criticism in condensed and orderly form." D. B. Woolsey
+ New Repub 43:216 J1 15 '25 320w

"Useful little book."

+ New Statesman 23:202 My 24 '24 300w

Reviewed by H. L. Stuart

N Y Times p11 Je 7 '25 950w

"Mr. Shanks's balanced and judicious little book is in its way an admirable account of its subject. It presents his opinions clearly and accurately, it analyzes fairly and dispassionately his merits and his defects as dramatist, pamphleteer and philosopher, and it is written in a fluent and entertaining way." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Tribune p1 J1 12 '25 500w

"Mr. Shanks gives us a quite personal view of Mr. Shaw's career, and the account of the way in which he forced his way into public attention is well done. Perhaps Mr. Shanks does not adequately recognize the extent to which G. B. S. has assisted in moulding the tastes of the present generation."

+ Sat R 137:442 Ap 26 '24 450w

"Brief as this essay is, it gives Mr. Shanks scope to show his critical judgment and his ability to hold to his own view in spite of temptations to excess of praise or blame."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p255 Ap 24 '24 130w

Wis Lib Bul 21:142 My '25

SHARON, JOHN JONES. Grey gander. 311p $2 Duffield

25-17343

Peter remembered no other life than vagabond wandering along the Mississippi with Limpey Joe. When the drunken old peddler came to die, he told Peter a strange story of a murder, a vast swindle and a good name brought to shame. The good name and the stolen estate—so the peddler confessed—belonged to the murdered man, Peter's father. The boy was restored to the last of his family and a new chapter of life opened. On his return from college in the East, Peter first heard of the Grey gander. A reckless corsair, chief of a robber band whose exploits were the terror and admiration of the river-front, he had thus far escaped detection and capture. From their first meeting he was Peter's destined enemy, and outwitted and outvalled him at every move. It was a girl that brought down the Gander from his flight, and a ghost that restored to Peter his home and his bride.

"Narration in the first person, always an easy method for a young novelist, makes us impatient of the outcome. Mr. Sharon's vocabulary retains the old fashioned peppermint flavor. He has a delicate feeling for sounds and phrases."

— Boston Transcript p4 O 14 '25 350w

"The story is exciting enough, but the characters are perhaps rather too heavily accented; the heroine is too beautiful, the hero is too good, the villain too villainous to be altogether convincing. Also, the style of the dialogue is a little too high-flown and courtly for the time and place."

— + Ind 115:539 N 7 '25 100w

"The best part of the book consists of its descriptions of the life of the time, particularly on board the river steamboats. There is too, an agreeably quaint atmosphere to the account of the ball held in the old Tobacco Warehouse."

+ N Y Times p9 O 11 '25 350w

N Y World p6m N 29 '25 70w

SHARP, DALLAS LORE. Spirit of the hive. 240p $2.50 (7s 6d) Harper

595.79 Bees

25-8144

Dallas Lore Sharp describes his book as the "contemplations of a beekeeper." His bees reveal to him the poetry and romance of nature. From the perfect society of the hive—communism carried to its limit—he draws the analogy of an ideal human society in which order, coöperation and an all-world brotherhood might prevail.

Booklist 21:366 J1 '25

"The book will delight lovers of poetry, lovers of bees, and lovers of Professor Sharp." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 2 '25 400w

"Both for the information it contains and for the spirit and for the thought and style, his book will be read with pleasure by all who have a feeling for nature."

+ Ind 114:450 Ap 18 '25 130w

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

Int Bk R p558 J1 '25 150w

"Poetry, the music of the drowsy bee, sings all through the book. The most practical and scientific facts, whether they have to do with the marketing of the honey or the bees' function as marriage broker among the blossoms, are tuned to the hum and lift and boom of the gathering bee."

+ N Y Times p10 My 10 '25 500w

"Its actual material is very nearly smothered under a style too flowery and rhapsodic. But beneath the sentiment and idealizations there is a sound, intimate knowledge of bees that commands respect. One is further disarmed by the evident sincerity of the writer's love for his subject." Ruth Suckow

+ N Y Tribune p9 My 10 '25 580w

"When Mr. Sharp says that bees are pure poetry, and reinforces the assertion with pages of beautiful prose, it is difficult to persist in the belief that life in the hive is pure horror. Mr. Sharp does not need to be compared with Fabre and Maeterlinck. He has written a book quite his own and one that will take a very high place in the literature of his subject."

+ Outlook 140:166 Ag 19 '25 150w

"In his character of bee-keeper Mr. Sharp appeals not less effectively than in his earlier books to the sympathetic imagination of nature-lovers."

+ R of Rs 71:560 My '25 70w

"Mr. Sharp's seventeenth book comes laden with an increase of all that has emphasized its author as a rightful successor in our line of authentic nature-writers,—accurate observation, gracious imagination, a dash of humor, and a strain of philosophy. . . It is a book flowing with thought and beauty and if it does not leave a bee in the reader's bonnet, he must be veiled and gloved with insensibility." T. M. Longstreth

+ Sat R of Lit 1:724 My 2 '25 500w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 19 '25 60w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p302 Ap 30 '25 20w

Wis Lib Bul 21:140 My '25

SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD. Table talk of G. B. S.; conversations on things in general between George Bernard Shaw and his biographer, by Archibald Henderson. 162p il $2 Harper

B or 92

25-8769

The subjects discussed in these conversations between Shaw and his American biographer, Archibald Henderson, are drama and the theater, contrasts between England and America, literature, the war, and things in general.

"More Shaw and less Henderson would have improved the book, which is nevertheless very good as it stands." J: Bakeless

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '25 500w

Booklist 21:380 J1 '25

"A delightful and valuable little volume." A. B. Maurice

+ Bookm 61:475 Je '25 600w

"As usual there is more Boswell than Johnson, and no particular connection between the two, but all is fair in Shavianism. To be truthful, if we were the great G. B. S. we should object to the foreword, in which he is described as incomparably the greatest of living dramatists. This somewhat evolved demileology, of course, paves the way for the medley of everything and nothing we get."

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 16 '25 350w
Cleveland p106 N '25

"The really noticeable quality of Mr. Shaw's talk is its flippancy. It seems quite as light as the dialogues in the novels of the popular Mr. Michael Arlen! There is an occasional amusing sally and at long intervals, bits of sense, but the effect of the whole is cheap."

+ Dial 79:433 N '25 80w

"A good deal of Shaw spread over a great many subjects. The quick incisive comment, the wit, the paradox of the fully armed talker, who realizes that the best defense is a brisk offensive, are lavishly displayed. More interesting than the speed and felicity of Shaw's conversation is the personality revealed in it."

+ Ind 114:535 My 9 '25 130w

"Whoever still doubts that Bernard Shaw is the most interesting man alive should read 'Table-talk of G. B. S.' There will be found, I am pretty confident, as many wise and brilliant remarks as have ever been made in the space of one hundred and sixty pages." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 120:550 My 13 '25 650w

"That they are interesting goes without saying, and they derive an added value from the fact that Dr. Henderson seems to have learnt the knack of bridling his friend's wit and of inducing him to speak his mind on public affairs rather more straightforwardly than usual. But the book does little towards revealing Mr. Shaw's inner, elusive personality, which remains impenetrable as ever."

+ Nation and Ath 37:434 J1 4 '25 150w

Reviewed by D. B. Woolsey

New Repub 32:216 J1 15 '25 250w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p1 My 3 '25 1750w

"In Mr. Henderson's 'Table Talk' there is presented unmistakably the authentic Shaw. Mr. Henderson asks some very silly questions which it would be most charitable to suppose were asked with the deliberate intention of infuriating his companion, and he cannot escape a natural tendency to platitudes." J. W. Krutch

N Y Tribune p1 J1 12 '25 1150w

St Louis p359 S '25

"So far as Professor Henderson is concerned, it is surely no fault of his that his mentality is so unattuned to Bernard Shaw's that their table-talk is something of a joke, and—once more—a joke at Shaw's expense. His mental furniture is not of the kind that would stimulate G. B. S. to the point of making him talk well. Consequently, whatever is characteristic in these conversations is a few Shavian truisms; the topical subjects raised by the Biographer simply produce non sequiturs or commonplaces." Ernest Boyd

+ Sat R of Lit 1:789 My 30 '25 1000w

"The little book in hand, though it is called Conversations on Things in General, does not cover a very wide field. All the same, it has many admirable things in it, and gives good instances to prove how able, stimulating, and creative a dialectician is the last of the old dramatists and the first of the new. The American author, Mr. Henderson, who taps, and draws from, Mr. Shaw's well-filled cask of Amontillado, has done his work very well."

J. St L. Strachey

+ Spec 135:107 J1 13 '25 2000w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 5 '25 70w

Springf'd Republican p7a My 24 '25 700w

"The indefinable clarity of Mr. Shaw's thought is as clearly illustrated in these conversations as any pen other than his own could lead us to expect. Dr. Henderson's part in the conversation was of necessity rather a formality. The interviews accorded him enabled him to ask questions which were likely to elicit the most lengthy answers. The adroit manner in which he plied his advantage merits admiration and gratitude."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p460 J1 9 '25 900w

Wis Lib Bul 21:169 Je '25

SHAY, FRANK, ed. Twenty-five short plays; international. 381p $4 Appleton

803.2 Drama—Collections 25-4062

An anthology of twenty-five one-act plays from the contemporary drama of as many nations. Contents: Accomplish, by Abigail Marshall; Festival of Bacchus, by Arthur Schnitzler; Interior, by Maurice Maeterlinck; Chintamani, by Girish C. Ghose; The witness, by Jaroslav Vrchlicky; Pyentsa, from the Burmese; Brothers in arms, by Merrill Denison; The thrice promised bride, by Cheng-Chin Hsiung; When love dies, by Jose Antonio Ramos; Eyes that cannot see, by Albert Gnuetzmann; Pan in Pimlico, by Helen Simpson; Pierre Patelin, adapted by Moritz Jagendorf; Jubilee, by Herman Heijermans; The bridegroom, by Lajos Biro; The marriage, by Douglas Hyde; A snowy night, by Roberto Bracco; The cherry blossom river, adapted by Colin C. Clements; The sentence of death, by Teresa Farias de Issasi; In confidence, by Alvide Prydz; On the highway, by Anton Chekhov; The street singer, by Jose Echegaray; Poverty, by Hans Alin; The disenchanted, by Izzet-Melyh; Joe, by Jane Dransfield; The Shunamite, by Yehoash. Notes.

Booklist 21:296 My '25

"The value of such a collection is quite clear because of the light it throws upon drama of other countries, the way in which the short play is handled all over the world, and it offers the play reader or play producer a world tour of the drama in convenient form."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 27 '25 200w

Reviewed by J. R. Towse

Lit R p9 Mr 21 '25 420w

"Mr. Shay has done a real service to dramatic art and to international understanding by presenting these plays with all their racial expression and national significance, in one volume."

+ N Y Times p5 F 8 '25 470w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Tribune p9 Mr 29 '25 100w

"The book is entertaining reading and will be useful to the director in search of unusual material."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 9:563 Ag '25 70w

SHELDON, CHARLES MONROE. Charles M. Sheldon; his life story. 309p il $2.50 Doran
B or 92 25-18398

The author of "In His Steps" tells with a charming simplicity the story of a busy and happy life. An interesting chapter in the story is his account of the writing and wide distribution of his famous book. Another chapter gives an account of the Sheldon edition of the Topeka Daily Capital which was published under Dr Sheldon's direction for six days to carry out his idea of what a Christian daily might be.

SHELDON, CHARLES MONROE—Continued

"Mr. Sheldon narrates his life story with simplicity and earnestness, weaving into the story as he goes along some of the philosophy life has taught him and never losing the thread of deep religious feeling and conviction that seems to have been a part of his heritage and has always been an essential element of his life."

+ N Y Times p12 N 8 '25 500w

"In writing this life story, his assurance is tempered throughout by his humility, and he tells of his success and achievements in a manner which should characterize all autobiography."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:221 O 17 '25 300w

SHELDON, GEORGE H. Advertising: elements and principles. 443p il $5 Harcourt [21s Chapman & H.]

659 Advertising 25-12646

"Analysis of the fundamental principles underlying advertising. The author is in the advertising business and a lecturer on advertising at Columbia University. For the person who wants to know what advertising is and what it accomplishes the new book is invaluable. It also will aid those engaged in the profession."—N Y World

N Y World p4m S 6 '25 70w

"The present book is one of the best of its kind, not only because it is the latest and had, therefore, a larger body of material on which to draw, but because its author is a lucid and entertaining writer, able to make his story interesting, even to laymen with no other interest in advertising than curiosity." E. E. Calkins

+ Sat R of Lit 2:193 O 10 '25 1400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p622 S 24 '25 50w

SHELLEY, GERARD. Speckled domes. 256p $4 Scribner [15s Duckworth]

947 Russia—History [25-13332]

"An Englishman's life in Russia during the last days of the Empire and the dominance of Rasputin and during the Revolution and the rise of the Soviets."—Outlook

"Mr. Shelley is fluent and skilful in making a highly readable narrative."

+ — Bookm 61:607 Jl '25 250w

"From beginning to end the book is full of interesting and often fresh material."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 3 '25 320w

"Barring the last chapter in which he depicts his woeful plight during the Red terror—the episodes related by him are either insignificant or unlikely, and the conversations and stories which he reproduces often make one wonder whether he was able to understand correctly or make himself understood by the people with whom he was talking. All this makes the book not only valueless for a student of social life in Russia, but also deprives it of any interest as general reading. It is to be regretted that it has ever made its appearance." A. M. Nikolaieff

— Lit R p4 Je 13 '25 760w

Nation and Ath 36:820 Mr 14 '25 600w

New Statesman 24:672 Mr 14 '25 430w

"Completely valueless. It is so obviously ill-natured and prejudiced, so lacking in intelligence, that one wonders how this volume could have found a publisher."

— N Y Times p26 Ap 26 '25 300w

"This book by an Englishman, who never forgets to be shocked and never forgets to be outraged that an Englishman should be treated so badly by mere foreigners, certainly adds nothing to our understanding of either the old or the new regime." H: Alsberg

— N Y Tribune p8 Je 21 '25 660w

Outlook 140:34 My 6 '25 30w

"Typically superficial, with many mistakes, it is quite an average story in all respects, except one. The author is a great admirer of . . . Rasputin." Pitirim Sorokin

— Sat R of Lit 2:238 O 24 '25 300w

"Lively and pleasant—if at times rather facetious—reading. Whether Mr. Shelley's reading of the political situation be accepted or rejected, the story of his own adventures and ultimate escape will appeal to all readers who enjoy exciting narrative and a breezy style."

+ Spec 134:640 Ap 18 '25 300w

"It is difficult to understand why it should have been written. Mr. Shelley seems to be filled with an uncontrolled loathing for every class of Russian society. But his diatribes against the nobility, the peasantry, The Jews, the merchants, the bourgeoisie, and the intelligentsia of the years preceding the Revolution are rather more individual in manner."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p207 Mr 19 '25 300w

SHEPARD, MRS ESTHER. Paul Bunyan. 235p $2.50 McNeil press, Seattle, Wash.

Legends, American. Lumbermen—Legends. Bunyan, Paul 25-829

From the great number of legends about the mighty Paul and his staggering exploits the stories in the volume have been selected. They are written in the lumberjack's own words, just as they are told about the camp fire to intimidate the tenderfoot or to awe the boastful into silence. With a few exceptions, the tales differ from those in Mr Stevens's collection.

Booklist 21:341 Je '25

Reviewed by Percy MacKaye

Bookm 61:473 Je '25 80w

"Mrs. Shepard has been admirably discreet in her use of the lumberman's idiom. The language is simple and the grammar is bad, but they are naturally simple and bad and are never overdone. The book has all the flavor of real folk-lore."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 6 '25 350w

"This is authentic folklore, probably the one well-rounded folk tale America has developed. Its perusal, besides being good fun, neatly caps the point that American humor is at bottom exaggeration."

+ Ind 114:219 F 21 '25 90w

Reviewed by J. F. Dobie

Nation 121:237 Ag 26 '25 320w

"A most curious and fascinating book. The stories, at their height in the eighties and nineties, seem to be going out, but as a document of our American past it is extraordinarily interesting." Robert Littell

+ New Repub 41:234 Ja 21 '25 1050w

"If you want the Paul Bunyan cycle as lumberjacks tell the stories, with a humorous faith in them, with the smell of the white pine timber in them, Mrs Shepard is your author." S. P. Sherman

+ N Y Tribune p1 Ap 26 '25 1950w

Pratt p40 autumn '25

"Mrs. Shepard has compiled a cycle of Paul Bunyan stories as these are current among the lumberjacks even now; and her collection is a source-book and a record of a very high order. In setting down the stories as she has listened to them Mrs. Shepard has kept the pleasing, soft contractions and solid rhythms which belong to the vernacular, and has established the kind of meditative tone which invariably runs through the tales as they are told." C. M. Rourke

+ Sat R of Lit 2:81 Ag 29 '25 520w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p370 My 28 '25 60w

Wis Lib Bul 21:139 My '25

SHEPHEARD-WALWYN, HUGH WALLWYN. Spirit of the wild; with an introd. by R. Chalmers Mitchell. 220p il $4 Dodd
591.5 Animals—Habits and behavior

[25-4362]

Each of these twenty-two chapters is devoted to one of the smaller British mammals which the author has closely watched at work and at play. He describes the temperament, habits and traits of each—its peculiar individual characteristic. The spirit of Pan is exemplified by the squirrel, fussiness by the badger, craftiness by the fox, gluttony by the hedgehog, vulgarity by the vole, etc. There are forty illustrations from nature.

"At last a natural nature book! One without the Latin tags and formal dress that characterize many of the books on wild life; and, moreover, the stories here are told in an entertaining way that is suggestive of John Burroughs."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 16 '25 260w

"Filled with much readable and instructive material. But the point of the book is overstressed." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p420 My '25 120w

"A beautifully written book, which concerns itself with English animals from mus minutus to the lordly deer." H. B.

+ Lit R p10 Mr 14 '25 180w

"The author of this book possesses an unusual combination of qualities—a lively interest in and sympathy with animals, keen powers of observation, a facile pen, and a sense of humor. It is not surprising that they should have resulted in the most refreshing book on British mammals that we have read for some time. It is not that Mr. Shephard-Walwyn has anything really new to tell, so much as the arresting and interesting way in which he puts on record his keen observations of living animals, imparting to the reader some of his own enthusiasm for and sympathy with them."

+ Nature 115:941 Je 20 '25 280w

"The reader must not expect to find in these pages anything that will remind him of Hudson. But he will find in every chapter much close and loving observation, described with grace and beauty and charm of style, in the spirit of the raconteur."

+ N Y Times p21 My 31 '25 900w

Reviewed by L. S. Gannett

N Y Tribune p16 Ap 12 '25 350w

"About each species he tells delightful stories of how he found the creature, of its home, its recreations, its hidden ways. He does not make the creatures human—but most interestingly and surprisingly animalistic, and full of spirits. He gives, what many nature writers fail to give, definite characters to the wilderness folk he writes about." J. O. Swift

+ N Y World p6m Ap 26 '25 600w

"Delightful book inspired entirely by personal observation." Mary Webb

+ Spec 134:471 Mr 21 '25 200w

SHEPPARD, ALFRED TRESIDDER. Brave earth. 383p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d J. Cape]

[25-8115]

An historical novel of England in the sixteenth century. At sixteen Humphrey Arundell, son of a Cornish gentleman of goodly estate was betrothed to Elizabeth Fulford, an heiress, but a pious little prig, whom he hated. Then Humphrey was sent to France for several years to learn military and worldly science. When he returned to England to marry Elizabeth, Humphrey found England in the throes of the Reformation. By accident he rescued from the Carmelite convent Jacketta Coffin, his childhood's playmate and the girl he loved. Together they went to the ancient Chapel of the Templars which retained the privilege of marrying without banns and license and were married. Shortly afterwards Humphrey's father was stricken with apoplexy and to keep peace

Humphrey had to marry Elizabeth. And just as England stood bewildered between the old order and the new, so Humphrey did not know whether he had one wife or two.

"This book is an interesting attempt to study under the beloved present-day psychological microscope a child-marriage of the 16th century. As an experiment in form, in its general technical excellence and its fine evidence of a writer's style it succeeds."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 1 '25 320w

Reviewed by Edwin Muir

Nation and Ath 36:752 F 28 '25 300w

"A remarkable historical novel." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 25:286 Je 20 '25 30w

"A worse planned novel, with its emphasis utterly misplaced, this reviewer never read. Instead of saturation of materials in an art form, we have a compilation of erudition, and that rather dubious of fact, completely submerging the story interest. When the characters are not buried in history they are frustrated by plot."

+ N Y Times p12 J1 5 '25 780w

"There is solid merit in the tale, but it is to be discerned only fitfully, when the author drops his burden of erudition and thinks only of the quick emotions animating his people. There are too many archæological details of costume and contemporary allusions; or at least, they are unskillfully handled, they get in the way. Nevertheless, it is a brave attempt, presaging future success." Isabel Patterson

+ N Y Tribune p12 J1 26 '25 680w

"Let me recommend, to those who like historical novels, the admirable 'Brave Earth,' by Mr. Sheppard; it belongs to the best type of historical novel." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 139:247 Mr 7 '25 100w

"The style has obviously been carefully studied to fit the tone of the book. It is at once quaint and sophisticated, and although occasionally an over-working of the method leads only to unnecessary obscurity, it is on the whole successful and effective."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:51 Ag 15 '25 260w

Spec 134:644 Ap 18 '25 50w

"The description of the frenzy and agony of the revolt in which the tale culminates shows the fire of the author's historical imagination at its hottest; such microscopic flaws in accuracy as scholarship might detect in his narrative do nothing to chill its warmth. Mr. Sheppard has been uplifted throughout this noble and moving story by an energy of creative compassion. The fruits of it add to our treasury of romance."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p194 Mr 19 '25 700w

SHERIDAN, CLARE CONSUELO (FREWEN) (MRS WILLIAM SHERIDAN). Across Europe with Satanella. 216p il $3.50 Dodd [15s Duckworth]

914 Europe—Description and travel. Russia
—Description and travel 25-10486

Clare Sheridan and her brother crossed Europe by motor cycle and side-car in search of adventure. Their route led across Holland, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Russia, into the Crimea. Most of their time was spent in Russia where their chief interest was in the things newly created since the Revolution. Mrs Sheridan's story, which omits none of the incidents and accidents of the road, is a lively account of travel for the most part thru parts of Europe where living is primitive.

Cleveland p115 D '25

"Clare Sheridan is much alive, savoring the surface of life as a breeze ruffles a lake, penetrating no depths, creating no strong sensations in her readers' minds. Well dressed in body and soul, any effort to disclose a bit of the real flesh of life shows merely a petticoat of feeling." F: O'Brien

SHERIDAN, CLARE CONSUELO—Continued

Lit R p4 D 12 '25 500w

Reviewed by Silas Bent

— + N Y Times p5 Ag 30 '25 1800w

"Neither very deep nor very important, the volume nevertheless ranks well up with the current travel books."

— + N Y Tribune p12 S 20 '25 300w

"'Across Europe With Santanella' is a fine piece of reportorial writing enhanced by the charm and femininity of the writer's style."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:247 O 24 '25 250w

"A consistently merry and high-spirited book, written in a spontaneous, flowing, epistolary style."

+ Spec 134:643 Ap 18 '25 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p212 Mr 26 '25 800w

SHERIDAN, CLARE CONSUELO (FREWEEN)
(MRS WILLIAM SHERIDAN). Stella defiant. 303p $2 Greenberg [7s 6d Duckworth]

25-8544

"Stella, at the age of twelve had mastered the secret of life and death. She married at seventeen and proceeded to attract around her 'all that was most fantastic in Irish poets and modern artists.' Her husband died; she was sorry, but she hardly missed him, and married again. She began to paint rare pictures. Her 'uncompromising modernism' found expression in discussions of God, sex, and Communism. Her instinctive non-moralism supplied her with a bevy of cosmopolitan lovers. She moved in vicious and exalted circles and tasted all the joys and sorrows of artistic life in Berlin. And she found peace and contentment with a Turkish diplomat."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 22 '25 220w
Ind 114:359 Mr 28 '25 80w

"Mrs. Sheridan is wayward, paradoxical, witty, well-informed on world politics, and a tiny bit melodramatic. 'Stella Defiant,' however, is always amusing." J: W. Crawford

— + Int BK R p552 Jl '25 350w

"The book is full of incident, and deals with many types, though as a study of temperament it is hardly convincing."

— + Living Age 324:130 Ja 10 '25 150w

Reviewed by Dorothy Brewster
Nation 121:237 Ag 26 '25 250w

Nation and Ath 36:196 N 1 '24 170w

"Stella is a 'colorful' design, not a woman. And her wanderings make a contemporary pattern rather than a life history. For all that, the story is interesting; frank journalism, unspoiled by pompousness." Betsy Greenebaum

+ — New Repub 43:354 Ag 19 '25 250w

N Y Times p9 F 15 '25 650w

"Although vividly written, Stella leaves one very much the way her father wished her to be—cold. No matter how dreadful her experiences or how dark her future, she does not evoke any great outpouring of sympathy."

— N Y Tribune p10 Ap 26 '25 300w

"It must be said that for a first performance 'Stella Defiant' is unique. It is not promising!" Bruce Gould

— N Y World p6m F 8 '25 620w

Outlook 139:661 Ap 29 '25 30w

"Her story is written in an over-emphatic strain—no other, indeed, would go very well with its theme; but it would be unjust to represent it as mere incoherence and rant. Despite its absurdities, it is genuinely interesting and has in places a sort of distinction." Gerald Gould

— + Sat R 138:498 N 15 '24 320w

"Although she gives a convincing objective picture of her characters and their doings, she fails to convey to her readers an intelligible account of the mental processes which underlie their actions. The book, though not a great novel, is well worth reading for its vivid descriptions."

+ — Spec 133:790 N 22 '24 250w

"The story is clumsy and disjointed. While there is occasional vivacity of cynical talk, the style is deficient in fluency and color, let alone the finer requirements of description, and the efforts at shocking the reader are too crude either to shock him or excite his furtive sympathy or frank repugnance."

— Spring'd Republican p7a F 22 '25 200w

"It is difficult to believe in Stella; her lurid story is never allowed to descend from its pinnacle of intense passion into anything approaching human life."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 16 '24 250w

SHERIDAN, FRANCES (CHAMBERLAINE)
(MRS THOMAS SHERIDAN). The discovery; a comedy in five acts. 121p $2 Doran [5s Chat-to & W.]

822

25-17847

Mrs Frances Sheridan, 1724-1766, was wife of the actor, Thomas Sheridan, and mother of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the dramatist. She was also a novelist and the writer of two comedies, of which "The Discovery" is the more important. It was first produced in 1763 at the Drury Lane theater, with Garrick in the principal rôle, and it became one of his stock pieces. Aldous Huxley has adapted Mrs Sheridan's comedy for the modern stage and written an introduction.

"This is smart comedy written with the glint that had to be found in order to become acceptable. It suffers little in the adapting, and whether the reader suffers at all depends upon his predilections. Garrick declared it one of the best comedies he had ever read. Why review it further?" R. D. W.

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 21 '25 320w

"So subtly has Mr. Huxley's process of modernization been effected that one scarcely realizes where it begins and where it ends. The plot is at once very Huxleyan and very much of Mrs. Sheridan's day." Hugo Sonnenschein

+ Lit R p10 Ap 25 '25 300w

"It is a little difficult to see just how Aldous Huxley's changes in Frances Sheridan's once-famous play, 'The Discovery,' have adapted it for the modern stage." It still remains a rather typical eighteenth century comedy, but with the 'sentiment' taken out by Mr. Huxley and with considerably more grace and wit than belonged to most plays of its period." W. P. Eaton

N Y Tribune p9 Mr 8 '25 250w

"Surprising as it may seem, one is immediately interested, perhaps even fascinated, by the stilted speech of these elegant ancients who would no doubt be altogether terrified to find themselves set down in the flesh in this modern, mad world."

+ N Y World p4m F 1 '25 300w

"There is a great deal of freshness and charm about 'The Discovery' in its original form. The comic relief provided by the bickering Lord and Lady Flutter who become the warmest of lovers, and the affected but not vicious oddity of Sir Anthony Branville projected the play into immediate success."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:499 Ja 16 '26 420w

"Mr. Huxley has preserved for present and future readers the best of an eighteenth-century play which without him there must have been few to know and very few to love. For his alterations are not aimed only at pleasing modern taste, but also at giving form and style to that which lacked them."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p461 Jl 24 '24 1100w

SHERMAN, EDITH BISHOP. Mistress Madcap. 248p il $1.75 Doubleday

25-23370

"Mehitable and Charity, the two interesting young heroines of 'Mistress Madcap' lived during the thrilling days of the American Revolution. In the wild unsettled country near Trenton, N. J., where they made their home, many fascinating adventures happened daily. There were encounters with Indians and wild beasts, a stolen trip to New York by stage and a call from General Washington himself during the anxious and feverish battles of the Colonists for their liberty. Mehitable earned her nickname of Mistress Madcap as the result of her daring deeds for the battling suffering men in the camps of New Jersey."—Springf'd Republican

"Girls from eleven to fifteen, for whom this book is especially written, will look up from the pages only on pressure until the end. And older readers will like the story, too." E. I. F.
+ Lit R p8 D 26 '25 250w

Springf'd Republican p7a D 13 '25 100w

SHERMAN, STUART PRATT. Letters to a lady in the country, together with her replies; by Paul and Caroline. 232p $2 Scribner

25-23717

A Kentuckian in New York writes to a New York girl in Kentucky, who is married to one of his friends and living in his home town. As the correspondence progresses, the impersonal discussion of plays, books, current events and the weather gives way to a more personal note and the young people find themselves faced with the old triangular problem. Their attempt at a solution is perhaps unusual. The letters break off when at the husband's urgent invitation, the Kentuckian joins the couple in the country to work out their problem face to face.

Booklist 22:153 Ja '26

"Although these letters might not hold the interest steadily through the whole book, there is no doubt that they are the sort that one would enjoy picking up from time to time."

+ Bookm 62:617 Ja '26 150w

"The development of this almost purely intellectual philandering is told with a skill that is as undeniable as the lack of self-consciousness claimed by Dr. Sherman for the letters is doubtful. Fiction in the form of letters fell into disrepute precisely because of the lack of reality in such correspondence, and whoever Paul and Caroline may be, I am afraid they do not convince me, as they appear to have convinced their sponsor, that their letters are the 'profuse strains of unpremeditated art.'"—Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 115:587 N 21 '25 1200w

"The tone of the correspondence is so light that to read it is like eating a pleasantly spiced pastry. It would, however, be churlish to quarrel with a dessert because it was not substantial, and it is equally ungracious to dismiss a provocative and intelligent book because it is neither intense nor profound."—Babette Deutsch

+ Nation 122:65 Ja 20 '26 420w

"A series of singularly dull letters, which in skilled hands might have been made extremely interesting."

— Outlook 141:451 N 18 '25 350w

SHIPPEE, LESTER BURRELL. Recent American history. 554p il $3.25 Macmillan

973.8 United States—History—1865- 24-24849

"This study covers the history of the United States from the close of the Civil War to 1923. The primary emphasis is placed upon the events themselves, with so little discussion of personalities and policies that the narrative seems to deal largely with the externalities of history."—Am Econ R

"Such solicitous tenderness in the discussion of big business, the tariff, and foreign politics inevitably leaves the text colorless. The narrative is well proportioned and skilfully handled. It is withal a very useful book." A. P. U.
+ Am Econ R 15:95 Mr '25 100w

"The style of the book is serious, in places as a result of long paragraphs even a little heavy. One suspects that occasionally there are a few too many facts and names to be carried easily by the narrative. But to the American undergraduate for whose class-room use the book is manifestly prepared the above characteristics are excellences." T. C. Pease

+ Am Hist R 30:619 Ap '25 800w

Am Pol Sci R 19:428 My '25 30w

"A highly satisfying volume."

+ Bookm 61:102 Mr '25 140w

"Though Professor Shippee evidently has patience and carefulness as a scholar, and though he sees clearly enough the fundamental issues of our recent history, his power of presentation is slight. His narrative is colorless and his characterizations—such few as he indulges in—are not illuminating. The bibliographies are rather scant." N. W. Stephenson

+ Hist Outlook 16:178 Ap '25 400w

"Unfortunately Professor Shippee of the University of Minnesota has written about three-quarters of the book he might have written. His book will appeal to the reader who sees history only through the twin lenses of economy and politics. The human element, which is the only element in history that lives in the average mind, has been too much ignored. The book is vigorous enough. It has keenness in plenty and an impartiality that is cold and aloof."

+ Lit R p10 F 28 '25 220w

"The treatment is well balanced and quite without bias. Professor Shippee has prepared a thoroughly good textbook. Like most textbooks it is wanting in literary distinction and stimulating interpretations. One wishes that some chapters on intellectual and religious history could have been added and that the sections dealing with societal developments like the changes of recent decades in city and rural life could have been enlarged."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:636 Mr 28 '25 150w

"A racy narrative of American development since the Civil war. The usefulness of the volume for reference purposes or for consecutive reading is impaired by misprints and minor errors."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 11 '25 170w

SHIVELY, GEORGE. Initiation. 312p $2 Harcourt

25-4205

"'Initiation' is a story of John Malleon, a middle-Western youth, typical in his associations, contacts and ideals but much more introspective than the average youth. At college his father's early influence, which brewed skepticism, some aloofness and introspective scrutiny of life, stood him in good stead. The war, however, tested his philosophy, found it wavering, and then, as suddenly as he was thrown into it, he found himself back home facing all the familiar surroundings, including the girl he loved. Another conquest was before him—he must beat back to the old attitude, and the author brings the story to a dramatic close courageously and skilfully."—Lit R

Booklist 21:304 My '25

"Mr. Shively is a sound psychologist and an able delineator of character. Where in tracing the moral and intellectual growth of John Malleon, one false step would shatter the entire structure of the character and destroy the confidence of the reader, the author proceeds with infallible precision. His style is forceful, his observations sound." B. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 7 '25 550w

Ind 114:303 Mr 14 '25 70w

SHIVELY, GEORGE—Continued

"It is George Shively's first novel and, despite a few loose ends, is written in a style and with technique that is promising. He knows his war, knows his characters, and tells the tale with a vividness that frequently breaks through the slow-motion introspection and focuses its pathos, vigor and dramatic values." O. D. Russell

+ Lit R p10 Mr 7 '25 370w

"Mr. Shively is not without spontaneity and vigorous originality in spots. His tendency to inflate and overwrite may be outworn in time. A certain unimpugnable sentimentalism, however, is apt to intrude upon the most honestly conceived scene and distort it with ill-balanced generality."

+ — N Y Times p9 F 15 '25 950w

"His time sequence is chronological rather than logical, his scene merely geographical. Devoid of verbal beauty and a fresh approach to language, the style is prosaic throughout, with not a single distinguished sentence to break the monotony." Edwin Seaver

— N Y World p6m F 22 '25 300w

"Initiation,' like all novels, has its faults, and what will annoy one reader will please the next. There are portions of it which are touched with much more than a mere capacity for story telling. To anyone who has lived in Indiana, it will be good reading, if for no other reason, because of the fidelity of the picture. But then, there are a hundred photographers to one good painter." L. Bromfield

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:556 F 28 '25 850w

SIEGFRIED, ANDRE. Post-war Britain¹ (L'Angleterre d'aujourd'hui); tr. from the French by H. H. Hemming. 314p il $3.50 Dutton

330.942 Great Britain—Economic conditions. Great Britain—Politics and government [25-6052]

A French analysis of the great economic and political changes that have taken place in Great Britain during the ten years prior to the advent of the first Labor ministry, January, 1924.

Boston Transcript p8 D 19 '25 800w

"All readers of M. Siegfried will feel indebted to his penetrative lucidity even where they may not entirely agree with his conclusions."

+ — Living Age 324:498 F 28 '25 280w (reprinted from Sunday Times)

"An authoritative examination of post-war Britain." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 45:193 Ja 6 '26 230w

"Excellent work, at once learned and entertaining, which confirms an old opinion that the most illuminating studies of national life are to be produced by foreigners. By far the best study of the economic and political life of England within moderate compass that has appeared for many years." R. H. Tawney

+ New Repub 41:347 F 18 '25 850w

SIEVEKING, L. DE GIBERNE. Ultimate island. 340p $2 International pub. [7s 6d Routledge]

Christopher noticed the island on his first flight from London to New York. As his airship swept by high over it, his eyes were caught by a group of ships near the island, motionless as if chained in place. One of them seemed to be the missing yacht of Charles Starre whose disappearance six months earlier had caused a sympathetic stir in all London. Urged by his fiancée, June, and the missing man's mother, Lady Sorrell, Christopher undertook a rescue flight in a seaplane. The plane crashed on a rock as they were about to land, and the rescuers came to themselves in a hospital. With the plane smashed and their means of escape gone, their only hope lay in a carrier pigeon—and June. Meanwhile they were swept into the weird story of Ultimate island, sinister port of missing men, a fragment of the lost Atlantis.

"Mr. Sieveking seems to have been unable to make up his mind whether to write a 'scientific romance' or a third-rate shocker, and the result is something that tries to be both and succeeds in being neither. His best chapter is one in which is described a transatlantic flight—a vigorous and exciting piece of narration." Gerald Bullett

+ — Sat R 140:215 Ag 22 '25 120w

"In its sub-title this work is called 'a strange adventure,' but the strangest thing about it is that it should ever have been written."

— Sat R of Lit 2:324 N 21 '25 100w

"The author has tried to put too much into this short book. The development of each section of the story is scant, and the reader gets no picture of what is really the aim of the book—the description of the manners and customs of the inhabitants of the Ultimate Island."

— Spec 135:420 S 12 '25 120w

"Mr. Sieveking is versatile, and though there is no humour and but little sense of style in this book, it contains the material for an excellent yarn of adventure. Unfortunately, however, the author somewhat spoils it by endeavouring to link up with his main theme another and a very ordinary plot, abounding in situations of a crudely melodramatic description."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p497 J1 23 '25 250w

SILK, AGNES KAY, and FANNING, CLARA ELIZABETH; comps. Index to dramatic readings. 303p $5 Faxon

808.8 Recitations and readings—Indexes 25-26173

An index to twenty-five collections published during the last ten years in which are contained popular platform readings, including a large proportion of monologs and patriotic selections. Each reading is indexed by author, title and subject; by type of selection, as dialect, monologs, pathos, encores; and by occasion, as Armistice day, or Fourth of July. An index of first lines is added, which is made the more valuable by the inclusion of refrain lines.

"This new reference book will be of value to public readers, dramatic teachers and librarians. The book is well made."

Booklist 21:255 My '25

St Louis p351 S '25

"A very valuable aid, useful in meeting the constant demand for readings and recitations."

+ Wis Lib Bul 21:111 Ap '25

SIMPSON, BERTRAM LENOX. See Weale, P., pseud.

SIMPSON, MRS EVELYN MARY (SPEARING). Study of the prose works of John Donne. 368p $5 Oxford [15s Milford]

B or 92 Donne, John [25-7780]

"Miss Simpson's book is confined wholly to Donne's personality, his thought, his theology and the medieval and mystical elements inherent in his peculiar individuality. In a way, it is a profound book and it carries a double importance. First of all, there is the painstaking and thorough examination of Donne's intellect, and, in the second place, there is the series of some thirty letters and a sermon by Donne here printed for the first time."—N Y Times

Booklist 21:297 My '25

Boston Transcript p5 F 7 '25 320w

"Her materials are more comprehensive and inclusive than those of any of her predecessors and her conclusions are therefore in so far more reliable. There is common sense in all her dealing with the abstractions of her subject, and she does much to reconcile the seemingly irreconcilable elements in his character." J: J. McLaughlin

+ Lit R p10 My 2 '25 520w

"Mrs. Simpson's investigation is cast in the traditional academic mold and possesses in a high degree the virtues of its kind. The book becomes in every way indispensable to the student of Donne." Jacob Zeitlin

+ Nation 121:235 Ag 26 '25 150w

"It gives a sort of bite to the survey of the already printed work; and it is probable that such a survey will be of very great value to a considerable majority of readers—a majority which, if turned straight on to the 'Works,' might dwindle very sadly." G: Saintsbury

+ — Nation and Ath 36:473 D 27 '24 950w

New Statesman 25:138 My 16 '25 900w

"With a keenness of perception that is admirable and a deft coordination of various superficially antagonistic expressions she detaches Donne from his writings and draws a complete picture of the man's mind, his position as a man of letters, his importance as a theologian and his intellectual peculiarities as an exponent of medieval and mystical thought."

+ N Y Times p13 Ja 11 '25 2400w

"New light is welcome and Mrs. Simpson's book gives us much. Modestly called 'A Study of the Prose Works of John Donne,' as a matter of fact it adds to the Donne canon, for one sermon and some highly significant letters are here printed for the first time. As for the prose works in general, they are inaccessible (Alvord's incomplete edition of 1839 being now rare), but to say truth it is better to read what Mrs. Simpson says of them than to plough through the originals, many of which are but desperately ingenious exercises in theology." B. C. Clough

+ Sat R of Lit 1:522 F 14 '25 620w

"She has studied Donne more widely and more closely than Mr. Fausset; she has a greater sanity, a more open mind." Alan Porter

+ Spec 134:122 Ja 24 '25 800w

"Mrs. Simpson's survey is a clear, scholarly, and sensitive mapping out of this vast and in places hardly penetrable region, and erasure of the frequent Unexplored with which for the general reader it was studded because of its bulk and its inaccessibility."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p877 D 25 '24 3250w

SINCLAIR, MAY. Rector of Wyck. 258p $2.50
Macmillan [7s 6d Hutchinsons]

25-5616

In the rector of Wyck Miss Sinclair has created a clergyman who is the antithesis of the self-indulgent Canon Chamberlain in the "Cure of souls." John Crawford carries self-renunciation to its utmost limit. Martha Fenwick, who had vowed that she would sooner die than marry a parson, who had dreamed of a wonderful and adventurous life and a husband who did exciting things, before she knew it was in love with the young curate. They were married when John succeeded to the living of Wyck and during their thirty years of ministrations the parish was transformed from the worst in the county into one of the quietest and best-behaved. Maybe theirs were frustrated lives. Their daughter grew up a selfish prig and their son a dipsomaniac. They never satisfied their dreams of travel and they were always poor, but they lived a life of utter devotion to each other and their parish. It is a tender picture of marriage and the union of two souls.

"The story is episodic and fragmentary rather than full-bodied. Notwithstanding occasional artificiality, the chief merit of the novel is the terseness, swiftness, and effectiveness of the dialogue." A. S. Pier

+ — Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '25 450w

Booklist 21:385 Jl '25

"It is a story rich in human motives, and skilful in its presentation of them. It dissects the very heart and soul of married life. In outline it is a very conventional and almost a commonplace tale; in its revelation of the human soul it has a newness and an originality of which few novelists are capable, but in which Miss Sinclair again and again proves herself an expert. . . It is difficult to detect any false note in it, so logically does it follow its course from year to year, so definitely does it concentrate upon a typically small segment of life, so accurate is it in all its details, so impersonally does the novelist keep herself in the background. It seems almost like a biography, but a biography touched with imagination." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 14 '25 1900w
Cleveland p35 Ap '25

"As a gambling device, this theme has lost most of the element of excitement; one can usually guess the winning numbers. Miss Sinclair has clothed it with her accustomed good talk and insight, but the novel is among her minor efforts."

— Dial 79:259 S '25 80w

Ind 114:478 Ap 25 '25 30w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

Int Bk R p352 Ap '25 600w

"Miss Sinclair has written another excellent short novel on her favorite theme—frustrated human lives. An ironical, pitying novel, tragic in its every implication, and yet not bitter. . . The book has a noble simplicity and economy."

Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p3 Mr 14 '25 580w

"The Rector of Wyck' is in the spare tradition of 'Harriet Frean' and 'Anne Severn and the Fieldings.' Some readers may deplore Miss Sinclair's economy; but her economy is a result of the perfecting of her art. For, in few words, and with dialogue, she can put the breath of life into her people." Angus Burrell

+ Nation 121:121 Jl 22 '25 580w

"Miss Sinclair has wide understanding, undeviating sympathy, immense tolerance, sincerity, an obedient pen; yet 'The Rector of Wyck' is disappointing not only here and there, but, one sees on looking back on it, all through." Edwin Muir

— Nation and Ath 37:240 My 23 '25 200w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 42:243 Ap 22 '25 150w

"I doubt if Miss Sinclair has ever done better than this; there is not only not a dull page, there is not even a dull sentence, in her narrative." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 25:106 My 9 '25 150w

"Miss Sinclair has staked out her own share of that tragic frustration which seems to be a primary of the modern novelist's approach. There is never a hint of self-pity, however, or of that grandiose, conscious nobility which is another form of self-contempt. Her characters are gallant fighters to the end, and are lovers of life even at its bitterest. A lesser writer, in any instance, might have made satirical capital of her materials. 'The Rector of Wyck' particularly lends itself to sneers. Miss Sinclair's objective viewpoint and comprehensive sympathy make of it a tragi-comedy."

J: W. Crawford

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 8 '25 1200w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

N Y Tribune p4 My 17 '25 600w

"Miss Sinclair's lyrical intensity and her subtle tracking of motive are at her best in this novel. The little community in the Cotswolds is depicted more appealingly than ever, and the human drama in the home and the person of the Rev. John Crawford is an almost perfect achievement. . . 'The Rector of Wyck' is rich with pathos and pity and high wit and infinite understanding. It is one of Miss Sinclair's most beautiful and most significant novels."

+ N Y World p7m Mr 22 '25 400w

Reviewed by J. W. Crawford

N Y World p4m My 10 '25 120w

SINCLAIR, MAY—Continued

"A sound and sincere piece of writing, with little or nothing of that psychology of morbidity to which the author is inclined." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 140:68 My 13 '25 150w

"Those who were shocked by 'Anne Severn' and troubled by 'Harriett Frean' will probably be delighted with this quieter novel—and the others will ask for more salt. That any (except settlement workers who are roughly handled) will dislike 'The Rector of Wyck' is not likely. For all its quietness it is charged with the intensity of devoted lives." H. S. Canby

Sat R of Lit 1:595 Mr 14 '25 450w

Spec 134:850 My 23 '25 450w

Springf'd Republican p7a Je 28 '25 380w

"A very simple tale about very simple people, nearly all of whom are good and none of whom are really bad; a mild tale of human charity and pluck and endurance—and it 'comes off.'"

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p298 Ap 30 '25 520w

Wis Lib Bul 21:199 J1 '25

SINCLAIR, UPTON BEALL (ARTHUR STIRLING, pseud.). Mammonart; an essay in economic interpretation. 390p $2 The author, Pasadena, Cal.

814 Art. Literature 25-7504

A study of the artist in his relation to the property classes. On the assumption that consciously or unconsciously all art is propaganda, whether political, social, economic or religious, Mr Sinclair proceeds to explode the theory of Art for art's sake or for any other sake than that of the message and its form. He makes an iconoclastic attack on the old idols of literary and artistic criticism, and demands a reappraisal of art values for the present and new standards for the future.

"I am afraid 'Mammonart' will not make much of an impression on the young writer-to-be of 1925. But in the year 1935 or thereabouts, a boy of eighteen, who feels in himself the stirring of great powers, will turn the pages of this old book, found perhaps in his prowings in a second hand bookstore; and at the end of these pages, over which he will have laughed uproariously, and even perhaps unashamedly cried a little, and been stirred to the core of his heart, he will lift up his head and say: 'this is the stuff!'" Floyd Dell

+ Bookm 61:480 Je '25 1000w

"'Mammonart' would serve admirably as a socialistic text-book on literature. It is written with all the power and skill that we have come to anticipate in his writings. Whatever may be one's convictions concerning Socialism, this book must be read with entertainment and with admiration. The author's knowledge of literature is great; his interpretation highly original. Though he may fail to secure our agreement to his theories, he cannot but hold our interest. And though we may scoff, we must, at all events, think and think deeply." B. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p10 Mr 28 '25 900w

"Mr Upton Sinclair prophesies that Mammonart will soon be a text-book in Russia. The little Russians then, will be treated to a text-book which proceeds for no more than two pages without making twenty-two errors of fact. We believe it unnecessary to discuss the ethical values of a volume which has no critical ones."

— Dial 79:262 S '25 150w

"Mr. Sinclair has merely tried, and failed, to define 'What is Proletariat Art?' He deceives himself and his readers by carefully cooking his evidence so as to admit a Byron to the fold and reject a Goethe. Above all, he ignores the plain fact which would have saved him the trouble of writing the book, namely, that someone must 'own' the artist." Ernest Boyd

— Ind 114:418 Ap 11 '25 1350w

"Well-written, but absurd volume. He is frequently brilliant and epigrammatic and at great length attempts to demonstrate an axiom."

+ Ind 114:422 Ap 11 '25 150w

"At last Upton Sinclair has written a good book, and not merely a good book, but a most excellent book, a most admirable book, really a book that quite takes one's breath away. Why did he never do it before?" C. W. Thompson

+ Int Bk R p406 My '25 1900w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver

Lit R p7 Ap 11 '25 1050w

"This book attempts to prove a profound thesis in a superficial manner. It sensationalizes a critical principle of sound, sociological origin. Its purpose is brilliant, but its execution is crude. Unique and illuminating in theory, it is jazziest journalistic in practice." V. F. Calverton

— + Nation 120:440 Ap 15 '25 950w

Reviewed by J. D. Adams

N Y Times p12 Mr 22 '25 1950w

"As an irritant to provoke an examination of our parrot judgments upon established reputations it is remarkably valuable. As a 'history of culture and also a battle-cry,' the book is a burlesque. As a literary autobiography, after the order of D. H. Lawrence's 'Studies in Classic American Literature,' it is extraordinarily interesting, rich and vital." Raymond Weaver

+ — N Y Tribune p14 D 13 '25 1100w

Outlook 140:268 Je 17 '25 20w

Sat R 140:315 S 19 '25 100w

"Many of his judgments are necessarily warped by political obsessions; indeed, some are a trifle ridiculous in their obstinate materialism. Yet his book makes stimulating and entertaining reading. It must be conceded that he has the gift of summing up in a terse phrase a writer's characteristic quality."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p642 O 1 '25 360w

"Mammonart sheds a ray as keen and dramatic as lightning on the history of human culture. It will prove a tonic and quickening force." Helen Sahler

+ World Tomorrow 8:220 J1 '25 560w

SINCLAIR-COWAN, MRS BERTHA (MUZZY). See Bower, B. M., pseud.

SINEL, JOSEPH, comp. Book of American trade-marks and devices. 64p il $7.50 Knopf

608 Trade-marks 25-709

"The book," the compiler says, "is not a technical work on commercial designing; its purpose is to show marks that have ornamental significance as well as characteristic trade value, with the hope that it will prove a worthy influence in the creation of new marks, and in the adaptation of old ones. The majority of the reproductions are taken from the marks of less well-known organizations and individuals, for the reason that our national advertisers use marks that may have distinctive features, but which are frequently so devoid of design as to be positively ugly."

"Mr. Sinel's volume of trademarks is a distinguished piece of bookmaking, issued from the press of the Pynson Printers."

+ N Y Times p15 Ja 11 '25 280w

Reviewed by T. Craven

N Y Tribune p5 F 15 '25 580w

"The finest collection of its kind between boards. It proves beyond a doubt that Germany's leadership in this field of art is seriously challenged by Americans."

+ N Y World p9e N 30 '24 150w

"A beautiful book." E. E. Calkins

+ Sat R of Lit 1:446 Ja 10 '25 370w

SINGMASTER, ELSIE (MRS HAROLD LEW-ARS). Boy at Gettysburg. 202p il $1.75 Houghton

24-22814

Carl's grandfather was an abolitionist, and it was the boy's exciting privilege to feed and hide the dusky fugitives as they arrived in the night from the South. He longed to join the army, but was not old enough, and had to stay behind, envious and sad, when his best friend enlisted. But there were plenty of ways by which even a boy at home could help, and the trouble enough came to Carl, he had his reward when he heard at Gettysburg, his hero, Abraham Lincoln.

Booklist 21:117 D '24

Cleveland p10 F '25

"She has drawn with vigor and distinctness a period of profound interest to Americans. She has painted the true character of a sturdy and unpolished people with delicacy and understanding. She has enriched our children's bookshelves by adding a gallery of boys and girls, every one with a genuine, human personality." A. M. Jordan

+ N Y Tribune p6 Mr 1 '25 600w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:136 F '25

SINGMASTER, ELSIE (MRS HAROLD LEWARS). Bred in the bone, and other stories. 300p il $2.50 Houghton

Ten short stories of the Pennsylvania Dutch, giving glimpses of their usually quiet lives and their quaint religious customs. Contents: The truth; A sound in the night; A man in the house; The dreamer; The end of the world; Salt of the earth; The Amishman; Bred in the bone; The courier of the czar; Little and unknown.

"The appeal of the stories is increased rather than diminished by a second reading, should they have been read previously in the various periodicals where the greater number of them were originally published. The artist's name [Elizabeth Shippen Green] sufficiently guarantees the charm of the illustrations."

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 21 '25 450w

"Never for a second are these stories important or powerful. Even the best of them are unbrokenly quiet and homely. Whether they are interesting depends largely upon the tastes of the individual reader, for Miss Singmaster has elected to tell of people whose lives change little with the generations and are almost void of drama and variety. But the majority of them can at least be recommended as chronicles of wholesome people whose conversation has a piquant flavor and whose customs both tickle our humor and command our respect."

+ N Y Times p9 N 8 '25 550w

"In treating of the Pennsylvania Dutch Miss Singmaster reveals a first-hand knowledge of her subject. There is nothing about these short-stories of the outsider looking in; in speech, in manner, in outlook upon life, her quaint Ammonites stand revealed without exaggeration or overemphasis. When, however, melodrama invades the life of one of these folk, and imagination gets the upper hand of another, they seem less real."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:416 D 12 '25 200w

SISSON, EDWARD OCTAVIUS. Educating for freedom. (Modern teachers' ser.) 225p $1.40 Macmillan

370.4 Education. Democracy 25-5160

In these ten chapters the author, professor of philosophy in Reed college, Portland, Oregon, suggests some of the means the American teacher may use to kindle and keep burning the spirit of liberty in the hearts of young people. Contents: What is America? Refounding democracy; National aims in American education; Educating for freedom; Educating for union; Educating for patriotism; Educating for civic duty; Educating for world-order; The educative use of history; Abraham Lincoln and American education; Appendix; Index.

Cleveland p94 S '25

"Sisson is a master of his theme. The chapter on Lincoln and American education is a trumpet call. If you, after half an hour with this volume don't say 'why here's the book I've been looking for!' set me down a hopeless over-estimator of your intelligence." W. McAndrew

+ Educ R 69:270 My '25 620w

St Louis p338 S '25

Reviewed by J. D. Wolcott

School Life 10:160 Ap '25 130w

"The author possesses a very fluent and interesting style. In fact, both the style and the subject matter lead the reviewer to the conclusion that the book is inappropriate for use as a textbook. It creates too many exciting crises. However, it should prove very valuable and especially stimulating to teachers, possibly as a reading-circle book. As such, it will be recognized as a contribution." J. A. Nietz

+ School R 33:715 N '25 400w

SITWELL, EDITH. Troy park. 104p $1.75 Knopf [5s Duckworth]

821

"'Troy Park' is, without doubt, the most subjective of Miss Sitwell's volumes. It is, at times, actually autobiographical; the first poem reveals the author more fully than most self descriptions, 'Colonel Fantock' is even more definite, and those who know her brothers Osbert and Sacheverell will have little difficulty identifying them with 'Dagobert' and 'Peregrine.' ... Miss Sitwell's figures delight in outrageous colors and methodically mad hand-springs; she discloses herself frequently as a Mother Goose who is, at the same time, a sober symbolist and an impudent futurist. In her mingling of spiritual realities and visual distortions, she is the child grown up, innocently absurd, absurdly wise, tossing her incongruous images in the bewildered air."—Sat R of Lit

"Miss Sitwell is known as a radical poet; she is feared as an unintelligible one and fled as one whose satire, presumably, bites. How is it, then, that in 'Troy Park' she has been willing or able to deliver herself of lines transparently lovely?" Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 121:359 S 30 '25 600w

"Miss Sitwell's epithets, at times deft inventions forced into life by the exigencies of her technique, have often a fortuitous brilliance of their own which justifies them. Again she can look at leaves and shadow with the profundity of true emotional vision. It is only occasionally that her sincerity is to be doubted." Louise Bogan

+ New Repub 45:142 D 23 '25 650w

"'Troy Park,' [her] latest offering, contains enough charming matter to place it among the better volumes of verse of the season." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p7 My 24 '25 580w

"She is not a 'reliable poet.' What her verses most conspicuously lack is grace. Her lines have something of prettiness; but what she seems to be most concerned about is what she has to say, and is trying to say. She does not always succeed; and by this is meant both that she is not always sure of what she desires to say and not sure in her way of saying it when she is aware of her intention."

+ N Y Times p6 O 11 '25 220w

"Miss Sitwell has command over a perfectly authentic strain of poetry, and has written lines that shudder with a strange and comfortable kind of sadness. It makes one all the sadder that she should be content to strum so constantly on a single string, and strut so frequently in merely clownish trappings." Newton Arvin

+ N Y Tribune p11 N 22 '25 550w

SITWELL, EDITH—Continued

"The maze is full of color schemes, but sometimes it is a labor to untangle the yarn. What she cares most for are the design and the opportunity for fandango. And in fandangos she indubitably excels." W: R. Benét

+ — Outlook 141:674 D 30 '25 130w

Sat R 139:415 Ap 18 '25 320w

"Miss Sitwell's increase in communication of the emotions has not dulled her imaginative vigor. Her pages sparkle with observations that are both fantastic and exact. No one on either side of the Atlantic can surpass her verbal effects when she strikes the macabre note." L: Untermeyer

Sat R of Lit 2:367 D 5 '25 520w

"Miss Sitwell forsakes her Woolworthian muse for one more coherent and less garish; and then she recalls Barham, with his wit and speed, and his magical power of creating a macabre atmosphere. Her highly strung senses touch things and make them legendary, and she wanders quite bewildered, and as simple as a child." R: Church

+ Spec 134:936 Je 6 '25 120w

"Too much of Miss Sitwell's verse is dominated by stretching of the similitude at any cost; rhyme, rhythm, and grammatical sequence are as nothing to this preoccupation. A number of the pieces in this volume add nothing new to our knowledge of the poet. In some of the longer poems, however, such as 'The Child who saw Midas,' 'Colonel Fantock' and 'The Pleasure Gardens,' Miss Sitwell opens up an area of sensibility which previously had been rather neglected in her work."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p364 My 28 '25 720w

SITWELL, OSBERT. Discursions on travel, art and life. 310p il $6 Doran [15s G. Richards]

914.5 Italy—Description and travel

[25-10624]

The rambling reflections of a cultivated traveler in the heel of Italy, in Sicily, and in southern Germany, with a chapter on Fiume and d'Annunzio. The author has much to say of architecture and art and makes frequent digressions into history.

"He has wit and a certain generosity of writing, both of which qualities are brilliantly exhibited in his studies of D'Annunzio and King Bomba."

+ Dial 80:70 Ja '26 100w

"Through what fruitful and novel mazes you led your 'party,' Monsieur! Across the heel of Italy, to golden Lecce, to Amalfi and Padula, to the cities of the Phoenix, into Fiume, into Bavaria, meeting always great personages. I should never have learned so much that was interesting, amusing and easy to remember, if quite unimportant, had I gone with Mr. Cook's sons, or with Mr. Raymond." Grace Willard

+ Lit R p6 N 7 '25 2250w

"The book, we think, might, for unity, be improved by certain omissions, notably the chapter on 'Oranges in Mambie,' and 'Fiume and d'Annunzio.' They are rather too journalistic, and a little strident. It is ungrateful to grumble at all at a book that so well filled up a pitilessly rainy day, but it deserves criticism as literature. And Mr. Sitwell will not object. It is his declared hobby to unravel the curious minds of critics, and it is only fair to offer him amusement for a minute or two, in return for the hours of real pleasure he has afforded." Bonamy Dobrée

+ — Nation and Ath 37:271 My 30 '25 900w

"Mr. Sitwell is nearer the guide-book tradition, though he would be the last to admit anything so stuffy. But his detailed, and often very vivid, descriptions of buildings and places, lovely as some of them are, envious as we are of his having been there without us, give us the same school-child feeling as the government guide in a museum, or the precise solemnities of Baedeker." Robert Littell

New Repub 44:334 N 18 '25 850w

N Y Times p9 S 27 '25 680w

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons

N Y Tribune p15 D 13 '25 1550w

"His discursions upon travel, art and life are discursive enough to please the most volatile of readers. Very plentifully does he interlard the bread of information with the jam of lively interludes and temperamental outbreaks, of humorous reflections or quaint memories. Many of these discursions are highly amusing. Mr. Sitwell's dislikes are too many, and his methods of expressing them are too peevish to permit of his being an altogether agreeable traveling companion."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p348 My 21 '25 950w

SITWELL, OSBERT. Out of the flame. 95p $2 Doran

821

[25-16894]

"'Out of the Flame' is in two parts; the first chiefly contains poems built from moods where the poet is contemplating his own world of ideal beauty and energy; the second part is satirical, and Mr. Sitwell storms and gibes at the dull, cruel world of wealthy, powerful, and respectable people."—Lit R

Reviewed by L: Untermeyer

Bookm 61:704 Ag '25 80w

"Equipoise of form and content encountered once or twice and abundant sensibility are insufficient compensation for lack of sentence and rigour of form, in these fox-trotting, sometimes ribald, unmirthfully satiric nursery-rhymes."

+ — Dial 80:70 Ja '26 30w

"The succession of clear, bright images, the complete freedom from pedantry of these poems, the poet's intense love of beauty, vivid imagination, hatred of cant and stupidity, make 'Out of the Flame' one of the most stimulating books of poetry which have appeared in England since the war." R: Aldington

+ Lit R p4 D 29 '23 800w

Reviewed by Allen Tate

New Repub 43:270 Jl 29 '25 450w

"The greater part of Osbert Sitwell's book is taken up with satiric poems, and while some of them may not be poetry at all (in the sense of inspired work), they are always amusing and deft in their witty approximations." H. S. Gorman

+ — N Y Times p7 My 24 '25 450w

Reviewed by L. G. Marshall

N Y Tribune p9 My 24 '25 380w

"This new collection is characterized by that almost automatic facility in satire which [the author] has always shown; and it is written in the flickering tempo of living flame." G. H. Conkling

+ No Am 222:160 S '25 200w

"In Mr. Osbert Sitwell's new poems, the failures are of the same substance as the successes: the inspiration is genuine and individual."

+ Sat R 136:140 Ag 4 '23 350w

"A study of Mr. Osbert Sitwell's Out of the Flame reveals a strength in bulk unexpected in a writer whom those who admire him praise for elegance and satiric cleverness. . . His readers will congratulate Mr. Sitwell on a book which should lift him from the notoriety which he has (so much) enjoyed to a very real consideration as a poet." A. Williams-Ellis

+ Spec 131:162 Ag 4 '23 280w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p466 Jl 12 '23 360w

SITWELL, OSBERT. Triple fugue. 311p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d G. Richards]

25-16610

Satire is the chief element in these six short stories, satire often carried to the point of caricature. So keen and minute are the descriptions that the characters remain in the mind—a gallery of portraits. Four of the six are studies of senescence, the first, Low tide, being a story of two old maids at an English watering-place, whose heroic fight to keep up appearances ends in utter tragedy. Several of the stories are satires on London literary society and one is a grim murder story. Contents: Low tide; Friendship's due; The greeting; His ship comes home; The machine breaks down; Triple fugue.

Boston Transcript p4 My 6 '25 350w

Reviewed by Glenway Wescott

Dial 78:506 Je '25 620w

Ind 114:386 Ap 4 '25 30w

"Throughout all the tales the author maintains the objective, detached view-point of the true artist, and, for the method he has chosen, altho it is not the most artistic or the most effective of the several possible methods, they are skilfully done, and the characters are portrayed with fine artistry. An undertone of sardonic humor is manifest in them all." F. F. K.

+ Int Bk R p354 Ap '25 480w

"Mr. Sitwell, so it seems to me, is a typical example of that class of writers in whom intelligence and sophistication have so far exceeded vitality as to act as inhibiting forces. Taste has exacted the penalty which it always exacts of those who cultivate it too assiduously, and that penalty is sterility." J. W. Krutch

— Nation 120:496 Ap 29 '25 600w

"Mr. Sitwell has wit as well as wits, but his jokes seem sometimes a little forced. 'Triple Fugue' is much the best of the stories which make up the volume. The others lapse frequently into tedium, though, they have amusing interludes." F. H.

— + Nation and Ath 35:513 Jl 19 '24 380w

"Mr. Sitwell has tried to draw a gallery of 'Max' caricatures in print. There are some very clever strokes in these portraits, some amusing distortions, but the whole effect is painful and strained. The art of 'Max' is exquisitely clarified; Mr. Osbert Sitwell's requires filtering. His writing is like wine which might be a vintage of delicate flavour, but it has been shaken up, and it is full of bees'-wings and cloudy deposits. The kind of subjects which suit him best require a most delicate detachment, and that he has not yet attained." Desmond MacCarthy

— + New Statesman 23:497 Ag 2 '24 700w

"It is hardly worth while to analyze the faults of style and of method in this book, because they are so much less important and interesting than its merits, which are original. But one may point out that the attempt to create atmosphere by means of photographic description hardly ever succeeds, and that adjectives do not take the place of accents of color on a canvas." Filson Young

+ — N Y Times p8 Jl 20 '24 1050w

"Obviously rococo, and if the rococo is decadent, then decadent also these stories. Yet without the odium which usually attaches to the word. And of a stimulating literary flavor and quality one would like to meet with more often."

— + N Y Times p6 Mr 1 '25 2100w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

N Y Tribune p11 Mr 22 '25 600w

"Mr. Sitwell has more than brains—he has originality. Two of the six stories in this book—'Low Tide' and 'The Greeting' are works of genius, and of the particular genius which could have expressed itself in no other way. But praise of the rest of the book must be much qualified. There is a wilderness of pointless satire on contemporary movements and personalities, some of it so feeble, as to leave one gasping at the thought that a man as brilliant as Mr. Sitwell should have troubled to write it down." Gerald Gould

— + Sat R 137:670 Je 28 '24 300w

"Mr. Osbert Sitwell is one of the very few effective satirists in contemporary England.

This new excursion into prose proves that he is a worthy successor in that tradition of witty writing, practised in their different styles by Oscar Wilde, Bernard Shaw, and Max Beer-bohm." R: Aldington

+ Sat R of Lit 1:4 Ag 2 '24 270w

"Hardened satirist though he is, Mr. Sitwell descends too far into the arena and becomes, at times, indistinguishable from the objects of his dislike. The general effect of his book is turbulent, colourful and vague; Victorian in its exuberance, Victorian in its rich, heavy and often beautiful ornamentation; but scarcely Victorian in spirit." L. P. Hartley

— Spec 133:102 Jl 19 '24 550w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p386 Je 19 '24 580w

SITWELL, SACHEVERELL. Thirteenth Caesar. 112p $2 Doran [6s G. Richards]

821

[25-3580]

"Mr. Sacheverell Sitwell's poetry, with its queer mixture of flow and intricateness, has an exciting quality. Clearly it is not written for the mere love of words or music, although the allurements of words and rhythms which answer or prolong each other influences his verse. He writes much rather, one would say, out of an inner fire for certain feelings and aspects of things; and these are repeatedly the things of nature. Through most of this book the sun and the wind, leaves and water, dance in a golden radiance or in a shadow like gleaming, rustling elements."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by L: Untermeyer

Bookm 61:704 Ag '25 80w

"Although impact and clarity are sometimes sacrificed to opulence of method and of content, the reader is obdurate who can resist the charm in this cosmography of Mr Sitwell's."

+ — Dial 79:433 N '25 100w

Reviewed by Allen Tate

New Repub 43:270 Jl 29 '25 450w

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman

N Y Times p7 My 24 '25 360w

Reviewed by L. G. Marshall

N Y Tribune p9 My 24 '25 300w

Reviewed by G. H. Conkling

No Am 222:161 S '25 50w

"Read here and there in a magazine Mr. Sitwell's verses have a bizarre interest, but when one is confronted by 112 pages of verbal contortions with such economy of idea, of emotion, of philosophy (and very often of sense, as in 'Snow and Wind') one feels hurt by the dullness so unkindly thrust upon us." A. E. Coppard

— Sat R 138:496 N 15 '24 500w

"I find in Mr. Sitwell, not merely a 'maker,' but one who has already 'made' successfully. His verse is entitled to its freedom, because, like a bird in flight, it is constantly stating motion in terms of thought." Humbert Wolfe

+ Spec 133:783 N 22 '24 380w

"Most of his verse flows on, with swift, dream-like changes which on the whole save it from monotony. Certain words, images, and cadences tend to recur, but they do not blot out the main impression of inventiveness and buoyancy. We cannot tell how much of the vision will remain with us, but we feel that Mr. Sitwell has spirited us into a nimbler element and reminded us that beauty is a living flame which can always be renewed in poetry."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p704 N 6 '24 1200w

SKELTON, MRS GLADYS. See Presland, J.; pseud.

SLATTERY, CHARLES LEWIS. William Austin Smith. 244p $2.50 Dutton

B or 92 Smith, William Austin 25-4933

William Austin Smith, 1872-1922, was an Episcopal clergyman, who found the supreme work of his ministry in the editorship of the Church-

SLATTERY, C. L.—Continued

man of which he made a great liberal church weekly. The 79-page biographical sketch by his friend, Bishop Slattery, is hardly more than an introduction to the nine essays chosen to represent Dr Smith's work. Among these is included his War and the churches, a powerful indictment of war and a call to the church to take stand against it.

"Bishop Slattery is fitted, as few men could be, to write the biography of a person who, to judge from his writings, was evidently a composite of Savonarola without the intolerance, Saint Francis with a little more common sense, and perhaps old Erasmus who laughed at life so long a time ago." I. W. Lawrence
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 14 '25 1000w

"After giving us the brief but sufficiently told story of a great life, Bishop Slattery introduces his readers to the monumental thought of the subject of his book. I commend to those who would know what is the real spirit of the Protestant Episcopal Church a careful reading of the brilliant essays of William Austin Smith." Robert Norwood
+ Lit R p2 N 21 '25 420w

"This sketch gives the outlines of his life sympathetically and concisely, quotes frequently from his letters, and concludes with half a dozen papers and sermons, which give the flavor of a lucid pulpit style—a style possessing dignity without rhetoric."
+ N Y Tribune p10 Ap 12 '25 250w

"Bishop Slattery has written a capital character sketch and appreciation of his friend the late Dr. W. A. Smith, and has selected short papers from Dr. Smith's writings which admirably bring out his vivacity and force."
+ Outlook 140:434 J1 22 '25 100w

SLOANE, WILLIAM MILLIGAN. Greater France in Africa. 293p il $3 (12s 6d) Scribner
916.4 French in Africa. Morocco. Algeria
25-360

For descriptive note see Annual for 1924.

Reviewed by G. F. Andrews
Am Hist R 30:648 Ap '25 450w
Booklist 21:193 F '25

"Dr. Sloane's views on French North African problems are often shrewd and unbiased, but, for the most part, he leaves it to his readers to form their own conclusions from the well-marshaled data he sets before them which bear evidence of tireless research and exceptional observation. The book is replete with vivacious description and many unfamiliar facts about religion, art, manners and morals of the people, vivid pictures of life in desert and town—striking pen portraits, too, of Moorish princes and French officials." Sherril Schell
+ Lit R p16 Ja 17 '25 400w

"Mr. Sloane's work scarcely pretends to be more than introductory. It is the result of a five weeks' tour of Morocco and Algeria carried out by him as a member of the group of Americans invited by the Committee France-America. Its value as the study of an independent observer is diminished by the fact, which he quite frankly admits, that the party in the time at their disposal had little opportunity for seeing anything but what the French authorities wanted them to see. On the other hand, the conditions in which the tour was carried out gave Mr. Sloane and his colleagues quite unusual facilities for investigating at first hand the French administrative system in North Africa; and it is in its appreciation of this system that the main value of the book consists."
+ New Statesman 24:542 F 14 '25 600w

"He gives the reader a very beautiful vision of Northern Africa, but he leaves him a little concerned for the future. While France has need for workers and recruits for her armies, she will have a permanent interest in the Africans. It is also safe to say that when her economic aspirations near fulfillment she will have a permanent interest in Africa." T. J. C. Martyn

+ Sat R of Lit 1:494 Ja 31 '25 600w

"Mr. Sloane's unofficial observations are often charming though spoiled at times by a flowery style. He has an eye for beauty in native architecture and gives a good picture of natural beauty as well." Alpha Buse

+ Survey 53:611 F 15 '25 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p696 N 6
'24 700w

SLOSSON, EDWIN EMERY. Sermons of a
2 chemist. 319p $2 Harcourt

252 Sermons 25-21786

These lay sermons take their texts from the Bible and their illustrations from Dr Slosson's experience as a chemist and popularizer of science. He defines religion as the "spiritualization of daily life" and this idea underlies his refreshingly sensible discussions of practical religious questions. The religious essentials brought out on his discussions are always strengthened and clarified by the scientific tests which he applies.

"The scientific mind is seen at work through accurate but not too technical language; and there is a fine simplicity of style. It is indeed well to have these sermons available to readers needing the semi-scientific atmosphere—and they hold potentialities of rare helpfulness for many others." W. J. C.

+ Bookm 62:xviii Ja '26 220w

"Every preacher ought to read these sermons and see how a layman does it. He gets right into his subject and wastes no time on preliminaries. He is always sure of his facts and his illustrations never limp."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 16 '25 250w

"His book should help to illuminate for many intelligent people, who are disturbed by the statements that there is a conflict between science and religion, points which have been the centers of such contention. The author brings common sense to bear upon religious questions and presents his conviction that the purpose of religion is to spiritualize daily life."

+ Ind & Eng Chem 18:107 Ja '26 320w

"Perhaps the most noteworthy feature of the book is the sturdy common sense which the author brings to bear on religious questions."

+ N Y Times p12 N 15 '25 320w

"It is not a deep book. It accepts the status quo . . . But as intelligent factual ethics, as common sense in an emotional traditional recitative, it is a vigorous breath of fresh air. No minister can possibly ignore it; and the layman who does is getting out of touch with the trend of thought, and, besides, is missing a lot of fun, as Slosson himself says of relativity." G. L. Wendt

+ N Y Tribune p22 D 13 '25 580w

"If more of our scientists could display in words the rich humanity and the philosophy of life which they possess and which Dr Slosson is so capable of setting before us in a delightful manner, perhaps the melancholy controversy of Dayton would never have occurred. Let every preacher willing to use modern ammunition turn to such a book as 'Sermons of a Chemist' to replenish his cartridge belt."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 D 29 '25 480w

SMALL, AUSTIN J. Pearls of desire. 300p $2
Houghton [7s 6d Heinemann]

25-9295

"Peter Langard, Trouble Maker" so does his card accurately describe this debonaire gentleman adventurer, who with his bosom friend, Cardinal, a hardy sailor, arrives at Espiritu Santo in the nick of time to save a South Sea island prince and princess from the abuses of a planter whose lordship there was undisputed. As a reward Langard is given a map indicating the hiding place of vast treasure—the pearls of desire. And in his search for these pearls Langard discovers even greater treasure—a beautiful white woman on a lonely island. The end of the quest finds Langard half-way across an ocean on a barren island, the pearls of desire in his possession, and Lona more precious than hidden treasure.

Boston Transcript p5 J1 3 '25 600w

"This is an excellent adventure story."

+ Nation and Ath 36:532 Ja 10 '25 200w

"Mr. Small employs a breezy, swaggering style which fits this sort of fiction. He goes the whole length, tells a riotous story and gives his readers a melodramatic banquet. It looks good, but is hard to swallow and harder yet to digest."

+ — N Y Times p8 Je 21 '25 360w

"A yarn full of colorful maritime lingo, exciting episodes and everything that goes with a hunt for pearls and a heroine."

+ N Y Tribune p9 Je 28 '25 150w

Sat R of Lit 2:90 Ag 29 '25 80w

"Pearls of Desire is no better than a good magazine story. But, after all, we like something to stir the blood on a winter's night; and for my part I would sooner read a careless, impossible, heartening narrative than a commonplace, indistinct 'work of art.'" Andrew Carey

Spec 133:952 D 13 '24 520w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p8 Ja 1 '25 500w

SMALL, MRS CASSIE PAINE. How to know textiles. 374p il $1.56 Ginn

677 Textile industry and fabrics 25-10171

"A volume intended primarily for high school and college classes, by a teacher experienced in retail store as well as school work; includes information regarding production, manufacture, and trade, but keeps in mind throughout the point of view of the consumer; includes illustrations, practical suggestions for teachers, glossaries of materials and terms, and an abundance of bibliographical helps."—J Home Econ

"Although designed as a text for students in high schools this book will be useful in both public and school library. The subject is well covered, the raw materials, their manufacture and use are considered, and the material is well arranged and indexed."

+ Booklist 22:16 O '25

"The stories of silk, linen, wools, worsteds and cotton are educational as well as interesting. A most suggestive chapter discusses interdependence of many countries, and the effect that disturbance or disaster would have on the trade."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 2 '26 180w

J Home Econ 17:520 S '25 80w

SMALL, SIDNEY AYLMEYER. Boys' book of the earth; the story of the earth from the beginning. 281p il $2.50 Dutton

550 Geology. Earth 24-24875

The author and co-author of other books of science for boys sets out at a brisk pace to tell the story of the earth. He writes as he would talk in the classroom, using the boy's own idiom, illustrating his point with simple, telling comparisons drawn from everyday life.

Booklist 22:37 O '25

"He is one of a group of teachers who would reduce long words to understandable English, his entire book being written in language that any boy can understand. Another excellent feature of this book is its lack of complex figures, easy comparisons being made so that the poorest student will see the likeness."

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 15 '24 150w

"The resources of the American Museum of Natural History have been drawn upon for illustrations. In spite of an easy, even slangy, style, assumed undoubtedly in the persuasion that boys will be attracted by informality, the substance of the book is scientific and in accord with recent discoveries and conclusions." A. M. Jordan

+ N Y Tribune p6 F 15 '25 150w

"A worthy addition to the present literature. The book should prove valuable to teachers of general science and biology. It can be used satisfactorily as supplementary reading in connection with these subjects. It will also be of interest to adult readers." W. L. Beauchamp

+ School R 33:476 Je '25 160w

SMALL, SIDNEY HERSCHEL. Both one. 302p $2 Bobbs

25-19828

This is the story of a love that endured in spite of differences in race and religion. Peter was a Jew. The small boys who were his schoolmates in Santa Lucia, taunted him about it everywhere, in school and on the street. For himself Peter didn't mind, but for Paula whom he secretly, shyly loved even then, he couldn't bear it. He did not want her to be linked with some one the boys poked fun at. By the time they reached high school Paula had openly championed Peter, and their love was a consciously shared bond. They married early, before Peter finished college, and moved to New York. There they met again the old antagonism and dislike, conquered readily enough as people came to know how fine Peter was. All that came to them, both of grief and of joy, drew them closer because they really loved each other. Their married life proves the author's hypothesis that nothing can separate two who are ideally mated.

"With all its comprehensiveness there is nothing of the survey about 'Both One,' and nothing of the tract. The author lays his emphasis upon the romance he chronicles. If the reader doesn't follow freely along to the consummation which the novel devoutly wishes—the blurring of racial differences, the destruction of dividing walls—well, Mr. Small sees to it that divergence of opinion need not interfere with complete enjoyment of the story as such."

+ N Y Times p16 N 15 '25 500w

"This is a very fine book within its scope. So it is easy, for the pleasure of reading it, to grant Mr. Small his hypothesis and his conclusion. The fact is you can lose sight of both as you are carried along on a charming and well-told narrative. The episodes are carefully chosen."

+ — N Y Tribune p11 N 29 '25 350w

SMALLWOOD, WILLIAM MARTIN; RE-
2 VELEY, IDA LOUISE; and BAILEY, GUY
A. New biology. 704,37p il $1.60 Allyn

570 Biology 24-29982

"Excellent elementary text dealing with the fundamental functions of living things. Studies the applications of biologic principles to animals, plants, and man."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:550 N '25

"The nature and the scope of the book make it of great value both for the general reader and for pupils in junior and senior high schools." O. D. Frank

+ School R 33:154 F '25 320w

SMEDLEY, CONSTANCE. See Armfield, C.

SMITH, MRS ALICE (PRESCOTT). Kindred. 344p $2 Houghton

25-14514

At the time of the struggle between France and England for the possession of Canada, John Sargent goes out to sway, if he can, the Iroquois Indians to the side of the English. That is his first object. The second is to recover a ring, a treasured family heirloom, given in spite by his wife to her half-sister. Since his wife's death the half-sister has married and is now in Canada. In the wilds of the Canadian frontier Sargent meets with strange and stirring adventures. His convictions change. He gives up the first quest, and at the moment of success in the second, is content to relinquish that too.

SMITH, ALICE—Continued

"'Kindred' is a diverting tale with not too top-heavy a moral consideration."

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 9 '25 650w

"Imprisonment, escapes, disguises and all the vicissitudes of life and love in the wilderness contribute to the fascination of this exceptional novel."

+ N Y Tribune p13 S 13 '25 150w

"There is much that is individual and of interest in this novel. An absence of melodrama and a quiet natural style lend sincerity and tone to what would not perhaps otherwise stand out from a usual type."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:300 N 14 '25 160w

"Its persons and incidents are stimulating, the tale has individuality, the 'color' and 'atmosphere' reveal freshness and novelty."

+ Springfield Republican p7a S 20 '25 100w

SMITH, BRUCE. State police; organization and administration. 281p $2.50 Macmillan

353.9 Police, State 25-18255

"This volume is a study of American state police forces. . . It is concerned primarily with the organization, administrative methods, and statutory powers of those forces. It deals with the position of the police in state administration, their jurisdiction, the powers delegated to the administrative head, the direction, control, compensation and welfare of the rank and file, the distribution of patrol units and the patrol methods which are employed, criminal investigation, identification and crime prevention."—Preface

"An excellent account."

+ R of Rs 72:559 N '25 60w

"A first-hand investigation of the existing state police systems, as well as a comparative record of their accomplishments."

Springfield Republican p10 D 2 '25 300w

"It is a most lucid and terse account." H. McD. C.

+ Survey 55:261 N 15 '25 160w

SMITH, C. HAROLD. Rahwedra; a true romance of the South Seas. 214p il $2.50 Appleton

919.31 Maoris. New Zealand 25-22582

An English youth is separated from his companions and lost in the New Zealand bush. He comes upon a Maori village and fascinated by the prospect of living with the natives in their own haunts, remains for several weeks. The book tells of his love for Rahwedra, loveliest of Maori maids, and of the strange things she taught him about her people and their primitive beliefs.

"As, like the American Indians, the Maories are rapidly disappearing, Mr. Smith's memories have value as well as appeal, revealing as they do picturesquely barbarous customs and recounting ancient traditions already neglected when not entirely forgotten." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 24 '25 900w

"Owes nothing to O'Brien or even to Dr. Traprock, that celebrated explorer of the South Seas. It is well done. This is almost a very good book; it misses distinction by a narrow, but definite, margin."

+ Ind 115:396 O 3 '25 80w

"A refreshing romance of the South Seas." H. Y. Clawson

+ Lit R p5 N 14 '25 260w

"He has written pleasantly. But not 'a new and startling vision of the South Seas.' Simply a reverie of adolescence. Hazy recollections of a few months among a cultured tribe of Polynesians, whose real ideas or language he did not penetrate." F. O'Brien

+ Lit R p4 D 12 '25 300w

"This is a boy's memory of New Zealand, agreeably written, and the romance though real, was short. It gives a charming note of tenderness to the narrative, which readers will find of more than passing interest, giving as it does an intimate view of the majestic Maori people as they appeared to young eyes half a century ago."

+ N Y World p7m N 29 '25 100w

"The account of the romance has beauty, and the whole book is unusually vivid reminiscence."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:438 D 19 '25 60w

"The book is utterly trivial."

—Springfield Republican p5a O 18 '25 150w

"The actual substance of the tale is very slight, and rather obvious moralizing occupies a good deal of space, but the author's evident candour makes it readable."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p758 N 12 '25 180w

SMITH, CICELY FOX. Return of the Cutty Sark. 63p il $1.25 Lauriat [3s 6d Methuen]

910.4 Cutty Sark (ship) [25-9647]

"The Cutty Sark,' was built fifty-five years ago. For years she was engaged in the China tea trade without special fame, but it was under Captain Woodget, at the respectable age of fifteen, when she had taken up Australian traffic, that she showed her full powers. Miss Fox Smith tells the stirring story of her rapid voyages, of her races, of the storms in which she was supreme, with energy and enthusiasm." —Nation and Ath

Boston Transcript p6 Ja 21 '25 900w

"The story is well worth reading, and Miss Fox Smith has the nautical learning which does so much to substantiate the high romance of the story itself."

+ Nation and Ath 36:504 Ja 3 '25 320w

"All lovers of the sea will welcome this little biography of one of the famous old tea-clippers."

+ Sat R 139:14 Ja 3 '25 120w

Sat R of Lit 1:716 Ap 25 '25 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p26 Ja 8 '25 180w

SMITH, CICELY FOX. Ship alley, more Sailor town days. 197p il $2 Houghton

914.21 London—Docks. Seafaring life 25-26251

Ship Alley is the "street with the sea at the end of it" and it is the characteristic quality of these streets that lead to the sea that Miss Fox Smith's book describes. Most of the chapters relate to London's dockland—Stepney and Limehouse, sailors' inns and sea cooks, the changing Thames-side, Trinity House and its associations, figure-heads and ship models and the house flags of the famous shipping companies. There are chapters also on two other seaports—King's Lynn and Norfolk.

Booklist 21:297 My '25

"It is written charmingly, with deep appreciation and love for all these memories of the sea. The book is of the sort which must be either wholly delightful or quite uninteresting. In this case there can be no doubt at all of its delightful character."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Mr 4 '25 420w

Ind 115:24 Jl 4 '25 60w

"She writes with an infectious enthusiasm and a knowledge that enriches her treatment with many out-of-the-way scraps of half-forgotten nautical lore. But it is always the ships themselves, and the men who owned and sailed them, that form her real subject."

+ Nation and Ath 36:722 F 21 '25 450w

"Pleasant gossip of things long dead. The genuineness and the authenticity of 'Sailor Town Days' and 'A Book of Famous Ships' are there, but the brisk saltiness and humor are wanting. The swift, entertaining narratives are likewise gone. Perhaps the sea chest of salty material on which Miss Fox Smith has drawn has now been emptied of its best, and she would do well to wait until the un-failing gods of sea romance provide a fresh supply." H: Beston

+ — N Y Tribune p9 Mr 8 '25 470w
"Charming little book."

+ Outlook 139:586 Ap 15 '25 120w
Pratt p30 autumn '25

Sat R 139:141 F 7 '25 150w

"The book is full of delightful bits of information about sailors' curios (and how the ship does get into the bottle) or sea cooks, and there are many strange tales of disasters and mysteries at sea, for which the landsman—regardless of his feelings on his next sea voyage—always has a morbid taste."

+ Spec 134:416 Mr 14 '25 110w

"The sketches are slight, but they have the charm of their subjects. Where the substance is tenuous, the spirit and the pleasant language still lure the reader—if the reader is a devotee of ships."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 25 '25 400w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p90 F 5 '25 400w

SMITH, EDGAR LAWRENCE. Common stocks as long term investments. 129p $1.50 (6s 6d) Macmillan

332.6 Stocks. Investments 24-31298

The writer of this book challenges some of the traditional theories of conservative investment. From careful comparative tests of a number of groups of common stocks and bonds during a twenty-year period he reaches the conclusion that the investor in common stocks came out far ahead of the investor in bonds, not only in income, but in the market value of his holdings at the end of the period. He gives the reasons back of his findings and for favoring a diversified list of common stocks in sound companies of good credit instead of bonds.

Reviewed by M. N. Nelson.

Am Econ R 15:326 Je '25 720w
Booklist 21:260 Ap '25

"While the writer of this review is in sympathy with Mr. Smith's contention that the investment possibilities of common stocks have been overlooked, he is inclined to question the advisability of accepting Mr. Smith's conclusions upon the basis of the studies he has made. The little volume represents an immense expenditure of time and energy, and will be welcomed by all students of investment problems." J. R. Jackson

+ — J Pol Econ 33:689 D '25 760w

Management and Adm 9:188 F '25 120w
Outlook 139:118 Ja 21 '25 20w

"Few business books on their issue have awakened such interest in the financial world as 'Common Stocks as Long Term Investments.' It is decidedly worth study."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 13 '25 180w

SMITH, ERNEST ALFRED. Platinum metals. (Pitman's common commodities and industries) 123p il $1 (3s) Pitman

671 Platinum 25-12390

An historical summary of platinum and the lesser known metals associated with it, its mining and metallurgical treatment, its physical and chemical properties and its industrial uses.

"A useful little work upon platinum and the metals associated with it, though it must be admitted that the latter received but little, most people will probably say too little, attention. Some of them, such as iridium and palladium, deserve considerably more consideration than the book before us has given to them. Upon the whole the work may be described as accurate, although the author has not availed himself so fully as he might have done of previously published and readily available information."

+ — Nature 116:275 Ag 22 '25 300w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:24 Ap '25

The Times [London] Lit Sup p143 F 26 '25 80w

SMITH, GERALD BIRNEY. Principles of Christian living. (Univ. of Chicago publications in religious education. Handbooks of ethics and religion) 212p $2 Univ. of Chicago press [10s Cambridge univ. press]

171.1 Christian ethics 25-818

A textbook of Christian ethics by the professor of Christian theology in the divinity school of the University of Chicago. The book is intended to help students apply in the realm of Christian conduct the same method which is becoming current in our modern social life and to indicate some of the chief questions which challenge Christian idealism today.

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 10 '25 230w

"He briefly, but openly and fairly, analyzes such problems as Sabbath observance, church unity, birth control, amusements, the distribution of wealth, war, and internationalism. His solutions for these ethical issues are stated in an interesting, instructive, and inspiring manner. The book will not satisfy a student who would acquaint himself with the intricacies of moral theory, but it will admirably serve one who desires to obtain the results of ethical scholarship in a plain and practical form." D. L. Evans

+ Int J Ethics 35:448 Jl '25 480w

"The skilful teacher is in evidence in the arrangement of the volume, and it will appeal to teachers who have long looked for a useful work in this field. The pastor who is awake to the value of an ethical teaching in the pulpit that is more than exhortation will find rich materials here, and the thoughtful reader will be equally attracted to a volume whose orderly discussions do not preclude most interesting and suggestive treatment." H. F. Rall

+ J Religion 5:200 Mr '25 360w

SMITH, JOHN MERLIN POWIS. Prophets and their times. (Univ. of Chicago publications in religious education. Handbooks of ethics and religion) 277p $2.25 Univ. of Chicago press

224 Prophets 25-6864

The prophets set themselves the task of interpreting the history of their times in terms of God. Their message, then, is only completely intelligible against its historical background. In his study of what the prophets did for Israel, and thru Israel for humanity, the author gives this background in detail, noting and explaining chronological discrepancies in the text.

"Professor Smith is a reliable interpreter that one can follow with confidence." T. J. Meek

+ Am Hist R 31:104 O '25 550w

"Adheres strictly to the most recent interpretations of the Bible and is on the whole more factual than inspirational. Very useful for young students."

Booklist 22:7 O '25

Boston Transcript p4 Je 10 '25 280w

J Religion 5:441 Jl '25 40w

"With the book as a whole the reviewer finds himself in most hearty agreement. Those who have themselves attempted to condense the results of a hundred years of highly specialized investigation into a form unburdened with professional technicalities yet at the same time accurate and thorough will understand the enormous difficulties with which such a work as Professor Smith's has to contend, and will ap-

SMITH, J. M. P.—Continued
 prelate how successfully he has triumphed over them and presented to the reader an authoritative picture of one of the most important developments of the human spirit." Kemper Fullerton

+ J Religion 5:433 J1 '25 680w

Reviewed by S. P. Sherman
 N Y Tribune p3 Ag 9 '25 400w

"The author's familiarity with the field is attested by his earlier books and articles and is evident from his treatment of the theme in the several chapters of the present publication. He is in touch with recent commentaries and histories and embodies some new data such as the changed date of the fall of Nineveh. (His dates for the later Greek period should have been more carefully verified or else omitted entirely). He refers also to the interesting new departures into the investigation of prophetic psychology, but makes no fresh adventures of his own in this direction." H: J. Cadbury

Sat R of Lit 1:776 My 23 '25 660w

"Each new find has its importance and makes necessary modification in our interpretation of the prophetic writings. Professor Powis Smith considers the bearing of these new facts; and on this account, as well as for its clearness of arrangement and directness of style, we welcome his work."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p255 Ap 9 '25 150w

SMITH, JOSEPH RUSSELL. North America; its people and the resources, development, and prospects of the continent as an agricultural, industrial, and commercial area. 849p il $6 Harcourt [25s Bell]

917 North America—Economic conditions
 25-4744

"Mr. Smith in his preface, points out the fact that the future of America is a matter of growing concern, and that the youth of the land should be provided with a 'thorough knowledge of the continent on which they are to live. Hence this book.' The main body of the work is a study of North America as the home of man. To this end the continent is divided into forty-five geographic regions, which are shown on a large colored map folded in a pocket on the inside of the back cover. The plan of treatment of the regions varies according to the nature and variety of human interests. Thus fish is the chief topic in the consideration of the coasts of Newfoundland and Labrador, while agriculture, forestry and mineral resources receive secondary treatment. In like manner the discussion of the winter wheat belt centers in the wheat farm. A more diversified area is the valley and coast of southern California, where Mr. Smith discusses climate, stages of industry, the tourist era, the health-seekers and overpopulation, the moving-picture industry and agriculture. A still more diversified province is the New England-Canadian maritime region."—N Y Tribune

"To subject it to the customary tests would be unjust to the author, because he has set himself different standards than those which usually circumscribe the writer of books. About the only organization which can be found in the book is that which follows the geographical regions—and nature made these and not the author, so that he cannot be held responsible for even this much organization. This criticism is not intended to detract from the splendid merit of Professor Smith's volume. Every page is valuable: each chapter contains something new and important; most of the material is presented in a way which convinces the reader of the real worth of the contents. The good-humored, friendly attitude of the author towards the prospective reader is one of the valuable features of the book." I. Lippincott

+ — Am Econ R 15:488 S '25 720w

"The book is brilliantly written, completely avoiding that dry dullness which has been characteristic of so many economic geographies."

+ Am Pol Sci R 19:865 N '25 80w

"The author succeeds in putting new life and interest into his subject by breaking away from the conventional, hackneyed textbook style. Detachable map and numerous illustrations. Author is professor of economic geography at Columbia University."

+ Booklist 21:291 My '25

"A solid treatise without any exact parallel in economic literature and at the same time an attractive presentation of the facts such as will ensure for it the interest of both business men and general readers." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 4 '25 850w

"The book is a veritable Baedeker. According to the preface it is the result of twenty years' teaching in a course on the economic geography of North America. The author draws heavily on official material issued by the various governments concerned, on fugitive material, and very largely on actual observation. Unfortunately this information is used in many cases uncritically. Statistics are often misinterpreted, and extravagant, and even naive statements are in evidence. . . It is a pioneer attempt in the field of geographic engineering in America. The attempt would have been more successful if it had been based less on the shifting and uncertain sands of unscientific work, but it is a volume well worth careful as well as critical study." H. A. Innis

— + Canadian Hist R 6:177 Je '25 800w
 Cleveland p94 S '25

"The book is a continuous circus with all the side shows. It will keep classes awake. Even the trained geographer will read it through without skipping a line for, humanly, it is as interesting as a novel."

+ Geog R 15:328 Ap '25 650w

"Professor Smith, through years of careful research and extended observation and travel has brought to bear upon his discussion a comprehensive knowledge of the characteristic processes and the varied resources which afford a basis for American economic life. He likewise possesses a literary style, vivid and imaginative. This happy combination has enabled him to execute a daring undertaking with startlingly brilliant success." G: W. Stocking

+ Lit R p14 My 9 '25 680w

Nation 121:468 O 21 '25 20w

"It is a very interesting book. It is thorough enough to serve as an advanced textbook or work of reference, and entertaining enough to force one to read it through, in spite of its eight hundred pages. Every page is interesting, the multitude of maps and illustrations are all interesting. It is safe to predict that the book will be immensely popular, as it deserves to be." Alvin Johnson

+ New Repub 42:25 F 25 '25 310w

"Mr. Smith's style is clear and vigorous, and sometimes picturesque. The brief descriptions of the physical aspects of the regions which appear in the first parts of many chapters contain some inaccurate and erroneous statements." F. J. Wright

+ — N Y Tribune p13 Mr 15 '25 620w

"The author has not been content to draw upon his stores of printed material but has supplemented his studies by extensive travel and personal inquiry. The result is an encyclopædia of well-attested information on the economic geography not only of the United States but of Canada, Newfoundland, the West Indies and Central America. Incidentally, the reader obtains many interesting sidelights upon American traits. Though crowded with statistics and figures, this volume has scarcely a dull page."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p422 Je 25 '25 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 21:142 My '25

SMITH, LOGAN PEARSALL. Words and idioms. 300p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Constable]

422 English language—Idioms. English language—Etymology [25-13882]

"The author of 'Trivia' gives in this volume much new information about English words and their history, including sea-terms, words of popular origin, and above all those thousands of figurative idioms which are woven into the texture of our speech, and which are here collected and traced to their sources and for the first time classified according to the popular occupations and rustic sports from which they are derived."—Publisher's note

Booklist 22:104 D '25

Reviewed by Kenneth Burke
Dial 80:58 Ja '26 680w

"Mr. Smith no more than skims the surface of this fascinating subject, but he allows a glimpse into the possibilities of the language in revealing what we are—or, at least, what other races think we are." J. T. Shipley
+ Lit R p2 N 28 '25 450w

"Under this title Mr. Smith has collected five pleasant, scholarly essays that dilute for the general reader some of the vast materials stored in the 'New English Dictionary' and the other great lexicons. There are a somewhat rapid essay on dialect and standard speech and a rich and suggestive collection, filling nearly half the book, of English idioms and figurative expressions."

+ Nation 121:628 D 2 '25 150w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée

Nation and Ath 37:431 J1 4 '25 860w

"One of the most readable and provocative books about the English language which we have seen in a long time. The book is a collection of studies rather than a whole, and each essay opens up a rich vein." Robert Littell

+ New Repub 44:235 O 21 '25 2200w

"This small book is, as might be anticipated from its authorship, as pleasant in content as it is attractive in format."

+ New Statesman 25:286 Je 20 '25 1200w

"Highly diverting and instructive little book." H: B. Fuller

+ N Y Times p2 S 13 '25 1350w

"His feeling for words is of that exquisite delicacy which comes only with the conscious perception of the applications of words in their many past variations. It is a scholar's feeling, enriched by the realization of the values of words in their finest literary contexts, and not without some of the philosopher's interest in the more general interpretation of the meanings for which the words stand." G: P. Krapp

+ N Y Tribune p9 O 4 '25 1100w

Outlook 141:321 O 28 '25 20w

Sat R 139:589 My 30 '25 20w

"Mr. Smith's pages will revive for the scholar the romance of philology, the poetry of it. For the tyro it will have an effect similar to that given by a first view of astronomy. It will lure the beginner on the higher levels." L. C: Wimberly

+ Sat R of Lit 2:432 D 19 '25 600w

Spec 134:892 My 30 '25 180w

"As might be expected from the author of Trivia, there is not a dull page in the book, nor an unfounded statement."

+ Spec 135:720 O 24 '25 520w

"Mr. Pearsall Smith has published a series of delightful essays on English words and idioms. He has the passion of language, loving it not only as the artist loves his medium and the scholar his material, but also as the collector loves his booty or his specimens. The quality of his work as artist and scholar comes out most clearly in an essay on the history of the four great words originality, creation, genius, and romantic, an essay in which philological science, out-growing or realizing itself, becomes at one and the same time history and criticism."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p469 J1 16 '25 5000w

SMITH, MARION COUTHOUY. Sphinx of flight. 43p $1.50 Harold Vinal

811

25-11265

"The Sphinx of Flight reflects the emotions of the war era. Only few of the lyrics, to be sure, reveal an intimacy with Flanders fields, but the impress of the struggle is deep in the poet's mind and death casts a long dark shadow. Often the battle of which she writes is an offensive against Death himself, but occasionally she welcomes the 'longer flight' he connotes."—Springf'd Republican

"Her craftsmanship is quiet and sure, and has that final excellence of being inseparable from the thought she is expressing. For a long time now, Miss Smith's poems have been a joy to those whose ears are attuned to the quieter voices in our periodicals. She is, we might say, a transitional poet between the old order and the new, displaying many of the virtues of each. Although she addresses herself to a small audience, her latest book, as a culmination to her work, will not fail of an enthusiastic welcome among them." Robert Hillyer

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 27 '25 500w

"Rather out of date. It is possible that this book is made up from work written some years ago. There are various lyrics and sonnets in Miss Smith's book which are better, but which, even so, are outdated by repetition and a tenuous poetic substance that leaves much to be desired. Even as a minor poet Miss Smith suffers from an undue obviousness of material and a lack of personality in the working of it." H. S. Gorman

— N Y Times p14 Je 28 '25 160w

Outlook 141:166 S 30 '25 10w

"It is an attractive little book with nothing especially distinguished in its contents." W: R. Benet

Sat R of Lit 1:932 J1 25 '25 40w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 6 '25 380w

SMITH, NORA ARCHIBALD. Kate Douglas Wiggin as her sister knew her. 383p il $4 Houghton

B or 92 Wiggin, Kate Douglas (Smith) (Mrs George Christopher Riggs) 25-22403

Miss Smith's book of memories of her sister is not a formal biography but a collection of incidents and reminiscences which supplements Mrs Wiggin's "Garden of memory." In going over the material for her autobiography Mrs Wiggin marked many packages of papers, "What I cannot say for myself," etc. Miss Smith has gathered together these things her sister could not say, and many other intimate memories, passages from a girlhood diary, gay letters from abroad, notes about her books and ways of writing, bits of fugitive verse, toasts and book inscriptions—all of which help to form an image of a radiant personality.

"It presents a remarkable woman in a remarkable light." J. F.

+ Bookm 62:500 D '25 180w

"Autobiography, of course, is seldom a complete mirror of its writer, yet we were so well satisfied with 'My Garden of Memory' that we did not suspect any important additional light-shedding on the beloved author of 'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm' from a member of her own family. But the new volume is not only a pleasing surprise in the wealth of interesting material which Miss Smith had to draw upon but in the manner in which the 'filling-in' process is presented." F. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 14 '25 650w

"Miss Smith has included much occasional verse, many amusing letters from her sister's mailbag, and other intimate and chatty matters. The book is attractive to look at and should find a large public among the still loyal admirers of the creator of 'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm' and so many other beloved stories."

SMITH, NORA ARCHIBALD—Continued

+ Lit R p11 D 5 '25 150w

"Wisely and modestly the author attempts neither a critical estimation, a literary appreciation, nor even a sequel to the autobiography, but merely to 'fill in the chinks' that book had left unfilled. In doing so it must be admitted she has used some material too trivial to be worth while but more which, while not important, will have real interest for hundreds of admirers."

+ Outlook 141:563 D 9 '25 350w

"Perhaps the best contribution furnished by the biography under review is the sense one gets of Kate Douglas Wiggin's delightful influence radiating through her intimate circle, and capturing the devoted admiration of this close companion—an admiration perhaps a trifle devout as well as devoted." Eleanor Adler

+ Sat R of Lit 2:494 Ja 16 '26 850w

"An intimate and personal biography which is truly delightful."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 11 '26 600w

SMITH, PAUL JORDAN-. Nomad. 253p il $2.50 Minton, Balch & co.

25-8911

A tale of things that are not, with a fling at things as they are, this is the story of a story written on pressed corn husks by a high-brow moonshiner in his solitary mountain hut. The "editor" forewarns the reader of indelicacies and improprieties to come—but what, he asks, can be expected of an atmosphere reeking with moonshine? John, the son of a decayed Virginia family, leaves the ruined farm of his fathers and wanders off in search of Beauty. He meets on the way two strange creatures, a self-styled doctor of philosophy and a utilitarian, who companion him in his bizarre adventures.

"Their adventures at times out-Jurgen Jurgen. One must shut the door upon reality when he opens the pages of this book, but if he has the courage to companion with Paul Jordan-Smith, he is certain of many amazing, outrageous, but certainly amusing adventures."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 13 '25 360w

"Mr. Jordan-Smith's story, for all its high fantasy and salty humor, is based upon as simple a romance as one might find in the most unsophisticated of novels. He knows his mountain-folk as well as he does the strange creatures of his imagination, derived from a study of ancient religions, with due regard to black magic, which gives reality to the skeleton of his satire and makes the book an unusual mixture of simple love tale, sharp-edged satire and free-winged fancy." Herschel Brickell

Lit R p7 My 16 '25 400w

"In the matter of narrative, Mr. Jordan-Smith fails to bring off a number of his scenes. Sometimes he writes well, sometimes badly; and though there are many witty touches to the book, its incidents lack the verve and lifting power, besides the lightness of touch, which are necessary for success."

+ — N Y Times p19 My 3 '25 600w

Sat R of Lit 1:796 My 30 '25 300w

SMITH, PAULINE. The Little Karoo; with an introd. by Arnold Bennett. 167p $2 Doran 25-6390

With Biblical simplicity and power the author tells these moving tales of 'The Little Karoo, a wide mountain bordered plain in the veld of South Africa. Here live, in their isolated farms and villages, the descendants of the Dutch pioneers of the region, a sturdy, strongly religious folk in whom passion blends with pity, and strength with tenderness. The first of the collection, The pain, is the story of a loving old couple, Deltje and Juriaan, who have lived together for fifty years, quite alone in their little mud-walled home on the mountainside. Then comes the pain in Deltje's side, a mysterious baffling thing that distorts her soft, round face with agony, and wrings the heart of Juriaan, trying with clumsy tenderness to help. The years of toil and loneliness that might have served to separate, have brought them closer together, so it is together that they face, and in their own way conquer, Deltje's pain. Contents: The pain; The school master; The miller; The sinner; Anna's marriage; The pastor's daughter; Ludovitje; The sisters.

Booklist 21:342 Je '25

"Pauline Smith, whose first book is 'The Little Karoo' need have no fear of judgment. Her work establishes her at once as an apostle of realism. She brings to the story-telling world extraordinary power for stirring the emotions, and appreciation of natural beauty. Nothing that has been written is quite like her short sketches of the plain, hardy people who live on the veldt in Cape Colony." R. D. G.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 15 '25 460w

Cleveland p84 Jl '25

"Miss Smith's style has about it a truly biblical simplicity, and if all the stories in this volume were as beautiful as The Pain we would feel no hesitation in sharing Mr. Arnold Bennett's confidence as to her future. Alas! They are far from being so good; and we fear, therefore, that we must still withhold our complete allegiance."

+ — Dial 79:173 Ag '25 120w

"With skill and a splendid sense of values, reflected in the simpleness of her language, she portrays the veldt she knew from infancy and her deep, intense, lasting impressions of the Africa she loved from her early associations." O. D. Russell

+ Lit R p12 Mr 28 '25 650w

"Pauline Smith's simple but highly developed physical awareness gives these stories of the Little Karoo their remarkable faithfulness to external reality. She sees with such simplicity that her people, drawn entirely from the outside, seem to be inside out."

+ Nation 121:261 S 2 '25 120w

"In these eight short stories her mood never changes, and her themes have all a like melancholy and pathos. In the first story, 'The Pain,' this pathos is poignant and unforced; the story is 'beautiful,' a little too 'beautiful'; but original and fine. In the other stories, however, the same pathetic note is struck so persistently that one no longer believes in it, no longer sees its point." Edwin Muir

+ — Nation and Ath 36:780 Mr 7 '25 200w

"This is art, not artifice; so that Miss Smith's work, however slight it may appear externally, often has a solidity of the highest order." J. Franklin

+ New Statesman 24:659 Mr 14 '25 240w

"Like a real artist, she is above her themes, yet feeling deeply and kindly toward them. Hers is a sensitive pity. Few who read these stories will fail to look forward to her first novel without a quickened interest."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 5 '25 780w

"There is an austerity and unfaltering beauty about 'The Pain,' which takes away one's breath. It strikes one to the heart in the same way that some incident in actual life strikes one to the heart—some incident which is inevitable and yet at the same time unspeakably pitiful. Her other stories are written in a similar mood." Llewelyn Powys

+ N Y Tribune p6 Ap 19 '25 380w

N Y World p7m Ap 19 '25 200w

Pratt p40 autumn '25

"With Miss Pauline Smith's 'The Little Karoo,' we are lifted at once from the realm of the clever into that of the complete, from local and temporal interests into eternal." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 139:330 Mr 28 '25 320w

"Surely 'The Pain' is one of the really great short stories. 'The Sinner' is very nearly as fine, and the remaining six stories, though of uneven merit, are of a very high order." Brooks Shepard

+ Sat R of Lit 1:703 Ap 25 '25 820w

"There is an attractive love for her characters in Miss Pauline Smith's work; there is a fineness in her sympathies and a deep good nature in her portraits. The book is simple and sound."

+ Spec 134:296 F 21 '25 80w

Spring'd Republican p7a Je 21 '25 180w

"She is incapable of the slightest concession to sentimentality or convention, and the result is detached and admirable work."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p136 F 26 '25 300w

SMITH, RICHARD MASON. From infancy to childhood: the child from two to six years. 105p $1.25 Little

649.1 Children—Care and hygiene 25-7477

The period of transition from infancy to childhood is one of great physical and mental growth. This small handbook has been prepared as an aid to parents in solving the problems of child hygiene during this transitional period. In addition to the helpful advice under the subjects of food, clothes, physical development, training and education, etc., there is inserted a brightly colored page of first-aid suggestions which quickly catches the eye.

Booklist 22:17 O '25

"As sensible a little book as was ever compressed within one hundred short pages." E. v. B. Hansl

+ Bookm 61:593 Jl '25 200w

"Presents carefully-chosen, practical suggestions and explanations of the important features of child care and development in simple, direct language without unnecessary words or statements. Well arranged and indexed."

+ J Home Econ 17:354 Je '25 80w

Spring'd Republican p7a N 1 '25 130w

"To those of us still governed by the housing shortage it is discouraging to read that 'from the time an infant begins to creep separate day and night nurseries should be provided for him.' Aside from this Utopian suggestion Dr. Smith gives a simple and workable guide to the daily regime and care of children from two to six." M. R.

+ Survey 55:265 N 15 '25 80w

SMITH, ROBERT HENRY. Agricultural mechanics. (Lippincott's farm manuals) 357p il $3 (12s 6d) Lippincott

631.3 Agricultural engineering 25-7260

"A text-book presenting the essentials of farm shop work; which will enable the student or farmer to do satisfactory practical repair and construction work."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:422 Jl '25

SMITH, RUSSELL DURYEE. Indian canoe. 319p il $1.75 Century

25-8739

Two young men go on a summer's camping trip with an Indian guide in the Maine woods. They paddle along the Moluncus in a canoe fishing and exploring as they go. They meet with varied haps and mishaps in the woods, and before the summer is over actually fall into a fortune.

"There is a good 'movie' plot here, if anyone cares to use it. As it is it will probably prove a thriller for many smallish boys."

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 12 '25 250w

"Will appeal to older boys and those who relish descriptions of a fishing and camping trip in Maine." M. G. Bonner

Int Bk R p558 Jl '25 100w

Spring'd Republican p5a Je 14 '25 200w

"Gives much information about trout fishing and wood craft and a number of dramatic episodes keep up the story interest."

+ Wis Lib Bul 21:204 Jl '25

SMITH, THEODORE CLARKE. Life and letters of James Abram Garfield. 2v 650;651-1283p $12 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Garfield, James Abram 25-19753

Having had full access to the diaries, correspondence and official papers which the family had been carefully guarding for many years Garfield's biographer has been able to set forth his life as far as possible in his own words. The narrative, long and unusually full, illuminates the history of war politics and the stormy period following the war, to 1881.

"Exceedingly skillful, careful, adequate biography of James A. Garfield." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 24 '25 1900w

"Few readers, not students of the period, can derive much happiness from the long sections dealing with the neolithic politics of that naïf age. But certainly the author contrives to give us a fine portrait of his subject, a full-length portrait, almost of heroic size."

+ Ind 115:685 D 12 '25 150w

"Dr. Smith succeeds to a long deferred task of high importance. His style is that of an impartial historian, though he naturally allows Garfield to defend himself, as far as the memorabilia go in such defense. His work would be false to its purpose if he failed to do so. He departs from his usual tenor when he imputes animus to Dana, and on a few other occasions, but on the whole he leaves the reader to form an unbiased judgment from the orderly presentation of data bearing on both sides of every disputed point." A. S. Will

+ N Y Times p1 N 15 '25 2050w

"In dealing with the great mass of material at his command the biographer has exercised unusual restraint. His comment is almost always judicious and well-founded, and the reader may at times wish that he had been more prodigal of it."

+ R of Rs 73:110 Ja '26 320w

"Professor Smith has had free, unhampered access to hitherto unpublished Garfield papers, and these he has used in masterly fashion. These two volumes will serve to elevate Garfield to a deservedly high rank among the ablest public officials of this country." R. V. Harlow

Sat R of Lit 2:445 D '25 1000w

SMITH, WILLIAM CARLSON. Ao Naga tribe of Assam, a study in ethnology and sociology; with an introd. by J. H. Hutton. 244p $5 The author. Univ. of Southern California, Los Angeles, Cal. [21s Macmillan]

572.954 Assam. Aos

"The Aos, the people studied in this latest addition to the excellent series of monographs published by the Government of Assam, occupy the country lying between the Lhota and Sema Nagas on the south, and the various Naga tribes, collectively known by the Aos as 'Miri,' in what is mainly independent territory on the north. The author modestly does not claim for his book that it is any more than an introduction to the study of the people. He has covered in his account the culture, social organisation, and religion and magical beliefs of the people."—Nature

"Thoughtful monograph by an American sociologist makes a strong appeal to all who are interested in the administration and education of backward races. Professor Smith is a competent ethnologist and presents an interesting, though not exhaustive, account of the tribal group."

+ Cape Times Jl 9 '25 450w

SMITH, WILLIAM CARLSON—Continued

"In this volume we have a noteworthy addition to a new and growing body of literature. The material the author interprets from the viewpoint of a competent scholar, experienced field worker, and university teacher, along the two-fold line of sociology and ethnology." C. M. C.

+ J Ap Soc 9:469 J1 '25 120w

"He has covered a wide field but not in that intensive manner which we have become accustomed to look for in this series. What is, perhaps, the most valuable part of the book, especially from the practical point of view of the future of the people, is the final chapter recording the changes in their culture which have been brought about by contact with outside, and especially European, influences. It is both a guide and a warning."

+ — Nature 116:354 S 5 '25 200w

"Neither Professor Smith's treatment nor that of Dr. Surendra Nath Majumdar can claim to be as exhaustive, and hence from the scientific point of view as authoritative, as the work of Mr. J. P. Mills, an official colleague of Dr. Hutton and one who shares his high ideals of exact research. On the other hand, Professor Smith, though his material is but of moderate value, and though his attempt to deal with the wider affinities of this ethnic stock is more ambitious than satisfying, manages, nevertheless, to strike a distinctive note which entitles his book to the most careful consideration."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p562 S 3 '25 1200w

SMITH-DORRIEN, SIR HORACE LOCKWOOD. Memories of forty-eight years' service. 522p il $8 Dutton [25s Murray]

B or 92 Great Britain—History, Military

Gen Smith-Dorrien has been in most British military campaigns since 1878 when he first saw service in the Zulu war. His memories are confined almost entirely to an account of his campaigns, with very little reference to people, except the military men with whom he was associated, or to social happenings. Most space is given to his experiences in the Boer war and some 130 pages to the period he spent in France in the early part of the Great war. There are numerous maps and plans.

"This story will be welcomed, alike for the information it brings and for the vivid fashion in which it weaves official activities and personal adventures into a single narrative." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p6 J1 22 '25 1450w

"Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien's book is not only entertaining and admirably varied; it also reveals a splendid example of the old-time officer and gentlemen, modest, brave, and loyal." A. J.

+ Ind 115:191 Ag 15 '25 400w

"Many readers will turn at once to the chapters dealing with the Great War; but, for reasons entirely creditable to their author, they form the least interesting portion of the book. In his desire to abstain from controversial mud-slinging, Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien has almost entirely eschewed comment and criticism, and the result is a rather dry and colourless narrative. In relating his experiences prior to 1914 the author's style has been less cramped, and the greater part of the book makes uncommonly good reading."

+ Nation and Ath 37:111 Ap 25 '25 750w

"In his judgment of other men he is tolerant and generous. There is not a hard word about anybody in his book. Honesty, cheerfulness and a relish for work and duty look out from its pages." H: E. Armstrong

+ N Y Times p7 S 6 '25 1950w

"The book as a whole is uncommonly readable and brimful of variegated interest and enjoyment, which is, perhaps, not what one expects in the book of memoirs military." T. J. C. Martyn

+ N Y Tribune p14 O 4 '25 1100w

"This is a charming autobiography and an important military document."

+ Outlook 141:99 S 16 '25 350w

Pratt p38 autumn '25

R of Rs 72:334 S '25 100w

"This narrative is a worthy record of a distinguished career. Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien tells us that he undertook the task of its preparation for the instruction of his sons. We are grateful to him for having been persuaded to place it forthwith at the disposal of the reading public, who will find it replete with interest throughout, and who will be especially glad to read the author's own narrative of the brilliant action by which he saved the British Expeditionary Force at Le Cateau."

+ Sat R 139:364 Ap 4 '25 820w

Reviewed by F. Maurice

Spec 134:595 Ap 11 '25 1350w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p247 Ap 9 '25 1800w

SMITS, LEE J. Spring flight. 350p $2.50 Knopf 25-8373

Here is another chronicle of sex. Kenneth Farr's spring flight of adolescent fancies carries him thru a series of cheaply emotional episodes. When he discovers that the girl he really hopes to marry has had experiences similar to his own, he dismisses her and seeks elsewhere. Marion the partner of his last affair, induces Kenneth to marry her, and the author indicates that Kenneth's romantic excursions end at last in matrimony and parenthood.

"When the reader began the first page of the novel—the very first line—a mental exclamation was formed. Here is a book! And when the last page was read—the thought came—here is a writer!"

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 27 '25 250w

"[The hero] has, of course, his love adventures, and he ends nowhere in particular; but his adventures are colorful, and they are described with vivid frankness and detachment. Mr. Smits has not written a great novel, but he has written an entertaining book for the reason that he is a child of the century and can describe many others in describing himself." J. W. Krutch

+ — Nation 120:576 My 20 '25 900w

"Kenneth is a mixture of a prig and libertine. He is a perfect picture of the slightly deconventionalized average citizen, whose talk is bolder than his deed, his confession blacker than his sin, and who brings to the 'Good woman' a slightly terrified bravado from his dealings with the 'other sort.'"

N Y Times p8 Ap 5 '25 770w

"It is one of the best novels I have seen this year. It is formless in that it has no plot and is essentially picturesque in that it follows the fortunes of the hero wherever they may lead. It has extraordinary wealth of detail and of action." Harrison Smith

+ N Y Tribune p4 My 3 '25 850w

"Mr. Smits has recorded the Odyssey of his hero in a cold metallic prose which contains within its net the unenviable authentic fish which is so often the American youth of a mid-Western town, gasping for the golden sunlight and yet seeking its mate in the slime and mud under the shallow waters of a corrupt environment."

N Y World p7m Ap 19 '25 220w

"The Spring Flight' has much to recommend it, for it will be found entertaining and provocative."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:810 Je 6 '25 220w

SMYTH, HERBERT WEIR. Aeschylean tragedy. 234p $3.50 Univ. of California press [18s Cambridge univ. press]

882.1 Aeschylus 24-25123

Eight lectures by the Eliot professor of Greek literature in Harvard university. The introductory lecture, which carefully estimates Aeschylus as a tragedian, is followed by detailed critical analyses of the seven dramas.

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 17 '25 180w

"The style and method are those of a man who handles his learning with an easy touch. He is vivacious and sparkling. He scatters allusion rather freely, yet with telling effect. Sundry oral digressions, of humorous intent, could have been omitted from the printed book to the advantage of the reader; but we may condone the excrescences of a large vitality that has formed the lectures into a moving series."

Lane Cooper

+ — Nation 120:630 Je 3 '25 1900w

"What Professor Smyth gives us here is sound and full of various learning, but somewhat verbose."

+ — Sat R 139:85 Ja 24 '25 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p57 Ja 22 '25 420w

SNATH, JOHN COLLIS. Thus far. 306p $2
Appleton

25-10418

Has science gone too far? The author endeavors to answer this question in his latest novel which concerns the experiments of a great scientist whose researches lead to death and destruction. Professor Grahame Delaforce, a renowned scientist, had a passion for research into the origin of species. From one of his expeditions into the dark continent he returns with a monstrous ape, the long sought "missing link." One day the Professor's body is found, horribly mutilated, in a slimy green pool in the vicinity of his home. No trace of the murderer is apparent. But Fremantle, a young biologist and friend, with the aid of a skillful detective finds a curious clue in the scientist's laboratory which reveals a number of gruesome complications and leads to the capture of the murderer.

"Thus Far" is a powerfully written story, in that it grips you. It is removed above the common level of that kind of thing because its author has, needless to say, imagination above the common run, but we cannot help feeling that the writing of it was a "stunt."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ag 5 '25 300w

Cleveland p84 Jl '25

"The book is an unusual and rather fascinating mixture of the 'thriller' and the philosophical treatise. Being the work of Mr. Snath, the style and characterization are, of course, very good; it is interesting, with plenty of exciting moments and an agreeable love story, and when it is finished, the reader is left with a question in his mind, a question which, if he be not a dogmatic, cock-sure individual, he will find difficult to answer." L: Moore

+ Int Bk R p614 Ag '25 580w

"It is an exceptionally good mystery and horror story, vivid, well written, with the sort of characterization one would naturally expect from the author of 'The Undefeated,' full of thrilling and of shiver-compelling episodes." L. M. Field

+ Lit R p4 Je 13 '25 650w

"A genuine 'thriller,' a horror story that may be trusted to send little chills creeping up and down the spine of any save the most unimaginative of readers. But 'Thus Far' is something more than an exciting yarn."

+ N Y Times p9 My 31 '25 1000w

"Mr. Snath's adjectives are all too strong for the situations they are supposed to galvanize and he writes emotionally above what the traffic will bear. Each repetition of such terms as 'uncanny,' 'eerie,' 'hideous' and so on misses its intended effect upon the ruddy fluid it was meant to curdle, coagulate and quite congeal." Will Cuppy

— N Y Tribune p12 Ag 2 '25 1200w

"Mr. Snath spoils the whole thing with an interminable succession of trite phrases, pompous characters, second-rate narrative, metallic prose rhythms, and an incapacity to let horror tell its own tale."

— N Y World p4m Ag 30 '25 200w

"It strikes one as a pity that Mr. Snath, who is capable of writing with a degree of charm, should have expended energy upon such a task. It is hard to persuade oneself that the whole thing is not a travesty of Max Beerbohm." C. H. Gaines

— No Am 222:168 S '25 500w

Outlook 140:565 Ag 19 '25 100w

"The plot is not developed credibly, the dénouement and resolution are weak. Although we are easily carried along through most of the narrative by Mr. Snath's facility, we rebel more and more as the novel nears its end."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:127 S 12 '25 280w

"This is a story of more than common interest told with much skill and considerable power."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p700 O
22 '25 200w

Wis Lib Bul 21:200 Jl '25

SNODGRASS, ROBERT EVANS. Anatomy and physiology of the honeybee. (Agricultural and biological publications) 327p il $3.50 McGraw

595.79 Bees

25-3975

"This is a revised and enlarged edition of the United States Bureau of entomology bulletin, technical series no.18, 'Anatomy of the honey bee.' It is the most thorough treatment available on the subject."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:409 Jl '25

SNOW, ADOLPH JUDAH. Psychology in business relations. 562p il $4 Shaw, A.W.

658.01 Psychology, Applied. Business 25-6507

"Discussion on the generalities and technicalities of psychology has intentionally been omitted from this work; it is an application of principles rather than a discussion of them." This application of psychological principles is considered under five subheads, Psychology of the consumer, Psychology in marketing, In advertising, In selling and In employment. The author has gathered a large amount of illustrative material, and for those who wish to pursue the more technical side of the subject there is a bibliography at the end of each chapter.

"That such a book as this cannot be a practical manual for the business or industrial executive is no disparagement of any author, but a candid admission that there is not yet an adequate, specific, and statistically supported practical content properly to be called business or industrial psychology. This book owes its merit, therefore, rather to the manner in which it imparts to the consumer a knowledge of the ways in which merchants and executives utilize their understanding of human reactions." C. L. Stone

+ — Am Econ R 15:517 S '25 200w

"Mr. Snow is a scholar with a strong business brain, and his book is as useful as it is fascinating."

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 16 '25 680w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:425 Jl '25

SNOW, WILLIAM FREEMAN. Venereal diseases; their medical, nursing and community aspects. (National health council. National health ser.) 59p 30c Funk

616.95 Venereal diseases

24-15499

"Brief, non-technical discussion of the cause, transmission, treatment, and cure of these diseases, with some attention to related problems of social hygiene. By a physician who is general director of the American social hygiene association."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:414 Jl '25

SNYDER, BLAKE, and LIPPINCOTT, WIL-
MOT, eds. Real estate handbook. 724p $5
 McGraw

333 Real estate business 25-9532

Aims to present the "best principles, methods, and data of modern real estate practice for the reference use of busy real estate men and for the guidance of students of real estate generally." (Preface) "Deals with the legal and financial considerations involved as well as the matters of buying, managing, constructing, selling, etc. Contributed by various real estate men." (Booklist)

Booklist 22:12 O '25

Pratt p10 autumn '25

St Louis p346 S '25

SOLANO, SOLITA. Happy failure. 350p $2
 Putnam

25-16207

Timothy Doan is a misfit. He belongs neither to his hard, money-making father nor to his society-loving mother and sister. He does not really belong to little Erna either, but he loves her with an ardor that sometimes frightens them both. He loathes the city, and longs for a little place in the country and a garden of his own where he may find peace and the leisure to write. For Erna's sake he gives up his dream and goes into his father's hated business. Their year of married life has its poignant moments of ecstasy and despair. But as Erna comes more and more under the influence of her mother, and as the breach between son and father widens to a gulf, the end is in sight. The young people admit their mistake. A way out opens for each of them, and the title tells the rest.

"It is a very inconclusive story, and in spite of the occasional felicitous touches it leaves somewhat of a bad taste." S. L. R.

— + Boston Transcript p8 O 31 '25 380w

"Miss Solano has, if I am not mistaken, struck her stride in 'The Happy Failure.' It is a well-told story, taut with genuine emotion, movingly pathetic and with a 'happy ending' the like of which one does not see in the movies. It is free, too, from the murky atmosphere of her earlier novel, which dealt too frankly, perhaps, with matters of sex to please most readers." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p2 S 5 '25 320w

"The whole book is so hastily thrown together, the characters are so superficially drawn and the theme is so outworn that the book's appearance can only be justified by the assumption that the scandalous temerity of the 'young generation' of 1920 has become so much the common stock of fiction as to provide ammunition for an endless succession of uninspired quick-selling novels. 'The Happy Failure' is one of the first of these standardized novels of youth's revolt; as such it is deplorably significant."

— N Y Times p24 Ag 30 '25 950w

Outlook 141:102 S 16 '25 20w

SOLTES, MORDECAI. Yiddish press, an Americanizing agency. 242p il $2 Teachers college

071 Yiddish newspapers. Americanization 25-5209

"This volume is a comprehensive study of the structure and function of the Yiddish press in New York City. Data as to the number of readers and their distribution, as to the scope of the editorials, the extent to which they are read, and as to their civic bearing are contained in the study. The general conclusion is that the Yiddish press is an Americanizing agency in New York City."—Int J Ethics

Reviewed by J. M. Lee

Bookm 61:480 Je '25 150w

Int J Ethics 35:447 Jl '25 70w

"A useful but not a final study of the Yiddish press as an Americanizing force. The sudden rise of that press and the extraordinary success of our sole non-profit-making daily, the Forward, have not yet been adequately described. When a thoroughgoing critical study is made Dr. Soltes's volume will be a useful source." O. G. Villard

+ — Nation 120:158 F 11 '25 80w

"The book contains extensive lists of the references and sources drawn upon by him for the material of this work, which is distinctly worth the attention of the serious follower of contemporary journalism." Adrian Richt

+ N Y World p6m Mr 15 '25 120w

SOROKIN, PITIRIM ALEKSANDROVICH. Leaves from a Russian diary. 310p $3 Dutton

947 Russia—History—Revolution, 1917-.
 Bolshevism—Russia 24-25543

For descriptive note see Annual for 1924.

"There is too much sophistication about the writer to render the narrative naïve, and not enough ruthless skill in self-revelation to make it profound. His observations upon the people around him are deformed by the very mélange of passion, fact, rumor, and polemic which reveals so much about the witness." H. D. Lasswell

— + Am J Soc 31:108 Jl '25 130w

"We have seen no more vivid account of Russian conditions during the years 1917-1920 than that contained in Leaves from a Russian Diary."

+ Am Pol Sci R 19:217 F '25 60w

Booklist 21:298 My '25

"The book is illuminating and important because it is an authentic first hand narrative of conditions in Russia today."

+ Bookm 61:97 Mr '25 180w

Boston Transcript p5 D 17 '24 1600w
 Cleveland p40 Ap '25

"More clearly than all the journalistic records, memoirs, personal narratives and experiences which have appeared, it illuminates two obscure questions: Why does Bolshevism, altho a minority doctrine, still retain a stranglehold on more than one hundred million unwilling people? How do education, science, art, letters really fare under Communism?" R. C. Dorr

+ Int Bk R p187 F '25 1550w

"This is an important book. Unquestionably it presents a 'remarkably significant and vivid personal narrative,' but at the same time it should be considered as a human document of great historical interest, containing first-hand information from one who was in a position to know." A. M. Nikolaieff

+ Lit R p4 Je 31 '25 700w

"This diary must necessarily be a biased and sorrowful exposition of the events which culminated in the Bolshevik coup d'état. The intelligent reader, however, who is able to read the material which Mr. Sorokin presents without being influenced by his hysteria and sentimental disillusionment will find the volume one of the most illuminating chronicles of the stirring days of the revolution." J. J. Smertenko

+ — N Y Tribune p11 D 14 '24 450w

"This is a remarkable book, and every student of the Russian Revolution ought to read it with attention, as it constitutes the best account of the condition to which Bolshevism has reduced what was once a great and powerful country." Princess Radziwill

+ Sat R of Lit 1:261 N 8 '24 750w

"Professor Sorokin's narrative takes the vivid form of a diary in which the writer often had reason to think that each day entered would be his last. It contains a record of historical events too recent to call for mention here, and an account of personal experiences of which the full thrill is to be obtained only from the passionate words of a persecuted man."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p648 O
8 '25 650w

SOROKIN, PITIRIM ALEKSANDROVICH. Sociology of revolution. (Lippincott's sociological ser.) 428p $3 (12s 6d) Lippincott

323.2 Revolutions. Social psychology 25-6714

Written by a Russian who lived under the shadow of the revolution for five years and was banished by the Soviet government in 1922, this book is based not alone upon Russian experience but upon his study of the general characteristics of revolutions. He discusses the change in the behavior and psychology of a people during revolution, its effect on vital statistics and the composition of the population, the changes in social structure and processes during such periods and the causes of revolution. The book is an arraignment of all revolutions and a defense of the necessity for orderly social control.

"Professor Sorokin's writing is not free from some of the faults of the muckrakers. As an eyewitness of the events he analyzes, and a sufficiently unpopular one to be given his passports by the Bolshevik government, he allows his temper to get the better of him. His scientific judgment tends accordingly to be a little clouded. The book, however, contains so much interesting material that the student of social psychology will find it valuable." J. Grierson

— + Am J Soc 31:399 N '25 250w

"His book is based on first-hand observation and a vast amount of research in the literature of revolution. The study is primarily psychological in approach and is a welcome modernization of LeBon's earlier work."

+ Am Pol Sci R 19:853 N '25 220w

"What will interest the general reader in this volume is not the method but the incidental comments upon the Russian Revolution which is the basis of this study. It is certainly, regardless of its theme, not an easy nor an interesting book to read. Even as a work of science, the best, and perhaps the worst, that can be said of it, is that it is suggestive." R. E. Park

+ — Ann Am Acad 123:230 Ja '26 850w

Booklist 21:329 Je '25

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 14 '25 750w

Reviewed by E. F. Young

Int J Ethics 35:449 JI '25 600w

"Much the most up-to-date effort at a psychology of revolution available, it renders the old study of Le Bon thoroughly anachronistic." H. E. Barnes

+ Nation 120:669 Je 10 '25 650w

Reviewed by Jerome Davis

New Repub 43:213 JI 15 '25 50w

"This is a book which one would be glad to be able to commend without reserve. Any one who has read the author's 'Leaves from a Russian Diary,' recently published, may well wonder how Professor Sorokin, after the privation and suffering which he, in common with many another Russian intellectual, had to undergo, could have found the energy for a work which, like 'The Sociology of Revolution,' is evidently the product of elaborate research, or how his treatment of Russia in revolution could be so wanting in bitterness as it happily is in this case. While Professor Sorokin's books have some important shortcomings, his contribution is of such considerable value that his point of view is entitled to be presented before the limitations of his work are indicated." W. MacDonald

+ — N Y Times p3 Mr 29 '25 1350w

"His tone is one of sober and dispassionate authority. Only, upon occasion, when he refers to certain leaders of the Bolshevik coup, does one feel the drive of emotion." Frank Sullivan

N Y World p7m Mr 22 '25 100w

Reviewed by C. H. Gaines

No Am 221:557 Je '25 780w

"The English of the original must have been extremely crude, since even after a rigorous revision much of the diction remains awkward and bunglesome. Nevertheless it is, in the opinion of the present reviewer, the most important work on a social theme that has appeared in a long time."

+ — Outlook 140:564 Ag 19 '25 520w

"It is an able marshaling of facts."

+ R of Rs 71:335 Mr '25 200w

St Louis 23:426 D '25

"Against these doctrines there will unquestionably be bitter protest by those who, without the knowledge or experience of Professor Sorokin still regard the Russian upheaval as a step in the upward progress of the race, not as a débâcle. But in their controversy with him they will find his facts, and the reports of the Bolsheviks which he quotes, stubborn opponents. Yet whatever one believes, whether he is for or against revolution, he will have to take serious account of this remarkable volume." W. C. Abbott

Sat R of Lit 1:664 Ap 11 '25 900w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p451 JI
2 '25 80w

SOUTHERNS, LEONARD. Electricity and the structure of matter. (World's manuals) 128p il $1 Oxford [2s 6d Milford]

537 Electricity. Matter—Constitution
[25-26889]

"Mr. Southern gives a sketch of the history of the subject up to the discovery of the electron, and then proceeds to give an account of the principal modern developments, both theoretical and practical. Over thirty figures in the text, glossary and bibliography."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 22:59 N '25

"As an introduction to the subject the book is an admirable piece of work and deserves great praise. It is simply and clearly written and will be valued by the general reader."

+ New Statesman 25:558 Ag 29 '25 100w

"As an introduction to an absorbing field, we could hardly do better than recommend the small volume."

+ Spec 135:339 Ag 29 '25 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p512 JI 30
'25 60w

SOWERS, JOHN IRVING. Boy and his vocation. 198p $1.50 Manual arts press

374.1 Occupation, Choice of. Boys 25-5473

These are practical straightforward talks to the boy just out of elementary school and on the fence about the future. They advise him to go on with his education with a definite idea of what he wants to get out of it, stimulate his ambition and help him to choose the thing he is best fitted, and would most like, to do.

"It is full of advice, but is not specifically a book on vocational guidance. In spite of being written in a trite, commonplace style the book may prove useful."

+ — Booklist 22:55 N '25

"The closing chapter, 'Selling Your Ability,' is perhaps the most useful in the book. The author describes a number of ways of selling personal ability and gives several concrete examples of writing and answering advertisements. The volume can well be recommended by vocational counselors to boys who need general inspiration. It will not furnish much comparative information concerning specific vocations." G. M. Hoyt

+ El School J 26:234 N '25 360w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:24 Ap '25

SOWERS, JOHN IRVING—Continued

"The style is clear, interesting, and gripping. The author has a pleasant way of 'putting things over' and 'driving them home.' The material is brief and concise and can be understood by pupils at the level for which it is written." C. G. Vannest

+ School R 33:790 D '25 400w

SPAIGHT, JAMES MOLONY. Air power and war rights. 493p $8.50 (25s) Longmans

341.3 Aeronautics, Military. War (international law) 25-1391

"Mr. Spaight has confronted boldly the whole question of aerial warfare in its relation to civilization. It is a law book of unusual interest, since, in order to formulate the growth of custom and practice in relation to war carried on in air spaces, he has recalled from various English and foreign sources the story of many air battles and duels. From the point of view of pure law the volume is not really complete, since it does not pretend to trace the evolution of the law of air-spaces from certain definite principles inherent in Roman and English law. The work is definitely limited to the various aspects of the law of war."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"The style of the book is stimulating."

+ N Y Times p19 Ja 4 '25 2100w

"Very interesting and carefully documented book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p14 Ja 8 '25 1450w

SPAIN, CHARLES LYLE. Platoon school; a study of the adaptation of the elementary school organization to the curriculum. 262p il $2 Macmillan

375 School management and organization. Education of children 24-21280

"In order to present the enriched curriculum of the twentieth century in its historical perspective, the author describes the successive stages in the development of our modern curriculum from its early European and colonial conception. With this background, the platoon system is presented as the natural adaptation of school buildings and school organization to the demands of the present-day curriculum. Superintendent W. A. Wirt, of Gary, Indiana, is given credit for being the pioneer in utilizing the duplicate or platoon plan of organization. What, in detail, is the platoon system? What is its plan of organization? In what situations is it practicable? Are the fundamental subjects well taught? How much does it cost? What are its weaknesses and dangers? These and related questions are answered in the text. There are 102 figures, most of them a full page in size, which include pictures of classroom work, plans of school buildings, and diagrams of statistical results."—El School J

Booklist 21:138 Ja '25

"From his daily work Doctor Spain writes this temperate, careful, convincing description of this new and growing adaptation of school organization to present demands."

+ Educ R 69:52 Ja '25 520w

"The book is carefully prepared. The aims in the teaching of each subject are given, together with typical time schedules for pupils and schools. The book contains a bibliography, an index, and an appendix; and the Foreword is well worth reading." D. E. Scates

+ El School J 25:552 Mr '25 520w

Reviewed by Agnes deLima

New Repub 43:158 Jl 1 '25 450w

SPARLING, EDWARD EARL. Under the levee. 290p $2 Scribner

25-6858

Thirteen tales of the New Orleans water front and of its red light district. Contents: Little Teeny and Cajin Joe; The Creole Shad-ow; Viva la revolucion; Marjeva's black cat; Daughter of Lescale; Rico Rodriguez, Romeo;

Mia Marie and the Spic; Old Maury's dance; Jean-Marie Hippolite Beaubien; The rose, the rat and the greaser; Picture of Clelie; Painter of Place d'Armes; Masque macabre.

Boston Transcript p5 Je 20 '25 300w

Cleveland p84 Jl '25

"If he has not studied and read 'Limehouse Nights' it is a remarkable case of literary similarity. His style has not the same wicked, poisonous beauty, nor has he quite conveyed the atmosphere of New Orleans, but he promises to be a short-story writer of great effectiveness, provided he can avoid the temptation to round out every story into a smart O. Henry surprise. If he takes his time he will go far."

+ Ind 114:303 Mr 14 '25 150w

"The first reading of these stories leads one to the snap-decision that the author is a new literary power to be reckoned with. This sense, however, loses some of its strength when the book is more critically considered. There is an enormous amount of power in the stories that Mr. Sparling has almost done; for they are only almost done." Lawrence Lee

+ -!nt Bk R p427 My '25 400w

"The stories are not equal, by any means, in excellence of presentation. Some of the gaudy blooms are ragged, faded and bedraggled in the mud; but the reader who begins the book will not put it down until the end; and imagination will recur endlessly to its weird fascination." Grace King

+ - Lit R p2 Mr 14 '25 560w

"These tales of the underworld of New Orleans reveal a new writer with unmistakable gifts. They are unfolded swiftly and sympathetically, and sharpened with irony."

+ Nation 120:524 My 6 '25 60w

"There is a fine and convincing tone of reality, a keen vividness, a touch of poignancy and of the picturesque, a blending of pathos and of comedy in these stories."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 1 '25 500w

"Commonplace stories. Not one of them is sufficiently above the average cheap magazine story in interest to deserve even passing analysis."

- N Y Tribune p13 My 10 '25 250w

"Many-colored yarns of vivid and unforgettable hue. Both the art and the characters are the slave of an arranged plot, a trick situation, or an intruded pathos. Yet Mr. Sparling suffers nothing at all by the comparison to 'Limehouse Nights.'"

+ N Y World p7m Ap 5 '25 150w

"He has the brisk, snappy, 'colorful' style of the Eastern magazines too much in his ear. He is a vigorous and true-born story-teller, and we wish him the courage of his talent." H. W. Boynton

+ Outlook 139:580 Ap 15 '25 200w

"His stories of the night life of the Southern port are such as might have been the result of the note-book jottings of a young journalist who has spent half a dozen nights 'out' looking for copy. The fact is these tales are surface tales and seldom touch that undercurrent of turbulent poetry which alone interprets life truly."

- Sat R of Lit 1:714 Ap 25 '25 330w

"It is the work of a story-writer with the power of seeing a story and telling it forcefully. And his knowledge of the district about which he writes seems very thorough."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 8 '25 250w

SPARLING, HENRY HALLIDAY. Kelmscott press and William Morris, master-craftsman. 177p il $6.50 (18s) Macmillan

B or 92 Morris, William. Kelmscott press 25-209

The author was a fellow-worker of William Morris, as well as an ardent disciple and secretary and general handyman of the Kelmscott press. He surveys the condition of printing before Morris took it up, sketches his record and methods of work, describes the course of training through which he put himself, tells about the Kelmscott press and the books it produced and then tries to estimate its enduring influence upon the art of printing. The book is most carefully produced and printed in the Morris style, with illustrative plates from Morris books. One of the appendices is an annotated list of all the books printed at the Kelmscott press.

"By rule of thumb Mr. Sparling's book on William Morris is brief; excluding the epilog and appendix, it is only 131 pages. But in spiritual values it is great and it is of lasting worth to those who know and understand Morris's work, as well as to the thousands who seek to know it. . . In this book of Sparling's will be found all that his lovers or students need of fact and interpretation, presented as only the ablest student and most loyal lover could do it." Julian Hawthorne
+ Int Ek R p177 F '25 2100w

"The epochal role William Morris played in the revival of printing as a fine art has been told before but not often enough and never so exhaustively as Mr. Sparling tells it in his authoritative history of the famous Kelmscott press." L: Kantor
+ N Y Times p15 My 24 '25 1950w

"The story of the Kelmscott Press and its activities during the six years William Morris lived to direct them has been told many times, but not once with that intimate knowledge, that personal association with its founder and that high enthusiasm for what it stood which are here evinced by the author of this excellent record." Temple Scott
+ N Y Times p4 J1 19 '25 1050w

"Mr. Sparling's book is simply invaluable to every one interested in the history of modern writing: would that we had as picturesque and full an account of his earlier revivals!"
+ Sat R 139:390 Ap 11 '25 280w

"Although the reader misses throughout the human touch, the lack of it may not be entirely the fault of Sparling. He may never have seen his 'master' in an unguarded moment. Those readers of Sparling's book who may be especially interested in advancements in the art of typography are again disappointed in not finding an intimate picture of the Press. Typographically also, Sparling's book is disappointing; it has some of the unpleasant features of a Kelmscott Press book and other things that Morris would never have tolerated. The book will find a place in all important libraries; it is a record which cannot be neglected." Elmer Adler
— + Sat R of Lit 2:48 Ag 15 '25 800w

"Apart from its biographical interest, most students of typography will find this a profoundly depressing book. The book itself—the way in which it is printed—the Morris designs and the Burne-Jones illustrations—are all of a piece, and all have the pathos of dead enthusiasms. Mr. Sparling wrote as a disciple; however well-informed, he seems to have expressed no opinions of his own, if he had any. The designing of this book, which is painstaking and (except in some of the illustrations) skilful, will seem to many people its most effective confutation. There are no headlines. . . There is, of course, no leading, and very little space between words. There are about 450 words in a type-page measuring 6½ inches by 4. The result, by the time the reader nears the end, is almost intolerably flat and monotonous."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p52 Ja 22 '25 650w

SPARROW, WALTER SHAW. Advertising and British art. 189p il $12 Dutton [30s Lane] 659 Advertising. Posters [24-25428]

The book is concerned chiefly with the subject of British poster advertising—its principles and methods and the recent accomplishments of designers in the way of reform. Plentifully illustrated with thirty-six prints in color, 121 half-tone prints and twenty-seven line blocks in the text.

"Mr. Sparrow does not discuss the matter from a seriously artistic standpoint; rather he converses, in a bright, facetious style, on the commercial aspects of poster advertising. His book is a pretty complete record of the development of this branch of art in England during recent years."

Nation and Ath 36:162 O 25 '24 230w

"It is primarily in the aesthetic aspect of the subject that Mr. Sparrow is interested, and he has brought to his investigations a seriousness that should delight the naïve imagination of the American business man." T: Craven

N Y Tribune p12 J1 19 '25 500w

"The book is discursive but is held together by one big idea."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p534 S 4 '24 920w

SPEAKMAN, HAROLD. Here's Ireland. 353p il $3.50 Dodd

914.15 Ireland—Description and travel 25-21426

Mr Speakman gives us the Ireland he found in his travels up and down the land with a donkey. It is a merry Ireland, of the highways and byways, of amusing adventures, of conversations by the roadside, and the narrative runs along on the thread of these encounters. There is more of colleens than of politics and of everyday human types than of celebrities. Illustrated with paintings by the author.

"Harold Speakman is Harold Speakman, and that means a mixture of fantasy and sober-mindedness, of humor and lyric prose, of sensitive impressions and cold masculine reactions, such as rarely comes one's way." I. W. Lawrence

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 26 '25 2000w

"If any one expects a study of the revolution or a political history of Ireland let him not read this book. Those are incidents of Ireland. Mr. Speakman has found Ireland herself—the soul which has made her many moods. . . Those who love Erin will not be disappointed." H. C. Alleman
+ Lit R p4 Ja 9 '26 480w

"The author is plainly more intrigued with the idea of getting the things he has witnessed down on paper than with art. If at times the book becomes journalism, that is nothing against it, for it is good journalism, of the sort that holds the reader's attention most closely."

+ N Y Times p7 N 1 '25 1400w

"There are amusing, often beautiful, and always readable, notes."

+ N Y Tribune p7 N 15 '25 220w

"'Here's Ireland,' is one of those blithe and personal records, colloquial in tone and crammed with impressions that make such engaging reading. The episodes and descriptions, often slight in themselves, are of cumulative importance." Michael O'Gorman

+ N Y World p6m N 29 '25 620w

"On opening this book, one enters upon a blithe and memorable adventure. Outwardly it is a simple enough narrative. But one leaves it wondering by just what gift of grace the author has accomplished an airy book that will bear so much pondering."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:397 D 5 '25 250w

SPEARE, DOROTHY. Girl who cast out fear. 324p $2 Doran

25-23219

The heroine is a very young lady who paints and writes. She comes to New York in quest of a career, and meets a number of engaging people, including an artist, a playwright, an actress, a professional tumbler, a gilded youth and a literary villain. The artist is her professional sponsor, the playwright her first real love, the actress her rival, the professional tumbler, her friend. Others contribute in varying degree to her progress in life. She finds it a little difficult, first to get married and then to stay married, but experience teaches her a great deal, and the book leaves her chastened and happy.

SPEARE, DOROTHY—Continued

"The various episodes do not impress one as having any particular or vital relation to the theme but are there because, as the advertisements say, they are 'the fruit of her (the author's) own experience and observation, the same quality that made her earlier work (Dancers in the Dark) so popular.' The story lacks subtlety. It is not a well-rounded novel. Rather it is a series of lurid experiences strung upon the thread of a theme too slight to hold them together." F. M.

— Boston Transcript p6 D 5 '25 500w

"Mindful of the sophistication of the author's first work, and of the title of this novel, one opens these pages with apprehension, which, by the way, turns out to be unjustified. It is a wholly decorous book, allowances being made for the fact that the Victorian reign ended in 1901. The hint is given that the novel is autobiographical, upon which no comment need be made. The workmanship of the story is disjointed and the writing is at times noticeably immature."

— N Y Times p36 D 6 '25 300w

"Once again the author of Dancers in the Dark has spun a lively yarn about young persons whose medium of expression has little if anything to do with what used to be called the King's English and whose general cerebral content, by and large, leaves most of the problems of philosophy about where they were."

N Y Tribune p19 D 13 '25 200w

Springf'd Republican p5a N 22 '25 220w

SPEARE, MORRIS EDMUND. Political novel; its development in England and in America. 377p $2.25 Oxford

823 Political novels. English fiction. Beaconsfield, Benjamin Disraeli, 1st earl of 24-22295

"Half of the volume is given to an exhaustive analysis of Benjamin Disraeli, his genius, and his achievements as the founder and master of the nineteenth century political novel. There follow chapters on other and later novelists of political life: George Meredith, Trollope, Mrs. Ward, H. G. Wells, and our own Henry Adams and Winston Churchill."—Bookm

"The most valuable study of that important development in modern English and American literature that we have yet read."

+ Bookm 60:505 D '24 100w

"The whole study is restrained and scholarly. It possesses the additional merit of being one of the very few in this variety of fiction."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 31 '25 350w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Ind 113:400 N 15 '24 1150w

"While the work is academic in conception, it has some points of general interest. The author unfortunately did not suppress a number of private political opinions which detract from the judicial standard essential to a work of this type."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 F 4 '25 850w
Wis Lib Bul 21:88 Mr '25

SPEARMAN, FRANK HAMILTON. Selwood of Sleepy Cat. 326p $2 Scribner [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

25-6314

Sleepy Cat, the center of interest in this lively Western story was regarded by its natives as the mountain metropolis of the country. Its social life was centered in its gambling dens of which there were two—Bartoe's, down by the riverfront, the worst outfit of its kind, and Selwood's, where a man was sure of a square deal. Tom Selwood, a gaunt, keen-eyed Westerner was hated by Bartoe's gambling crooks who lost no opportunity to remind him of the fact. But when robberies and murders become a bit too promiscuous, Selwood leaps into action and makes history for Sleepy Cat. The town for a time is a raging pandemonium until Gentleman Tom rids it of Bartoe's gambling hall—his own, too—cleans out the River Quarter "rats," and at the same time saves the life of pretty Christie Fyler. When this has been accomplished Sleepy Cat relaxes while Selwood marries its prettiest girl.

Booklist 22:35 O '25

"Mr. Spearman gives us gun play and heart interest and a romantic gambler—all the essential ingredients,—but somehow, the thing takes an unconscionable time in getting itself born."

— Ind 114:421 Ap 11 '25 70w

Reviewed by Donald Douglas

Int Bk R p655 S '25 100w

"Mr. Spearman has assiduously and often effectively refurbished all these battered heirlooms of Western romances. He knows his material and he knows how to fashion an interesting tale. He avoids sentimentality when he can, and, above all, he infuses the sweep of action into every page. 'Selwood of Sleepy Cat,' with all its familiar defects, is an effective example of a Western thriller."

+ N Y Times p17 My 24 '25 400w

"This is a corking good story."

+ Outlook 140:31 My 6 '25 150w

"There are readers who maintain that tales of the wild and woolly are unfit amusement for the adult mind, that even if the yarn is good they don't like it. We do not, of course, presume to commend the present novel to them, but we are confident the many who value fiction of this type will find it unusually satisfying."

Sat R of Lit 1:694 Ap 18 '25 370w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p204 Mr 19 '25 50w

Wis Lib Bul 21:143 My '25

SPENCE, LEWIS. Atlantis in America. 213p il $4 Brentano's [10s 6d Benn]

572.4 Atlantis. Mayas

"The object of this book is to prove that the cultures of ancient Mexico and Central America were offshoots from the civilization of Atlantis. The author suggests that the last remnant of Atlantis, the island of Antillia, was submerged about A.D. 200, and that after its disappearance the Maya, an Antillian race, arrived in America. Particularly interesting is the chapter dealing with Quetzacoatl, the heaven-sent chief of the Toltecs. We find in the Toltec folk-lore references not only to the Flood legend (this we should naturally expect), but also to the Tower of Babel, which Votan (a local name for Quetzacoatl) is said to have seen on one of his visits to his original home."—Spec

"Atlantis has been served up in so many diversified forms in the course of centuries that it comes as a pleasing novelty to greet the submerged continent again with a garnishing of archaeology and a sauce of what more or less prejudiced observers are wont to call facts."

+ Bookm 62:353 N '25 300w

Reviewed by Ralph Bergengren

Boston Transcript p3 S 19 '25 200w

"Had we time and patience we might tear the heart from a hundred arguments and still-born assertions in this book. We may confidently state that the mountain system of Yucatan exists only in the brain of the author, for Yucatan is a plain without mountains and with few rivers."

— Ind 115:451 O 17 '25 620w

"His massed evidence can not fail to impress an unbiased mind. Having written several important books on the myths and legends of Mexico, Peru, Egypt, and the North American Indians, Mr. Spence naturally leans most heavily on this kind of evidence, especially in the later volume, 'Atlantis in America.' But he has also collected the evidence from geology, biology, ethnology, archeology and other fields, and some of these furnish even more convincing proofs for the lay reader." E. L. Shuman

Int Bk R p664 S '25 880w

Nation 121:712 D 16 '25 30w

New Statesman 25:426 JI 25 '25 650w

"It is all very plausible and though 'endeavoring to proceed by the paths of ascertained facts and rational argument,' Mr. Spence has not disencumbered an enchanting theme."

+ Outlook 141:487 N 25 '25 250w

"Mr. Spence attacks the problem from a new point of view, and seeks to found a reasoned scientific conclusion on data which underlie the inspirations of myth. How far he succeeds in his object, to what degree his theory is indebted to science or to fancy, may perhaps be doubtful. At any rate, his work is readable and to a large extent instructive."

Sat R 140:318 S 19 '25 420w

"With the aid of history, myth, folk-lore and ethnology Mr. Spence makes out a fascinating case for his contention. Whatever may be thought of his main thesis, he has at any rate made a suggestive contribution to comparative mythology."

Spec 135:275 Ag 15 '25 220w

SPENCER, MATTHEW LYLE. Editorial writing; ethics, policy, practice. 364p $2 Houghton 070 Editorials. Journalism 24-31316

The director of the School of Journalism, University of Washington, in a volume intended for use as a college textbook, outlines the principles of effective editorial writing, giving many illustrations of the various types of editorial quoted from newspapers all over the country. Questions and exercises are provided.

"The book will be found useful as a text as well as in a newspaper office."

+ Booklist 21:288 My '25

Reviewed by J. M. Lee

Bookm 61:479 Je '25 120w

"Spencer shows throughout his entire volume a power of quiet entertainment combined with a modest persuasion that is notable. He makes comfortable reading; his style is remarkably easy to follow. There is a quality in it that persuades one to keep on reading and satisfies him that what he is getting matters much." W: McAndrew

+ Educ R 70:109 S '25 860w

"His book comes, presumably, out of much study of the situation at the present time and of its history since the days before the Civil war. His pages show him to be well informed and to have thought deeply and soundly upon this factor in journalism and they are well worth the reading, not only of the students in journalism for whom they are especially intended but also of many of those already engaged in editorial writing and of newspaper editors and owners."

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 18 '25 350w

SPENDER, JOHN ALFRED. Public life. 2v 259; 236p il $10 Stokes [30s Cassell]

Great Britain—Politics and government. Statesmen, British [25-13974]

"To trace the recent history of English politics, to examine the technique of our public life in the hope of saying something that might be of interest to the working politician, and to make some estimate, however provisional, of the new tendencies at work—these are the main objects which Mr. Spender has set before himself in producing this highly characteristic book. Few men, indeed, are better qualified than he to write of such topics. He has passed all his life in the atmosphere of politics, and in the ten years that preceded the establishment of the Liberal Government of 1906 his influence as Editor of the old Westminster Gazette was as great as that of any of the famous Editors of the Victorian Era."—Spec

"Brilliantly written, a solid achievement of liberal and scholarly thought, the work is a profoundly enlightening study of modern political evolution."

+ Bookm 62:96 S '25 120w

"A book which, though it digresses very much at times, is as a whole an admirable example of cool thinking of the English Liberal school, a school that strikingly resembles what is represented in the United States by what is known as the independent vote, the vote of those who think and read for themselves." J: H. Sedgwick

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 20 '25 3000w

"The net result is two admirable volumes, instructive, entertaining, not so much profound as intelligent and just, and always informed with the spirit and the attitude of a gentleman and a scholar." A. J.

+ Ind 115:303 S 12 '25 1150w

"Mr. Spender is what every journalist ought to be. His intense pride in his profession makes him unwilling ever to sacrifice the truth for a 'story.' His literary skill is so great that he can make the truth more interesting than fiction; his training in scholarship so prolonged and so thorough that he is able to judge the present by the past and makes shrewd guesses at the future." W: L. Phelps

+ Int Bk R p578 Ag '25 2350w

"The book is much more than an argument or a statement of fact. It is illustrated at every turn by keen analyses of the public men of the last fifty years, and so has the charm of a historical study and a book of reminiscence combined; and traces all the changes and evolutions that have befallen public life from the time of Burke to that of Baldwin. It is so many things, and all them are done with such force and color, that it is a most remarkable book." C: W. Thompson

+ Lit R p4 Ag 1 '25 2100w

Living Age 326:75 JI 4 '25 2950w

"No formal study of the theory of the English constitution, or of the recent political history of the country, will be half so useful to American students of English politics as these two volumes." J. A. Hobson

+ Nation 121:sup425 O 14 '25 1200w

"The book is extraordinarily readable; every page of it either gives you a fascinating glimpse at some famous politician or puts before you in concrete form an important problem of modern life, while everything is presented to you in perspective as seen in retrospect from a distinguished and sagacious editor's chair. It is this journalistic perspective which makes the book so readable and gives it much of its character; it would therefore seem to be absurd to complain of it. Yet one cannot help wondering whether, if Mr. Spender had been content to lose a little of this merit, in the end his work would not have gained immensely. . . His book has an air of disconnectedness and even inconclusiveness, and it loses in depth what it gains in readableness." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 37:137 My 2 '25 1150w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 44:sup11 S 30 '25 1650w

"When a writer of Mr. Spender's tact and experience sends a book to the press, one may be certain that every page will be worth reading. Throughout these two volumes Mr. Spender keeps to his high standard, and whatever his theme at the moment there is the same finish and economy in his style, the same ripe and mature good sense in his reflections."

+ New Statesman 25:346 JI 4 '25 950w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p1 JI 5 '25 3050w

"The present book is written, as one might expect, without the smallest prejudice. It was recommended lately by our Tory Premier, Mr. Baldwin, in a public speech. Party does not count when one studies a work of such experience and such calm wisdom of judgment. I suppose it will long remain a textbook on political life, and certainly I can hardly imagine a better, both for information and guidance."

SPENDER, JOHN ALFRED—Continued
H: W. Nevins

+ N Y Tribune p1 J1 26 '25 2050w

"In these two meaty, entertaining, illuminating volumes, Mr. Spender has drawn upon the experience, observations and studies of a long and brilliant life in the public service as a leader of liberal thought in England. In these two volumes, as in his monumental biography of Campbell-Bannerman he has made his bid for permanency as a writer."
C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p3m J1 19 '25 600w

"All the way through his volumes, indeed, Mr. Spender offers information, reminder, admonition, inspiration, as apt and as profitable to the American as to the British reader; and all with a red-blooded vivacity, a clarity of style, and a wealth of recollection and knowledge which charm the reader and provoke unceasing admiration." W. F. Johnson

+ No Am 222:184 S '25 450w

"Mr. Spender has utilized the unwonted leisure that has come his way lately to look back over the forty years of Parliamentary life which he has watched from the side scenes, and to give us a number of vivid, and even brilliant, sketches of our leading statesmen, with his reflections on their work and on the changes that have taken place in public life since he first began to observe it scientifically."

+ Sat R 140:438 Ap 25 '25 1300w

"Mr. Spender's two volumes are excellent in style, matter, and power of observation. They will repay reading by anyone interested in understanding the causes that have brought about the England of today." A. M. Lowe

+ Sat R of Lit 2:5 Ag 1 '25 900w

"Any book by Mr. Spender on the theory and practice of our politics was certain to be interesting and significant. And in these two volumes, which are in some ways the best thing he has yet done, there is some admirable writing." P. M.

+ Spec 134:893 My 30 '25 900w

"The whole book—though, perhaps, it is less a book than a series of chapters—makes an eloquent appeal on behalf of the dignity of the public life, and of the importance of its being highly regarded and intelligently followed by the masses whom the public men serve."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p279 Ap 23 '25 1950w

SPERANZA, GINO CHARLES. Race or nation; a conflict of divided loyalties. 278p $3 Bobbs

325.73 Immigrants in the United States. United States—Foreign population 25-20245

Mr Speranza discusses the effect on American institutions of the presence of great blocks of foreign stock, with widely differing traditions, customs and viewpoint—racially conscious groups of aliens, aggressive in proportion to their numbers. Among his remedies for this condition is the abolition of mass immigration, drastic changes in our citizenship and naturalization laws, compulsory education laws for aliens, and a federal racial census as a basis for reconstruction work.

Boston Transcript p6 N 7 '25 750w

"His discussion is interesting and his comments pointed."

+ Ind 115:332 S 19 '25 120w

"The book is thoughtful and suggestive and will commend itself to those who have the welfare of this country at heart."

+ Outlook 141:361 N 4 '25 230w

Survey 55:243 N 15 '25 70w

SPIELMANN, PERCY EDWIN. Bituminous substances; scientific progress of practical importance during the last fifteen years. 206p $4.50 Van Nostrand [15s Benn]

553.27 Bituminous materials [25-13222]

"Bitumen or asphalt, which besides its most important industrial use as a paving substance, is used in a large variety of manufactures, is chemically the least understood of the petroleum products. The author, who is a research worker in these subjects, with much technical experience, here brings together and discusses what is known of the chemistry of bitumens and examines their physical properties."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"The text throughout the book is well filled with references to a Bibliography, at the back of the book. This bibliography is cross-indexed with authors' names so that reference to particular authors can be found any place in the book. The volume is a valuable addition to asphalt literature and will be greatly appreciated by those who desire to go further into the subject of testing and manufacturing materials in which bitumens are used."

+ Eng N 94:862 My 21 '25 580w

"The book is well printed with large type, but the arrangement of references is inconvenient, all of them being in the back of the book. It contains some useful information for the chemist conversant with bituminous substances, but it can hardly be recommended to the average chemist who wishes to obtain detailed empirical information on bituminous substances, or a well-digested and well-correlated review of the present scientific knowledge of bitumens." A. C. Fieldner

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:545 My '25 380w

Reviewed by W. D. Bancroft

J Phys Chem 29:892 J1 '25 750w

"In 'Genesis of Petroleum' the author revealed his knack of extracting successfully the pith of published work from many sources and of presenting it in the form of a coherent summary of progress; in the present work he does much the same thing, supplementing data thus obtained with results of personal research and that of his former colleagues. One cannot but welcome a book of this description, even though it must be regarded as an interim report and be subject to the limitations of such publications." H. B. M.

+ Nature 115:868 Je '25 260w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:25 Ap '25

The Times [London] Lit Sup p123 F 19 '25 60w

SPIELMANN, PERCY EDWIN. Constituents of coal tar. (Monographs on industrial chemistry) 219p $4.25 (12s 6d) Longmans

668.7 Coal tar 24-25436

"The object of this book is to be useful to those chemists who are interested in the individual constituent substances that together form coal tar.' (Preface) The author considers the varieties of coal tar, and classifies the many constituents which enter into their composition, describing their preparation, estimation, properties and reactions, and in some cases their uses. A good knowledge of organic chemistry on the part of the reader is presupposed. A bibliography with 525 entries is appended."—Pratt

"Books of this type represent a very great amount of earnest and painstaking effort and the author is to be commended for the very complete way in which he has carried out his conception, producing a finished work which should be extremely valuable in many laboratories." J. M. Weiss

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:327 Mr '25 280w

"The main part of the book is, of course, straight information of a very valuable nature. There are a number of minor points, however, which are of general interest." W. D. Bancroft

+ J Phys Chem 29:367 Mr '25 750w

"Intended for the use of chemists in the real sense of the word, whether academic or industrial, who wish to acquaint themselves with the general practice and most recent development of the branch of applied chemistry under treatment. In these ways Dr. Spielmann's book is a notable addition to the series and will be welcomed by all who desire to follow the most recent advances in coal tar chemistry." J. F. T.

+ Nature 115:411 Mr 21 '25 650w

Pratt Technical Books p17 '24

SPLAWN, WALTER MARSHALL WILLIAM.
Consolidation of railroads. 290p $3 (12s 6d)
Macmillan

385 Railroads—United States. Railroads—
Consolidation 25-4578

The Transportation act of 1920 provided for the grouping of the railroads of the United States into a limited number of systems according to a plan to be prepared by the Interstate commerce commission. The author deals with this proposal and gives a summary of the Ripley report upon which the commission based its tentative plan, and of the hearings in reference to the groupings that would best meet the requirements of the law. The final chapters are given to the arguments for and against consolidation.

"The reviewer commends this book to all students of the consolidation question, and particularly to those who believe that consolidation will furnish a practical solution of the railroad rate problem. Though a considerable portion of the material—notably the summary of the several plans—is already familiar to them, they will find much evidence dug out of the Record and Briefs that will make it difficult for them to retain their views as to the efficacy of consolidation as a solution of railroad ills." Eliot Jones

+ Am Econ R 15:316 Je '25 650w

Ann Am Acad 120:171 Jl '25 120w

Booklist 22:12 O '25

BookM 61:adv Ap '25 70w

"Professor Splawn has thought hard, worked harder to interpret, to suggest, to doubt what this tentative consolidation will do, and really one may profit, no matter what he brings to the book."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 18 '25 160w

+ Harvard Business R 4:127 O '25 160w

"A very timely and unusually impartial study of a woefully misunderstood and usually partisan issue. Professor Splawn has managed to deal with a highly technical problem in a way that will satisfy the general reader as well as the student." C. M. Morrison

+ Lit R p5 Jl 18 '25 260w

"The summary of arguments against consolidation contains a number of shrewd points. But the author has less than a school-boy's appreciation of the true nature of economic waste." G. Soule

— + New Repub 43:78 Je 10 '25 1150w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p3 Ap 12 '25 1000w

St Louis p339 S '25

"The summary is carefully prepared, comprehensive, and well balanced. The book will form an excellent background for those who are or may be interested in the proposals now under discussion or soon to be advanced, and who may desire to understand better the debates which are likely to take a substantial part of the time of the next congress." W. J. Cunningham

+ Sat R of Lit 1:706 Ap 25 '25 800w

"Prof Splawn's book does not take into consideration the voluntary movements toward consolidation made within the past year. But this does not impair its usefulness as a summary and criticism of federal policy. What does impair its usefulness is the lack of careful revision of the text, most apparent in the descriptive chapters, and the extremely careless stenographic work or proofreading as shown in certain sections."

— + Springf'd Republican p6 F 16 '25 420w

SPRAU, GEORGE. Meaning of literature.
346p $1.40 Scribner

801 Literature 25-10503

The author's purpose in the book is to help the student and reader along the way to an intelligent and sympathetic appreciation of the art of letters. The various types of literature considered are the essay, the lyric, the epic, the short story, the novel, and the drama. An appendix presents a group of representative studies with thoughtful questions evoking criticism and analysis of each.

"It is not often that we encounter in a book written primarily for classroom purposes so much modernity of thought and individuality of opinion; and it is by virtue of these qualities that Professor Sprau's volume should appeal no less to the connoisseur than to the student." H. A. J.

+ Lit R p5 Ag 29 '25 130w

"The business of naming and describing the various literary forms and pointing out how they resemble one another and why they are dissimilar, has been gone into a great many times, yet it still retains its professorial attractions. 'The Meaning of Literature' simply does it once more—competently, diffusedly, sedately."

+ N Y Tribune p11 Je 21 '25 280w

"Might be useful as an introductory book for a course of reading in literature."

Wis Lib Bul 21:197 Jl '25

SPRINGER, THOMAS GRANT. Red cord; with an introd. by John Luther Long. 302p il
$2 Brentano's

25-17277

A Chinese romance. "Its characters might have walked into the pages from any one of hundreds of China's villages—Wo Fat, the peasant farmer, father of Wo Loie, she of the tea rose cheeks and shapely body; Ho Fah Lee, junk captain and Outside Kingdom man; So Ling Gee, plump merchant, henpecked, but a shrewd bargainer; Yet Hing Chow, the new ruler of the district, and Wang Ho, kindly old soothsayer, whose knowledge of human nature was more potent than his divining sticks." (Lit R)

"The working out of the story is fascinating, occasionally a bit lengthy, as all things Oriental should be, very eastern in its flavor, probably improbable, and altogether delightful."

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 30 '25 350w

"Those who are interested in the strange ways of Cathay will like the book."

Ind 115:508 O 31 '25 60w

"What a droll, delightful story this is, with its Chinese fragrance, its subtleties, its irony, the half-veiled frankness of its love interest." J. J. McLaughlin

+ Lit R p6 O 17 '25 500w

N Y Times p22 S 20 '25 620w

"Mr. Springer handles the town better than the individual, now and then with a touch of true lyric elan. His difficulty is his manner of explaining what So Ling Gee, or Wo Fat, or Ho Fah Lee is going to say, and then making him say it. The book in consequence is approximately twice as long as it should be. It is, indeed, a twice-told tale—once in the first person and once in the third. One should skip every other paragraph. Thus in the end one will remember of it many lovely passages and no little entertainment." Leonard Cline

+ — N Y Tribune p14 N 1 '25 560w

"Mr. Springer brings his story off with fine fervor and seldom lapses from the swift pace which he sets himself. It is an interesting and romantic novel."

+ N Y World p7m N 8 '25 160w

SPRINGER, T. G.—Continued

"I have never, until Mr. Springer's book came into my hands, read a Chinese novel written in English. I have always felt that Chinese books should be written only in the Chinese language and read only by Chinamen and Chinawomen. But now I am convinced that all the Chinese novels should be written by Mr. Springer and read by everybody."

Oliver Herford

+ Sat R of Lit 2:374 D 5 '25 550w

SPURR, JOSIAH EDWARD, and WORMSER, FELIX EDGAR, eds. Marketing of metals and minerals; a series of articles by specialists. 675p il $6 McGraw

553 Metal trade. Mineral industries

25-6713

"Series of 64 articles dealing with 92 metals and minerals, and constituting the first systematic treatment of the subject. Generous space is given to non-metallic minerals. Originally published in 'Engineering and mining journal-press.'"—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"Prior to this publication, there had been practically no literature on the subject of the marketing of metals and minerals. The material in this book represents the knowledge which the specialists have personally gained through many years of practice of their trade."

H. T. Warshaw

+ Am Econ R 15:507 S '25 1300w

"Useful, as there is little collected material on the subject."

+ Booklist 21:362 Jl '25

"Up to the present there has been no single source of marketing information in this field, and the present book unquestionably will satisfy nearly every requirement. It is safe to say that no other book contains such complete market data, and edited in such an able manner."

+ Chem & Met Eng 32:877 N '25 120w

Harvard Business R 4:127 O '25 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:407 Jl '25

SPYKMAN, NICHOLAS J. Social theory of Georg Simmel. 297p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

301 Sociology. Simmel, Georg 25-10948

Georg Simmel, 1858-1918, was a German social philosopher who sought to do for the social sciences what Kant did for science in general. This study deals with his conception of sociology as a science and with his contributions to the methodology of the social sciences.

"The author has not escaped liability for the usual quota of proof-reading oversights. . . It is devoutly to be hoped that American sociologists will show themselves wise enough to use the book as it deserves." A. W. Small

Am J Soc 31:84 Jl '25 1550w

SQUIRE, JOHN COLLINGS (SOLOMON EAGLE, pseud.). Grub Street nights entertainments. 264p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

24-31097

Nine short stories by the editor of The London Mercury, where most of them have already appeared. They are delicately ironic tales of the Grub Street fraternity and of the way literary reputations are made. Contents: The man who kept a diary; The best seller; The success; The golden silens; Baxteriana; The lecture; The cemetery; The painful dilemma; The man who wrote free verse.

Booklist 21:235 Mr '25

"From the gayest to the most grave, they are all unusually readable sketches from a clever and fun-loving pen." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 21 '25 500w

"A pleasant collection of stories dealing with the humors of literary life. Mr. Squire tells a story skillfully and well; whether it be sad or satirical or gay, it is always competently done."

+ Ind 114:386 Ap 4 '25 70w

"The plots are frugal in development though frequently rich in dramatic material; the treatment is that of the casual, assured essayist; the result is a most engaging volume of such light reading as does not smirk at intelligence."

Hugo Sonnenschein

Lit R p9 F 21 '25 380w

"Mr. Squire's short stories of literary and journalistic life are quiet, adroit, and when they intend to be, amusing. They have none of the essential qualities of literature."

+ — Nation and Ath 36:138 O 25 '24 100w

"For everything that is pleasant, pointed, graceful, imaginative in his essays, the literary worldliness which enriches his criticism, the humorous charm which distinguishes him as a personage—all these things turn up more delightful than ever when they are run for the machinery of a clever plot." E. V.

+ New Repub 42:246 Ap 22 '25 400w

N Y Times p19 Ja 25 '25 400w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Tribune p11 Mr 8 '25 720w

Reviewed by Gerald Gould

Sat R 138:426 O 25 '24 850w

"The whole collection absolutely justifies the title, being an entertainment which really entertains."

+ Spec 133:848 N 29 '24 100w

"The most charming of all the tales is 'The Success'; and its tone, gentler and much less shrewdly ironical than that of the others, gives it distinction in the book. Grub-streeters are pretty thick-skinned, thanks to their experience; and there is nothing here that is sharper than is good for them. And the irony is not all directed at the writers. The public gets a scratch now and then."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p648 O 16 '24 420w

STACPOOLE, HENRY DE VERE STACPOOLE. Gates of morning. 298p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hutchinson]

25-2964

To the beach of Karolin, an atoll island in the South seas, come Dick Lestrangle and Katafa, a native girl of singular beauty, whom he loves, they being the only survivors of a savage attack on Palm Tree island, just across the lagoon. Here Dick meets Le Moan, a half-Spanish beauty, who falls in love with him. The coming of white men to Karolin brings treachery, bloodshed and an epidemic of sickness to the peaceful little island. Le Moan, believing herself to be the cause of this evil sickness which has fastened itself upon Dick, gives her life to save him.

Boston Transcript p8 My 29 '25 160w
Cleveland p68 Je '25

"This is a story worth reading, for it is told with a pen dipped in the poetry of sunsets and in the spindrift scattered by the sea. The reader feels that Mr. Stacpoole has caught rather more of the real atmosphere of the South Sea than falls to the lot of most authors who make the effort." H. S. Hammill

+ Lit R p12 Ap 4 '25 450w

Nation and Ath 37:274 My 30 '25 200w

"The present story certainly shows no development of the author's peculiar powers, and neither in glow of description nor in the delineation of character can it compare with 'The Blue Lagoon.' It is, however, a good yarn of the islands and does to a great extent carry out Mr. Stacpoole's intention to show us the last phase of what he calls the Golden Age of the Eastern Pacific."

+ — New Statesman 25:supxiv My 23 '25 320w

"The tale is interesting, vivid in its descriptions of the native character and point of view."

+ N Y Times p24 F 8 '25 600w

N Y Tribune p10 F 8 '25 260w

"The Gates of Morning" is a story full of colorful South Sea life and adventure. It makes smooth and easy reading, but it is by no means to be compared as a work of romantic fancy with that "Blue Lagoon" which gave Mr. Stacpoole his first substantial hold on the seekers of purely popular literature."

+ — N Y World p4m F 1 '25 230w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p370 My 28 '25 160w

Wis Lib Bul 21:200 J1 '25

STALEY, SEWARD CHARLES. Games, contests and relays. 354p il $3 Barnes, A. S. & Co.

790 Games. Sports 24-22959

"The book selects from the athletics and sports of America, England, Greece, Spain, Italy, France, Germany, and Sweden, hundreds of competitive sports which he has sorted into games for the lower grades, for the upper, for the junior and for the senior high school, for the colleges and athletic clubs, for girls and women. A chapter on the pedagogy of games works out the ways of assigning and training leaders among the players, of training in fairness, of stopping the play before it becomes boring, and of a large assortment of considerations which have been found to make play produce the effects for which it is recommended."—Educ R

Booklist 21:141 Ja '25

"The mere turning of the pages makes your blood tingle. Photographs and diagrams make it all easy. If you have made the melancholy discovery that some of the playgrounds under your supervision are going stale for lack of variety and real sport, sprinkle copies of this book among the play directors."

+ Educ R 69:111 F '25 370w

"The book will prove helpful to physical directors and to any others who have occasion to direct play activities. The classification of the activities according to the age of the persons with whom they can best be used is a valuable feature of the volume. The completeness of the descriptions enables either amateur or professional to use them without constant reference to the abbreviations and technical terms so often found in books of the kind." J. M. McCallister

+ School R 33:153 F '25 400w

"The games are classified according to the age group for which they are suitable. There is at the same time a brief discussion of 'The Pedagogy of Games' and discussions of methods in the control of games. There is at the end a bibliography that is of considerable value."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 1 '25 160w

STANOYEVICH, MILIVOY STOYAN, ed. Slavonic nations of yesterday and today. (Handbook ser.) 415p $2.40 Wilson, H.W.

947 Slavs 25-23231

Thru select readings from recent articles in English, French and American periodicals five Slavonic nations, the Russians, Czechoslovaks, Poles, Serbs and Bulgarians, are here studied. The selections chosen afford a general view of these peoples, their civilization, language and literature. A bibliography is included.

Springf'd Republican p16 O 30 '25 130w

"Useful for all those who want excellently chosen and widely representative stuff on all sides of the question. As a means of establishing an orientation in the field, nothing else equals this handbook."

+ Survey 55:382 D 15 '25 40w

STANSBURY, CHARLES FREDERICK. Lake of the Great Dismal. 238p il $4 A. & C. Boni 917.55 Dismal Swamp 25-5093

"This book falls within the category of localized treatises which may be expected to multiply in these still under-described United States. Virginia's most curious natural aberration laid strong hold on Mr. Stansbury—so strong that for more than a dozen years preceding his death in 1922 he visited and studied it whenever opportunity offered. The fruit of this obsession is the only volume thus far devoted solely to the swamp and its broad lake. They are treated historically, descriptively, and entertainingly, and its author, well known to a generation of New York newspaper workers, is discussed sympathetically by Don Marquis and portrayed in the frontispiece by Cesare."—N Y World

"This is an admirable little book, of value both to the scientist and the popular reader." E. S. Balch

+ Geog R 16:159 Ja '26 300w

"His descriptions are always colorful, and through his narrative there runs a trickle of genial humor that usually finds expression in some whimsical fancy or in kindly account of the people of the region. His book is a compendium of information and entertainment that few people could read without much savor of satisfaction."

+ N Y Times p11 F 8 '25 1100w

"The Lake of the Great Dismal" is an extraordinarily inconsistent book, for Stansbury in one chapter is enthralled by the morbid loveliness of the lake and in the next preoccupied with the material development of the lush land around it. These inconsistencies are, without doubt, an essential part of journalistic equipment, of the necessity to tell the facts rather than to capture an illusion for which facts are responsible only in part." Emily Clark

N Y Tribune p8 Mr 8 '25 700w

"A creditable, readable and valuable book."

+ N Y World p7m Mr 29 '25 140w

STAPLETON, ALAN. London alleys, byways and courts. 183p il $5 Dodd [15s Lane]

914.21 London—Description. London—Historic houses, etc. [25-3774]

By letter press and drawings Mr Stapleton sketches London's innumerable little lanes and courts—the old London which is gradually passing away. He describes many old and historic buildings and recalls their associations. There are sixty-seven full-page drawings.

"Sixty odd pencil sketches with accompanying anecdotes comprise a delightful history of 'courts and alleys of old London—some of these—places where men lived before the dawn of our ultra-civilization; places where men still live.' Mr. Stapleton is an excellent raconteur. The book will endear London to Londoners, and strangers will heed the persistent call of the bowbells."

+ Bookm 61:605 J1 '25 200w

"Those who want to explore the nooks and corners of London—to see, in fact, things not noted in the general guidebooks—will find just what they want in 'London Alleys.'" J: St L. Strachey

+ N Y Times p4 N 30 '24 80w

"His sixty-seven sketches enable us to look with him down charming vistas. His pages, too fond of punning sometimes, but lively with anecdotes, with curious incidents and literary allusions, fill these vistas with the activity of former times."

+ N Y Tribune p12 Ap 19 '25 300w

"Nowhere on earth, except perhaps in Philadelphia, can be found so many miles of monotony. The lover of the dull and the drab will be rewarded in perusing the book." Frank Sullivan

N Y World p7m Mr 22 '25 110w

STAPLETON, ALAN—Continued

"He has preserved the outward form of many old buildings and quaint corners which have already passed away or are doomed to speedy disappearance. The letter-press which accompanies them is gossipy and entertaining."

+ Sat R 138:474 N 8 '24 100w

"It is full of information, but he makes no pretence to the literary graces. One may salute Mr. Stapleton as an enthusiast, but enthusiasm is not enough."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p756 N 20 '24 550w

STARKIE, WALTER FITZWILLIAM. Jacinto Benavente. 218p $3.50 Oxford [10s 6d Milford] 862 Benavente y Martfnez, Jacinto

25-11623

"There is a brief account of Benavente's life at the beginning of the book and a 'Conclusion' of some twenty pages at the end. The rest is entirely devoted to a detailed discussion of the plays. Mr. Starkie divides them, somewhat arbitrarily, into two groups: realistic plays and plays of fantasy. The first includes the satirical plays, the dialect plays, and those picturing middle-class life. The second embraces psychological studies, romantic comedies and plays of pageantry, and grotesques."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"Mr. Starkie's book is a most careful study of the varied aspects of the author's work. It is written from a wide knowledge of the literature of Spain and of other countries, and from a sincere admiration for the Spanish author. It is a scholarly rather than a popular treatment of the subject."

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 2 '25 350w

"This is a notable little volume, comprehensive, scholarly and bearing indisputable marks of industry and zeal. It is at all points infinitely superior to the ordinary theatrical biography, compact of press-agent propaganda. But Mr. Starkie, although he can be sharply critical at times, is nevertheless plainly an enthusiast, and it may be doubted whether he does not try to put his hero upon a somewhat higher pedestal than he really deserves." J. R. Towse

+ — Lit R p5 My 29 '25 750w

New Statesman 25:108 My 9 '25 800w

"Mr. Starkie's handling of his material is eminently workmanlike and shows a thorough acquaintance with the sources from which Benavente drew. It is to be adversely criticized on the ground that too much space is given to analysis of the plot structures of the plays and teachers in a setting of narrative style that is clear and concise."

+ — N Y Times p22 Je 14 '25 650w

"Mr. Starkie's study is a good example of what criticism should not be. In the first place, through too great eagerness in erudition, he has achieved what may be called synthetic criticism—his own ideas, that is to say, have yielded first place to the ideas of all the critics and philosophers he could bring to bear on his subject's work, however, irrelevant. He falls, therefore, quite short of his purpose." Ellseo Vivas

— N Y Tribune p10 Je 7 '25 460w

"If we have any quarrel with Mr. Starkie, it is that he has been almost too thorough and painstaking. Benavente, who began writing in 1892, has produced over a hundred plays, and Mr. Starkie dissects so many of them individually that it becomes a little difficult at times for us to see the wood for the trees. Apart from this one criticism, however, we have nothing but praise for Mr. Starkie, who writes very pleasantly and with obvious authority." Gilbert Thomas

+ — Spec 134:sup661 Ap 25 '25 480w

"His conclusions on the subject of Benavente's art are almost buried beneath a mass of quotations, allusions, parallels, and gleanings from innumerable Spanish, Italian, English, and French authors."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p64 Ja 29 '25 900w

STARR, HARRIS ELWOOD. William Graham Sumner. 557p il $4 Holt

B or 92 Sumner, William Graham

25-11703

William Graham Sumner was for nearly forty years professor of political and social science at Yale and head of the liberal movement in the faculty. He was a great teacher and student, the author of many books on social and economic subjects, notably "Folkways," and an ardent advocate of free trade. This biography, written by one of his graduate students, makes clear his character and teaching and the extent of his influence.

Reviewed by Edmund Noble

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 11 '25 2600w

"Mr. Starr in his life of William Graham Sumner has followed the plan of classic biography, placing his hero's development and growth with meticulous care. In so doing he has paid, as it seems to me, too much attention to Sumner's years as a student and clergyman and has consequently been restricted in his discussion of Sumner's great period as a teacher of sociology at Yale college. The latter half of his book is both more interesting and more informing than the first half; one wishes that the proportions were different." A. J.

+ — Ind 115:191 Ag 15 '25 650w

"An excellent biography." W: L. Phelps

+ Int Bk R p661 S '25 2150w

"It is regrettable that Mr. Starr has 213 of his 550 pages on Sumner's beginnings. We want to know what that brawling fighter said, thought and did. It is also regrettable that his biographer should have wasted so many pages on the cat-calls yelled at Sumner by ignorant penny-a-liners and on defenses set up by fellows of the same stamp. . . Let us hope he will some day have a biographer with imagination." C: W. Thompson

— Lit R p4 S 26 '25 1600w

"Writing simply and clearly, Mr. Starr has portrayed a masculine man who was as gentle and kindly as he was pugnacious. The portrait comports with the singularly beautiful frontispiece, reproduced from a photograph. No one who has thought of Sumner as a 'hard' man will be able to think so of him again after a sincere contemplation of these two likenesses." F. H. Giddings

+ Nation 121:669 D 9 '25 1250w

"Such an individual presents obvious difficulties to the biographical portrait painter. Dr. Starr has gone far in overcoming these difficulties and in drawing a clearly recognizable picture of one of the foremost of American teachers in a setting of narrative style that is facile without being verbose or prosy." A. S. Will

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 26 '25 1950w

"The big biography, worshipful as becomes a student in the Sumner school, yet not wholly indiscriminating, will hand on to the future some idea, at any rate, of the rugged, hard-hitting fighter who for a third of a century dominated social thinking at New Haven." H: R. Mussey

+ N Y Tribune p13 N 1 '25 500w

Reviewed by Philip Coan

Sat R of Lit 1:927 Jl 25 '25 650w

STEELE, WILBUR DANIEL. Taboo. 260p $2 Harcourt

25-16651

"'Taboo' is the story of the situation which arises when a man falls in love with the woman whom he has believed to be his daughter, but who proves in the end to be the child of his best friend and of the wife whom he loved passionately. It is easy to see the immense possibilities of such a situation—a man thrown constantly in the company of a girl who is the offspring of the two people he loved best in the world. At length, when, by a logical and extremely dramatic incident, the truth comes out, the face of the whole matter is violently changed, but the 'taboo,' the horror of incestuous love, still clings like an evil odor to a relationship which, in its technical sense, is the most natural and admirable thing in the world."—N Y Tribune

"A brave and brilliant performance. That it is terrifying should not bar it from the homes of those accustomed to the modern sex story. There is assuredly nothing censorable in it. One small quarrel one may have with his style. His flapper language, when he uses it in the midst of an otherwise mellifluous and fluid manner, strikes one as oddly out of place and not particularly well done. Otherwise, here is a fine and a moving story, told with restraint and precision."

+ — Bookm 62:74 S '25 260w

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 26 '25 1050w

"Mr. Steele writes competently with an easy, practiced swing, but his characters are unreal; his story is so smooth that its affectation becomes obvious."

+ — Ind 115:363 S 26 '25 100w

"The book seems to invite a wide reading. It sways interestingly on the edge of the indecent, to recover itself in a fashion at the finish; it holds the tension of a coiled spring, with full promise of release and surprise; and the strident commonness of its conversational give-and-take will be far from a hindrance in many quarters. Yet, save for certain points of high virtuosity, one is more than justified in viewing such a production with regret."

H: B. Fuller

+ — Int Bk R p818 N '25 600w

"The novel is very well written, the theme handled with care to make it as little offensive as possible. Though the novel contains but three important characters, it has sufficient variety. And considered as a piece of craftsmanship, it is altogether admirable." L. M. Field

+ Lit R p2, Ag 29 '25 600w

New Repub 44:211 O 14 '25 180w

"Throughout the action, Mr. Steele has handled his extremely difficult theme deftly and delicately, with much subtlety, more than a little use of intimation and of suggestion. But this very need and use of subtlety has its drawbacks, blurring as it does both action and the characters, making them seem at once indistinct and unreal."

+ — N Y Times p16 S 13 '25 700w

"On turning the last page of this altogether unique book I am left with an impression of confusion, not as to the story, which is clear enough, but as to Mr. Steele's method of telling and the actual effect he has achieved; there is so much in it that is excellent and so much that does not quite come off. There is, certainly, an odd feeling of unreality. I feel that the three characters of 'Taboo' are, like the forest in the tale, creatures who have never been. Yet it is an arresting story, with long stretches of undeniably powerful writing." L. Bromfield

+ — N Y Tribune p5 S 20 '25 800w

"This novel is in its conception and in its execution a story of the first water. It is complete, compact. It has substance in virtually every word. It rings with integrity and validity. It is a shining golden needle in the haystack of contemporary fiction." Van Vechten Hostetter

+ N Y World p4m S 6 '25 560w

"The merits of Mr. Steele's novel do not mitigate its failure. He has written a narrative rich in promise, but the promise is unfulfilled. He has intervened, as author, to save his characters from the commission of a sin, and himself from the solution of a problem. The effect of this intervention is to deprive his narrative of the inevitability, the passion, and the tragic mood which it so imperatively demands." Lloyd Morris

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:362 D 5 '25 750w

"The problem rather than the characters makes the story; in spite of all our interest we never forget that we are reading a novel and that this clever plotmaker, the author, has got everybody in a devil of a mess and has got to get them out of it! Having found out we lose interest in the people and remember them only as puppets in a very strange drama."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a S 27 '25 460w

"A book which announces itself as a study in taboos contains no social criticism of the taboo at all. It supplies only the psychological record of a man who happened to get caught in one; just as another book might detail the emotions of a man who had been run over by an automobile without offering any suggestions as to the solution of the traffic problem."

Walter Millis

Survey 55:310 D 1 '25 390w

STEELE, WILBUR DANIEL. Terrible woman, and other one act plays; introd. by Frank Shay. 155p $1.75 (6s) Appleton

812

25-6089

A volume of four one act plays which comprise the best of Mr Steele's contribution to the Provincetown players. The title play is a New England comedy. The central character is Martha Hume, a gentle, matronly woman who very cleverly prevents her husband from eloping, and her small boy from running away. The remaining plays are "The giants' stair," a drama of fear in a lonely mountain cabin; "Not smart," a satire on parlor "radicalism"; and "Ropes" a lighthouse drama.

Booklist 22:111 D '25

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 25 '25 260w

Cleveland p120 D '25

"All the plays are extremely actable in addition to being readable, are well constructed, demonstrate a finished technique and are liberally spiced with dramatic moments. Mr. Steel shows that his customary morbidity of subject matter and thought can be readily lightened by understanding and penetrating humor, a versatility that is not shared by Mr. O'Neill and some others." W: Berry

+ Lit R p9 My 9 '25 480w

"The volume shows that when men of Mr. Steele's literary skill turn to the theater and take the trouble to master its exacting requirements their peculiar virtues come across. When they don't come across it is because the writers will not or cannot, master the theatrical technique." W. P. Eaton

N Y Tribune p11 My 3 '25 300w

"All four plays should be popular among amateur and Little Theatre organizations aiming to follow in the footsteps of the old Provincetown Playhouse group where these plays have already proved artistic successes."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:712 Ap 25 '25 200w

"Four very good little one-act plays."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p353 My 21 '25 120w

"Mr. Steele does not reach, in these plays, the high level of attainment represented by his stories, but he has sincerity and imagination, as well as dramatic ingenuity."

+ — Theatre Arts Mo 9:563 Ag '25 130w

STEEP, THOMAS. Chinese fantasies. 223p $2 Century

915.1 China—Social life and customs. National characteristics, Chinese

The title admirably fits these impressionistic sketches of odd aspects of Chinese life and manners—their peculiar etiquette, superstitions, dress, food, their attitude toward foreigners, their idea of humor, their drama and the customs of the theater. There is a chapter on the empress dowager Tzu Hsi "the woman that henpecked a nation," and one on Chinese women.

STEEP, THOMAS—Continued

"It is a book for an idle hour, a delightful potpourri of facts and impressions, entertaining and indirectly instructive."

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 9 '25 300w

"It is interesting, but it is not inspiring. It lacks that imaginative sympathy which translates unlike to unlike."

—Ind 115:589 N 21 '25 60w

"He has neglected no sphere of interest. In matters of fact, his knowledge rings always true. In matters of the spirit, he is at times lyrical—he writes a prose poem about jade and a miniature epic concerning the unforgettable dog whose name was 'Maskee.'" Angie Ausley

+ Int Bk R p42 D '25 650w

"The book is palpably not a tourist's hodgepodge. It reveals mellowed observation and the sympathy that quickens insight." J: J. McLaughlin

+ Lit R p8 N 7 '25 160w

"Thomas Steep has done a clever thing in collecting into a book as much traveler's gossip about China as he could find. It is quaint coin, and not unentertaining." E. Vincent

+ New Repub 45:118 D 16 '25 60w

"His book is charming, if not profound. Some of his observations on Chinese life are extremely amusing."

+ N Y Times p7 N 1 '25 470w

"Here is that rare thing, a humorous and downright human book of travel—a book about the Orient that neither condescends nor sentimentalizes." Mary Willcox

+ N Y Tribune p16 O 25 '25 520w

"With a fine imagination and delicate humor, Mr. Steep has written this collection of sketches and impressions of a country that must always seem fantastic to Western eyes. The book is rich in odd bits of Oriental superstition and fancy."

+ N Y World p7m D 13 '25 180w

"The book is delicately humorous and filled throughout with the charm and beauty of old China."

+ Outlook 141:529 D 2 '25 420w

R of Rs 72:555 N '25 40w

STEFANSSON, VILHJALMUR. Northward ho! 181p il $2.25; cheaper ed 80c Macmillan 919.8 Arctic regions. Eskimos 25-14956

An account of the Far North and its people, selected from the writings of Stefánsson and adapted for boys and girls by Julia Augusta Schwartz.

"Adapted for children of the fourth or fifth grades."

Booklist 22:123 D '25

"One cannot imagine a better book for boys and girls to read along with their geographies and histories of the United States than this vivid and simply written account of the Far North."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:248 O 24 '25 160w

STEFANSSON, VILHJALMUR, and IRWIN, VIOLET MARY. Kak, the copper Eskimo. 253p $2.25; school ed $1.20 Macmillan [5s Harrap] 24-20561

"'Kak' is a 12 years-old Eskimo boy, and many are the adventures he has with his dogs, sled, and other things which go to make up his life."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 21:237 Mr '25

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

Int Bk R p202 F '25 150w

"The book gives a clear impression of a happy, healthful existence, reasonably comfortable and vastly contented."

+ N Y Tribune p6 Ja 25 '25 350w

"The story suffers a little in being written down to reach children. The conversation with its apparently American slang, is at times impossible and artificial and detracts from the excellent informative character of the book. It is, nevertheless, full of fun and adventure, and it is not sugar-coated information, but a new and original story for children."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 14 '24 230w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p269 Ap 16 '25 100w

STEFANSSON, VILHJALMUR, and KNIGHT, JOHN IRVINE. Adventure of Wrangel island. 424p il $6 Macmillan

919.8 Arctic regions. Wrangel island 25-8914

The adventure of Wrangel island started with the aim of securing the island for Canada and proving its value for colonization and as a flying base. Four young men, two of them with Arctic experience, composed the expedition to the island, which sailed in September 1921. They had many difficulties, as Mr Stefánsson also had in trying to raise funds for their maintenance on the island. In the summer of 1923, Harold Noice was sent to Wrangel to discuss the situation with the party of occupation and bring back any of them who wished to return. A few months later came the tragic news that the entire party had perished. Much space is given to the history of the Wrangel island documents, to Noice's connection with the tragic story, and the controversy aroused.

Booklist 21:377 Jl '25

"'The Adventure of Wrangel Island' has a multiple appeal. To those who enjoy stories of hardship and conquest it will prove a story of dramatic incident and pathetic heroism. To those who enjoy detective stories, it will offer a problem in the unwinding of truths not clear at first glance. To those who know Mr. Stefánsson's vivid narratives of old, it gives, I think, the most of all. Can I say more?" J. F.

+ Bookm 61:470 Je '25 200w

"All of Mr. Stefánsson's books have been important, for his achievements have been great and his vision is far-seeing. None of them, however, records a more gallant and tragic story than this which is unfolded in the record of Wrangel Island. He possesses what many men of action lack, the ability to make the others' experience the startling wonder of his vision." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 25 '25 1300w

Reviewed by H. H. Langton

Canadian Hist R 6:262 S '25 2650w

"Told with a vigor, a veracity, and picturesqueness rare, even, in the greatest stories of explorers' heroism and adventure. The book is full of repetitions, owing to the controversial matters treated and retreated, but it is thrilling reading from cover to cover."

+ Ind 114:535 My 9 '25 170w

"Those who have followed Stefánsson through his career in the Arctic will find this book a necessary document rounding out the story of his most important lifework. Others will find in it a deeply moving story of one of the Arctic's tragic adventures." Bruce Gould

+ Int Bk R p525 Jl '25 1250w

Reviewed by H. G. Bryant

Lit R p2 Je 13 '25 1150w

"This romantic and vastly interesting story—a real adventure—relates to one of those disastrous expeditions heretofore all too common in the annals of the Far North." F: S. Dellenbaugh

Nation 121:464 O 21 '25 1100w

"If 'The Adventure of Wrangel Island' could be revised and issued in a new edition merging the charges and defenses into a coherent narrative and omitting much that concerns only Mr. Stefánsson personally or Harold Noice, it would be a much more readable volume." N: Roosevelt

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 26 '25 1450w

Reviewed by C. L. Skinner

N Y Tribune p1 Je 14 '25 1100w

"The controversial element adds the last touch of interest to the record of one of the most dramatic of Stefansson's ventures in the Arctic, although one in which he did not personally take part."

+ Outlook 140:341 J1 1 '25 250w

Pratt p32 autumn '25

R of Rs 71:670 Je '25 100w

St Louis p410 N '25

"This book, while it is written with more care to preserve the facts as they are known than to present them with literary grace, and while it thus loses some of the touch of personal vividness which it would have had had it been a narrative of Mr. Stefansson's own experience, is none the less one of the most interesting and tragic documents in Arctic history. It will be remembered when the Arctic has become our friend instead of the enemy it is commonly supposed to be, and the men who played their parts in it will be honored for their courage and their faith." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R of Lit 1:789 My 30 '25 850w

Wis Lib Bul 21:169 Je '25

STEHMAN, JONAS WARREN. Financial history of the American telephone and telegraph company. (Hart, Schaffner & Marx prize essays in economics) 339p $2.50 Houghton

384 American telephone and telegraph company 25-9550

The author begins his study of the American telephone and telegraph company with the invention of the telephone and the activities of the early Bell telephone companies. He discusses the policies which have governed the development of this great corporation, its financial structure and the effectiveness of government regulation.

"It is exhaustive and comprehensive with abundance of notes from source material."

+ Am Econ R 15:522 S '25 100w

Harvard Business R 4:127 O '25 120w

STEPHENS, JAMES. Poetry recital. 41p $1.50 (3s 6d) Macmillan

821 25-11382

The poems in this little volume are selected from Mr. Stephens's published work, with the addition of a number of new poems which have not appeared before.

Booklist 22:66 N '25

"Obviously Mr. Stephens is a poet neither great nor obscure. His chief safeguard is that his heart is a poet's heart; his source of weakness, a tendency to wander from native, unspoiled promptings. It does not seem likely that his apparent inclination to embrace metrical experiments and to weaken his natural gifts will take him much farther along the path to a deserved fame." R. B. M.

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 1 '25 500w

"A slender but attractive volume containing selections from a number of Mr. Stephens' books together with eleven poems which have not previously been published. Mr. Stephens is a poet of originality and charm; his subjects range from the most brutal to the most delicate and fragile, but his talent is fully competent in all of his different manners."

+ Ind 115:110 J1 25 '25 80w

Reviewed by V. Sackville-West

Nation and Ath 37:546 Ag 1 '25 120w

"James Stephens is a poet of marked limitations; but within those limitations as truly a lyrist as one will find today. His verses sing. They have the lilt that is so conspicuously the test of lyric poetry. And they have substance, the gossamer substance, that is also the test of lyric poetry. These when Stephens is at his best. The output is small: when culled it is still smaller. But the residuum is gold."

+ N Y Times p6 Je 28 '25 1750w

Reviewed by G. H. Conkling

No Am 222:157 S '25 320w

"He is a poet fairly bristling with individuality and eaten by the authentic spark Raciness of his own soil is always in his work, and Gaelic mastery of language and cadence." W: R. Benet

+ Outlook 140:404 J1 15 '25 150w

"Mr. Stephens has either definitely gone over to the prosaists, or is keeping back his best stuff for his own private purposes."

— Spec 135:271 Ag 15 '25 120w

"Mr. Stephens is curiously blended of the old ballad maker and the self-conscious modern. 'The Daisies,' for example, is a perfect folksong, composed of the simplest elements of emotion and completing its impulse in three stanzas of which every word proclaims its organic necessity. But in such poems as 'Green Weeds' or 'Geoffrey Keating' a subtle sophistication intrudes, without, however, making the verse brittle or merely clever because it is still subdued to an elementary impulse."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p460 J1 9 '25 650w

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS GEOFFREY LISLE HOLDSWORTH). The matriarch (Eng title Tents of Israel). 291p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Chapman & H.]

25-1015

This story of the Rakonitz family, Viennese Jews who spread over Europe and finally settled in London, is in part a true family chronicle beginning with the fifteen-year-old Babette, heroine of a Napoleonic legend. The family went on ramifying thru successive generations, chiefly by intermarriage, and always yielding unquestioning loyalty to the clan and the family tradition. An enormous number of characters appear on the stage, but the virility of the family and the interest of the story is concentrated in its women and, in particular, in Anastasia Rakonitz, Babette's granddaughter, a woman of immense vitality and ambition. When she dies at eighty-nine the matriarchy passes by tacit consent to the Toni of today, Anastasia's granddaughter.

Booklist 21:235 Mr '25

"One could pick flaws, but the main point is that 'The Matriarch' is a decidedly likable book." Isabel Paterson

+ — Bookm 61:85 Mr '25 230w

"It is a far bigger and more impressive story than any G. B. Stern has yet told." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 14 '25 1400w

Cleveland p12 F '25

"A brave attempt and in many ways an excellent piece of work. The stage is overcrowded and the reader becomes confused among the infinite ramifications of the Rakonitz clan. One wishes that Miss Stern would do it in three volumes or cut down the dramatis personae if she holds to the present limits. She is a writer capable of very fine work, if her style is not cramped."

+ — Ind 114:219 F 21 '25 130w

"The book is interesting in its presentation of a type of family life of which this twentieth century knows very little. It is for the most part admirably done, and its characters are real. There is about it a certain flavor of fine old port." L. M. F.

+ Int Bk R p212 F '25 720w

"An excellent story, smoothly threaded in and out of the Rakonitz cloth, woven in the end into a dramatic climax which brings the feeling upon its completion that one has finished a great and different novel." O. D. Russell

+ Lit R p12 Ja 31 '25 870w

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN—Continued

"The anecdotal detail, the adventures of the Rakonitz Tribe, wandering over Europe for a century and sending an advance-guard to England, are probably based on actual family records, and though bewildering in their multiplicity, they bring a comfortable sense of substance, of inexhaustible variety and circumstance."

+ Nation and Ath 36:66 O 11 '24 300w

"Although Anastasia is the titular heroine, the real hero is the family. To follow the elusive chronicle the reader must have frequent recourse to the genealogical table of over a hundred persons—cells in one organism. That in spite of the necessity of this apparatus the book retains the vitality of fiction is much but not all. For the Matriarch is more than fiction—it is a social record. . . It is a solid, vigorous and important book whose merit needs no exaggerated praise."

+ New Repub 41:291 F 4 '25 340w

Reviewed by J: Franklin

New Statesman 24:17 O 11 '24 400w

"It is by the tragic figure of the Matriarch herself that the book will be judged. So measured, it is nothing less than a triumph of literary achievement."

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 18 '25 1250w

"The book, in form and spirit, is a throw-back to a sounder tradition. It is planned on the lines of the Victorian and pre-Victorian novel, the novel of many-sided life in which sex was but one of the shoulders of the mountain. . . It is not a small thing to have conceived and constructed such a book, and I venture to prophesy that when nine-tenths of the year's work is utterly forgotten, this sane and unpretentious volume will live, for the historian as well as for the casual reader, as a convincing record of a century and a race." Clemence Dane

+ N Y Tribune p1 Ja 11 '25 2500w

Reviewed by J: W. Crawford

N Y World p7m Mr 15 '25 380w

Reviewed by J: W. Crawford

N Y World p4m My 10 '25 70w

"The conception is grand, but in the working out there is too much artificial simplicity—too much attribution to individuals of sentiment which no individual could utter, in order to label and emphasize a part in the plot." Gerald Gould

+ — Sat R 138:338 O 4 '24 400w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p574 S 18 '24 700w

Wis Lib Bul 21:56 F '25

"The book is masterly in plot and portrayal of character, fresh, surprising, consistent."

+ World Tomorrow 8:353 N '25 80w

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS GEOFFREY LISLE HOLDSWORTH). Thunderstorm. 235p $2 Knopf [7s 6d Chapman & H.]

25-11589

"Miss G. B. Stern's 'Thunderstorm' is a storm in a teacup. Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Morgan take a villa in Italy which they share with their friend Elizabeth and a retired army captain. They are looked after by Giovanna, a simple Italian body, and her husband, a monument of ingenuous vanity called Ettore. . . For the thunderstorm advertised in the title we have to wait till the middle page, or thereabouts, when Johnny, learning that a coveted publisher's readership has fallen vacant in London, decides to break up the household and leave Italy. Thereupon the storm bursts. They are all, Johnny and his wife included, secretly ashamed of having to cast off the devoted 'Vanna, who worships them as gods and cherishes them as children. Moreover, young Elizabeth wants her fiancé to fill the position that Johnny intends to take. The quarrel begins with two against two, the married pair against their guests, but develops so rapidly that before long everybody's hand is against everybody else. The result is a chapter or two of high-spirited comedy."—Sat R

Booklist 22:36 O '25

"G. B. Stern grows constantly in power. She began by capturing and dissecting live human beings for us. Then she vivisected a race. Now she has got all human nature within the four walls of her house and the two covers of her book. What does one need to know of the springs and workings of human nature which is not to be found in this book? The extraordinary simplicity of her method comes near deceiving us in regard to the magnitude of her intention. We can have only the deepest admiration for an author who can compress so amazingly much into what seems so little and so simple." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 22 '25 1350w

"A very delicate, charming, and poignant story."

+ Ind 115:163 Ag 8 '25 120w

"This book is one of those fragile sketches which should be executed very dexterously or not at all; the gentle, rather delicate and attenuated sentiment could so easily become bathetic or ridiculous. The story is a dainty porcelain vase, adorned with frail and charming figures to be set in a cabinet of selected objets d'art, not a strong earthen pot for kitchen use. It is written with a graceful simplicity and a tender beauty of diction that carry the intended effect." W: R. Langfeld

+ Int Bk R p614 Ag '25 420w

"One feels that after the fine and complicated performance of 'The Matriarch' Miss Stern decided that she was entitled to a rest from her labors, and being an extremely active and intelligent woman, she decided to spend her holiday in writing another book. 'Thunderstorm' represents the result of her holiday, and by the side of 'The Matriarch' it appears like a minnow beside a whale, but a minnow none the less which has a sparkle, an iridescence which the whale, for all his size, can never approach." L: Bromfield

+ Lit R p3 Jl 18 '25 520w

"A slight and amusing sketch of a quarrel among four excellent companions in an Italian villa. The quarrel itself is rather crudely managed, and the satire obvious." Edwin Muir

+ — Nation and Ath 37:328 Je 13 '25 60w

New Repub 44:78 S 9 '25 200w

"Miss Stern is at her lightest but not her brightest in 'Thunderstorm.'" P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 25:286 Je 20 '25 40w

"As narrative its separate portions are sewn together with treasurable compactness. Miss Stern's ingenuity in carrying the plot around a curve of scenic railway, back precisely to where it began and with absolutely nothing accomplished is remarkable. So ingeniously does the pivot of action shift from one person to another, in so brilliant a progression does one motive interlock all the characters, that the irony in the texture of 'Thunderstorm' creeps into its very construction."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 21 '25 1500w

"It is a genuine jeu d'esprit, this novel, amusing, light, technically flawless, generous for all its delicacy. It is handled with a felicitous combination of humor and shrewd observation; a straight sure way of looking people in the eye and smiling." L. G. Marshall

+ N Y Tribune p5 Ag 30 '25 450w

Pratt p40 autumn '25

Reviewed by Gerald Bullett

Sat R 139:676 Je 20 '25 380w

"Charmingly written episode of English life in Italy. The charm of the book is complete up to the moment when Miss Stern's flash of lightning rips across the Italian sky and disintegrates the English group. The trouble is that the flash is not the Almighty's, but Miss Stern's; and the effect is rather like turning a spotlight upon a blaze of sunshine, like putting new wine into old bottles, like letting fiction hobnob with fact." A. H. Gibbs

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:3 Ag 1 '25 720w

"The book is enjoyable, full of colour and written with penetration, but it hardly succeeds in being a novel. It is a collection of interwoven short stories about a single incident."

+ — Spec 135:205 Ag 1 '25 320w

"Her story is cut very fine, but curiously enough takes some time to get into its stride. It is part of her method to create an idyllic atmosphere for her most unrelenting effects. . . The preliminary introduction to Vanna and Ettore is a mass of delightful detail; each unobtrusive little piece of information is set amid vivid surroundings which reconstruct for us their entire history and capture their native charm."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p366 My 28 '25 520w

STEUART, MARY D. Romance of the Edinburgh streets. 245p il $3 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]

941.44 Edinburgh [25-13418]

Passing from street to street and building to building in her Edinburgh chronicle Miss Stuart recalls their history and romance and the names associated with each. Her book is history and biography in equal parts.

New Statesman 25:supvi My 23 '25 400w

"A fine book to read in preparation for a visit to one of the most beautiful cities in Great Britain."

+ Outlook 141:360 N 4 '25 40w

"A really good guide-book can be very good reading indeed, and such a book is the one before us."

+ Spec 135:203 Ag 1 '25 120w

"It is an interesting collection of romance and reminiscence which can hardly fail to appeal not only to the jealous and patriotic Scot but to all who care for well-chosen selections from the stormy and picturesque history of a famous capital."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p386 Je 4 '25 400w

STEVENS, JAMES. Paul Bunyan; woodcuts by Allen Lewis. 245p $2.50 Knopf

Legends, American. Lumbermen—Legends. Bunyan, Paul 25-26440

About a legendary character of prodigious size and strength, long the favorite genie of the logger's camp-fire, the author has gathered this collection of humorous tales, tall stories of the tall timber, truly American in proportion. Paul Bunyan and his ox, like Billy Beg and his bull, were able for anything. Maker of history, super-logger, inventor, orator, artist—the diversity in Paul's chosen rôles was only exceeded by his ability in each of them. Making history was his favorite, for it gave free rein to the imagination—and produced the book.

Reviewed by J. B. Wheelwright
Atlantic's Bookshelf O '25 550w
Booklist 21:341 Je '25

"James Stevens well merits to be known, by this epical work, as the prose Homer of that American mythology which has sprung gigantically into being from the campfires of our vast timberlands during the last half century." Percy MacKaye

+ Bookm 61:473 Je '25 700w

"Paul Bunyan is absolutely American, created with American exuberance and extravagance and this collection of his stories is of great value as well as interest."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 13 '25 420w

"This book is the achievement of an artist. By the manner of the telling no less than by the tales themselves, Stevens declares his kinship with those great story-tellers whose dreams men have gladly followed from the beginning of time." Elizabeth Kingsley

+ Int Bk R p424 My '25 650w

Reviewed by C. M. Morrison
Lit R p5 JI 3 '25 620w

"Paul Bunyan is the apotheosis of American tall tale-telling, but sheer exaggeration, even if it is 'real American,' becomes at length tiresome. Mr. Stevens, nevertheless, develops the characters of Paul's men with skilful realism. His account of The Black Duck Dinner is unique in American literature." J. F. Dobie

+ — Nation 121:237 Ag 26 '25 320w

"Better than any psychology is the rush and drive of these tremendous yarns, and very great indeed the simplicity and the beauty with which Mr. Stevens sets them before us." Stuart Chase

+ New Repub 43:186 JI 8 '25 1150w

Reviewed by J. D. Adams
N Y Times p5 Ap 12 '25 2000w

"Mr. Stevens has converted Paul Bunyan from folklore to farce and prepared it for the motion pictures, the burlesque show or the comic strips, probably with some dim satirical intention. If you want Paul Bunyan 'jazzed up' to the minute James Stevens is your author." S. P. Sherman

— N Y Tribune p1 Ap 26 '25 530w

"The saga of Paul Bunyan he tells simply. But there is simplicity and simplicity. His is the simplicity of a subtle craftsman. He gets into his tale the simple, solemn guile of the men who fashioned it; in the reading Paul Bunyan is not only Paul Bunyan, but the rough pathos of a thousand lumber camps. There is humor in it, but the weary, sardonic humor of a man who only smiles inside, the humor of an Anatole France." J. M. Cain

+ N Y World p6m Ap 19 '25 600w

Pratt p40 autumn '25

St Louis p340 S '25

"The special crux comes when some bold innovator uses the tales, as the poet has always used legends, according to the play of his own fancy. A shout arises that these are not the authentic Paul Bunyan stories. The objection has been lifted in full force as to Mr. Stevens's book. Some of his narratives are undoubtedly sheer, private invention. But they are invention kept within the happy bounds of a substantial tradition; old and new, they have the windy breadth, the loose and casual structure, the sly pitfalls which everywhere characterize the Paul Bunyan stories." C. M. Rourke

+ Sat R of Lit 2:81 Ag 29 '25 860w

"Paul Bunyan lives in the pages of this book, where all who like great deeds and mighty oaths and the sense of the cosmic sweep of history in the making can find him, as long as books endure. So does the author defy the degenerative processes of time and preserve the flavor of an age that was, perhaps, too simple to endure, but that was also too real to be forgotten without permanent loss to the race." J. K. H.

+ Survey 54:408 JI 1 '25 450w

STEVENS, WILLIAM OLIVER. Boys' life of General Grant. 344p il $1.75 Harper

B or 92 Grant, Ulysses Simpson 25-17289

The material for the book has been drawn from well-known sources. As the author explains, there is nothing new to add, but he has retold the story of Grant's life in a manner to interest and inspire the boy reader.

"This will prove useful for the general reader wishing a short biography as well as for older boys and girls."

Booklist 22:124 D '25

"Grant's life is one to interest and inspire American youth, and to help satisfy the curiosity which all normal boys feel about the Civil War campaigns. Mr. Stevens has written an accurate, well-colored biography, not too elementary."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:183 O 3 '25 220w

STEVENSON, BURTON EGBERT, comp.
Home book of modern verse; being a selection from American and English poetry of the twentieth century. 1121p $7.50 Holt

821.08 American poetry—Collections. English poetry—Collections 25-9092

Since the publication of the "Home book of verse" sixteen years ago, revisions and enlarged editions have been frequent. The size of the volume grew unwieldy beyond all bounds, necessitating the compilation of a companion volume to contain the excess of new material. The "Home book of modern verse" supplements the earlier book and brings it up to date, following the method of subject arrangement already familiar.

Booklist 21:374 JI '25

"There are relatively few of the pink poems for pale people that were plentiful in anthologies of bygone periods. This book is not ashamed of the multitudinous hurts of life, nor ignorant of valorous mirth. In its pages one may find satire, protestation, and keen insight; ecstasy, rebellion, and revelation. Reading it might well be an education of the emotions. It should be in every school and college in the country and in every home where poetry is valued. No other anthology can quite take its place." Marguerite Wilkinson

+ Int Bk R p36 D '25 2400w

"An excellent volume."

+ N Y Times p11 Je 14 '25 360w

"Although he has not done as well by the moderns as he might have done, or as well as he did by the winnowed classics, he has not failed to include poems that will some day seem absurdly familiar to the eyes of book-worm boys and girls." Genevieve Taggard

+ N Y Tribune p4 Ag 23 '25 750w

"All attempts at conventional criticism, or estimates of the 'balance' of the book, all comments on its arrangement, all opinions as to its value in the 'study' of poetry, are really out of my province and purpose. I wish to commend it to you as a book to be enjoyed and loved." E. L. P.

+ Outlook 140:370 JI 8 '25 1600w

"A treasure for either library or home."

+ Wis Lib Bul 21:197 JI '25

STEWART, DONALD OGDEN. Crazy fool.
246p il $2 A. & C. Boni

25-11319

"This is a story about a crazy fool named Charlie Hatch who inherited an insane asylum from his uncle." So begins a book of wild foolishness, of imbecility tempered with satire. Mr. Stewart satirizes the efficient American business man, which is not the freshest subject in the world, but he also glances hastily at almost all the follies of today and yesterday.—Ind

"Take it for what it is worth, a 'funny' story, with plenty of tang and bite, and it will prove eminently enjoyable."

+ Boston Transcript p5 JI 3 '25 260w

"At times, he entirely succeeds in being funny. At other times, the spontaneity drags and the joke goes out and dies on him. But on the whole, it is a funny book and worth the money."

+ Ind 115:80 JI 18 '25 120w

Reviewed by T. L. Masson

Int Bk R p509 JI '25 150w

"There are those who would pass up a book like this in the beginning, and later, having heard it praised, would go back and read it with relish. But at present there are enough to proclaim it, to enjoy it, to be glad of its power displayed against so much that is mediocre, melodramatic, monotonous, dull, complacent, and barbaric." T. L. Masson

+ Int Bk R p613 Ag '25 680w

"From cover to cover, it scarcely raised a smile for us—and then only of the sickly variety." W. O. T.

— Lit R p2 JI 18 '25 360w

"It may lack something of the magnetic attraction of 'Perfect Behavior' and of the compelling irritation of 'Aunt Polly's Story of Mankind,' but it has an abundance of both wit and satire." J. J. Smertenko

+ Nation 121:285 S 9 '25 160w

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes

New Repub 43:237 JI 22 '25 1550w

"There are jokes in 'The Crazy Fool' which make a reader cry out in anguish. It has moments of spontaneity and moments when Mr. Stewart must have faced his typewriter with a grim and dogged air of determination. His choice of satirical target was in itself unfortunate." J. D. Adams

+ N Y Times p4 Je 21 '25 1100w

"Mr. Stewart is perhaps the most spontaneous of living American humorists. . . It is good humor, this book; very good humor; better than 'Mr. and Mrs. Haddock's Trip Abroad.' It should considerably augment his noble army of readers and admirers." Christopher Ward

+ N Y Tribune p5 Je 21 '25 560w

Reviewed by Edmund Pearson

Outlook 140:432 JI 22 '25 1150w

"Do not read this book as satire. Read it as the children will, with delight; for the characters, like so many Americans, are all grown-up children. Have your fun first, and ask what it means afterwards. Indeed if there is criticism to be made it is that this humorist's mind is too active. He tries to rap so many heads that the laughter is sometimes a little puzzled. He might have left a little of the United States for next time." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 1:835 Je 20 '25 450w

STILL, ALFRED. Elements of electrical design. 535p $5 McGraw

621.3 Electric machinery. Electric engineering 24-12757

"Not a compilation of design data for the practical designer, but rather a text-book illustrating the application of fundamental principles to the design of the usual types of electrical machines and apparatus."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Nature 114:571 O 18 '24 170w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:165 Mr '25

Pratt Technical Books p10 '24

STILSON, CHARLES B. Cavalier of Navarre.
304p $2 Watt, G. Howard [7s 6d Hutchinson]

25-11153

"Hilaire Duhamel, the hero, is the son of the Sieur Regnault Duhamel, who has a small property in the Ardennes. Regnault, whose habits are somewhat mysterious, is killed in the second chapter immediately before the arrival of the Duc d'Epéron at the Duhamel château. With the Duc is a beautiful girl for whom Hilaire feels an immediate deep affection. From this point the story moves swiftly and Hilaire is soon in the centre of things political at a moment when Henry of Navarre is winning his way to the throne of France. In the end Hilaire worships the Duc d'Epéron, and marries Serene, and Henry comes into his own."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

N Y Times p13 JI 26 '25 560w

"Here is good romantic reading."

+ Springfield Republican p7a O 25 '25 250w

"There are vivid descriptions of the battles of Arques and Ivry, but the history in which the tale is wrapped is weak."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p658 O 8 '25 180w

STINSON, HUNTER. Fingerprints. 269p $2 Holt
25-8415

The murder of a wealthy man, the abduction of his beautiful ward, and the theft of priceless jewels is the order of events as they occur in this mystery story. There are fights in the dark, and an aeroplane chase up Long Island sound in which anarchists are intricately involved, an astounding climax and swift retribution for the criminal.

"A very interesting and ingenious plot well developed. Mr. Stinson has handled a very complex situation in a quite original manner."
+ Boston Transcript p6 J1 8 '25 220w

"A breathless tale of the kind wherein American writers usually excel. It is all done with a lightness of touch and deftness of phrasing which are very agreeable." L: Moore

+ Int Bk R p471 Je '25 160w

"'Fingerprints' can be read at a sitting; indeed, he who would do otherwise is no true reader of detective stories." H. A. J.

Lit R p9 Je 13 '25 300w

"Mr. Stinson has a rather unusual way of expressing things and an even more unusual imagination. These two assets when added to a not too indifferent drama, make one feel that this, the first of his novels, will find favor with the somewhat blasé public that absorbs mystery fiction as both a habit and a pastime."

+ N Y Tribune p7 Je 7 '25 180w

Reviewed by Donald Douglas

N Y World p7m My 3 '25 70w

STIRLING, MRS ANNA MARIA DIANA WILHELMINA (PICKERING). Life's little day; some tales and other reminiscences. 388p il $6.50 Dodd [21s T. Butterworth]

B or 92

[25-10598]

William De Morgan's sister-in-law follows her life of De Morgan and his wife with this book of reminiscence. The first part is autobiographical and deals with her childhood, much of which was passed with two prim maiden aunts in Yorkshire, in an atmosphere of pomp and extreme conventionality. The second part is largely anecdotal and her memories are grouped about persons and places. With the De Morgans she was associated with the artists of Victorian fame and many anecdotes are given of the Pre-Raphaelites and others. Illustrated with portraits.

Booklist 22:31 O '25

"Family love and family pride lend to it a pleasing warmth and sometimes a moving pathos, making of it, in grand total, a soothing tale of not too eventful memories."

+ Bookm 61:492 Je '25 160w

"Without the sustaining interest of a continuous or even fragmentary diary, 'Life's Little Day' assumes the aspect of a high comedy and very polite duplication of that moment in vaudeville recognized by the phrase, 'You tell 'em another.' Mrs. Stirling's greatest recommendation seems to be that she can 'tell them' well." W: E. Harris

Boston Transcript p5 F 28 '25 1500w

Nation and Ath 36:724 F 21 '25 300w

"The book is written with an ease and a friendliness of manner which ingratiate."

+ N Y Times p13 Mr 8 '25 350w

"The book is a valuable pendant to her standard biography of the De Morgans, containing a good many hitherto unpublished items and anecdotes about him and much about Mrs. De Morgan, especially as an artist."

+ N Y Tribune p3 Ap 5 '25 320w

"If she lacks the profundity to produce a significant autobiography, there is at least quite a garland of anecdotes, tastefully set forth."

+ N Y World p6m Mr 15 '25 300w

"She recaptures here the atmosphere of the many scenes and places with which she has been familiar; her 'little day' has been a full one, and regarded as extremely light reading of an amiable and rambling nature these memoirs will probably achieve popularity."

+ Sat R 138:611 D 13 '24 220w

"Her narrative course, like that of Tennyson's brook, is equable and interminable; and no doubt there is much to be said for her view that a prodigious memory should run its course and display its wealth unhampered by discriminations, the reader being left with the choice of picking out 'here and there a grayling,' or of solidly examining every chubb, dace, tadpole, or even minnow as it passes."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p817 D
4 '24 1000w

STIRLING, ARTHUR, pseud. See Sinclair, U. B.

STOCKDER, ARCHIBALD HERBERT. German trade associations; the coal kartells. (Am. business ser.) 254p $4 Holt

'338.2 Coal trade—Germany. Trusts 25-2079

The kartell, which corresponds to our trade associations, has existed in Germany for about fifty years and has played a controlling part in the industrial life of that country. This book describes the nature of the kartell, its development, and its use in the German coal industry.

"The author apparently approaches his subject in an unprejudiced spirit, even if the conclusions are not always convincing, and the facts are interesting and told in a sufficiently readable style." Francis Walker

+ Am Econ R 15:339 Je '25 1100w

"Sure of a welcome from all who are interested in the theory and practice of production."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 11 '25 520w

Harvard Business R 3:511 J1 '25 150w

"Manufacturers interested in the development of trade associations in this country will find much information in this description of the influence of trade associations, or kartells, in Germany."

+ Management and Adm 9:289 Mr '25
100w

STOCKS, JOHN LEOFRIC. Aristotelianism. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 165p $1.50 Marshall Jones

185.1 Aristotle

25-12264

"It is to the credit of Professor Stocks that, as he announces in his preface, he 'so far departs from the scheme of the series that the account of the author under discussion occupies the greater part of it and the account of his influence takes a secondary place,' for 'the full story of Aristotle's influence would be a history of European thought.' Accordingly, after the requisite remarks upon the biography of Aristotle and upon the Socratic succession, he describes Aristotle's world, with his theories of form and matter, of bodies, the animal kingdom, the life of man and the city, passing thus from the simpler to the more complex, and treating difficult matters in a style intelligible to the layman."—N Y Tribune

Booklist 22:53 N '25

"Professor Stocks gives an admirable summary of Aristotle's real teachings. Those to whom Aristotle is only a name will find themselves enlightened by this capital little book." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p1 O 10 '25 900w

"Mr. Stocks apologizes for the fact that nearly all his book will be taken up with an exegesis on Aristotle, and that he will have but little space for discussing the history of Aristotelianism throughout the ages. As Aristotle has had an influence even more potent than that of Plato, his decision is unfortunate."

— Nation and Ath 38:sup248 N 14 '25 60w

STOCKS, JOHN LEOFRIC—Continued

"Whether it be from the author's deft selection of the really significant or from the nature of the subject itself, his sketch of the later effects of Aristotelianism, brief though it is, leaves a clearer impression of the indebtedness of every subsequent thinker to this 'master of those who know' than is produced in some other volumes of this series by more elaborate and itemized inventories." A. S. Pease
+ N Y Tribune p12 S 27 '25 380w

"Prof Stocks's summary of Aristotelianism is a sound one. Save for the possibly excessive space allotted to Aristotle's astronomy, intelligible enough to the translator of the 'De Caelo,' there is no better balanced exposition of the master's thought in English."
+ Spring'd Republican p8 Ja 8 '26 280w

STODDARD, THEODORE LOTHROP. Racial realities in Europe. 252p $3 (12s 6d) Scribner
572.9 Race. Ethnology—Europe. Europe—Race question 24-27818
For descriptive note see Annual for 1924.

Reviewed by C. A. Kofoid

Am J Pub Health 15:452 My '25 150w

"This book does not contain the new materials which helped to make interesting Stoddard's earlier volumes." Robert Redfield
— Am J Soc 31:122 Jl '25 120w

"In writing his book on The Revolt Against Civilization Mr. Stoddard performed a valuable service." H. M. Parsley
+ Am R 3:369 My '25 1200w

Booklist 21:293 My '25

"No doubt the 'great race' of Nordics has suffered somewhat from a certain amount of super-press-agenting. Too much may have been claimed for it, and Dr. Lothrop Stoddard has, occasionally, left himself open to detailed criticism by the exact scientists as well as by those who are not dispassionate in their attacks upon him. But it remains true that his statement of the case is impressive and that the main lines of his general argument are not upset by any of these criticisms."
— + Bookm 60:643 Ja '25 280w

"A clear, sensible analysis of the racial situation in Europe."
+ Ind 114:135 Ja 31 '25 150w

"No one would think of criticising Mr. Stoddard's scientific method, for he has none. Apparently Mr. Stoddard objects merely to the Germans imagining that they really were 'blond beasts'; had they been Nordics all would have been well with Houston Stewart Chamberlain. Scientists, however, who hold no brief for any one race may be tempted to give Mr. Stoddard a tu quoque to his accusation of German biologists." J. Langdon-Davies
— New Repub 42:288 F 4 '25 950w

"Brilliant in style and in the manner in which the materials are organized, this book is bound to attract many readers. The author wishes you to know that he is 'scientific.' He tells you so over and over. From the opening to the closing sentence of the book he tries to impress on the reader that he is discussing 'momentous scientific discoveries.' But when he tells us that this nation is one-third of this race, one-fourth of this other, he leaves us entirely in the dark as to where he gets his facts, and how." Constantine Panunzio

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:461 Ja 17 '25 1350w

Spec 134:86 Ja 17 '25 230w

Reviewed by Sydney Greenbie
Spring'd Republican p7a Ja 18 '25 620w

STODDARD, THEODORE LOTHROP. Social classes in post-war Europe. 178p $2 Scribner
330.94 Europe—Social conditions. Europe—Economic conditions 25-21425

The author surveys in turn the social classes in post war Europe—the rising peasantry, the various labor groups, the hard-hit middle class and intellectuals, the landed aristocracy and the plutocracy—and shows what an intricate process of readjustment is going on.

"With an insight which makes him a master of detail, he brings about a better understanding of present-day Europe and prepares the mind for conditions in present-day America."
L. D. Dennis

+ Int Bk R p121 Ja '26 300w

"Where Mr. Stoddard has been unsuccessful is neither in his general plan nor in his information—it is in the way he has handled the former and made use of the latter. He assembles words in well sounding order; he is convincing and entertaining, but when the book is closed, after careful reading, one knows little more than before reading it. It discloses little new material and it does not explain very clearly the material that was already known."
Joseph Collins

— + Lit R p4 O 17 '25 1250w

"His study of the social forces, upheaving, revolutionary, evolutionary, that are now at work remodeling to a notable extent the fabric of European life, is rich with collected facts and observations and illuminating with its philosophical discussion of their significance."
+ N Y Times p12 N 22 '25 620w

"The book is an elementary, somewhat biased, but not unworthy attempt to give the ordinary reader some idea of what the European chaos is all about." B. W. Smith, Jr.
N Y World p7m O 25 '25 400w

R of Rs 72:559 N '25 100w

"There is nothing essentially new in Mr. Stoddard's analysis. Anyone well informed on European conditions will find it, however, an interesting popular presentation of the commonplaces of post-war economics. And there are only occasional hints of Mr. Stoddard's violent bias in regard to racial superiority and economic heresy."
+ — Spring'd Republican p12 O 21 '25 400w

"This is a stimulating and attractive little book. The European reader, more conscious of a conflict of social forces, will find some of Mr. Stoddard's conclusions too sweeping. But as a general account of tendencies the book is sound."
+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p762 N 19 '25 700w

STOKES, ADRIAN. Thread of Ariadne; with an introd. by John Middleton Murry. 257p $2.50 Dutton [6s K. Paul]

192 Philosophy

[25-10386]

"In form The Thread of Ariadne is an account of the bewilderments and contradictions and despairs through which the author passed before he found peace of mind and certainty of value (or 'meaning,' he terms it) in everyday life. His phrases are his own; for he made the journey almost without help from orthodox philosophers. His first difficulty is to explain the grip upon all men of 'The Common Heritage.' We talk in words which other men have made for us; we accept as satisfactory for ourselves the ideas and the problems which have been suggested to us. . . It is impossible for us, while we remain in this state, to accomplish a single act of understanding; for we are lost among platitudes which are not created by ourselves, and it is only by neglect of them, or exorcism, that we can resolve them. And here he touches upon the root of what he tries to impart. No one idea exists at all except as a complement to its antithesis. Good is only good by its relation to the bad."—Spec

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 1 '25 120w

"Here is a specific and delightful example of the serious thinking on profound matters being done today by the younger generation. Whoever has failed of complete satisfaction in any of the formal schools of philosophy will find here many of the inconsistencies which he himself has recognized, viewed clearly and most dispassionately." Florence Milner

+ Lit R p4 J1 11 '25 560w

"On his first page Mr. Stokes strikes the note of challenge and profundity and he continues throughout to write in the tones of one descending from the mountain of truth, his face still shining with the revelation, the tablets grasped in his hand. At times the reflection strikes us that if he had been hampered by a critical, especially a self-critical, spirit his book would be unreadable and perhaps unwritten. But he himself is so convinced he has found a key to what he calls 'this world of intertwining tremendousities' that to doubt him strikes us as a 'very cynical asperity.' We read on until, like Mr. Murry in the introduction, we 'find we are neglecting our work.'"

+ — New Statesman 25:174 My 23 '25 1000w

"Mr. Stokes has wasted 250 good white pages in an attack on a system which, it may fairly be contended, leaves him freer within it than without."

— N Y Times p13 Ag 2 '25 900w

"As a piece of literature, apart from its speculative interest, 'The Thread of Ariadne' opens up avenues to the imagination. It invests daily street sights and sounds with sharper reality and richer meaning. How much of this is due to the idea of interdependence, how much to Mr. Stokes's own freshness of interest? It is hard to tell." Garreta Busey

+ N Y Tribune p18 N 22 '25 900w

Sat R 139:193 F 21 '25 300w

"This remarkable book defies the usual categories. It is really entitled to two reviews of which this should be the second. It is a philosophical work (though the author denies it) and as such, should be brought to the attention of a learned doctor. It is also the autobiography of a soul, and may be judged in relation to other human documents. It is beautiful; poetic; charged with strong feeling restrained by art; it is therefore eligible to the lists of literature, there to contend with books as a book." Hulbert Footner

+ Sat R of Lit 2:79 Ag 29 '25 850w

"The value of Mr. Stokes's book is mainly in the degree of scepticism which he has reached, and the proof that he has not yet reached the ground of his nature and the absolute clarity of thought is in the fact that still, while professing ecstasy, he remains sceptical. The book is one which every complacent or superstitious man could study with advantage. It might shock him into doubting his reason. But we must wait with interest before we judge Mr. Stokes's quality until he rises to the problems of his new ethic, and beyond the mere facts of his journey through scepticism." Alan Porter

Spec 134:328 F 28 '25 1400w

"His book would, of course, be more inspiring and more effective if it were better written. He is too impetuous to write his best at any time, except in moods of passing inspiration; but the errors into which he falls are of a kind to show that his anxiety to transcend speech is premature."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p184 Mr 19 '25 1400w

STOKES, HENRY FOLLIOTT SCOTT. Perseus; or, Of dragons. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 74p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

398.4 Dragons 25-15446

This little book gives an account of the dragon as known to history—in ancient Greece, in early Christendom and in modern Europe—and explains how the dragon-story may have originated from the myths and customs of prehistoric Egypt. In his epilogue the author expresses the pious hope that one species of dragon, which still persists in the form of bigotry, cant and superstition may, like the other dragons, finally become extinct.

Booklist 22:101 D '25

"For an amusing hour, quite a bit of interesting information of a curious kind, and a new slant at some of the disturbing elements of today, read 'Perseus, or Of Dragons.'" W. J. C.

+ Bookm 62:xxxvi O '25 40w

"Actually adds nothing of permanent value. Delightful as 'Perseus' is, it does not fit very well in the company of Haldane's 'Daedalus' and Russell's 'Icarus.' 'Perseus' is almost a burlesque of a Today and Tomorrow book. Slightly changed and heavily advertised, it might have passed on the lists of another publisher as an excellent laugh at the Duttons. It is merry and gay. It makes no pretense at being original. It contains not the slightest depth of thought. It merely recounts, in the merriest manner possible, the classical stories that contain dragons."

— Boston Transcript p6 S 2 '25 230w

Reviewed by T. S. Knowlson

Lit R p2 N 14 '25 100w

"To any who wish to read pleasantly of dragons, this book may be commended."

Nature 115:977 Je 27 '25 220w

"The chief value of Mr. Stokes's essay resides in its occasional wit and in such really pertinent suggestions as that the Jabberwock is just as good folk lore as some of the classics."

N Y Tribune p16 N 1 '25 200w

"There isn't an atom of self-improvement in the book; no word of woman's future; nothing about the wage scale in Lancashire or Oregon. And for our part—our own shameless part—we are content to let all the lofty domes talk as they will under the elms. We will step aside with Mr. Scott Stokes, and learn about dragons."

+ Outlook 141:202 O 7 '25 220w

STORMZAND, MARTIN JAMES. Progressive methods of teaching. (Riverside textbooks in education) 375p $2 Houghton

371.3 Teaching 25-1782

Intended primarily for normal students in schools and colleges the book sets forth some of the best of recent experimentation in the field of teaching technique.

Booklist 21:260 Ap '25

"The book contains little material that is new but merits commendation for its impartial discussion of the various problems treated. The author insists that no single method can be satisfactorily standardized and urges that the teacher develop a progressive classroom procedure through conscious experimentation with a variety of methods. The volume should prove useful for introductory courses in education and to teachers in service." C. V. Good

+ El School J 25:550 Mr '25 500w

School Life 10:620 F '25 130w

Reviewed by H. P. Rainey

School R 33:388 My '25 520w

STOWELL, WILLIAM AVERILL. Mystery of the singing walls. 293p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

25-7944

A detective story that introduces a novel situation in that the murder is committed in a closed room in the presence of the victim's friends. Charles Warburton, a wealthy old man on whom only an hour before a murderous attack had been made, is shot to death while endeavoring to give the name of his assailant to Detective Graham. Suspicion points to young Osborne, a successful engineer who is in love with Anne Mason, Warburton's ward. Amazing events follow the murder in such rapid succession that Graham himself is completely bewildered by the conflicting possibilities which confront him. An open safe and a curious weapon are the first tangible clues discovered, and from that point on the net closes swiftly around the murderer.

STOWELL, W: A.—Continued

"The author was clever in hiding his solution. To that extent he writes a good yarn. But one thing he does not seem to know, and that is that gory details are gone out of fashion. A superfluity of bloodstains is considered middle class stuff. Otherwise we admit Mr. Stowell to his place in the first ranks at Mrs. Jarley's waxworks. Horrors, if you are looking for them, are still to be found."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 9 '25 280w
N Y Tribune p15 My 17 '25 130w

"The actors, especially the police and the private detectives, are rather more alive and well drawn than is common in such stories, although the women are puppets."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:842 Je 20 '25 250w
Springf'd Republican p7a My 24 '25 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p354 My 21 '25 150w

STRACHEY, JOHN ST LOE. Madonna of the barricades. 307p $2 Harcourt [7s 6d J. Cape] 25-20633

"A story of the stormy June days in Paris of 1848, it is done in the form of a memoir, written by George, Lord Chertsey, who, as a young man, found himself suddenly swept along in the mysterious and often violent activity of the Carbonari, Italian secret society organized for the unification of Italy. The narrator, at the time scarcely more than a boy, under circumstances mildly romantic, meets in England Carlotta, an Italian girl, who has given her life to the Cause—the unity of Italy. A staunch member of the Carbonari, she finds in George a sympathetic mind. She drops for an interval out of his life; until, one day, Thackeray, in London, brings them together again. They fall in love with each other. In May, 1848, he follows Carlotta to France. There, he fights with her on the barricades. . . . In effect, their story is a plea for youth and the ideals of youth."—Lit R

"The characters of this novel are real people, the style and form are excellent, and the picture of England and France in 1848 is one of true merit. But Mr. Strachey errs in including too much history and attaching too much importance to the Carbonari plots."

+ — Booklist 22:164 Ja '26
Boston Transcript p1 N 28 '25 480w

"The story is told simply and quietly, but neither the romance nor the adventures passed through suffer from the reticence of the teller of the tale. On the contrary, the book thrills with the excitement of youth facing great adventures and trying at the same time not to make too great an exhibition of his emotions."

+ Ind 116:23 Ja 2 '26 160w

"The story is told in the traditional manner, leisurely, discursive, thoughtful, humorous, vigorous and dramatic when the moments demand vigor and drama. The political background is carefully drawn and in a manner that does not obstruct the clear and direct movement of the story." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p2 N 7 '25 450w

"From the mere point of view of character, it is unfortunate that Chertsey is used as a pawn by Carlotta. Influenced by this astonishing maiden, Chertsey is swept into the secret society of Carbonari, but we can hardly sympathize with him behind the Parisian barricades in that fatal June, since green sickness is scarcely a recognizable excuse for killing other people. Historically, the book is full of mellow political observation and what may be called statistical wisdom, though the imputed influence of the Carbonari on the communistic rising of '48 seems obviously undue. There is, too the splendid surety of style."

+ — Nation and Ath 33:220 N 7 '25 400w

"Mr. Strachey has admirably succeeded in making his hero live. With Carlotta, an infinitely more difficult conception, he has been scarcely less successful. The weakness of the book, a weakness inherent in its very conception, is that the end is flat. Carlotta has to be got rid of and George made safe for respectability; we come down from the barricades to the House of Lords a little lamely."

F. C. Kennedy

+ — New Statesman 26:145 N 14 '25 1150w

"No doubt Mr. Strachey is giving life to old bones of history; but he has not written good fiction. His book smacks of the classroom, the leading article, the antiquary. Accordingly, magic is strangely absent, and the action takes on the aspect of a bal masque."

+ — N Y Times p8 N 1 '25 850w

"Mr. Strachey invokes the aid of the 'old manuscript' device in this his first—and, let it be said, wholly pleasant—venture into fiction, as if loath to plunge too hastily or too far from his accustomed routine as editor of 'The London Spectator.'"

+ N Y Tribune p7 N 1 '25 220w

"While, as a novel, the Madonna of the Barricades neither moves nor convinces, the literary quality of the book is high and the vignettes of these familiar figures are interesting." A. H. Gibbs

+ — N Y World p6m N 1 '25 380w

"The Madonna of the Barricades is an engaging tale, written with a lighter touch than is usual in historical romance, yet it reveals the knowledge of history that might be expected of the author." M. P. Sherwood

+ No Am 222:351 D '25 1200w

"Mr. Strachey's limitations as a novelist, though perceptible, are not felt to any extent that matters, while there is every opportunity for the use of Mr. Strachey's knowledge of the historical figures and political movements of his chosen epoch. Mr. Strachey very seldom strains our credulity. On the contrary, by his careful presentation of the sober background against which the conspirators and their English agent move, and by the frequent introduction of solid historical personages, he does a great deal to give the narrative an air of authenticity."

+ Sat R 140:450 O 17 '25 650w

"The whole-hearted and simple zest of the novel is its most striking quality, yet Mr. Strachey's simplicity, in spite of being backed by good writing and a sophisticated point of view, remains a simplicity completely devoid of importance."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:435 D 19 '25 280w

"This is a thoroughly old-fashioned, even out-moded novel; it is defiantly behaviourist in its method; it will not have a thing to say to the modern fashion of psychological analysis; it has within it a good deal of stuff that in most literary households has been relegated to the lumber-room. Only, it has captured exquisitely the spirit of youth." Rebecca West

+ — Spec 135:655 O 17 '25 2000w

"The diction of the book is agreeable; the story is told simply and there is an atmosphere of inborn culture and beauty about it which is hard to describe."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 11 '26 350w

"So far as Mr. Strachey's first novel lets us judge his quality, he excels as an interpreter and revivifier of history, but comes short in the craft of making his characters live."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p654 O 8 '25 750w

STRACHEY, MARJORIE COLVILLE. The nightingale (a life of Chopin). 305p $2.50 (7s 6d) Longmans

Chopin, Frédéric François—Fiction 25-9887

This is Chopin's life in story form. Here is no genius starving in an attic, but a happy little boy in a delightful family environment. Encouraged by his gifted parents, admired by his friends and sponsored by ladies of title and fashion, Frederic's early life augurs an easy and brilliant future. Reconstructed from his letters and elaborated as to detail, the musician's friendships and loves, his triumphs and griefs, and the distressing illness of his later years are here made very real.

Booklist 21:385 J1 '25

Boston Transcript p4 Je 24 '25 260w

"She has written a most readable novel, a thoroughly accurate biography, a sensitive tribute to Chopin's frail genius; but she has demonstrated again the awkwardness, described by Niecks, that besets a biographer who tries for something more than fidelity to the actual." Hensel Baugh

+ — Lit R p4 Je 20 '25 520w

"It is a legitimate artistic triumph. The first part of the book, describing Chopin's childhood and youth, is beautiful. The last part of the story, with its steady accumulation of pathos, is very moving." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 36:892 Mr 28 '25 300w

"She has contrived, always without sentimentality, to impart to her work something of the emotional quality of music itself. 'Nightingale' alone should forever emancipate the author from being known merely as the sister of Lytton Strachey." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p12 Je 7 '25 750w

"Neither especially good fiction nor serious history, it is not a book to be booed, nor yet one to be highly rated. But one need not hunt too eagerly for blemishes and errata in a book that succeeds in being sweet and likable, even though its contribution to the causes of literature and of music is not important." Pitts Sanborn

+ N Y Tribune p12 Ag 9 '25 560w

"The musician's childhood is written in the style of a bedtime story. Chopin, the man, is a little better dealt with, though too often he is weighed down by his crown of goodness. The role he played in the household at Nohant between Solange and Maurice, the children of George Sand, are presented with a realism that nearly makes this novel authoritative."

+ N Y World p7m My 3 '25 180w

Pratt p35 autumn '25

Spec 134:730 My 2 '25 150w

"The speeches put into the mouths of the characters are featureless and thoroughly English. And there are too many narrative passages of unrelieved flatness which, considerably reduced, would be appropriate in a biographical dictionary, but not in a literary portrait, still less in a novel."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p203 Mr 19 '25 200w

"A good book for review on a music club program."

+ Wis Lib Bul 21:199 J1 '25

STRATTON, ARTHUR JAMES. Elements of form and design in classic architecture. 239p $7.50 Scribner [28s Batsford]

729 Architecture—Designs and plans

"The purpose of this book is to supply an index to known forms of classic building and to present an analysis of elemental plans, sections and elevations arranged in a manner convenient for ready reference. . . . Its main object is to show, in the simplest way, the organic value of structural forms and to indicate how a building, whether large or small, depends for its ultimate expression on basic geometrical principles which are fundamental and constant."—Foreword

"If many architects and most of those who employ them would study this book our builded world would be a fairer place. It is significant of the progress of American architecture and the growth of the public interest therein that such a book should be printed here."

+ Ind 115:625 N 28 '25 180w

"The confidence disturbed by the wildly untrue statement in the anonymous verses quoted by Mr. Stratton on the reverse of his title-page, that pictures and statues exist only by virtue of what they represent or 'shadow,' is not completely restored by the body of his book. Most of what he has to say is sensible and useful, but all through there is felt to be lurking the implication that architecture is in a singular case. Mr. Stratton's book is to be commended. His application of first principles is excellent."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p640 O 1 '25 320w

STRATTON, FLORENCE, comp. Favorite recipes of famous women; with a foreword by the compiler. 99p $1.50 Harper

641 Cookery 25-17673

Such leading ladies as presidents' wives, movie and opera stars and popular story-writers have contributed their favorite recipes to this volume. The name of its sponsor is attached to each recipe.

"Some of the ladies have evidently been 'spoofing' the earnest collector, but most of them sound interesting and appetizing."

+ — N Y Times p33 S 27 '25 250w

"The favorite recipes of two hundred famous women!" Most of them quite evidently have never cooked and so have tried unsuccessfully to make up for their lack of experience by being coquettish about it. Just one more superfluous book!"

— N Y Tribune p9 D 13 '25 80w

"It runs largely to salads and desserts; and though many of these recipes are excellent, very few have distinction or uniqueness. The total effect is a little too extemporaneous, too amateurish—as is also the quite flippant introduction by Florence Stratton. Still, even if the book has not much solid value, it might make a perfect bridge-prize. It seems designed especially to be passed from hand to hand among an informal gathering of women; it should accompany the refreshments."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:263 O 31 '25 180w

STRAUS, RALPH. Married alive. 296p $2 Holt [7s 6d Chapman & H.]

25-8369

"Aloysius Orme, the hero of this not too serious tale, is a well known psychologist and university lecturer, whose philosophy of life included a somewhat advanced view of social ethics combined with a deep personal distrust of women. When the story opens he has been threatened with a nervous breakdown and has been ordered a year's vacation with complete rest under the care of his aunt, Lady Rocket. The 'rest cure' is presently disrupted by a sequence of events anything but tranquillizing. Personal contact with a practicing bigamist—not to mention the ladies concerned—proves most disturbing to Aloysius's theories, though fortunately his adventures do not retard his return to health. After various alarms and excursions the story works out to the satisfaction of every one, and we leave our hero a changed—and presumably happy—man."—N Y Tribune

Booklist 22:36 O '25

"'Married Alive' is a most suggestive title, and the whole subject is most delicately and entertainingly handled. Nevertheless, we venture to believe that the ending which Ralph Straus achieves is quite the best and most surprising element in the tale." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 J1 11 '25 1000w

"The book is not convincing but makes very entertaining reading."

+ — Ind 114:704 Je 20 '25 60w

STRAUS, RALPH—Continued

"Married Alive" achieves its solemn and tragic moments—but the general tone is rollicking. It has the grace of wit, the boisterousness of the broadest brand of joshing, satire in heavy hunks, if you have an eye for satire. But better, it is an entertaining yarn, as unbelievable as vegetable soup and quite as tasty." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p2 My 23 '25 250w

Living Age 326:216 J1 25 '25 250w

"If the plot is essentially absurd, it is nevertheless firmly built and logically developed."

+ N Y Times p9 My 10 '25 500w

"The book, while fairly long, is easy and often amusing reading." M. H. Vorhees

+ N Y Tribune p9 Je 7 '25 300w

"Mr. Straus won his spurs as a maker of amusing books with 'The Unseemly Adventure.' His new story is in much the same manner."

+ N Y World p9 J1 5 '25 160w

Outlook 140:160 My 27 '25 10w

"Mr. Straus's new novel appears to be both unnecessarily long and tremendously inconsequential. It is not exactly a bad novel, being curious enough to excite curiosity, and sufficiently reticent to withhold a final and uncharted spouse for the last. But as an amusing novel per se, which it obviously strives to be, it is not a success."

— + Sat R of Lit 2:90 Ag 29 '25 500w

Spec 134:1021 Je 20 '25 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p314 My 7 '25 300w

Wis Lib Bul 21:202 J1 '25

STRAUS, RALPH. Volcano. 304p $2 Holt
25-17700

No village in England was more conservative than Croome, and no citizen of Croome more conservative than Miss Gertrude Belt. Miss Belt had followed the Croome tradition for so long that now she might be justly said to personify it. She was correctness, Croome correctness in the flesh. When all her townspeople had been thinking just that about her and nothing else, for many years, scandal touched the town. It touched the outskirts first, then nearing the center it reached Miss Belt's home, the Grange, and finally—astounding blow from which Croome has not yet recovered—it struck Miss Belt's very self. For that enemy of the improper, that model of modesty and virtue, ran away in the middle of the night, and did not run alone. Volcano!

"A bizarrely humorous, clever, mildly Freudian story."

+ Booklist 22:164 Ja '26

"In view of the speed with which novel follows novel from his pen, it is remarkable that he contrives to make each one an amusing, well enough written story about people not too far removed from reality."

+ Ind 115:367 S 26 '25 100w

"The story moves leisurely and with due attention to detail, as is customary in village chronicles. It may be that Mr. Straus at times finds an absorbed interest in his topic which his reader cannot wholly share, but the novel remains one well worth reading."

+ — N Y Times p19 O 11 '25 350w

"While written in no very profound style, 'Volcano' conveys underneath the entertaining flow of language some pleasant probing and a few very wholesome remarks about life." L. B. Gilkes

+ N Y Tribune p16 D 6 '25 700w

N Y World p7m O 18 '25 130w

"'Volcano' is a diverting and delightful book; not quite credible perhaps, but as the sub-title reads 'A Frolic,' that need not matter. Mr. Straus has achieved something more than a temporary convincingness; he has written a novel dealing with the 'dangerous age'

—the heroine is forty-two—which is neither pathological, morbid, tragic, nor naughty, but merry, kindly, and keen."

+ Outlook 141:318 O 28 '25 200w

STREET, JULIAN LEONARD. Mr Bisbee's princess, and other stories. 203p $2 Doubleday

25-10883

Stick-in-the-mud, his wife had called him. The largest retail jeweler in his part of the state a stick-in-the-mud! Very soon after, almost as if arranged to restore his self respect, Mr. Bisbee met a princess on the train. A real princess, tho he did not know that when he took the cinder from her eye, nor when she signed her name for him, "Gabriella Lescabourg." He found it out at their station, where the waiting ambassador kissed her hand and said "Your Highness." The story of the cinder and the signed photograph reached his home town, and Mr Bisbee became a man of importance. The jewelry trade boomed. Even his wife and daughter were impressed. But the excitement gradually died and the episode was forgotten. Mr Bisbee did not forget. One day the old epithet reappeared. Stick-in-the-mud? Silly thing to call a man with a princess in his heart. There are two other stories in the book, A speaking likeness and Syringas.

"They are all typically—hence cleverly Streetarian, the three stories of this volume, with ingenuousness and sophistication, humor and pathos, sympathy and satire woven deftly into the fabric of what is in each case a good story. But in that which gives the book its title, Mr. Street is at his best."

+ Boston Transcript p3 J11 '25 550w

"Mr. Street's three stories are excellent stories, that can hardly fail to interest almost any sort of reader." Morris Markey

+ Int Bk R p618 Ag '25 400w

"To quarrel with the author for not continuing—when obviously Mr. Bisbee might be a full-length novel instead of a longish short story—would be oafish and unappreciative indeed. It is exquisite. To continue might have spoiled the charm. As it is now, it remains fragrant in memory, like a happy day or a charming acquaintance."

+ N Y Times p8 My 24 '25 600w

"In 'Mr. Bisbee's Princess' Julian Street has given us a story which is not only a deft character study but also a good yarn; he has scored his points without ever departing from the straight narrative method. 'Syringas' is a weak finale." Lawton Mackall

+ — N Y Tribune p14 D 6 '25 350w

"On the whole we do not see that these three collected stories will serve either to increase or decrease Mr. Street's reputation as a talented writer of light fiction. He is all right as far as he goes. His is a cultivated style and an urbane acquaintance with the lesser ironies of life, and he knows how to handle the material he chooses. Further than that there is nothing to say."

Sat R of Lit 1:935 J1 25 '25 260w

"Discriminating readers will find sincere and meritorious work in Mr Street's stories."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a S 6 '25 220w

STREETER, BURNETT HILLMAN. Four Gospels. 622p $3.50 (21s) Macmillan

226 Bible. New Testament—Gospels

25-2798

Canon Streeter studies the evidence which has been accumulated during the last half-century concerning the manuscript tradition, sources, authorship, and dates of the Gospels and coordinates the results achieved along different lines of investigation.

"Professor Streeter is a master of scholarly technique in the field of textual and literary criticism. At the same time he writes with the needs of the general reader constantly in view. Yet his primary purpose is not simply to popularize the results reached by previous investigators; he has himself arrived at a number of new conclusions some of which are of rather far-reaching importance.

+ J Religion 5:429 J1 '25 750w

"A very thorough piece of work."

+ J Religion 5:442 J1 '25 40w

"This volume is a massive and important contribution to the lower and higher criticism of the Gospels, and indirectly to their historical criticism, since the investigation of the text, the sources, the authorship, and date is the indispensable preliminary to the determination of historical value."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p33 Ja 15 '25 1900w

STRINGER, ARTHUR JOHN ARBUTHNOTT.
Power. 308p $2 Bobbs

25-8591

A biographical novel of a pioneer railroad man who from humble beginnings fought his way to power and fame. John Rusk, the hero of the story was reared on a Michigan farm where even in his boyhood days he became a leader—of a young gang of savages. His courtship of Aggie Newton, a farmer's daughter, is also characteristic of his determination to get what he goes after. From call-boy in the engine house to president of a transcontinental railroad is a long road to travel, but Rusk fights his way thru to a triumphant finish. Part of the story is concerned with Rusk's family: his son whose love of art makes him indifferent to his father's work; the daughter whose social ambitions are gratified in marriage to a count; and Tassie, the youngest, her father's comfort, who stays at home and falls in love with his secretary.

"The story is vividly and forcefully written, with sufficient adventure to hold the reader's interest, although in a few places it possesses the usual drag of almost any autobiography."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 My 16 '25 250w

"If Arthur Stringer had only signed some railroad magnate's name to 'Power' the book would stand as a classic among autobiographies. As a novel it is less appealing, perhaps because of this very air of complete authenticity. Mr. Stringer has a gift for assembling his material in a swift, hard, compelling style. You read willy-nilly. Readers who have not the slightest interest in either railroads or pioneers will find themselves hypnotized into reading 'Power' from cover to cover." Dawn Powell

+ — Lit R p3 Je 27 '25 600w

"Mr. Stringer has written several excellent novels, which have brought him repute and money. And no reviewer speaks ex cathedra. But to one, at least, 'Power' brought a sense of depression, as if he had witnessed the tragedy of an artist whose reach outstripped his grasp, or else the professional performance of a writer seduced by the easy profits of a hasty serial."

— N Y Times p9 Ap 26 '25 430w

N Y Tribune p12 My 24 '25 220w

Outlook 141:200 O 7 '25 60w

"Mr. Stringer rises with this new book far above anything he has heretofore done. It is a novel that sticks out head and shoulders above the ephemeral, fashionable stories of the day, chiefly because of its conception, its matured understanding and envisagement of life, its breadth and sureness of vision. The philosophy that underlies it reminds one somewhat of the attitude of a Thackeray." H. L. Pangborn

+ Sat R of Lit 1:804 Je 6 '25 400w

STROBEL, MARION. Once in a blue moon.
139p $1.75 Harcourt

811

25-8567

"This writer puts less stress than might have been expected on free verse as such; there are no more than a dozen entirely unrhymed poems in her book. It is in the main a book of glints and snatches, not a few of which have charm, as 'Little Things,' 'Pastoral,' 'Pitiful in Your Bravery,' 'Departure,' 'Admonition,' 'Feather,' 'Trees' and the 'Songs to Sally.'"—Lit R

"In the sonnet form she becomes a trifle impressed with the movement of her own lines. There is just a trace of pompousness; but her gift is unmistakable." J. F.

+ — Bookm 61:472 Je '25 200w

"There are perhaps a half-dozen good poems in Miss Strobel's volume and there is a great deal of verse which has not even a lyrical quality to recommend it. The author writes with a delicate note surcharged with emotion, but in the main her outpourings should partake of the nature of bird songs and be equally evanescent. There is in them more of sentiment than of beauty or truth."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Je 20 '25 220w

"This book offers impressions in lieu of thought; its emotions are primitive and often so baldly expressed as to miss their mark." K. L. Bates

+ — Lit R p6 Ap 25 '25 600w

"She has little to show save a phrase here, a metaphor there, a helpless intention nearly everywhere. In either case one finds woman's work, in the invidious sense of the words. A limited horizon, a wistful moodiness, posing self-pity, unimaginative melodrama mark the volume." Babette Deutsch

— Nation 121:260 S 2 '25 300w

"The pieces that make up the 'Seven Brave Women' section are all finely wrought and reveal a sort of emotional irony. She is less successful in some of the short efforts in verse libre and it is to be regretted that she included quite so much in her book." H. S. Gorman

+ — N Y Times p14 Je 28 '25 200w

"She possesses skill in painting the picture of a mood. 'After These Days' fills one with drowsiness, and 'Tropical Pool' is the very form and color of rich tranquility. And in a number of portraits of persons she has sought out their essential quality of mind or soul and given us quite surely the feel of it." G. H. Bussey

+ N Y Tribune p10 My 3 '25 200w

Wis Lib Bul 21:168 Je '25

STUCKEY, HENRY PERKINS, and KYLE, EDWIN JACKSON. Pecan-growing. (Rural science ser.) 233p il $3 (12s 6d) Macmillan
634.5 Pecan 25-3206

"Presents the latest results of scientific investigations on pecan-growing, in addition to the important practical phases of the work. Will be useful not only to students, instructors, and investigators in pecan culture, but also to growers, amateurs, and others interested in the subject."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:422 J1 '25

SUBLETTE, CLIFFORD MACCLELLAN. Scarlet Cockerel. 293p $2 Little

25-7832

"The Scarlet Cockerel" won the $2000 prize offered by the Atlantic Monthly press for the best tale in the manner of the late Charles Boardman Hawes. It is the story of the lad Blaise de Breault, known as the Scarlet Cockerel, who in the days of the French Huguenot colonization of Carolina fled to America after killing a follower of the Duc de Guise. In company with a friend of his father the Scarlet Cockerel had many adventures with friendly Indians and unfriendly Spaniards, and passed thru many hardships until that happy day when, with his name cleared, he returned to France to claim his bride.

Booklist 21:387 J1 '25

SUBLETTE, C. M.—Continued

"The Scarlet Cockerel" is smoothly written and bears no mark of a prentice hand at novel writing. The characters are real and the plot well devised and developed." W. T. T.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 4 '25 450w

Cleveland p103 N '25

Ind 114:423 Ap 11 '25 50w

Reviewed by Donald Douglas

Int Bk R p587 Ag '25 150w

"In spite of having a hackneyed Gascon for a hero, the book itself has a freshness and dash and color and atmosphere that compare with Sabatini's heavily-built romances as pot-au-feu with a veal-and-ham pie. There is a rattling good yarn told here, and told well." A. P. Terhune

+ — Lit R p3 Ap 18 '25 400w

Reviewed by Ruth Sapin

N Y Times p12 Je 21 '25 650w

Reviewed by C. G. Leland

N Y Tribune p6 My 10 '25 550w

"Mr. Sublette placed himself at a disadvantage when he made Blaise spin his yarn in the first person; and when, to begin with, he chose a Frenchman for his hero. For Frenchmen do not take their adventures in such a heavy-hearted, British fashion. In praise of Mr. Sublette's prize winner, let it be said that early America is well described and that the paunchy villain is a creature of vigor and amusing balefulness."

+ — N Y World p7m Ap 5 '25 300w

Outlook 141:199 O 7 '25 250w

"The action is rapid and the incidents stirring. Descriptions of primitive life in the new world are vivid but not over-drawn. As a whole, the work is perhaps competent rather than brilliant."

Springf'd Republican p7a My 17 '25 300w

Wis Lib Bul 21:154 My '25

SUCKOW, RUTH. Odyssey of a nice girl. 364p $2.50 Knopf

25-21589

"This novel is the record of a girl's life up to marriage. It is a tale of the soil. It is realism. Marjorie's life in town, her career in high school, her musical and elocutionary aspirations are etched with painstaking exactitude. After graduation, she goes to Boston, where she studies in Professor Courtwick's Academy of Expression. Then home after two years, to find herself thwarted at every turn. An attempt to escape by accepting secretarial work in Chicago, other chances, all frustrated by family problems. Cocooned by love, by comfort, by the traditions of 'nice' people, Marjorie never lived her own life, until she practically fled to an uncle in Colorado and married a garage mechanic. This marriage occurs off-stage, as it were, and is only referred to at the end of the book."—N Y Times

Booklist 22:165 Ja '26

"It is a good novel, perhaps autobiographical in a measure, because the readers feel its sincerity. That is the result of the selective imagination of the author. If Ruth Suckow had insisted upon writing down for us every mood and every desultory act of this amiable but not exceptional young woman, the story would have been a failure. It happens to be a supreme success because of the author's excellent taste." D. F. Gilman

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 18 '25 70w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p6 D 19 '25 1100w

"Every phase of Marjorie Schoessel's girlhood and youth, in Iowa and in Boston, is developed through the trivial events and contacts of her experience. The thoroughness with which this is done is rather appalling, but the narrative is sustained by the absolute evenness of its flow and its uniformly clean, firm style. The sureness of the technique gives a certain distinction to the most commonplace matter. Miss Suckow is the most imperturbable of youthful novelists. If she should betray, by a single sentence, hesitation, uncertainty, doubt whether she holds her readers with the same grip as she does her characters, her control would be gone forever. But Miss Suckow drives serenely ahead with a confidence that begets faith." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 44:336 N 18 '25 650w

"In spite of the fact that it deals undramatically with all the stale and shopworn themes that have been fashionable in recent fiction, 'The Odyssey of a Nice Girl' is constructed with such deft felicity of phrase, such discriminating insight into motive and character that it is easy to forgive Miss Suckow. Nevertheless, one may legitimately wish that she had chosen to deal with the positive attributes of life and with other than passive character."

+ — N Y Times p8 N 8 '25 600w

"'The Odyssey of a Nice Girl' is a good book, not only because it portrays a very real girl who stands for an important class which is not capable of articulate expression itself, but because of the simplicity, the clearness and the beauty of the portrayal." T. S. Winslow

+ N Y Tribune p15 D 20 '25 700w

"It is a good book and a patiently tender one. By its understanding and withheld scorn it invites pity and a recognition of worth for the people it presents." Eva Goldbeck

+ N Y World p7m N 29 '25 550w

"Her flawless fidelity of detail produces in the reader nothing but a kind of sterile wonder. You marvel at her specific literary virtuosity, but cannot become interested in the commonplace characters she understands so well. In fact the outstanding characteristic of Miss Suckow's new novel is its relentless and implacable dullness."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:435 D 19 '25 400w

SUGIMOTO, MRS ETSU (INAGAKI). Daughter of the Samurai; how a daughter of feudal Japan, living hundreds of years in one generation, became a modern American; [introd. by Christopher Morley]. 314p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Japan—Social life and customs

25-25033

The appealing narrative of a little daughter of old Japan. Tho brought up under the rigidly ceremonial régime of a Samurai household, and destined to become a Buddhist priestess, the lively little Etsu-bo spent many happy hours playing with her Japanese friends or listening to the stirring tales of history and tradition told by her grandmother and her nurse. There followed the greater freedom of schooldays in Tokyo. Etsu-bo, while still a very young girl, came to America to marry a compatriot in business in an American city. The humor and the pathos of her experiences both in the old life and the new are made very real, and awaken a warm admiration for this daughter of the Samurai who cherished side by side in her heart the home land and the country of her adoption.

"In every sense 'A Daughter of the Samurai' is an attempt to explain the life of the Samurai to the American people. Such a book is useful and honorable. In unveiling the reticences of a Japanese heart Mme. Sugimoto has deserved well not only of her caste and of her nation, but also of the many well-bred people in this land who desire a sympathetic understanding of the two peoples."

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 10 '26 920w

"Though she contrasts East and West it is always with a smile. She delivers no sermon on the comparison and exhibits no superiority complex. The book does not plead any 'cause' or discuss vexing questions. Instead it contains miniature stories like the episodes of 'The Nameless' and 'Lady Moon,' that delight by their delicacy of feeling. And it is full of sympathy that never degenerates into gush." Miriam Beard

+ N Y Tribune p10 N 22 '25 520w

SULLIVAN, ALAN. Jade god. 312p $2 Century [7s 6d G. Bies]

25-2347

The story centers about a small jade god which Henry Millicent, a traveler, brought with him from the East and which was the only clue found at the time of his murder at Beach Lodge. Two years later Jack Derrick, a writer, and his sister take a year's lease of the Millicent home. The atmosphere of Beach Lodge is so depressing that Derrick abandons his work to solve the mystery which seems to enshroud the place. In a most unexpected manner he discovers a clue which eventually leads to the murderer of Henry Millicent.

Booklist 21:305 My '25

"The last chapters are the weakest, and a few loose ends are left hanging here and there, but by the time you have reached the end you have already had more than your money's worth."

+ — Ind 114:190 F 14 '25 100w

"Mr. Sullivan has an excellent plot; one, in fact, that has been so long tested in its use by scores of writers that it may be soundly warranted to wear. It is a good story in itself, and Mr. Sullivan has embroidered some variety in the fringes of his pattern [but] the treatment of the whole thing is crude and stiff. Instead of plausible dialogue, the characters hand each other stilted orations." H. L. P.

+ — Lit R p9 Ja 24 '25 260w

"Readers who like the uncanny and those who enjoy a plausible and well-written mystery tale will find 'The Jade God' an exceptionally entertaining novel."

+ N Y Times p9 F 1 '25 750w

"It is, with the exception of the conventional love story, very well done. The plot is beautifully caught together and works silently, unwinding the people from the dreadful power of the god. The manner of telling is casual enough to produce excitement."

+ — N Y Tribune p11 Mr 8 '25 240w

"Mr. Sullivan's tale has two qualities rare in books of its kind; it has distinction of style and it succeeds in building up its mystery without employing the hackneyed mechanism of the conventional detective tale. It is indeed an excellent story, well articulated, well told."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:513 F 7 '25 200w

Spring'd Republican p7a Ag 30 '25 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p358 Je 5 '24 120w

Wis Lib Bul 21:113 Ap '25

SUTHERLAND, EDWIN HARDIN. Criminology. (Lippincott's sociological ser.) 643p $3.50 (15s) Lippincott

364 Crime and criminals 24-28121

A comprehensive textbook of criminology which covers not only the nature, causes and extent of crime but society's method of treating the criminal. Reading lists including both books and periodical articles are appended to each chapter.

"Several books on criminology and penology have appeared in the last few years. This volume by Professor Sutherland, is, however, the first sociological textbook in this field. For the transition is here made from merely informational material about crime to an orientation of the subject-matter around a sociological definition of crime and to an introduction of sociological concepts like human nature, personality, the four wishes, isolation, mobility, and assimilation. At the same time, the author exhibits a mature grasp of the bearing of research in psychiatry upon the study of delinquency." E. W. Burgess

+ Am J Soc 30:491 Ja '25 200w

Booklist 21:260 Ap '25

"A topic of vital importance in our national life today is considered with precision and with refreshing freedom from prejudice."

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 24 '25 80w

"As a survey of the field of criminology nothing else that has yet appeared in print equals this handbook in comprehensiveness, and nothing else surpasses it in fairness of tone or in the scientific caution of its presentation of fact and theory. The author writes as a sociologist who brings his critical faculties to bear on the vast literature of the subject and who knows what has been done or attempted as well as what has been thought and said by others. The book is a credit to American scholarship and a work that no serious student of the subject can afford to ignore." G. W. Kirchwey

+ Nation 120:439 Ap 15 '25 420w

"Mr Sutherland traces the developments of recent criminology intelligently and cautiously. His attitude toward current researches is liberal, and his book is a clear, informing compendium of what is now being thought and done in this field." W. D. Lane

+ N Y Tribune p10 Ja 25 '25 580w

Outlook 138:513 N 26 '24 10w

"It would be hard to conceive of a better handbook for college students in criminology than this erudite and comprehensive work. This work can with equal confidence be recommended to the general reader. In the present period of wide-spread interest and discussion concerning the causes of criminality and the best methods of dealing with it, Professor Sutherland's temperate reasoning on these intricate problems should prove stimulating as well as informative." G. W. Kirchwey

+ Survey 54:364 Je 15 '25 320w

"He has given us a very painstaking and scientific treatment of these subjects in a delightfully readable form. It is regrettable that the statistical study given in the early part of the volume had to be based on the United States Census of 1910. The method of handling this usually dry subject is admirable but the conclusions are unsatisfactory because the basis of information from the 1910 census is unsatisfactory. We predict that Criminology will find a ready place, both as a text book and as a reference book. No course in criminology should be considered competent that does not include certain chapters from it." Calvin Derrick

+ — World Tomorrow 8:152 My '25 1300w

SUTHERLAND, JOAN. Circle of the stars. 318p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

25-9878

"An American heroine in a British setting is a chief factor of Mrs. Sutherland's novel of intricate involutions of human motive. Norma has passed thirty, is a wife and mother, and never been in love. The right man comes into her life too late. Everything conspires to enlist sympathy for Norma's violation of the marriage vow to an elderly brute of a widower. Mrs. Sutherland leads the reader into Central Africa, into night clubs and cocktail shakers and shimmy shakers, and into the town and country life of Norma in London and Dorsetshire. Plots and counter-plots, misunderstandings and mistreatings, and heartbreaks galore reward the patient reader. And through it all Norma moves serene and beautiful and overpoweringly good." — N Y World

Boston Transcript p11 Mr 28 '25 350w

Cleveland p68 Je '25

"The plot is neither very elaborate nor very original. Nevertheless in 'The Circle of the Stars' we have a book of more than usual pretension. The language in which the novel is couched suffers the same difficulties as the handling of the plot and characters. It shows a lack of flexibility and a proneness to overuse certain words and phrases." Helen Wallerstein

+ — Lit R p14 Ap 18 '25 300w

SUTHERLAND, JOAN—Continued

"The tale as a whole is not well constructed, while the writing is sometimes careless. Yet the tale is fairly interesting."

— + N Y Times p9 Mr 1 '25 500w

N Y Tribune p11 My 31 '25 120w

"It is a most edifying novel and a most perplexing novel and a most involved novel, but it is not even a good thriller." H: F. Pringle

N Y World p6m Mr 15 '25 200w

"A thoroughly interesting story." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 138:451 N 1 '24 250w

"The book is more than half a movie now. Some day it will make a stupendous film of the Great Spaces and the Madding Throng."

Sat R of Lit 1:714 Ap 25 '25 170w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p614 O 2 '24 220w

SUTLIFFE, ROBERT STEWART. Impressions of an average juror. 114p $1 (3s 6d) Appleton

340.4 Jury

The writer, who has had a long experience as a juror in the New York civil and criminal courts and has heard a wide variety of cases tried, here gives his impressions of juries and their work, of the ways of the average juror and the working of his mind. The book is illustrated with many actual court scenes and stories.

"His book shows him to be a discerning critic of the processes of litigation. It is an instructive comment on the practical features of trial by jury, its merits and defects. He discusses the various stages of a trial as they appear to a juror, with numerous serious and humorous comments." C. N. Callender

+ Ann Am Acad 120:164 J1 '25 100w

Outlook 140:194 Je 3 '25 20w

"Mr. Sutcliffe's little book is excellent as a statement of what the intelligent juror learns while serving in the courts of New York. It tells some of the things which everyone should know before serving on the jury and which cannot otherwise be learned save by personal experience."

+ R of Rs 71:560 My '25 150w

"Entertaining little book. Mr. Sutcliffe knows how to tell a capital story, and tells one frequently. A perusal of his book ensures one a pleasant and profitable hour's reading."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:716 Ap 25 '25 200w

Springf'd Republican p7a My 17 '25 600w

Survey 54:639 S 15 '25 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p320 Ap 30 '25 60w

Wis Lib Bul 21:194 J1 '25

SUTTON, GRAHAM. Fish and actors. 319p $2 (7s 6d) Brentano's

25-12737

"Tales of barnstormers in Ireland. The 'fit-up' actor, always on the edge of destitution, always in a desperate battle with existence, provides Mr. Sutton with tragic themes a-plenty and—because the actors in these stories are Irish actors—with laughter as well. There is a thread of plot running through the different stories that make up the book."—Ind

"Mr. Sutton has chosen a subject which for novelty of field alone deserves honorable mention in the places where tellers of tales are wont to gather. Mr. Sutton has a tendency to the melodramatic, as in the story of Dent's kid. He manipulates his characters, or at least discloses only that which maneuvers the story as he wants it to move. But his sense of humor and naïve character drawing does much for him."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 J1 25 '25 300w
Cleveland p124 D '25

"Told with skill and delicacy. Mr. Sutton writes with distinction and restraint about sordid and crapulous misery and with good humor about the ups as well as the downs of the strolling actor's life."

+ Ind 114:423 Ap 11 '25 80w

"Mr. Sutton has set down the history of their hardships and misadventures in a series of amusing stories, in which types have been closely observed and sympathetically interpreted. He evidently knows the 'fit-up' actor, as he is called, offstage and on, and his pen has caught him at many angles."

+ Nation 121:123 J1 22 '25 120w

"As unexpected and unpretentious as it is charming. Not since Somerville and Ross wrote 'Experiences of an Irish R. M.' has there been as delightful a picture of Irish life as that given in this book."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 12 '25 1350w

N Y Tribune p10 My 3 '25 130w

N Y World p4m Je 28 '25 120w

"He succeeds in imparting the sense of companionship, humour, and courage—even of dignity—to the pitiful shifts and heartbreaking setbacks of his characters. Mr. Sutton has his own vein, and works it admirably." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 139:35 Ja 10 '25 460w

Sat R of Lit 1:711 Ap 25 '25 200w

SWEARINGEN, ESTELLE MARGARET. Pickaninny; with an introd. by Ruth Comfort Mitchell. 132p il $1.25 Duffield

25-9556

Pickaninny couldn't stand it any longer, so he ran away as far as he could get from the teasing and tormenting of the other little orphans at the orphanage. He ran right into a real home and playmates and happiness. But it wasn't quite enough. He did just long for black folks. So bye and bye, after all kinds of excitement, a foster mammy comes and takes him down to "Alabam." The illustrations catch the spirit of the little tale and add to its appeal for children.

"Unquestionably no one could read the story or look at the pictures by E. W. Kemble without a feeling of sympathy for the little black boy who was 'different.'"

Boston Transcript p4 J1 1 '25 220w

"A delightful story."

+ Ind 115:52 J1 11 '25 50w

"The moral between the lines for juvenile consumption is that of race tolerance; but the pill is so tenderly and sweetly sugar-coated that children and their elders are likely to ask for more."

Springf'd Republican p7a Je 28 '25 180w

SWINNERTON, FRANK ARTHUR. Elder sister. 343p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hutchinsons]

25-21415

Mr Swinnerton tells the story of two sisters who loved the same man. Anne was twenty-two, scarcely a year older than Vera, but the true elder sister in her tender, protecting love for Vera. The two girls were typists and they spent much of their free time with Mortimer, a bank clerk. Each of the sisters was unconscious of the other's love for Mortimer. He no sooner married Anne than he realized it was Vera whom he loved. He had turned in his loneliness and need to the strong and loyal Anne but, married to her, he felt an uncomfortable sense of her superiority. So he left her for Vera and the two excused themselves on the score of Anne's coldness. Far from being cold and proud, Anne had the rare power of loving others more than herself.

"With what disturbing clarity Frank Swinnerton can detail the development of love and passion, and the pain and despair of jealousy. 'The Elder Sister' is in some ways a better, a fuller book than 'Nocturne.' Its development in irony and force is superbly handled. He leaves the reader to be the judge. He gives us the innermost workings of the human soul." J. F.

+ Bookm 62:501 D '25 250w

"It is a novel of thoughts and words, and only of such deeds as those thoughts and words imply. In its own way it is a masterpiece." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 31 '25 1750w

"There is no moralizing; no favorites are played. The clear-cut, human figures go through the phases of their ironic drama to its ultimate catastrophe with entire conviction and that apparent inevitability which is almost the hallmark of art. A very fine and genuine piece of creative work."

+ Ind 115:648 D 5 '25 120w

"The interplay of these three different natures, their actions and reactions . . . are shown with all the subtlety and skill we have learned to expect from the author of 'Nocturne' and 'Coquette'; each of the minor characters, too, is a real individual, 'Mum' being especially well done." L: Moore

+ Int Bk R p93 Ja '26 600w

"To me the book would be more powerful if there were less of it. The smash-up of three lives, told in Mr. Swinnerton's aloof manner, moves too slowly at times, hindered by non-essentials. The three principal characters are sharply realized. The quality of the prose is high, and whether one likes the theme or not, it is, on the whole, skilfully and movingly handled. This is a novel for the intelligent few, who are willing for their authors to look straight at life and set down what they see, no matter how bitter or tragic it may be, rather than for the many who ask only to be entertained or amused." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p2 N 14 '25 520w

"It is a beautiful story, beautifully told—told with reticence, with lyrical ardour, with the very exactness of fine sense." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 26:50 O 24 '25 500w

"The beauty which Swinnerton has cast about the cancerous ugliness which, actually, is the heart of his tale, is a beauty of his own achieving—and is of an altogether too seldom a variety. It is the beauty which can come only of detachment. Mr. Swinnerton, the artist, is utterly detached from the history in which Mr. Swinnerton, the man, is in sympathetic accord. The solution of the triangular involvement of his characters—if the word 'solution' be permissible—is bitterly ironical. Yet while the author seeks not a whit to lessen the irony, or to gloss it, by this rare combination of sympathy and detachment he robs it of its bitterness. 'The Elder Sister' is a narrative not likely soon to be surpassed." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p5 N 8 '25 1850w

"In 'The Elder Sister' Mr. Swinnerton has written the most subtle and most satisfying novel that he has given us since 'Nocturne.'" Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Times p2 D 6 '25 130w

"Whatever Mr. Swinnerton produces now will be measured involuntarily against the mark he set in 'Nocturne.' In 'The Elder Sister' he has attempted the same feat, of investing the commonplace actions of life with the subtle overtones of inhibited emotion. It is a brave attempt; if it does not quite come off, perhaps no one else could have done any better with the same material. Or perhaps Mr. Swinnerton can only manage two leading characters. Here he admits three." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p4 N 8 '25 650w

"Mr. Swinnerton has forgotten that the human instrument by which tragedy is brought about must have some worth if the effect is to be truly tragic. Mortimer is so beneath contempt that the story becomes not tragic but intolerably painful, a cruel exhibition of the elder sister's nobility and the younger's weakness being exploited by his selfishness. But Mr. Swinnerton has seldom set his people in a world more firmly real. The family life of the girls is presented with a sober, unlaboured realism that deserves warm praise. We would commend, too, the patience with which Mr. Swinnerton waits for his quietly developing narrative to tell on the reader's mind, never underlining omens of evil or nudging the reader as some crisis approaches."

+ Sat R 140:410 O 10 '25 250w

"It should be sufficient to say that 'The Elder Sister' is among the best three novels Mr. Swinnerton has written. No book is so entirely representative of his gifts. It will completely satisfy an audience already large." Grant Overton

+ Sat R of Lit 2:311 N 21 '25 620w

"There is no reason why crime should not be the motive of literature, else we must banish half the Bible stories, and Greek tragedy and much of Shakespeare, but Mr. Swinnerton illuminates horror with no more beauty than does a newspaper report. His story merely distresses and disgusts, and therefore it cannot on any account be justified."

— Spec 135:560 O 3 '25 130w

"Mr. Swinnerton has wrought intelligently, and with a fine conception of scale and plan; but he has not given validity and vitality to his human material."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a N 1 '25 520w

"It is not so much skill as pity and comprehension which give Mr. Swinnerton his admirable and individual quality."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p616 S 24 '25 450w

SYMON, JAMES DAVID. Byron in perspective. 298p $3 Stokes [12s 6d Secker]

B or 92 Byron, George Gordon Noë Byron, 6th baron [24-15196]

This book does not attempt a new biography of Byron. It is rather a series of intensive studies, from known or new material, of various aspects of Byron's life, character and work. His tempestuous and wayward nature is shown to be a direct inheritance from ancestors on both sides and the poet's childhood influences in Aberdeen and at Harrow are traced. Then follow chapters on his first verse making and the awakening to fame, his entanglements in love, his marriage, his Scottish sympathies and his enthusiasm for Greece.

Boston Transcript p4 N 7 '25 550w

"Since it is too much to expect exhaustiveness in any biography of Lord Byron, we may accept with gratitude a book written from a point of view in which there is still some novelty." S: Chew

+ N Y Tribune p19 D 6 '25 780w

"After the glut of centenary literature Mr. Symon's book is rather belated and will not perhaps attract the attention it deserves. Apart from some small light which the author, writing from Aberdeen, is able to throw on Byron's childhood in that town, there is nothing particularly new in the book. But Mr. Symon does justify his title and does not come to his subject with the usual predilections which are the peculiar possession of Byron students."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:221 O 17 '25 250w

SYMONDS, MARGARET (MRS WILLIAM WY-AMAR VAUGHAN). Out of the past; with an account of Janet Catherine Symonds by Mrs Walter Leaf. 318p $4 Scribner [16s Murray]

B or 92 Symonds, John Addington [25-7979]

"Mr. Horatio Brown has written the life of John Addington Symonds and has edited his letters and papers; and criticism has already pronounced on his work as historian, critic, and poet a verdict which is not likely to be set aside. But character and circumstance combined to give Symonds a personal appeal which both rivalled and enhanced the worth of his work as author. [His daughter's] object has been to depict 'the homelier side of his nature'; to show him as father and as friend. . . His

SYMONDS, MARGARET—Continued
friendships, which ranged from Benjamin Jowett to Swiss peasants and Venetian gondoliers, partook of the variety of his interest in life, which made him the historian of the Italian Renaissance, the author of 'In the Key of Blue,' and the founder of the international toboggan races."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 22:71 N '25

"Mrs. Vaughan attempts no critical tribute to the well known essays and poetry of her father, the object of the book being to recall him rather in the light of her own memories, as he existed for herself and others, apart from his writing. In this she has been completely successful, if at times a trifle dull."

+ — Bookm 61:710 Ag '25 100w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p3 My 9 '25 1400w
Cleveland p113 D '25

"She has not attempted another exhaustive inquiry into the state of her father's soul; she has simply noted down from old letters, diaries, her notebooks, and memory an impression of her father in private life. She thus brings to light a fascinating human being, who, delicate as he was, liked nothing better than driving at a hand gallop over an Alpine pass in a snowstorm."

+ Nation and Ath 37:79 Ap 18 '25 600w

Reviewed by Virginia Woolf

+ New Repub 43:51 Je 3 '25 600w

"The author says, in a burst of frankness: 'This book is really a family chronicle.' We agree, and looking upon it simply as that we have nothing but praise for its own good taste and filial piety, a piety no doubt amply deserved. To the multitude, however, we fear the book will not appeal."

+ — New Statesman 25:208 My 30 '25 300w

"A book of the kind might easily have become dull and tiresome. That it has not, in the present case, is due to Mrs. Vaughan's power of feeling and writing and, above all, to her intellectual enjoyment of the inward as well as the outward things of life. That Symonds's friends will like this book I do not doubt, for it will waken many memories. But I think it may fairly prophesy for it something more. It has a value of its own. It throws a most useful sidelight upon certain phases of English Literature in the last thirty years of the nineteenth century—a great epoch." J. St. L. Strachey

+ N Y Times p7 My 31 '25 2500w

"It is not the account of his ancestors, but that of his wife, concerning whom Symonds was reticent in the autobiography, that constitutes the chief addition of this book to our understanding of Symonds's life. Readers will enjoy many of the casual passages in the letters for the light they throw on the tastes of Symonds's generation." Jacob Zeitlin

+ N Y Tribune p5 J1 19 '25 650w

St Louis 23:438 D '25

"Of Symonds's lucidity and gentle force in letter-writing much is already known, and this volume adds notably to our knowledge. Mrs. Walter Leaf adds an interesting picture of her mother, Janet Catherine Symonds, and the volume makes up, as such a labour of love should do, a detailed, dignified portrait of a home in which the Anglo-Saxon qualities of character were exquisitely warmed by Latin sympathies in intellectual and aesthetic outlook."

+ Sat R 139:364 Ap 4 '25 430w

"Miss Symonds has contrived to tell us just what we want to know without boring us with mere chit-chat. As its name suggests, 'Out of the Past' is more of a medley of letters and reminiscences than a regular biography."

Arnold Whitridge

+ Sat R of Lit 2:100 S 5 '25 700w

"A most attractive book." J. St. L. Strachey

+ Spec 134:847 My 23 '25 1550w

"Mrs. Vaughan has done good service to her father's memory by writing this book. Not only in the occasional looseness and excesses of her work does she show herself her father's daughter. She has her share of his eagerness, his sensitiveness, and his sense of fun. And since she quotes a great deal from his letters, she has filled many a page with her father's writing at its best; for one of the odd things about this writer was that he wrote his best when he laboured least."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p251 Ap 9 '25 820w

T

TABARANT, ADOLPHE. Pissarro; tr. by J. Lewis May. (Masters of modern art) 63,40p il $1.75 Dodd

759.4 Pissarro, Camille Jacob 25-16726

This monograph discusses the aims and methods of one of the great French impressionists of the nineteenth century. Quotations from hitherto unpublished letters and notes add interest to the volume and reveal the stress of poverty and anxiety for his family under which Pissarro worked. There are forty illustrations from his works.

Booklist 22:149 Ja '26

Boston Transcript p6 O 10 '25 50w

"An excellent little book." Angus Davidson

+ Nation and Ath 37:627 Ag 22 '25 50w

Reviewed by T. Craven

N Y Tribune p16 S 27 '25 50w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p504 J1 30 '25 600w

TALMADGE, MRS MARGARET L. Talmadge sisters. 245p il $2 Lippincott

B or 92 Talmadge, Norma (Mrs Joseph M. Schenck). Talmadge, Constance. Moving pictures 24-28248

The mother of the popular screen stars, Constance, Norma and Natalie Talmadge tells the story of their childhood, their home life and their rise to fame.

Booklist 21:232 Mr '25

Reviewed by Frank Sullivan

N Y World p9e N 2 '24 980w

St Louis p16 Ja '25

"The story has the earmarks of a family narrative, touched up for the public."

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 18 '25 300w

TAMMANN, GUSTAV HEINRICH JOHANN APPOLON. Text book of metallurgy; chemistry and physics of the metals and their alloys; tr. from the third German ed. with the permission of the author, by Reginald Scott Dean and Leslie Grant Swenson. 338p il $6 Chemical catalog co.

669 Metallurgy 25-4751

"In the introduction, the author states that 'the field of this text-book can be designated as the theory of metal working.' Although much emphasis has been placed on the effects of mechanical and other forms of work on metals and alloys, the field covered is much broader than this and might more properly be considered as the theory of the general properties of the metals and their alloys. The text differs greatly from other books on metallurgy in that it gives no information as to laboratory methods or to the applications of alloys in industry, but confines itself wholly to theoretical considerations."—Chem & Met Eng

"The translators are to be congratulated on their success in making available in clear and forceful English a book which is difficult to read in the original German. Some of Tammann's conclusions are debatable but the book opens a wide field for speculation and further investigation and should prove of interest and inspiration to the serious student of metallography as a science rather than as an art." R. S. Williams

+ Chem & Met Eng 32:578 Je '25 440w

"The book is interesting to the advanced student of metallography and will be valuable as a reference work." H. M. Boylston

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:655 Je '25 620w

TANDY, JENNETTE REID. Crackerbox philosophers in American humor and satire. (Columbia univ. studies in English and comparative literature) 181p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

817 Humorists, American. Humor 25-11383

A study of one phase of American literary history, the origin of the humorous character full of homely wit and rural satire as represented by Hosea Bigelow, Artemus Ward, Abe Martin, The old soak and others.

"The attempt to give a book a catchy title sometimes results unfortunately. That is the case with Jennette Tandy's study of American humorists, which she inaptly and ineptly calls, 'Crackerbox Philosophers in American Humor and Satire.' In form it is a collegiate monograph, apparently a thesis prepared for the doctor's degree which appears after the author's name on its title page, and in matter it is a somewhat cursory and decidedly fragmentary view of the work of a certain limited number of American humorous writers." E. F. E.

— Boston Transcript p5 Je 27 '25 950w

"Miss Tandy is perhaps less adequate in her appreciation of such modern wags as Mr. Dooley, but on the whole, her book is admirably balanced and amusing as well."

+ — Ind 115:192 Ag 15 '25 100w

N Y Times p5 Ag 2 '25 1350w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan

N Y Tribune p10 S 27 '25 860w

"The material available is thoroughly sifted, the interpolated selections well chosen. The book is a most interesting footnote to American Literature."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:261 O 31 '25 160w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p553 Ag 27 '25 950w

TANNER, JOSEPH ROBSON. Mr Pepys. 308p $2.75 Harcourt [7s 6d Bell]

B or 92 Pepys, Samuel [25-6640]

"Dr. Tanner who is engaged upon a larger life of Pepys, and has inherited the material which the late Mr. Wheatley collected with a similar object in view, has been inspired to produce this monograph. It should fulfill a most useful purpose as an introduction to the immortal Diary, from which it has numerous, but not laborious, quotations deftly woven into the general record. Under such headings as the family, the household, food and clothes, books, music, plays, and so on, Dr. Tanner has strung together, in a well-annotated narrative, many gems from Pepys's writings, supplemented by his own research."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 21:381 Jl '25

"As one of the chief authorities on Pepys, Mr. Tanner has succeeded in giving us a book that is in essence a succulent sampling of the Diarist's work, as well as a careful biographical sketch of that part of his life not covered by the Diary."

+ Bookm 61:713 Ag '25 220w

Living Age 324:674 Mr 21 '25 200w

"To those who know Pepys only from the Diary the book should be as valuable as to those who do not know him at all."

+ Nation and Ath 36:786 Mr 7 '25 150w

New Statesman 24:537 F 14 '25 1200w

"This book will serve excellently a three-fold purpose. It will act as an introduction to Pepys's Diary for one who is as yet unacquainted with that singular masterpiece; it will provide pertinent and illuminating commentary for one who has already read the diary, and for the general reader, regardless of how much of the diary he has encountered face to face, it will perform a valuable function in linking Pepys the diarist with Pepys the naval official and the man of affairs."

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 19 '25 620w

St Louis p359 S '25

"This book is the best record we have seen of Pepys's multifarious energies and pursuits."

+ Sat R 139:109 Ja 31 '25 200w

"This book is the best of its kind which has yet appeared. An admirable piece of work in itself, and invaluable to all Pepysians." W. C. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 2:172 O 3 '25 450w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p90 F 5 '25 350w

Wis Lib Bul 21:170 Je '25

TARBELL, IDA MINERVA. Life of Elbert H. Gary; the story of steel. 361p il $3.50 Appleton

B or 92 Gary, Elbert Henry. United States steel corporation 25-22357

Miss Tarbell's book is a business life of Elbert H. Gary and a history of the birth and development of the United States steel corporation. Both are eulogized. The corporation is presented as a "good trust" and its labor policy is defended. The verdict pronounced on Judge Gary is that "no man in contemporary affairs has more honestly earned the high title of Industrial Statesman."

"The book is delightfully written." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 2 '25 620w

"As biography there is not much to say for this volume except that it is an old-fashioned picture of a public man. As a story of the formation of the United States Steel Corporation, Miss Tarbell's book is clear and vivid." Arthur Pound

— + Ind 116:78 Ja 16 '26 1000w

"She has written an absorbing tale, gilded by the exciting romance of vast affairs. Miss Tarbell has given her book a double title: 'The Life of Elbert H. Gary—The Story of Steel.' Unfortunately, for all its fascinating readability, it is neither the one nor the other. Biography it certainly is not. It is only the business career of Mr. Gary with which Miss Tarbell seems concerned—and that she treats more in the spirit of eulogy than of objective understanding." Evans Clark

+ — N Y Times p3 N 22 '25 2200w

"Miss Tarbell, does ample justice to his greatness, his significance, and, for the early years at least, his career. There is no criticism overt or implied, such as detracted from the soundness of her story of Mr. Rockefeller." Stuart Chase

+ N Y Tribune p4 D 20 '25 1500w

"Her book is a valuable addition to the astonishingly brief shelf of works dealing with the history of American Big Business since the Civil War. His hostility toward collective bargaining in his plants, his long hesitancy to attempt abolition of the twelve-hour day . . . cannot but remain a reproach to his 'industrial statesmanship.' Miss Tarbell's ex parte history of this aspect of the career of Judge Gary and the corporation is the one glaring defect in an able and engrossing work." Allan Nevins

+ — N Y World p6m N 15 '25 700w

TARBELL, IDA MINERVA—Continued

"This is a powerful 'apology' for Judge Gary. Almost doth Miss Tarbell persuade us that the United States Steel Corporation is really and truly that thing once so widely regarded as incredible—a 'good trust.' But perhaps Miss Tarbell is a little too eulogistic to be entirely convincing to all her readers."

+ — Outlook 142:75 Ja 13 '26 170w

R of Rs 72:662 D '25 80w

"The truth is that, as biography, the book is deficient and sickishly eulogistic; and as history of business it is prejudiced and smugly unrevealing." R. G. Tugwell

— Sat R of Lit 2:406 D 12 '25 750w

"It is a story that ought to be and is at once fascinating and challenging, for Miss Tarbell has unusual gifts as a writer, and she had access to records corporate and personal to a degree seldom enjoyed. This book has a subtitle, the Story of Steel, but it is as a biography of Judge Gary and as a record of his relation to the United States Steel Corporation that it has a claim to consideration. It gives the reader a view of certain phases of Steel Corporation history that is available nowhere else. It reveals points of view and motives that are important to anyone desiring to understand the industrial development of the country since the opening of the twentieth century. It is unfortunate that with respect to the most controversial subject of all, Miss Tarbell did not check up her Corporation sources by making an independent survey."

J: A. Fitch

+ — Survey 55:441 Ja 1 '26 2800w

TARKINGTON, BOOTH. Women. 415p $2
" Doubleday

25-27730

Mr Tarkington's latest novel is all about the ways and wiles of women. It is told in a series of episodes, each a short story in itself, centering around the lives of two families in a middlewestern suburban town, the Cromwells and the Dodges. The love affairs of their daughters whose bewildering moods, clearing as suddenly as an April day, reduce their fond parents to a state of helplessness, the strange vagaries and infatuations, at times the very real sufferings of these feminine Penrods—of such stuff the most of these little dramas of youth are made up. Now and then, by way of variation, the interest shifts to the foibles of the older generation.

"There is no one else who can write burlesque with such an aspect of actuality as Mr. Tarkington presents; and this last volume of sketches and portraits through which the same characters run, is one of his funniest and perhaps one of his truest books." J. F.

+ Bookm 62:602 Ja '26 380w

"Women' reveals him again as a gentle humorist who in his delight to toy with feminine and youthful extravagances of conduct, reproduces that delight in his readers. To read 'Women' is to enjoy his method and his art to the full." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 12 '25 1700w

"Mr. Tarkington has presented the surface selves of these people very agreeably, but the book will scarcely rank with his best work." L: Moore

+ Int Bk R p99 Ja '26 500w

"It is a delicious book—at least, we think so. But then, we are greatly prejudiced in Booth Tarkington's favor." W. O. T.

+ Lit R p3 D 19 '25 350w

"If the book lacks the more serious social criticism of The Magnificent Ambersons and Alice Adams, it is equally entertaining."

+ — New Repub 45:144 D 23 '25 200w

"Whether Mr. Tarkington's picture of women be fair or correct, its presentation is so adroitly handled that one does not realize until the last page that the book has not stopped, but ended."

J: Carter

+ N Y Times p5 N 29 '25 1300w

"It has an amiable good sense and an insight and revelation deep to the point that might be comprehensible to an honest group of respectable and prosperous people beside a country club fire. Of the town it is a record about like a quiet local map, a little tinted in and rather vague in its lines, not unroseate in tone, as the good citizens would have it. Of the human life in the town it displays a sensible working knowledge, as one might know its waterworks or lighting system pleasantly and without much wonder." Stark Young

Sat R of Lit 2:403 D 12 '25 720

TAWNEY, RICHARD HENRY. British labor movement. (Inst. of politics publications. Williams college, Williamstown, Mass.) 189p $2 Yale univ. press

329.942 Labor party—Great Britain 25-9853

The book contains a group of lectures delivered at the Williamstown institute of politics in 1924. The first few chapters describe the growth of the Labor party and its policies. Later ones deal with the impact of the movement on national and international affairs.

"Mr. Tawney's chapters deal with the history and present program of the British Labor Party. Persuasive as Mr. Tawney's arguments for the program, it simmers down, under his skillful mixture of the ingredients, to a very mild and quite innocuous brand of reform. One wonders whether the M. P.'s from the Clyde would recognize it or the seven authors of The Labor Party's Aims would subscribe to it." Phillips Bradley

Am Pol Sci R 19:829 N '25 200w

"They naturally fail to include important events which have since happened within the ranks of the British labor party, especially in its relations with soviet Russia, yet in its character as a historical survey of the labor movement, beginning with 'antecedents' from 1815 to 1914, the volume is well entitled to praise."

Boston Transcript p3 Je 27 '25 450w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

N Y Times p3 Je 21 '25 1650w

"It is a tentative, non-dogmatic, idealistic socialism that Mr. Tawney sees gradually working itself into the national life of England through the labor movement. Disagree violently though he may with the economic theories underlying that movement, the reader cannot withhold admiration from a writer who gives the movement a treatment at once so unpretending and so scholarly, so eminently objective, fair and sane. Advocacy of this sort leads to the kind of mutual understanding by which international relations are bettered. Whether they agree or disagree with Mr. Tawney, Americans will read his book to great profit." H: R. Mussey

+ — N Y Tribune p5 Ag 16 '25 600w

Outlook 140:371 Jl 8 '25 10w

"A student of high standing in the field of economic history, an English university lecturer and a warm adherent of the British Labor Party, Mr. Tawney was excellently qualified to present in America the exposition of Labor's position and aims that the arrival of a Labor Government at Westminster seemed in 1924 to render timely." Philip Coan

+ Sat R of Lit 2:156 S 26 '25 600w

TAYLOR, ALFRED EDWARD. Platonism and its influence. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 153p $1.50 Marshall Jones [5s Harrap]

184.1 Plato

25-8168

In this little volume a clear account is given of Plato's doctrines and chief followers with a list of books for further reading.

"While the author had to work within narrow limits of space, within these limits he has done his work well. His work is supported by an ample knowledge of philosophy, history, and theology. This is a combination rarely to be found in one man and it makes the editor's choice of Professor Taylor particularly happy." J. A. MacCallum

+ Lit R p6 S 26 '25 520w

"Mr. Taylor's is really an excellent book. He does his work admirably."

+ Nation and Ath 38:sup248 N 14 '25 220w

"A very clear and capable exposition."

+ New Statesman 25:266 Je 18 '25 120w

TAYLOR, ALRUTHEUS AMBUSH. Negro in South Carolina during the reconstruction. 341p $2.15 Associated publishers

326 Negroes. Reconstruction 25-1776

Prepared under the auspices of the Association for the study of Negro life and history, the book is a study of religious, social, economic, and political forces at work in South Carolina during the Reconstruction period which most interest the Negro.

"Mr. Taylor is unfortunate in the attitude he takes in his introduction toward previous studies. They have, undoubtedly, failed in comprehensiveness, but one cannot admit any such sweeping indictment as that 'Self-interest, then, impelled them to select such facts as would establish their point of view.' On the other hand, while Mr. Taylor's comments and adjectives fully indicate his sympathies, and that he has a case to present, he can not be accused of unfairness in the selection and presentation of his own material. His research has been diligent and sound, and his results will prove of interest to all students of the period."

+ — Am Hist R 30:653 Ap '25 300w

"A painstaking and valuable study of a subject which has been too hastily and superficially presented hitherto."

+ Ind 114:219 F 21 '25 120w

"The belligerent temper and superior air of the introduction have not prevented Mr. Taylor from writing an extremely important book. He has made industrious use not only of the better-known sources but also of such material as newspapers, church records and histories, school announcements, diaries, letters, travels, and memorials of temporary political bodies which previous writers have somewhat neglected. The narrative, too, has a moderation and an impartiality which contrasts sharply with the tone of the introduction." W. MacDonald

+ — Nation 121:213 Ag 19 '25 1100w

"Mr. Taylor sketches this scene with admirable skill, making it compact but not leaving out any of the salient facts." W. F. White

+ N Y Tribune p11 S 27 '25 1000w

Outlook 140:71 My 13 '25 10w

R of Rs 71:334 Mr '25 50w

TAYLOR, LUCY D. Your home beautiful; a manual of interior decoration, suggestions to fit your means—to suit your taste—to express your individuality. 242p il $3.50 Doran

747 House decoration 25-21076

Miss Taylor's method of addressing the home maker in the second person gives to her book the pleasant forthright suggestion of a personal interview. Her opening chapters discuss color schemes. Choosing one which is practical, satisfactory and of general appeal, she begins with the living room, and adopting this scheme she evokes a tasteful arrangement which may be automatically suited to any purse. Thus she proceeds thru the house employing different color schemes to secure different effects in keeping with the character of the room to be decorated. She discusses stylistic and non-stylistic arrangements, and devotes separate chapters to the furnishing of an apartment, and the American cottage.

"Intended as a guide to common sense arrangement and buying for those homes where the amateur works without benefit of a professional decorator, this volume admirably fulfills its purpose. Miss Taylor is an artist and an expert, but it may be noted that she writes primarily of the home as a potentially pleasant centre of family activities rather than as an exhibition of correct taste or its opposite."

+ Bookm 62:505 D '25 250w

J Home Econ 18:48 Ja '26 50w

"Miss Taylor's intimate acquaintance with the house furnishing shops and manufacturers makes the manual an authentic and up-to-date guide to the amateur buyer."

+ Springfield Republican p12 O 22 '25 380w

TAYLOR, WILLIAM THOMAS, and NEALE, REGINALD EDGAR. Electrical design of overhead power transmission lines; a systematic treatment of technical and commercial factors, with special reference to pressures up to 60,000 volts and distances up to 100 miles. 273p il $6 Van Nostrand [21s Chapman & H.]

621.319 Electric lines [25-9697]

"The treatment presented is a quantitative one directly applicable to practical design, and not an analytical one based on abstract circuits with purely symbolic magnitudes."—Preface

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:420 J1 '25

TEMPERLEY, HAROLD WILLIAM VAZEILLE. Foreign policy of Canning, 1822-1827; England, the neo-Holy alliance, and the New world. 636p $7.50 Harcourt [25s Bell]

940.28 Europe—History—1815-1848. Great Britain—Foreign relations. Canning, George

[25-14534]

"A companion volume to Professor Webster's 'The Foreign Policy of Castlereagh.' No foreign Secretary in the nineteenth century was more popular or powerful than Canning, and none was more successful in imposing his policy upon his treacherous colleagues, hostile sovereign, and foreign opponents. His success was due partly to the rare combination of an unusually quick and subtle mind with a fiery spirit and unfaltering will, and partly, as Mr. Temperley's book shows so admirably, to the fact that he deliberately placed behind his policy the full weight of public opinion in England."—Nation and Ath

"There is much in his book that is new as well as valuable. The treatment of Brazilian and Portuguese affairs is the first really adequate account in English. More important than either of these is the excellent general summary and analysis of Canning's policy, and appraisal of its significance. Finally, a word must be said as to the excellent style of the whole narrative. He has made his subject highly interesting at the same time that he has made a substantial contribution to scholarship." Dexter Perkins

+ Am Hist R 31:317 Ja '26 1500w

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 29 '25 800w

"Mr. Temperley's book is just as scholarly and careful as was Professor Webster's, and he has this additional merit, that he wields a rather more light and graceful pen than Professor Webster. The two volumes are a welcome sign that our historians are giving more attention to the intensive study of foreign policy." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 37:325 Je 13 '25 1000w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 44:258 O 28 '25 500w

New Statesman 25:316 Je 27 '25 800w

"This is a book to be read on both sides of the sea. On this decisive epoch, Mr. Harold Temperley has lavished twenty years of intensive study; with the patience of a scholar, who has already written a standard biography of Canning, he has ransacked the records available in England, examining archives, both public and private, and corresponding with transatlantic authorities. In proof, his cool, but by no means colorless, analysis of a tangled drama has been revised by friendly censors, and we may assume that, in the surviving volume we have a close approximation to ultimate truth." P. W. Wilson

TEMPERLEY, H. W: V.—Continued

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 30 '25 2550w

"Without exaggeration [this book and Webster's Foreign policy of Castlereagh] may be called the outstanding contributions of English historiography, perhaps without rivals in the field of diplomatic history." W: L. Langer

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 4 '25 480w

"Admirers of Canning will be grateful to Mr. Temperley for this excellent study."

+ Spec 135:416 S 12 '25 500w

"Mr. Temperley has now given to the world, as the result of labour extending over some twenty years, a full, scholarly and sympathetic account of the foreign policy of Canning. . . . We have for the first time a brilliant analysis, fully and admirably documented, of Canning's system of policy; and for the first time we are in a position to judge the statesman, as apart from the man, and to measure the debt which England owes to him."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p389 Je 11 '25 3350w

TERHUNE, ALBERT PAYSON. Najib. 311p. $2 Doran

25-8266

A series of stories whose principal connecting link is the Oriental figure of Najib, a Syrian and one-time Coney Island entertainer, but now the faithful henchman of Logan Kirby, an American mining engineer. The scene is laid in the vicinity of an antimony mine seventy miles from Jerusalem where Kirby is stationed in the interests of a mining company. Despite the fearful English lingo Najib talks, he makes himself invaluable to Kirby in his dealings with the cunning natives.

"These stories are by no means deep character sketches, but with Kirby's contacts with antagonistic natives, egged on by a German rival company, there is plenty of excitement and they are quick-paced and interesting."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 3 '25 120w

"Mr. Terhune's story is a rich mystery plot of adventure, danger and escape, which is made vitally interesting by the creation of Najib." Madelin Leof

+ Lit R p10 My 9 '25 280w

"Najib saves this story from the purely commonplace, and, altogether, this work is bound to convince the reader, paradoxical as the statement may seem, that Mr. Terhune writes most humanly when he weaves a yarn about collies."

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 8 '25 500w

"An ingenious and amusing tale written for purposes of entertainment and without ulterior motives."

+ N Y Tribune p12 Ap 19 '25 170w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 5 '25 420w

TERHUNE, ALBERT PAYSON. Runaway bag. 307p $2 Doran

25-21493

Dirck Lanier and his father became reconciled a year before the latter's death. To the son's astonishment, his father's will cut him off with nothing but a small yearly income. The bulk of the estate both real and personal was left to an uncle and his son whom young Lanier cordially disliked. As a crowning injury even his mother's jewels which she had expressly wished him to have were turned over to the uncle. This was more than Dirck could bear. He stole the black bag containing the heirlooms from its place in the safe and fled with it to Algiers. An avenging nemesis pursued him relentlessly. The championship of a woman and the generosity of a supposed enemy bring his unpleasant experiences to a happy conclusion.

"A good adventure story. To say any more about it would be to cheat the reader. But this one thing is sure, unless you skip, you will not be able to guess the end until you've got to the middle of the very last chapter."

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 21 '25 300w

"If one be looking for action, action of the vigorous and kaleidoscopic variety, one will be likely to find satisfaction in this volume. . . . Mr. Terhune appears to have taken undue liberties with human nature. But whatever may be said as to the deficiencies of Mr. Terhune's story, it must be admitted that he has given us a book which would not only be likely to have a motion picture appeal, but which will enable one to pass an agreeable hour or two when the mind is jaded and one desires escape from reality."

+ N Y Times p36 D 6 '25 450w

N Y Tribune p7 N 15 '25 130w

"It is a swift moving narrative, but about as improbable as anything could be."

+ Springf'd Republican p6a D 6 '25 250w

TERHUNE, ALBERT PAYSON. Wolf. 236p $2 Doran

25-10497

These are chronicles of Wolf, stormy little son of the Lad and Lady of earlier stories. Wolf had not the ribbon winning points of his pedigreed parents, but he had a temper as fiery and a heart as warm as the hues of his red gold coat. He was a mischievous small boy of a dog, always in trouble, always eager for excitement, always ready for a fray. His last adventure was the consummation of a gallant life.

Booklist 22:74 N '25

Boston Transcript p5 Jl 3 '25 420w

Cleveland p83 Jl '25

"Mr. Terhune has added another hero to his canine hall of fame; has placed another dog star in literature. Wolf's adventures are absorbing and almost super-canine."

+ Dial 80:68 Ja '26 120w

"Mr. Terhune holds the interest and attention of his readers in much the same way as Mr. Grey—by a series of 'clean' and swift-moving incidents. It is probable that any one who has been in the habit of taking an interest in Lady, in Bruce the Beautiful, or in Sunnybank Lad, will wish to add the spirited Wolf to his collection." L. S. G.

+ Int Bk R p742 O '25 380w

Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith

Lit R p4 Ag 8 '25 150w

"Mr. Terhune is by no means a skilled artist at handling the short story, but he does possess a readable narrative style. He understands dogs as few men do, and can convey a considerable portion of that understanding to others. After reading these stories, one will unconsciously compare his own collie, his neighbor's or his cousin's, to Wolf. He is a character."

+ N Y Times p24 Je 21 '25 360w

N Y Tribune p5 Je 14 '25 120w

Pratt p40 autumn '25

"Sometimes amusing, sometimes exciting, sometimes whimsical, the book is thoroughly enjoyable from beginning to end."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:32 Ag 8 '25 160w

"Lovers of this type of dog story will welcome a new one by Mr. Terhune, who does this sort of thing very entertainingly."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Jl 10 '25 100w

TERHUNE, ANICE MORRIS (STOCKTON)
(MRS ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE).
Boarder up at Em's. 313p $2 Macaulay

25-8370

This is a story of a New England village of twenty years ago or more, a place of party wires, church sociables and surprise parties, of home town folks who know all about each other and mostly love each other any way. Em, with her warm heart and homely wisdom, spends most of her time bearing other people's burdens. She is very good at it. When Lois, the doctor's daughter, comes home a pretty little prodigal, she turns naturally to Em. Em comforts and helps her, smoothing the way for a reconciliation with her parents, and finally, in a dramatic coup, bringing about her reinstatement in the village.

"A wholesome, at times, exciting, very modern love story runs through the book to a most satisfactory ending." J. W. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 O 10 '25 420w

"Altogether delightful reading." E. S. Alexander

+ Lit R p9 My 23 '25 280w

Sat R of Lit 1:780 My 23 '25 200w

"Anice Terhune has captured and confined between the covers of her latest novel a bit of that traditional spirit of early New England neighborliness fast becoming extinct in this era of three-room flats and motor moving vans." Spring'd Republican p7a J1 12 '25 220w

TERRELL, DOROTHY A' BECKETT. Last year's nest. 315p $2 Appleton [7s 6d Duckworth]

25-16721

"Present-day London sets the scene of this story centering around a widow of mature years and potentially light morals in love with a boy whose innocence and idealism combine to render him the facile dupe of her designs. Jenny Morris, mother of four children, is the lady in question, and the four children, two of them grown up, are no deterrent to her determination to bring young Philip Huish into her home as husband. . . . About the middle of the book, 'Last Year's Nest' becomes to a large extent the story of Gillian, Jenny's grown-up daughter. In the reaction of Gillian to her mother's marriage jealousy has struggled with true moral integrity, and when Philip apprehends his mesalliance and sees it was Gillian whom he ought to have married, we have all the elements for a triangle situation. Not for long, however. Gillian under extreme pressure confesses her love for Philip almost immediately to renounce him for a life of single strictness and self-sacrifice."—Lit R

"Miss Terrell's story has a certain humanness about it which makes it interesting. And there is the further advantage that, however obvious the situation seems to be, she gives an unexpected twist to it and it does not end as we fear that it will end."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 9 '25 230w

Reviewed by H. A. Jaggard
Lit R p9 Ap 11 '25 360w

"There can hardly be a more unpleasant subject for sentiment than the love of a young step-father for his middle-aged wife's daughter, nor is such a story rendered any more pleasant by the fact that this love is returned. It says a good deal for the skill with which this novel is written, that it is readable despite the frankly sentimental treatment of its subject."

— + Nation and Ath 35:126 Ap 26 '24 220w

"As a story this English novel has merit, if no distinction; interest, if no new information, for all interested in the imponderable and still almost wholly unsolved problem of social relations. As a proof of a postulate it is false—necessarily so, because the postulate is." Van Vechten Hostetter

+ — N Y World p6m My 3 '25 280w

Spring'd Republican p7a My 10 '25 100w

"There is good work throughout the story, whatever criticism we may pass on its construction; and Mrs. Hepburn, with her 'interesting' look and her exciting eyes, has an intriguing personality."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p289 My 8 '24 200w

"Several recent novels have dealt with the theme of love between a young man and an older woman. This English writer handles the subject with delicacy and skill, centering interest on the grown-up daughter."

+ Wis Lib Bul 21:202 J1 '25

THARAUD, JEROME, and THARAUD, JEAN. Next year in Jerusalem; tr. by Madeleine Boyd. 222p $2 Boni & Liveright

915.69 Jerusalem. Zionism

25-9409

Of these sketches of Jerusalem the first three are impressions of current religious ceremonies in the Holy City—of orthodox Catholics about the Holy sepulcher, Jews at the wall of wailing and Mohammedans at the mosque of Omar. Other chapters are studies of the Zionist movement.

Bookm 61:xxviii Ag '25 250w

Boston Transcript p6 J1 22 '25 180w

"Practically all the definite statements of the MM. Tharaud are false, petulant, and childish." Ludwig Lewisohn

— Nation 121:467 O 21 '25 580w

"Though their antagonism toward the young Zionist pioneers leads them into occasional absurdities the Messieurs Tharaud present their point of view with that skill and eloquence which one must always admire. It is almost unfair to define their furtive method of establishing a state of mind inimical to the Jews as a contrasting of the praiseworthy exceptional individuals with the entire depraved race. For their technique is not so simple and far more subtle; it is the technique of the juggler who miraculously achieves equilibrium in balancing a brick against a toy balloon." J. J. Smertenko

+ — N Y Tribune p8 J1 26 '25 860w

Outlook 140:342 J1 1 '25 10w

St Louis p410 N '25

"After five thousand years it is hardly to be supposed that these two men will have found anything really new to say, but their representation is acute and definitive, and it is sympathetic. Against a picturesque and eternal background they have made a stimulating study of a picturesque and eternal people."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:92 Ag 29 '25 420w

Wis Lib Bul 21:198 J1 '25

THATCHER, A., and HOGARTH, C. J. Happy dragon, and other stories. 230p il $2 Brentano's [6s P. Allan]

"Fairy stories with an amusing twist which makes them suitable for grown-ups who read aloud."—Nation

"I must admit that the amiable dragon, 'with Her Royal Highness's jewel case slung round his neck, which was considered a perfectly safe place for it,' is a likable creature." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p136 Ja '26 50w

Nation 121:603 N 25 '25 20w

"Here are no hackneyed fairy tales. Here is a highly original touch, and the interpolated verse is delightful."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:302 N 14 '25 120w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p269 Ap 16 '25 150w

THAYER, LEE (MRS HENRY W. THAYER). Doctor S. O. S. 305p $2 Doubleday

25-9193

"Watch out! Your time is come." A hideous greeting on a sunshiny morning, Patty Carrington finds it nailed on the kitchen door of her Uncle Morgan's beautiful Hudson home. What can it possibly mean? Surely, her kind old Uncle Morgan has no enemies, yet his actions lately have been mysterious. Next day Morgan Carrington disappears, leaving his niece penniless. So Patty confides in Dr. S. O. S., Carrington's intimate friend and together they find a away to replenish Patty's purse. The sudden arrival of a dashing young officer who calls himself John Garrison, the attempted robbery of Morgan Carrington's study, and the midnight prowlings of Marco, the gardener, considerably complicate matters. The surprise comes when the mystery proves to be no mystery at all—just indulgence of an old man's whims.

THAYER, LEE—Continued

"Interestingly written."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 3 '25 180w
Cleveland p84 Jl '25

Reviewed by L: Moore
Int Bk R p471 Je '25 30w

"Doctor S. O. S." is a rather feeble affair. It is mainly disappointing, because the reader is led to expect great things and is still in a state of expectation when it is all over." G. W. Wynne

— N Y Tribune p10 Je 14 '25 200w

"Dr. S. O. S." isn't much of a mystery. It is a trivial little thing, with its copyright dates, indicating that it was written by Mrs. Thayer in the days before she wrote 'Q. E. D.' or 'Keys.' It is hardly adult."

— N Y World p7m Ap 26 '25 80w

"Far from being merely a medium for exposing man's gullibility and the outlaw's superiority, 'Doctor S. O. S.' might be classed as a peaceful, benevolent mystery novel. One's interest is tense. The plot is sufficiently tangled and retingled to insure bloodshed had the author found need of this to tell her story."

+ Springfield Republican p7a My 24 '25 200w

THEOSOPHICAL movement, 1875-1925; a history and a survey. 705p $5 Dutton
212 Theosophy 25-7209

A comprehensive survey of the whole theosophical movement, its controversies and divisions, from the founding of the parent society in New York city in 1875. Much space is given to the work of Madame Blavatsky and of Annie Besant, and to the theosophical record of Colonel Olcott and William Q. Judge.

"Should be welcomed by all students of theosophy and of the so-called theosophical movement. Hitherto the material for such an undertaking, scattered through thousands of pages of books, magazines, newspapers, pamphlets and other documents, has failed of anything like adequate presentation, even in summary form. The present authors, after many years of work, now tell the story in connected fashion, and with an attention to salient episodes and details which makes it impressive as well as informing." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 8 '25 850w

Reviewed by Woodbridge Riley
Sat R of Lit 1:322 Je 13 '25 1100w

THINGS I shouldn't tell. 285p il $4.50 Lip-pincott [12s 6d Nash & G.]
920 25-2258

The author of "Uncensored recollections" offers another book of tittle-tattle about certain celebrities of Victorian days with whom he has come in contact. The gossip is hardly such as to blast established reputations, for the stories recorded are mostly concerned with the follies and idiocies of a gay and idle world.

Bookm 61:359 My '25 60w

"About the book is an unpleasant, ghoulish atmosphere of senile malice. The author is, one fears, a horrid old man."

— Ind 114:359 Mr 28 '25 180w

"The 'author,' whoever he may be, in his old age tadies in literature as he has toadied for some sixty years to a curious collection of celebrities, most of whom were not worth knowing." R. F. Dibble

— Nation 121:49 Jl 1 '25 800w

Reviewed by D. B. Woolsey
New Repub 42:245 Ap 22 '25 200w

"The delectable, dilettante showman of that cirque scandaleux d'élite, proclaimed 'Uncensored Recollections,' now takes his eager audience into his sideshow superlatively advertised as 'Things I Shouldn't Tell.' 'Sideshow' is perhaps scarcely the word, although there is no doubt that there are plenty of freaks present, and some of them have played more serious rôles in the former spectacle. To some it will appear more like a peevish, piquant supper indulged in at dawn after the banquet and ball are over and restraint is gone or obscured." Walter Littlefield
— N Y Times p1 F 1 '25 2650w

"The book is worth reading, of course, if for no better reason than that of seeing what idiotic things can be done by men and women with little to do and a great deal of money to spend, but it leaves a worse taste in the mouth than politics, and that, since Mr. H. G. Wells defined a nation as 'any old thing with a flag on it,' is saying a good deal." W: Macdonald

— + N Y Tribune p3 F 8 '25 400w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
— N Y World p6m F 8 '25 1100w
Outlook 139:660 Ap 29 '25 480w

"All is grist that comes to the mill of the author, and he passes from the witticisms of some favorite of the day to the double meanings of another, or to some bit of gossip or hearsay with seemingly the same relish for one as for another. It is, indeed, an unlovely picture of high society which he draws. . . . Despite its occasional piquant passages there is nothing noteworthy or illuminating in this book." Amy Loveman

— Sat R of Lit 1:494 Ja 31 '25 620w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p557 S 11 '24 170w

THOMAS, FRANKLIN. Environmental basis of society; a study in the history of sociological theory. (Century social science ser.) 336p $3 Century

573.4 Anthropogeography. Man—Influence of environment 25-8829

"The purpose of this study is to present, in their appropriate historical and cultural settings, theories which attempt to explain the phenomena of individual and social life in terms of the geographic environment. It is not a study of environmental influences but of theories, ancient and modern, which deal with these influences. In a later chapter some of the more important criticisms of environmental doctrines are presented and evaluated, but the fundamental aim of the study is accurately to expound the doctrines rather than to pass judgment upon their scientific validity."—Preface

"Primarily this is a book for students of sociology. The author has, however, by means of non-technical language and by the clarity of his style made a book which will be interesting to social workers or to any persons who are interested in social development."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 5 '25 250w

"Professor Thomas recognizes that geographic factors constitute only one group of the influences shaping social evolution; he deliberately omits all others. But in reviewing the data in this one field he has performed a service of tremendous value. The task was a laborious one, for from the time when man first began to speculate about himself and his society he has been prone to explain things in terms of the physical environment and climate." M. M. Willey

+ Lit R p2 Ag 1 '25 550w

THOMAS, JOHN MARTIN, and ESPEN-SHADE, ABRAHAM HOWRY, eds. See Bible. Whole—Selections.

THOMAS, LOWELL JACKSON. Beyond Khyber Pass. 255p il $4 Century
915.8 Afghanistan 25-19912

Khyber Pass is the door to the forbidden land of Afghanistan, the northwest frontier of India. The Afghans are suspicious of strangers but consent was unexpectedly obtained from the amir for the author and his camera colleague to enter this wild and mountainous country. They reached Afghanistan thru Waziristan, a territory partly under British military occupation and inhabited by the warlike Mahsuds. From Peshawar they travelled thru the strongly fortified Khyber Pass and followed the camel caravans to Samarkand and across the hot desert to Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan. There they had audience with the amir and heard him deliver his annual speech from the throne.

Boston Transcript p6 N 28 '25 460w

"Mr. Thomas' record of the expedition, combined with the more than 100 pictures of Mr. Chase's taking, produces one of the most absorbing and unusual travel volumes we have read in the last year." E. C. Beckwith
+ Lit R p9 Ja 2 '26 250w

"It is an absorbing book by a professional man of adventure of long standing." E. Vincent
+ New Repub 45:118 D 16 '25 100w

"For the profusion of photographs all gratitude is due. They are the work of experts and each tells a story." P. W. Wilson
+ N Y Times p3 N 15 '25 160w

"Beyond Khyber Pass' at once conveys that essential sincerity without which travel has no right to hold up its head. And to its integrity is added a spontaneous enthusiasm, expressed in a style whose outstanding characteristic is speed. Mr. Thomas is the journalist traveler, not the philosophical and imaginative wanderer; he is the reporter, not the interpreter; he questions neither life nor civilizations." Blair Niles
+ N Y Tribune p16 Ja 3 '26 480w

Outlook 141:610 D 16 '25 350w

R of Rs 72:555 N '25 120w

THOMAS, LOWELL JACKSON. First world flight; being the personal narratives of Lowell Smith, Erik Nelson, Leigh Wade, Leslie Arnold, Henry Ogden, John Harding. 328p il $5 Houghton

629.13 Aeronautics—Voyages 25-24045

Lowell Thomas was officially chosen to report the story of the first world flight. His account opens with a word about the originators of the plan for the flight, and the designer of the planes that made it, and a brief sketch of the "Magellans of the air" who successfully accomplished the perilous and spectacular feat. Beginning with the take-off from Seattle, as the narrative continues each of the fliers in turn tells a part of the thrilling story, with additional contributions from reporters and eyewitnesses in different parts of the world. The illustrations themselves tell the story. Many of the scenic effects are strikingly beautiful. The account closes with the words of Admiral Robinson, "Other men will fly around the earth, but never again will anybody fly around it for the first time."

"A gallant book by gallant men. Somewhat self-conscious beneath an overwhelming public adulation, these six aviators describe in a modest, humorous way their hardships, adventures, and successes."

+ Ind 115:685 D 12 '25 160w

"For a score of reasons it is a fascinating volume, but it is also authentic history and as such will always hold its own place in the history of the United States and in the story of the development of travel by air."

+ N Y Times p14 N 29 '25 380w

"Mr. Thomas himself has brought to his task an earnest enthusiasm and a keen consciousness of opportunity. And yet, after all, it is not in any sense a distinguished record. . . After all, his style fits pretty well the flight and the flyers, and after pondering on both, one is inclined to believe that they were possibly less glorious than had been supposed." F. E. Hill

+ — N Y Tribune p9 D 13 '25 700w

Outlook 141:642 D 23 '25 30w

"This book will always have a unique place on the library shelf as the record of the first aerial circumnavigation of the globe."

+ R of Rs 73:111 Ja '26 130w

THOMAS, PERCY GORONWY. English literature before Chaucer. 156p $3 Longmans [8s 6d E. Arnold]

820.9 English literature—Middle English. Anglo-Saxon literature 24-31981

A brief survey of the Anglo-Saxon and the mediaeval period of English literature conveniently arranged for the use of the student.

"He writes succinctly and without enthusiasm. For readers with the necessary background, his orderly account should prove useful."

New Statesman 24:400 Ja 10 '25 150w

"We cannot speak with such unreserved enthusiasm of Mr. Thomas's handbook; it is a conscientious compilation, calculated to assist a student who, on the eve of an examination, desires to refresh his memory by a rapid review of headings. It has, accordingly, the disadvantages as well as the advantages of a brief guide."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p724 N 13 '24 370w

THOMAS, STANLEY JUDSON. Bacteriology; a text book on fundamentals. 201p $2.50 McGraw

589.95 Bacteriology 25-12882

"From chapters on the history, classification, morphology, and physiology of bacteria, he leads to a consideration of bacteria in water, sewage, air and soil. Pathogenic bacteria and immunity are considered."—Eng N

"It would, of course, be foolish to state that a book of 200 pages contains nothing of value, but a rather casual examination of the value before us has shown so many mistakes and misstatements that we cannot recommend it as a safe guide." M. P. Ravenel
— Am J Pub Health 15:910 O '25 520w

"For the technical man who would be prepared, this easily read text book on fundamentals should be decidedly useful."

+ Chem & Met Eng 32:815 O '25 100w

"Readers of Engineering News-Record might prefer more exactness in some of the author's statements in the chapters on Water, Sewage and Hygiene. It is a pleasure to note the emphasis laid by the author upon the useful results of bacterial action. This is much more wholesome diet for students than the unbalanced ration of medical bacteriology so frequently taught." H. E. Jordan

+ — Eng N 95:847 N 19 '25 380w

"This book is not the usual type of text on bacteriology. It contains no descriptions of specific organisms and does not discuss details of laboratory technic. The reader will obtain, however, a rather good conception of the role played by bacteria and various other microorganisms in the economy of the world. The layman may require a dictionary at times. Many errors are found, some of which are typographical." F. R. Georgia
+ — Ind & Eng Chem 17:1206 N '25 220w

THOMPSON, CARL DEAN. Public ownership. 445p il $3 Crowell

380.16 Municipal ownership. Government ownership 25-7264

A survey of public enterprises, municipal, state, and federal, in the United States and elsewhere, showing what has actually been done in the field of public ownership. The familiar forms, such as the postal service, public schools and libraries, and government departments, are first considered, then public utilities such as railroads, telegraph and telephone, water and gas, electric light and power.

THOMPSON, CARL DEAN—Continued

"This volume, by the secretary of the Public Ownership League, is the most complete summary of the extent of collectivism in this country that has yet been written. Mr. Thompson has given us a valuable work which seems to be substantially sound and accurate. It is marred, however, by a failure at times to give proper weight to the difficulties in the way of effective public ownership and operation. In brief, while this is a good book, it is not the definitive appraisal of the merits and inadequacies of public ownership which is so much needed." P. H. Douglas

+ — Am Econ R 15:553 S '25 550w

"We are just a bit distraught over the appearance of a book so utterly heedless of the times. It is an anachronism pure and simple. There is a certain reserve and an air of superficial tolerance, however, which distinguishes the work from the mass of professional reform." H. W. Olcott, jr.

+ — Am Management R 14:366 N '25 1000w

"The chief weakness of the book is its lack of adequate analysis and presentation of the financial results which lie back of the rates, and its too great reliance on secondary sources. Notwithstanding these defects, the book has performed a service. It reveals a fact too little recognized—the extensive growth of public ownership throughout the world. The book does more. It contains a comprehensive list of all the commercial undertakings of government. It is only fair to say, however, that the book is suited to a popular audience and contains much which the student of the subject already knows. For this reason parts of the treatment make no new contribution to the subject." K. M. Williamson

+ — Am Pol Sci R 19:638 Ag '25 1150w

"An illuminating and clearly presented collection of facts in relation to the various phases of public ownership."

+ Booklist 22:12 O '25

"What gives Mr. Thompson's survey its chief value, if skill and lucidity of presentation be also taken into account, is just the gathering into a single volume of practically all the existing cases in which agencies, processes, institutions and undertakings are in any true sense 'owned' by the public." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 25 '25 720w
Cleveland p94 S '25

"Like most propagandists the author weakens his case by excess of zeal, shown in lack of discrimination in the acceptance and interpretation of 'facts.' He also uses material sometimes so old that the conditions it represents may have been materially changed by now. The book will be welcomed by most of the advocates of public ownership as a valuable contribution to their cause, although some will wish the author had not laid himself open to so much criticism for partisanship."

+ — Eng N 94:698 Ap 23 '25 350w

"In spite of his contentions, I am inclined to think that Mr. Thompson is not so impartial as he would have us believe. The successes are a little too obvious. Have there been no failures? Furthermore, the writer lays too great an emphasis upon the cheapness of publicly owned utilities compared to those under private control without considering the quality of the services rendered by the respective enterprises." H. S.

— Lit R p9 My 23 '25 180w

"Mr. Thompson sets before us an inventory of public ownership both here and abroad at the present time. The book is profuse in tables, figures, charts, maps and pictures, but is very readable notwithstanding. Largely it is a book of facts—admirably compiled, admirably documented, admirably expounded. The chapter on the Ontario super-power project is particularly good." S. C.

+ New Repub 43:300 Ag 5 '25 500w

"We need a discussion of the subject in terms of technique rather than metaphysics. In spite of the fact that Mr. Thompson found it impossible to adhere to his resolution to record the facts only, he has recorded enough of them to serve as the basis for such a scientific inquiry." R. W. Bruere

N Y Tribune p12 Ag 9 '25 1200w

Outlook 140:34 My 6 '25 20w

St Louis p337 S '25

Sat R of Lit 1:809 Je 6 '25 400w

"Mr. Thompson's book, informing as it is proceeds on broad, propagandist lines."

+ — Spring'd Republican p10 Ap 8 '25 350w

"The best account available of the facts concerning public ownership ventures of all kinds the world over. Written from a point of view favorable to public ownership, but is much more than a propaganda treatise."

+ Wis Lib Bul 21:228 O '25

THOMPSON, SLASON. Short history of American railways, covering ten decades. 473p il $2 Appleton

385 Railroads—United States [25-8423]

In his short history of American railways during a hundred years Mr Slason Thompson, who compiles annually the railroad statistics of the United States, has condensed a mass of facts, names and dates connected with the development of the railroads and the part they have played in the history of America. The 400 illustrations include many photographs of early locomotives and passenger coaches.

"Mr. Thompson gives full credit to all records which have been consulted in collecting the material for his book and claims for himself only the connecting thread of narrative. But he is a journalist. He makes it all interesting."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 25 '25 320w

"The history frankly champions the railroad as is to be expected of anything written by Mr. Thompson, but it cannot be said that his championship is detrimental to the value of his work as a history because he has not glossed over those parts of the story which the railroad companies would willingly have forgotten. For both reference and good reading the book is well worth having."

+ Eng N 95:644 O 15 '25 320w

"The numerous errors which marred the first edition have been eliminated, thus adding to the reliability of the work. Teacher and student as well as the general reader, however, are under obligations to him for the four hundred-odd illustrations which accompany the text, as well as for the numerous tables, especially those in the last three appendices. The book deserves a place in every school library."

+ Hist Outlook 17:40 Ja '26 150w

"A good collection of pictures is the most notable feature of this book. Otherwise it is useful as a collection of facts concerning the development of transport facilities in the United States. The theoretical discussion lacks something of being an illuminating interpretation, the whole material being approached from private rather than the public point of view. This limits the value of much of the discussion of railway finance."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:467 Ja 2 '26 260w

"This history cannot be regarded as more than a breezy and one-sided sketch, but, as such, it would have realized an entertaining and informing purpose but for the bias against public regulation and, in particular, against federal control, which is fully misrepresented."

+ — Spring'd Republican p12 Ap 22 '25 420w

THOMPSON, WINFIELD MARTIN; STEPHENS, WILLIAM PICARD; and SWAN, WILLIAM UPHAM. Yacht America; together with material from contemporary records; with a foreword by John R. Spears. 335p il $4 Lauriat

797 America (yacht). Yachts and yachting 25-12366

"As long as Americans follow the sea, either professionally to earn a living or as amateurs to spend one, they will hold in affection the schooner which seventy-five years ago (August 22, 1851) lifted the United States from dimmest obscurity as a yachting nation to international pre-eminence. The America did for yachting what the clipper ship did for the merchant marine—with the difference that the clipper was merely the last word in a long evolution, while the America shot our reputation, comet-like, from lowest earth to highest heaven in a single day. . . . The America sailed her last race in 1901, fifty years after the world-famous contest of her youth off the Isle of Wight."—N Y Tribune

"The authoritative nature of the work is placed beyond question. While the book will be of extreme interest to yachtsmen, both in this country and in England, the many dramatic moments in the history insure a popular appeal much wider than strictly yachting circles, for, as every one knows, the challenge cup won by the Yankee schooner has never been recaptured by British sportsmen, although contested for on nineteen different occasions." F. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p11 Je 21 '25 1350w

"The writers of this volume have made use of many contemporaneous records and have collected much valuable information covering those obscure days of the Civil War when the America was first a blockade runner for the Confederacy and later a scout for the Union." Arthur Warner

+ N Y Tribune p3 Ag 16 '25 700w

Outlook 140:595 Ag 26 '25 10w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p577 S 10 '25 920w

THOMSON, GODFREY HILTON. Instinct, intelligence and character; an educational psychology. 282p $3.50 Longmans [10s 6d Allen & U.]

150 Psychology, Educational 25-7847

The purpose of the book is to set forth the most important facts of mental life from the viewpoint of the teacher—instinct, intelligence, the learning process, general and special abilities, etc., with illustrations drawn as far as possible from teaching practice.

"Title and sub-title of this book are alike misleading. The one suggests (what will not be found) a systematic enquiry into the nature of 'Instinct, Intelligence and Character,' the other disguises the fact that Professor Thomson's approach to his subject is biological; both obscure the scope and the merits of an interesting work."

+ New Statesman 24:726 Mr 28 '25 250w

"It is an excellent summary, from the educational standpoint, of the somewhat mechanical psychology of the day—eminently readable, passing easily from topic to topic, and enlivened by frequent touches of humour."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p474 J1 16 '25 500w

THOMSON, JOHN ARTHUR. Concerning evolution. 245p il $2.50 Yale univ. press

575 Evolution 25-10978

In these three lectures delivered at Yale university on the Dwight H. Terry foundation Professor Thomson deals with the making of worlds, organic evolution and the emergence of man. The object of the lectures, as stated by the author, is "to show that evolutionist description is not inconsistent with religious interpretation."

"Anything that Professor Thomson writes is interesting and always well worth the reading. The present book is particularly timely in view of the present agitation against the teaching of evolution, and the extreme views held by certain people who possess more of what they consider religion than they do of either knowledge or common sense." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 15:720 Ag '25 350w
Booklist 22:59 N '25

Reviewed by Woodbridge Riley
Int Bk R p113 Ja '26 350w

"Professor Thomson's new book suffers from the usual incompatibility of method between speaking to an audience and writing for a reader. It is full of repetitions; it is badly constructed and arranged, and the emphasis of expression is wrongly poised. . . . The Professor excels as an interpreter, and his is a temperately and humanely reconciling rather than a searchingly individual stamp of mind. Particularly useful is the stress he lays upon the fact that there is no real disharmony between empirical formulae and transcendental inference."

+ Nation and Ath 37:628 Ag 22 '25 350w

"Prof. Thomson has an easy style, but it sometimes has rather a fluffy effect. Perhaps he is too open-minded, and tries to do justice, a little too liberally, to everybody's views all round. Otherwise his volume is an admirable summing-up, not too technical but not too popular, not ultra-modern and yet not old-fashioned, of his view of evolutionary biology."

+ Nature 116:532 O 10 '25 180w

N Y Tribune p1 J1 26 '25 240w

"Prof. Thomson's story of evolution is not told in the idiotic words of one syllable which so many people hold to be the true panacea for all our popular ills and ignorances. It is told in such a way that even the one-syllable mind is encouraged to exert itself and for once is enticed into grasping after something beyond the scope of a popular radio program. The University of Tennessee might make a bid for the original manuscript of Thomson's 'Concerning Evolution.' Two thousand years from now it will be considered quite as important as the purple manuscript of the good Bishop Ufilas." H. W. van Loon

+ N Y World p3m J1 26 '25 750w

"I feel that the reader of 'Concerning Evolution' must do a little scientific reading in advance, for it adverts frequently to abstruse problems without providing the necessary background for their understanding." A. G. Ingalls

Outlook 140:469 J1 29 '25 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p549 Ag 27 '25 3850w

THOMSON, JOHN ARTHUR. Science and religion. 280p $2 Scribner [7s 6d Methuen]

215 Religion and science 25-8491

"Six lectures by the Professor of Natural History in the University of Aberdeen. Given before the Union Theological Seminary, New York, in 1924 on the Morse Foundation." (Outlook) "The book is a discussion of the apparent conflict between natural science and religion, and maintains that there are no real grounds for conflict, provided that both religious beliefs and scientific beliefs confine themselves to their proper spheres." (Nature)

Booklist 21:359 J1 '25

"It is as well and as clearly stated as involved scientific fact is usually set forth, and is of special interest in its religious import." W. J. C.

+ Bookm 61:adv Je '25 150w

THOMSON, J. A.—Continued

"The book is of value both to the scientist and the teacher of religion. Of particular interest is the chapter showing science's contribution to religion. But the author himself is such a contribution of great value. The combination is of itself both interesting and prophetic." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 1 '25 280w
Cath World 121:853 S '25 300w
Cleveland p72 J1 '25

"His temper is judicial and his exposition clear. It is hard to see how any book so freighted with learning could be more simply written. Controversialists on both sides will find points on which to differ with the author, but no one with any background of scientific learning will fail to understand what he means." W. J. Ghent

+ Lit R p5 Je 13 '25 800w

"I have the greatest respect for Professor Thomson as a scientist, and I have found some of his scientific writings delightful, but this present book is singularly unconvincing. The reason is that where he writes about the sphere of science, he is clear and precise, but whenever he comes to tell us about the other sphere, he gives us nothing to catch hold of." Leonard Woolf

— Nation and Ath 37:106 Ap 25 '25 120w

"Both natural science and religion lay claim to be representative of the whole of our experience, and though Prof. Thomson has no hesitation in throwing overboard traditional theology wherever it is inconsistent in mere points of detail with natural science, the fundamental clash seems to remain." J. S. Haldane

Nature 115:668 My 9 '25 900w
Reviewed by C. E. Ayres
New Repub 42:322 My 13 '25 1100w

Reviewed by Evans Clark
N Y Times p16 Je 7 '25 1600w
N Y Tribune p1 J1 26 '25 240w

Reviewed by W. P. Bezell
N Y World p7m Ap 26 '25 900w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
No Am 221:750 Je '25 2500w
Outlook 139:623 Ap 22 '25 30w

"Thoughtful and interesting discussion."
Sat R 139:531 My 16 '25 360w

"Much has been written on the relation of science to religion, but rarely has a book shown so much intelligent understanding of and sympathetic insight into the aims and achievements of both sides. A truly masterly synthesis is made possible by the range of the author's knowledge and interests." J. S. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p8 Je 23 '25 800w

"Here is a wise and gentle ambassador from Science to Religion whom Religion should welcome. If it be he descended from apes, he is ascending toward God." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 54:500 Ag 1 '25 350w

"Professor Arthur Thomson has done an equal service to science and religion in this noteworthy book. Throughout its closely reasoned pages he maintains the truest scientific temper of careful analysis and dispassionate judgment, never forgetting that a religion which is worth having must frankly recognize the difficulties which accompany its claims on men's allegiance."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p333 My 14 '25 420w
Wis Lib Bul 21:193 J1 '25
World Tomorrow 8:383 D '25 100w

THORBURN, ARCHIBALD. British birds. 4v v 1-2 176:130p il ea $5.50 (ea 16s) Longmans 593.2 Birds—Great Britain

Popular edition of a work first published in 1915. The work will be complete in four volumes, each containing forty-eight plates in color. All of the plates are new and the letter press is revised.

"This book is distinctly a manual with unusually beautiful plates, and with its material arranged concisely and clearly."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 27 '25 250w

"The great charm of Mr. Thorburn's art is that he sketches the birds as they really are, in their characteristic poses, with just the right tilt of the tail or droop of the wings, so that the individuality of the species is visible at a glance. He takes us into the open air, away from the collector's cabinet, and the cataloguing atmosphere of museums; he takes us where the spirit of modern science leads, into the field, there to try to learn something of the living creature and its relation with other living things." Frances Pitt

+ Nation and Ath 37:139 My 2 '25 400w

"As an ornithological portrait painter he is unapproachable." Frances Pitt

+ Nation and Ath 38:sup378 D 5 '25 150w (Review of v 2)

"May readily be acknowledged to contain the finest coloured plates of our avian fauna ever produced. . . The nightingale of this new edition looks natural—but he doesn't look a nightingale."

+ New Statesman 25:174 My 23 '25 400w

"It is certainly the most attractive but probably the least useful of the three general books on the subject of British birds which have appeared since the war. The likenesses are almost without exception excellent, though in the case of the Jay, chough and magpie and one or two more Mr. Thorburn has done better previously."

+ New Statesman 26:362 Ja 2 '26 650w (Review of v 2)

Pratt p14 autumn '25

"One needs to know birds with quite uncommon intimacy to appreciate at all adequately the delicacy and skill of Mr. Thorburn's portraiture. To a layman his colour-plates are simply beautiful plates; but the better one has observed birds the more one wonders at that rare ability to catch the elusive personality of the living creatures which he displays."

+ Sat R 139:466 My 2 '25 230w

"The main purpose of the book is not to give a purely artistic presentation but to depict every regular British bird in a way which will make it easily identifiable, and on the whole this object has been most satisfactorily achieved. The likenesses of the birds are as good as Mr. Thorburn's always are and it is difficult to pick out any one or two as being particularly excellent. Only one gives a distorted impression."

+ Sat R 140:603 N 21 '25 350w (Review of v 2)

"The criticism to which the re-made work is still open is that disproportionate space is given to rare visitors, and that the descriptions of many of our breeding species are too slight. The true value of the present work will be as a compact and comparatively inexpensive series of accurate and attractive illustrations of all our resident species and regular visitors."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p292 Ap 30 '25 580w

"The second volume of this survey fully maintains its superiority to the predecessor on which it is based. The precision of the drawings and their accuracy of colour are greatly enhanced by allowing never more than three species, and often only one, to appear on the same plate."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p709 O 29 '25 700w

THORPE, MALCOLM RUTHERFORD., ed. Organic adaptation to environment. (Amasa Stone Mather memorial publication fund) 312p il $4 Yale univ. press

575.3 Adaptation (biology)

24-24623

In this symposium a group of Yale professors consider the subject of organic adaptation from the standpoint of biological and geological evidence. Contents: Introduction, by Malcolm Rutherford Thorpe; The terrestrial environment in its relation to plant life, by George Elwood Nichols; The protozoa and the problem of adaptation, by Lorraine Loss Woodruff; Environment as a stabilizing factor, by Alexander Petrunkevitch; Mutation and environment, by Wesley Roswell Coe; Fossil plants as evidence for resistance to environment, by George Wieland; Phases of cephalopod adaptation, by Carl Owen Dunbar; Dinosaurian climatic response, by Richard Swann Lull; Environment and racial character, by Ellsworth Huntington; Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Kofoid, M.D.

Am J Pub Health 15:156 F '25 350w

"The highly specialized, scientific men of the Yale faculty have their say in this rather technical reference book. It is not meant for the lay reader and is entirely beyond the comprehension of the average Yale student, who will be required to read parts of it in some of his courses." Harkey Reiter

Lit R p13 Ap 25 '25 300w

"The volume as a whole suffers, as the general reader sees it, from its academic overloading. Its contributions will have to be translated, say by Dr. Slosson, before they will receive wide circulation. Yet they deserve such circulation, for they have a serious bearing on the common man's way of looking at his world." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p13 D 21 '24 1000w

"In any rapidly developing science, it is inevitable that a symposium of this kind will exhibit great heterogeneity, not merely in the opinions or points of view, but in the time horizons of its contributors. This situation is particularly marked in contemporary biology. It will probably be apparent, to the critical reader of this volume, that Professor Coe's lecture is something altogether different in kind from the rest of the series. It represents, in fact, a different historical period in the development of biology. The remaining lectures might equally well have been written, practically as they stand, twenty years ago." C. R. Plunkett

Sat R of Lit 1:806 Je 6 '25 1000w

THURSTON, ERNEST TEMPLE. Charmeuse. 322p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Cassell]

25-5460

This is a story of young love and the rejuvenation of love grown old, a tale of magic made by a yellow charmeuse gown. There were lovely Laetitia, so wise and so young for her years, Barbara, her daughter, Laetitia's self at nineteen, young Jimmy of the navy who came to woo Barbara and stayed to lose his heart to her mother, and Roger, the erratic painter husband, who thought himself most important of all because of his art. Did Jimmy win his Laetitia? What of the pain in Barbara's eyes? And seeing another man in love with his wife, what did Roger do? That is the story.

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 8 '25 1600w

"A charming little romance as light as the fabric for which it is named."

+ Ind 115:163 Ag 8 '25 100w

"In 'Charmeuse' Mr. Thurston is at his best—gay, witty, interesting, ever amusing, and toward the close gracefully and restrainedly thoughtful." E. C. Beckwith

+ Lit R p2 Ag 15 '25 250w

"Mr. Thurston keeps his story on light lines, and the result is a cheerful little conflict of character just sufficiently linked with life to make it plausible and sufficiently romantic to make its happy ending desirable."

+ New Statesman 24:150 N 8 '24 250w

"In 'Charmeuse' the artistry of the telling outshines in interest the actual story told. The deftness of touch, the aptness of each phrase and sureness of its effect, the well-mannered urbanity of it all, when contrasted with the usual slick suavity, comes to the reader as a relief and as a joy."

+ N Y Times p13 JI 26 '25 900w

"It is as sentimental and innocuous as a water-color of the nineties and has just about as much relation to life. Mr. Thurston has written sterner stuff, but this is back to the tone of his 'City of Beautiful Nonsense.' And as he has been best remembered by the whimsies of that agreeable locality, this new volume will undoubtedly be greeted by a polite patter of gloved applause." Alison Smith

+ — N Y World p3m Ag 2 '25 350w

"As is to be expected, Mr. Thurston handles his tale smoothly."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:90 Ag 29 '25 180w

Spec 133:570 O 18 '24 60w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p653 O 16 '25 80w

THURSTONE, LOUIS LEON. Fundamentals of statistics. (Experimental educ. ser.) 237p $2 Macmillan

311 Statistics

25-5415

"[The] primary object [of the book] is to explain statistical principles and methods, more particularly in their application to educational problems, as in the fields of mental measurements and biometry. Successive chapters treat of the frequency table, linear and non-linear relations, arithmetic means, median, mode, quartiles, standard deviation, binomial expansion, probable error, correlation table, and Pearson correlation coefficient. Mathematical difficulties are simplified as far as possible. Problems are added to many of the chapters."—Am Econ R

Am Econ R 15:557 S '25 100w

"It is an attractive piece of work from a mechanical standpoint and is finely correlated with familiar mathematical principles." W: McAndrew

+ Educ R 70:153 O '25 250w

"Beginners in the study of statistics, and also workers in mental measurement who desire a logical interpretation of the mathematical procedure involved, will find this text adapted to their use. This manual may serve as an introduction to subsequent study of more comprehensive textbooks of statistics." J: D. Wolcott

+ School Life 10:160 Ap '25 50w

"Simplicity of treatment is particularly noticeable. The comparatively simple approach to statistical method should recommend the book to those who desire some acquaintance with the subject without making a detailed study of it. The book is also an excellent text for a beginning college class in statistics. It should make a favorable appeal to anyone desiring a simple and concise treatment of statistical method." J. M. McCallister

+ School R 33:631 O '25 360w

THYNNE, ROGER. Churches of Rome. 460p il $5 Dutton [12s 6d K. Paul]

726 Rome (city)—Churches. Christian antiquities 25-3760

"A book of historical information about thirty-four churches in Rome in addition to St. Peter's. Descriptions of their works of art and many illustrations."—Outlook

"At once informal and informing, Mr. Thynne's book on 'The Churches of Rome' ought to add vastly to the pleasure of any tourist to Rome who is interested in its ecclesiastical art and architecture."

+ N Y Times p7 F 15 '25 250w

Outlook 140:71 My 13 '25 30w

TIETJENS, EUNICE STRONG (HAMMOND). (MRS CLOYD HEAD). Profiles from home. 110p $1.50 Knopf

811

25-5014

Sketches in free verse of people and things seen in the United States. The poems are, for the most part, human portraits drawn against the background of plain and valley and city.

Booklist 21:297 My '25

TIETJENS, EUNICE STRONG—Continued

"All the gallantry in the world cannot keep me from feeling that 'Profiles from Home' is an exceedingly inept offering. It is poor enough on its own account; coming from Mrs. Tietjens it is disheartening. Mrs. Tietjens's poetry, it appears, has come down to a steady series of descending levels. In 'Profiles from Home' the poet strikes a plane so low as to seem incredible." L: Untermeyer

— Bookm 61:703 Ag '25 320w

Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '25 400w

"They make no arresting dint upon the reader's mind; but they take their place in the great uneven discordant chorus of voices such as are at least doing something to give an intelligible significance to the titanic litter and debris of the American scene."

Dial 78:521 Je '25 90w

"'Profiles from Home' is informed with truth, with strong feeling, now and again with passion. Her 'Statue of Liberty' is a poem, in every sense of the word; beauty of phrase, of imagery, and poignancy." Margaret Widdeyer

+ Lit R p4 Ag 8 '25 80w

Nation 120:577 My 20 '25 20w

"She presents what seems to be an almost primitive disregard for form as form. But looking more closely at her work, it is discoverable that she is certainly concerned with form as substance. She is seeking an effect in most of her poems, and she is working on the theory that her formless lines, formless from a conservative standpoint, best reproduce her mood and reaction to the substances." H. S. Gorman

N Y Times p5 Mr 1 '25 1550w

"The volume is interesting as an attempt to review the contemporary American scene. Miss Tietjens is not revolutionary, not especially satirical, not even fundamentally critical. She is frequently shrewd and discerning, as in her comparison of the American business man to a compass—being permanently polarized with reference to the dollar, he serves as a reliable instrument for steering the world." James Rorty

+ — N Y Tribune p14 Ap 19 '25 250w

"As the volume stands, it is little more than a diary of perpetual motion. We do not deny the cleverness, the avidity of phrasing, even the quick, clear beauty of certain lines, but we cannot help feeling, from what we know of Miss Tietjens's work, that she is capable of a sharp and linear lyricism, narrow, compact and memorable, which she does not achieve in this volume." Joseph Auslander

— + N Y World p7m Ap 26 '25 200w

Sat R of Lit 1:734 My 2 '25 520w

Wis Lib Bul 21:111 Ap '25

TILDEN, FREEMAN. Virtuous husband. 492p $2.50 Macmillan

25-12247

At twelve Jimmy ran away from school straight to the Fernies. It was the first real home he had ever known and he never forgot it. When his parents were killed in an automobile accident later in the year, Jimmy was happy to go back to the Fernies—the good-hearted Sam and Eliza and their foster children Rachel and Ernest. Sam was editor and owner of the village paper. Jimmy's contributions to the Tribune led to a position with the Boston Chronicle. In Boston Jimmy met Jeffcoate, who became his best friend. He met Patricia Corliss, a brilliant, bewitching and very modern young woman. There was Patricia. And there was Rachel. As different as their names. Jimmy stood between them, a modern young man with old fashioned ideas. The theme of the book is marriage with a career versus marriage with children and a home.

"Interesting and well written, in spite of the tone of hyper-morality."

+ — Booklist 22:165 Ja '26

"Mr. Tilden's book may be popular but not—I should say—with women."

Boston Transcript p6 S 23 '25 320w

"A novel is no place for moralizing. Relieved of this thesis and the necessity for tedious excursions into philosophy in order to prove it, the author might well have created an interesting bit of fiction. A good hundred pages might easily be subtracted from his total without injury to the story and with a considerable heightening of the interest."

— Ind 115:363 S 26 '25 200w

"This is no sentimental story, nor an outrageously improbable one. Yet—well, it will depend entirely on your willingness to believe its intimated generalizations whether you will swallow it whole or not. If you can swallow it whole, be assured you will suffer no indigestion." Walter Yust

Lit R p3 S 12 '25 400w

"In spite of the fact that Mr. Tilden has padded to an unconscionable degree and the story would be much more effective had it been held down to an intensive study of the marriage problems involved, there is a lot of excellent reading mingled with the padding. Mr. Tilden's knowledge of newspaper life enables him to involve not merely James but other characters in several interesting situations."

+ — N Y Times p8 S 20 '25 920w

"This novel running to 492 pages, is a serious endeavor to solve some of the domestic riddles in what is frequently referred to as 'the new age.' The reader can hardly fail to gather, by every implication of the fable, that woman's place is in the home."

N Y Tribune p16 N 8 '25 180w

Outlook 141:357 N 4 '25 100w

"He seems to us to have warped his story out of plumb to an ending that suited his sentiments and his particular view of simple rustic printing-office life, as opposed to life, specifically in New York City. Thesis takes the place of pure narration, and this reveals a weakness, a desire shallowly to sermonize from the ratiocinations of the hero. This desire is checked somewhat by craftsmanship, but nevertheless apparent." A. K. Tutler

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:152 S 26 '25 900w

"Exactly what constitutes 'a virtuous husband' Freeman Tilden never quite explains. Nor does he ever explain why modern women are dissatisfied with marriage, as he asserts they are, and as for a solution, he gets nowhere. The first third of the novel, however, is both amusing and solid. The sketched figures of Dr Horace and Dr Margaret Buckbarrow are life-like and entertaining."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7a O 25 '25 250w

TIMBIE, WILLIAM HENRY. Industrial electricity; direct-current machines. (Wiley technical ser. for vocational and industrial schools) 735p il $3.50 Wiley [17s 6d Chapman & H.]

621.313 Electric machinery 24-25534

"For technical-school students and electrical workers. The purpose is to explain generation, transmission, and uses of direct-current electricity. The mathematics required is merely a knowledge of simple algebra."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"A practical text for workers with a limited technical training, clearly written, requiring no mathematics beyond simple algebra."

+ Booklist 21:221 Mr '25

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:165 Mr '25

TI-ME-KUN-DAN, prince of Buddhist benevolence; a mystery play; tr. from Tibetan text by Millicent H. Morrison. (Wisdom of the East ser.) 128p $1.50 Dutton [3s 6d Murray] 894 Mysteries and miracle plays, Tibetan [25-23024]

"This drama, which is still acted in Tibetan villages in the open air by travelling actors, relates the tribulations, the journey of expla-

tion and the final triumph of the legendary hero whose name gives the play its title. The background is the terrific mountain scenery of the Himalayas and the host of Buddhas, Bodhisattvas, gods and demons, witches and wizards, genii, angels, vampires, and spectres who make up the complicated hierarchy of Tibetan mythology."—Publisher's note

Reviewed by J: J. McLaughlin
Lit R p5 Ag 8 '25 200w

"As an addition to the Wisdom of the East series, this translation of an ancient 'mystery play' still performed, it is said in Thibet, may have a value. But the play itself is entirely in narrative form, and the wretchedly written introduction conveys no information whatever regarding the methods of presentation. To a student of the theater the volume is of no consequence."

— + N Y Tribune p8 O 11 '25 60w

"Judged from a reading standpoint the play is interesting historically and as an expression of Buddhist philosophy; but from an acting point of view it is far too long-winded, involved, and abstract for practical purposes, though a jacket note states that it is 'still acted in Tibetan villages in the open air by traveling actors.'"

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:222 O 17 '25 200w

"'Ti-me-kun-dan' is a curious and quaint 'mystery play,' sometimes horrible, sometimes ludicrous, often intensely interesting and suggestive from the point of view of Oriental philosophy. The theory of abnegation, of non-resistance, acquiring nothing, desiring nothing except a passive peace of mind, is typical of Chinese and Indian thought; also the constant harping on the transitoriness and futility of human life, which is forcibly and rather beautifully expressed by Ti-me-kun-dan."

Spring'd Republican p10 O 13 '25 500w

TIPTON, MRS EDNA (SIBLEY). Reducing menus for the hostess of to-day; Jack Sprat spreads. 69p $1 Appleton

642.1 Menus. Culprulence. Cookery 25-8847

A slim volume of suggested recipes for the "outsized" hostess and her friends.

Cleveland p119 D '25

"The book is popularly written, but is scientifically sound, and so holds an almost unique position in this era of pseudo-scientific literature and propaganda." Lettie Gay

+ N Y Tribune p8 Je 28 '25 280w

St Louis p342 S '25

TIREL, MARCELLE. Last years of Rodin; tr. by R. Francis; preface by Judith Cladel. 224p il $2.50 McBride [7s 6d A. M. Philpot]

B or 92 Rodin, Auguste 25-24779

Marcelle Tirel as Rodin's secretary was admitted to the intimate circle of his household during the last years of his life. She followed him in his work and in his thoughts, an amused and curious but always affectionate observer. His "watch-dog," she called herself, who protected him from the results of his childishness and egoism and warned him about his follies. She reproduces many bits of his conversation and tells amusing incidents of her dealings with him.

"A thoroughly disagreeable book."

— Nation and Ath 37:sup345 Je 13 '25 80w
Spec 134:684 Ap 25 '25 220w

"Gossip about great artists is always interesting, and this is very good gossip; reflecting so faithfully the opinion, limitations, and prejudices of a shrewd, loyal, and affectionate woman of the people that the subject is left in clear outlines. It is evident that the writer thoroughly understood Rodin as a man, and, with deference to Mademoiselle Cladel, who doubts if she was aware of his 'rare greatness,' she seems to have formed a pretty just idea of his character and limitations as an artist."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p410 Je 18 '25 680w

TISSOT, ROGER. Mont Blanc; with a preface by Geoffrey Winthrop Young. (Picture guides) 140p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Medici soc.

914.449 Blanc, Mont 25-26111

This description of Mont Blanc and its surroundings is an account not only of the peaks and summits but of the valleys and glaciers, of various ascents and routes, of excursions and winter sports. The illustrations in photo-gravure are many and beautiful.

Booklist 21:230 Mr '25

Boston Transcript p5 F 14 '25 850w.

Ind 114:303 Mr 14 '25 130w

"There is probably no one living today who is better equipped to describe the Mont Blanc country. Thoroughly familiar with every phase of this magnificent region he shows himself capable of describing it clearly, interestingly and at times even poetically. Informative and accurate, but always entertaining, his book will relieve the tedium of Baedeker and delightfully supplement it." Sherril Schell

+ Lit R p11 F 21 '25 250w

"As a guide to the mountain and its neighbourhood, the book, of course, has a practical value, but its value is not exhausted in its utility. As a memento of past visits, or as an armchair compensation for holidays that cannot be taken, it will be prized."

+ New Statesman 24:580 F 21 '25 200w

"None of this is written in commonplace style, for the author wields a pen that is picturesque, that has an instinct for the dramatic and the colorful that responds warmly to matters of human interest."

+ N Y Times p20 F 22 '25 320w

"To designate this as a guidebook is to give it altogether too prosaic a name. The eye as well as the imagination, is charmed by these pages with their more than 150 illustrations from photographs, beautifully reproduced."

+ N Y Tribune p12 F 15 '25 170w

R of Rs 71:336 Mr '25 80w

"It is written in excellent English and there is no suggestion that it is a translation, but it is the work of a Frenchman."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p123 F 19 '25 230w

TITUS, HAROLD. Spindrift; a novel of the Great Lakes. 326p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

25-9824

The hero, Carl Garrison, captain of a Lake Superior pleasure yacht, is convicted, on circumstantial evidence, of the murder of its owner and sentenced to twenty years. He is resolved to find the criminal, but all that he has to guide him is a confused memory of an evil face. Escaping prison after three years and successfully eluding his pursuers, he becomes John Goodheart, wheelsman of a fishing tug. When the villain comes on the scene and attempts to abduct the heroine Garrison makes a gallant rescue and in a fortunate moment of recollection Janet's abductor is revealed as the real murderer.

Booklist 22:36 O '25

Reviewed by L: Moore
Int Bk R p471 Je '25 80w

"All the adventure part of the tale is well done. 'Spindrift' is a lively yarn, with the beat of the waves and the cry of the wind echoing through its pages."

+ N Y Times p9 My 17 '25 400w

"The plot is a bit weak, the hero is extremely heroic, the villain unduly villainous and the 'comic relief' as mechanical and repetitious as a cuckoo clock, but there are rescues, escapes and fist fights galore. Besides, any 'movie' would go far if it handled the lake setting as well in photography as Mr. Titus has in words. The storms are really thrilling, and the novel is redeemed from the mediocre by its setting."

TITUS, HAROLD—Continued

Ruth von Phul

— + N Y Tribune p12 My 31 '25 230w

"'Spindriff' is the novel of active action, par excellence, happy ending and all."

Sat R of Lit 1:884 J1 4 '25 100w

"'Spindriff' is a grim story. There is no brightness in it, no beauty except for a weak thread of romance, nevertheless it grips one's fancy because of its very strangeness."

— + Springfd Republican p7a J1 26 '25 220w

"Only a nautical expert could estimate the possibilities of the final adventure and we are quite content with such a fitting close to an exciting and well-told tale."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Ja 15 '25 150w

TOBENKIN, ELIAS. God of might. 272p $2
Minton, Balch & co.

25-7083

From his birthplace in a village of the Jewish pale Samuel Waterman emigrated to America to escape religious persecution. Settling in a growing Middle Western town he succeeded for a while beyond his hopes. His marriage to a Christian girl was ideally happy, till gradually a shadow began to appear at first no bigger than a man's hand. It was the shadow of the ancient, inescapable hatred, the cleavage between Jew and Gentile. The subject of intermarriage is treated gently, without rancour, with an evident knowledge of both sides and sympathy with both.

Booklist 21:342 Je '25

"Clothed in clear and vigorous English, and presented with the fine restraint which is the outward sign of a humane and tolerant nature." Isabel Paterson

+ Bookm 61:347 My '25 180w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 4 '25 1050w

"It is a straightforward picture, shorn of adjective, of every quality of ingratiation, packed closely and selectively, communicating no emotion, but adequately producing its clear, cold effect." Zona Gale

Int Bk R p375 My '25 750w

"With all the passionate sincerity that dominates his work his style is free from adjectives and the overemotionalism that is too natural to the foreign-born artist." Anzia Yezierska

+ Lit R p7 J1 3 '25 600w

"His novel ranks far above the shoddy sentimental reactions of those Jews who, becoming articulate in English, have contributed popular paeans to the Promised Land; it ranks with the best Yiddish interpretations of America." J. J. Smertenko

+ Nation 121:146 J1 29 '25 400w

"Greater contrast in literary purpose and manner could hardly be found than in the work of Elias Tobenkin. His novel, God of Might, presents the tragic situation of a people so directly, simply, and dispassionately that his work might be considered equally valuable as social document or fiction." D. B. Woolsey

+ New Repub 42:348 My 20 '25 200w

Reviewed by J. Carter

N Y Times p5 F 22 '25 1700w

"Mr. Tobenkin writes with an air of sanity, with a method apparently of unerring logic. I fear that while Mr. Tobenkin has seen very clearly the nature of a certain spiritual unease, he has failed to appreciate the thousand realities of life which, in healthy people, build layer upon layer of experience into a man, giving him a fascinating and complex flavor." Sampson Raphaelson

+ — N Y Tribune p3 Mr 22 '25 620w

Reviewed by P. F. Sifton

N Y World p6m Mr 15 '25 620w

Reviewed by L. Kronenberger

Sat R of Lit 1:643 Ap 4 '25 820w

Wis Lib Bul 21:113 Ap '25

TOBEY, JAMES ALNER. Quest for health; where it is and who can help secure it. (National health council. National health ser.) 63p 30c (2s) Funk

613 Hygiene

24-5439

"In the brief compass of 63 pages, the author points out many of the available sources of information—both in literature and through agencies and organizations. The author is administrative secretary of the National health council, and associate editor of the 'American journal of public health.'"—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:415 J1 '25

TOLAND, EDWARD DALE. Choosing the right career; foreword by Charles M. Schwab. 222p $1.50 Appleton

374.1 Profession, Choice of

25-10271

The master of St Paul's school, Concord, addresses this book to boys about to finish school to encourage them to think thus early about choosing their future careers. He gives a brief outline of the advantages and disadvantages offered by nineteen leading careers and the training necessary to enter them.

Booklist 22:104 D '25

Boston Transcript p6 O 10 '25 50w

Cleveland p91 S '25

"Throughout he stresses with the greatest emphasis action, achievement, success, but has scarcely a word for that highest of all successes which is the fruit of an enriched mind, a mellowed heart and a benignant spirit. . . . But, barring this approach to his subject, Mr. Toland has written a useful book for boys who want general information on the subject of possible occupations so that they can shape their studies in better preparation."

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 21 '25 400w

N Y Tribune p8 Ag 2 '25 120w

St Louis 23:425 D '25

"An excellent contribution to the literature of this subject. True, it is addressed in the main to a rather selected group of young men, those planning to go to college, and largely those of independent means, but its usefulness is not by any means limited to this group."

+ Springfd Republican p10 Ag 28 '25 450w

TOLMAN, ALBERT HARRIS. Falstaff and other Shakespearean topics. 270p $2.50 Macmillan

822.33 Shakespeare, William

25-22589

The professor of English literature in the University of Chicago pursues such interesting inquiries as Why did Shakespeare create Falstaff? Is Shakespeare aristocratic? Shakespeare or Bacon? Is Malvolio a Puritan? Had the subject of drunkenness a special interest for Shakespeare? How was Shakespeare regarded by his contemporaries?

"When one considers the vast library that has already been written about Shakespeare and his plays it may well be wondered if there is any reason for another book, and yet after one gets into Professor Tolman's volume one finds one's self most agreeably diverted and interested. It isn't that Professor Tolman has anything important or drastically new about Shakespeare to convey to the world, for he hasn't, but perhaps it is because he writes pleasantly and Shakespeare himself is so unflagging in interest that still another book proves so agreeable." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p7 N 22 '25 220w

N Y Tribune p21 D 6 '25 200w

"Sincere, modest and sensible study."

+ Springfd Republican p10 N 25 '25 800w

TOLSTOI, LEO NIKOLAIEVICH, count. Tolstoy on art; by Aylmer Maude. 504p il $5 Small [17s 6d Oxford]

704 Art

25-1582

"Mr. Maude has collected in this volume everything that Tolstoy wrote on any of the arts; the main pieces are the essays, What is Art? and Shakespeare and the Drama."—Spec (F 14 '25)

Booklist 21:333 Je '25

"Mr. Maude is to be congratulated on his admirable invention in putting all this body of description and criticism together in one volume; it has never been done before and it will be most serviceable in convenience and usefulness to all persons that desire to study the great Russian thinker's revolutionary and often extreme views of art." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 14 '25 1550w

"In the course of his meditations, Tolstoy, with characteristic Russian whole-heartedness, manages to dispose of most of the works which the human race has admired and loved for centuries. But this is surely no objection to his theory, provided one grant the premises. If art is to be estimated in terms of morality, then it is useless to argue with Tolstoy. And there is no longer much discussion of the ideas concerned in this book. They provide too ghastly an object lesson in the folly of working out honestly the theories with which so many of us trifle in the name of art and morals." Ernest Boyd

Ind 114:476 Ap 25 '25 1100w

Reviewed by Clive Bell

Nation and Ath 36:779 Mr 7 '25 1000w

New Statesman 25:551 Ag 29 '25 250w

"Keen but disproportionate criticism."

+ — Spec 134:241 F 14 '25 350w

"In all his writings upon art, however he may err through his own self-torture, he speaks with the voice of greatness." Alan Porter

+ Spec 134:sup451 Mr 21 '25 2300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p328 My 14 '25 1600w

TOMLINSON, EVERETT TITSWORTH. Scouting on the Mohawk. (American scouting ser.) 357p $1.75 Appleton

25-4984

The exciting adventures of young Peter and his friend Sam the scout are based on events which actually happened during the French and English struggle for possession of the Mohawk valley. The two friends paddle up the Mohawk in a canoe to spy out the land in advance of an expedition against the French, and meet with many dangerous mishaps on the way. A thread of mystery concerning a valuable miniature and a letter in French runs thru the tale. The book originally appeared in 1905 under the title A soldier of the wilderness, and is now reprinted as one of the American scouting series.

"Mr. Tomlinson knows his history and also knows what will interest boys."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 25 '25 100w

"The history is skilfully presented in the guise of a romantic and swiftly-moving tale. Girls as well as boys will thrill to its adventures."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:92 Ag 29 '25 50w

Springf'd Republican p7a My 17 '25 80w

TOMLINSON, H. M. Tide marks. 295p il $4 Harper [12s 6d Cassell]

919.1 Malay archipelago

24-28785

For descriptive note see Annual for 1924.

"'Tide Marks' is the best travel book I have read for many years." W. McFee

+ Bookm 60:636 Ja '25 580w

"'Tide Marks' is more than a travel book; it is the record of the pilgrimage of a soul. Its pictures of strange scenes are not projected on the screen for themselves alone merely to give a new knowledge. But they blend into a whole which explains the change in a man's character." G. E. H.

+ Lit R p13 Ja 24 '25 360w

"The exact quality of Mr. Tomlinson's prose is not easy to define. It has distinction; but its distinction is entirely free from that rather splendid grandiosity of style or manner which marks so much distinguished prose. It is fluent, but never rhetorical; it has ease, and yet is neither familiar nor, except occasionally in dialogue, colloquial. It seems to us that his prose is, in a sense, not an individual prose. It has something of that proud communal quality of Elizabethan and Jacobean prose."

+ New Statesman 25:453 Ag 1 '25 800w

"He writes beautifully of strange and complicated states of mind, but not so lucidly and memorably. One cannot help regretting, in spite of the way he summons colors, sounds and fragrances, that this book of his had not waited a year or two or five, until, fog-ridden in London, his nostalgia had bidden him summon old memories, a few, to make a book of them." Ernestine Evans

+ — N Y Tribune p15 O 4 '25 260w

"In his discursions he never once says anything of spiritual or intellectual interest. On the other hand, tie him down to actual descriptions of the husk of the coconut, and he is excellent. His passages descriptive of the coast of the Red Sea could hardly be improved, and make fascinating reading. If only he would stick to that, and not keep digressing into pages of the 'And now we see from that, dear children,' type."

+ — Spec 133:994 D 20 '24 350w

"Mr. Tomlinson has an eye for the picturesque, the colorful and the lovely, and he portrays them in a gracious prose, not too limpid, not too nervous, but warm with life and incapable of any awkwardness." J. J. R.

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 29 '25 900w

"It is one thing to read of Eastern voyages by the light of the 'Pilot's' dry directions, another to watch them unroll with that splendour and subtlety of colouring which Mr. Tomlinson conjures from his palette. But the prose of the 'Pilot' and the prose of Mr. Tomlinson have one quality in common—integrity. He is one of the most ruthless of writers. No words will satisfy him but the words that define his impressions as accurately as a first-class chart registers a difficult channel; and though he seems to have all the words that are worth using in English, clean and shining in the storerooms of his mind, he needs them all for the task he has in hand."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p697 N 6 '24 1850w

TORDAY, EMIL. On the trail of the Bushongo. 286p il $5 Lippincott [21s Seeley]

916.7 Bushongo

[25-10203]

"The author of this book is well known to anthropologists by the excellent accounts he has published of his travels and researches among various tribes in the basin of the Congo, to our knowledge of which he has added very materially. In the present volume he deals mainly with the Bushongo, or Bakuba, as they are called by their neighbours, a tribe whose home is in the valley of the Sankuru River, one of the southern tributaries of the Congo. His visit to that tribe was paid a good many years ago, and in conjunction with Mr. T. A. Joyce, of the British Museum, he published a full and valuable account of the people in a Belgian series of ethnographical works. For the sake of English readers Mr. Torday has done well to compress his description of his interesting people by omitting many details, which find an appropriate place in his scientific report, and by lightening it with narratives of his personal experiences and adventures."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

TORDAY, EMIL—Continued

"Delightful book. Mr. Torday writes with simplicity and ease. He has much to tell, for little escaped him." F. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 18 '25 620w

"Mr. Torday's book will appeal both to the general reader and to the anthropologist. There is plenty of adventure, gaily told; there are stories of cannibals, pigmies, gorillas, and natives who, not having met Europeans before, seemed to have no desire to make their acquaintance. Mr. Torday, however, was of a different mind; he wanted to know the various natives of the Congo, and succeeded in great measure." B. Z. Seligman

+ Nature 115:866 Je 6 '25 350w

"Mr. Torday's discovery of the Bushongo and his experiences among them are written in a lively style. His book, he declares, makes no pretention to being a scientific treatise; but it has great value for all that."

+ New Statesman 25:180 My 23 '25 100w

Outlook 140:33 My 6 '25 30w

"The general reader will find in this work a vivid picture of the real native untouched by alien ideas."

+ Sat R 139:276 Mr 14 '25 430w

"His particularly readable book describes not natives of Kenya, but the Bushongo, a Congo tribe more advanced than the East African communities of the other books. The chief charm of this book is that he writes of these people with friendly intimacy. His characters live in all the intricacy of real humanity."

+ Spec 135:237 Ag 8 '25 960w

"Spiced with humour, and told in a pleasant vein which wins the reader's sympathy and carries him along without fatigue or boredom."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p308 My 7 '25 1250w

TORRENCE, RIDGELY. Hesperides. 105p $1.75 Macmillan

811 25-9353

"The author of Hesperides is led from a consideration of the kinship between man's blood stream and the primal ocean to the hope that yet another sea will rise—in the spirit, in the heart's deep places, and bear men, upon spiritual tides, toward the peace which is this writer's summum bonum."—N Y Tribune

Booklist 22:24 O '25

"His rhythms and his words are simple; his execution is sure. He writes little, but its purity of accomplishment cannot be questioned." J. F.

+ Bookm 61:693 Ag '25 180w

"That Mr. Torrence is a poet, none will deny. His verse is full of music; his diction exquisite, soaring oftentimes to noble heights; and there is much thought, but thought that is vague and obscure. This seems to be the outstanding fault—and a most serious one—in the book." C. J. Q.

+ Cath World 122:279 N '25 280w

"Will be read with respect, but in spite of its high moral tone and admirable simplicity, will excite little enthusiasm. The use of weak epithets partly accounts for this; partly it is the regularity of the metre. Three O'clock, except for the sentimentality of one or two details, is a nearly perfect poem."

+ Dial 80:69 Ja '26 120w

Ind 115:364 S 26 '25 30w

"Ridgely Torrence is not only a masterly poet; he is a mystic of no mean stature. I have called Mr. Torrence a masterly poet because I believe I could quote as many finely wrought lines from his book as from any volume of the same size by a contemporary American. His imagery is the result of fresh, keen realization. His music is intricate, but gracious." Marguerite Wilkinson

+ Int Bk R p585 Ag '25 800w

"Though the theme be often obscure, music has a way of penetrating the threadbare musings of reason and didactic conceit, pleasing the emotions. As with music, so with Ridgely Torrence's poetry. One may fail at times to get within defining distance of this poet's exact meaning. Still, the exotic tread of his verse echoes in those nooks of reaction where reason never enters." Carl Magg

+ Lit R p5 Je 27 '25 500w

"Mr. Torrence, skilfully and beautifully as he writes, cannot escape the consequences of a somewhat didactic theme. In the end his world is neither here nor there; neither stone nor star." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 121:170 Ag 5 '25 140w

"Hesperides is a book that may be placed immediately among the choicer treasures of an era that is fairly rich in poetry. . . . Although twenty-five years elapsed between the first and second books of poetry by Mr. Torrence, it is safe to wager that those readers who were attracted by the first small offering and intrigued by the possibilities of future work on the poet's part, will approach Hesperides with an unabated expectancy." H. S. Gorman

N Y Times p7 Je 7 '25 1700w

"Sometimes one wants a little relieving harshness—the savage gesture that overturned the tables of the money changers in the temple, the voice that cried: 'I came not to bring peace, but a sword!' And the melody, as well as the message of these lyrics, is occasionally too gentle. Yet one remains grateful to Mr. Torrence for giving, on almost every page, the breath and scent and glimmer of Hesperidean Islands. His is a book that one cannot lay aside without having the heart quickened." Babette Deutsch

+ N Y Tribune p4 Je 21 '25 550w

Reviewed by Joseph Auslander

N Y World p4m Ag 30 '25 260w

"Torrence should be placed among the best of our living American poets. His contribution has been comparatively small as a lyrical and narrative poet, but it has often been of the highest order, and he has winnowed his work with great integrity." W. R. Benet

+ Outlook 140:403 Jl 15 '25 450w

"In these one hundred pages is contained some of the most definite and distinguished poetry of the day." L. Untermeyer

+ Sat R of Lit 1:756 My 16 '25 950w

"He brings much of the stress and hustle which it was his aim to forget. Most of his verse is pre-occupied with this rather frenzied flight from a mechanical and competitive world. Nevertheless it is seldom relaxed. The fault of his romanticism is that at present it is too hastily sensational, but his instinct is clearly that of a poet, and his technical endowment considerable."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p483 Jl 16 '25 180w

Reviewed by Muna Lee

World Tomorrow 8:220 Jl '25 500w

TOTHEROH, DAN. Wild birds; a play in three acts. 124p $1 Doubleday

812 25-9903

University of California prize play which has for its theme the first love of two young children of the prairie—an orphan girl farmed out to the family of a toll-driven homesteader, and a boy farm hand, both of them bruising their wings against the ugly realities of life like wild birds in a cage.

"There is a grasp of language, a power of expression which is by no means immature. Mr. Totheroh has accomplished the difficult task of writing a play that is poignant, with a strength which refutes sentimentality."

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 16 '25 170w

"Realistically considered 'Wild Birds' is a trifle idiotic, and if it isn't mighty well acted I fear the theater audiences will occasionally titter. But if you don't consider it realistically, if you take it as a rapturous and pitiful lyric of young love thwarted by the lecherous and vulgar and cruel world, it has moments of touching beauty." W. P. Eaton

— + N Y Tribune p8 Ap 26 '25 270w

"The play has scenes of passionate intensity. The dialogue and the characterizations are throughout natural and unforced, yet suggestive of unfathomable mystery. The writing at times throbs with indignant pity, beneath the gray texture of the actual language, and again is figurative and rich with naive wonder. It is very close to a folk drama of the prairie country." J. W. Crawford

+ N Y World p6m Ap 26 '25 130w

TOWNE, CHARLES HANSON. Selected poems.

(Appleton lib. of verse) 139p $1.50 Appleton

811 25-17477

A selection from Mr Towne's two previous volumes of verse with some new poems. Many of his city poems are here, including Manhattan, a group of nature sonnets, and a collection of his lyrical pieces.

"It is a good book, and it is filled with color and beauty; for Mr. Towne is an admirer of Keats and of Shelley, and he writes in the old tradition of music and simplicity."

+ Bookm 62:75 S '25 300w

"It is a kind of poetry not fashionable at the moment. It is not bizarre, or sinister, or metrically crazy: it is neither mentally, morally, nor verbally diseased; neither cruel nor corrupt. Perhaps, pity is the quality that most strikes one in Mr. Towne's poetry. Death and love, the tragic music of living, the eternal loveliness of nature. These old, ever-new themes are fresh once more in Mr. Towne's sincere and moving verse." R. Le G.

+ Int Bk R p792 N '25 700w

"Undeniably his subjects are large. Somehow, however, the poet seems too anxious to have his say even at the price of an essential amorphousness. His thought shares this amorphousness; its Dickensian pity or melodrama is hardly stimulating, it proposes nothing, resolves nothing. This would not be half so bad if sympathy for people in Towne's poems ever transcended the lachrymal stage." J. W. Gassner

— + N Y Tribune p12 O 11 '25 250w

"The beauty in his work is a quiet, unostentatious beauty." Arthur Guiterman

+ Outlook 141:286 O 21 '25 100w

"It is often remarkably workmanlike verse. The sentiment is always laudable. There are occasional lines that have a noteworthy if somewhat theatrical beauty. But throughout this volume almost axiomatic statements are made with tedious solemnity."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:229 O 17 '25 180w

"He is an easy natural singer whether he is bending over the manuscript of Keats's 'Endymion' or watching a girl in a circus on a trapeze, musing on city roof-tops, or in a lilac lane. It is all rather facile, but we admit its frequent charm."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p743 N 5 '25 100w

TOWNSHEND, MRS DOROTHEA (BAKER).

George Digby, second Earl of Bristol. 252p il postpaid from London $3 Wilson, H.W. [15s Unwin]

B or 92 Bristol, George Digby, 2d earl [25-1255]

George Digby, second earl of Bristol, 1612-1677, characterized by Horace Walpole as a "singular person whose life was one contradiction" was one of the most striking figures of his time, a man of brilliant abilities, but unstable. He was secretary of state to Charles I and followed Charles II into exile. Mrs Townshend's biography is to some extent an attempt to rehabilitate the character of a man upon whose life and talents the verdict of Lord Clarendon and other men of his times has rested heavily.

"Whether George Digby is worth the pains of a biography, is a matter of opinion, but if so, the work under review does not appear fully to meet the case. It adds little to the information already available in the pages of the Clarendon State Papers, Carte, and Warburton, and an opportunity is missed in telling the diplomatic history of the exile, for which material exists from French and Spanish sources not yet woven into English books on the subject. The picture given, however, of Digby individually is spirited, and the troublesome Irish negotiations are clearly, if dogmatically, explained." K. F.

— + Eng Hist R 40:309 Ap '25 220w

"Mrs. Townshend's biography is always too apologetic in tone, and often much too jocular in style; but for those who would learn more of that unhappy period, with its heroisms and adventures, and continually surprising eloquence, she has produced an interesting and well-documented book, from which they may gather, incidentally at least, a good deal of valuable information." P. M.

+ Spec 133:938 D 13 '24 850w

"A scholarly and well-written book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p640 O 16 '24 950w

TOYNBEE, ARNOLD JOSEPH. Survey of international affairs, 1920-1923. 526p $9 Oxford [25s Milford]

327 International law and relations

"We have lately had founded among us an Institute with the professed object of being the focus of information on foreign affairs as a whole. As part of its work it has inaugurated a publication of a very ambitious kind; it proposes year by year to issue a volume in which will be found a conspectus of all that has taken place in foreign affairs during the last twelve months. As an introduction to this we have the work before us, which contains a survey of the whole field of foreign affairs during the years immediately succeeding the signature of the treaties of peace."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"It is safe to say that the Survey will take its place as the standard work of reference on contemporary international politics." B. E. Schmitt

+ Am Hist R 31:328 Ja '26 230w

"The book should be on the desk of every speaker, writer, student, and citizen interested in international affairs." C. E. Martin

+ Am Pol Sci R 19:332 N '25 800w

Booklist 22:112 D '25

"The factual matter is excellently handled; and Mr. Toynbee is deserving of the highest praise for his efforts. We suggest, however, that in later publications a pronouncing index be included." N. R. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 14 '25 600w

"One marvels at Mr. Toynbee's courageous blue pencil which can compress the shifting scene of three years of the modern world into one slender and one moderate-sized volume. The British Institute of International Affairs has thus undertaken and happily commenced an immensely important and monumental work." A. J.

+ Ind 115:275 S 5 '25 500w

"This invaluable volume includes a summary of eighteen international predecessors of the Locarno Conference, a record of the League's work, a short history of reparations; country by country is covered systematically, concisely, and—curiously—interestingly."

+ Nation 121:581 N 18 '25 100w

TOYNBEE, A. J.—Continued

"The work which Mr. Toynbee has begun to execute so admirably is of the highest importance to any one who, journalistically, politically, or academically, has to study contemporary international affairs."

+ Nation and Ath 37:572 Ag 8 '25 320w

"An admirable handbook for prolonged reading, which aims to include all the necessary facts. It is hard to think of anyone who has done more to clarify the muddy stream of contemporary affairs than the author." J: Bakeless

+ New Repub 44:181 O 7 '25 380w

"The reader must not be disappointed at finding that the present work contains little or nothing about the Middle East, for example. What it does contain is admirably done. He is particularly good, we think, on the developments in the Far East—the swift rise of the Japanese power during the War and its equally swift decline afterwards. The book is well annotated and documented, and it includes several useful maps."

+ New Statesman 25:506 Ag 15 '25 380w

"A masterly and penetrating study in a short compass."

+ Spec 135:311 Ag 22 '25 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p515 Ag 6 '25 800w

TOYNBEE, ARNOLD JOSEPH. World after the Peace conference; being an epilogue to the History of the Peace conference of Paris, and a prologue to the Survey of international affairs, 1920-1923. 92p $1.75 Oxford [5s Milford] 327 International law and relations 25-19520

"It was designed as an introduction to the Survey; but technical reasons made it necessary to publish it separately, and it is, in fact, an independent essay. Professor Toynbee shows how economic and political forces—notably Industrialism and Nationality—had mapped the world before the War, and how those forces were remapping it again six years later. His comparisons of the old age and the new, his scanning of the political horizon, are in the great tradition. He is not concerned so much with details or with the efforts or follies of this or that statesman, as with big movements, the re-orientation of the Powers, the emergence of new policies, the conflicts of groups of States, of races, of civilisations."—New Statesman

"No summary can do justice to a penetrating analysis almost every sentence of which gives food for thought." E. E. Schmitt

+ Am Hist R 31:327 Ja '26 580w

"As a study in political transition, the book will serve a useful purpose in tying the general peace arrangements with the international events which have followed. The lack of an index detracts from its utility." C: E. Martin

+ — Am Pol Sci R 19:831 N '25 180w

"No more able, authoritative, and unbiased summary of international events has been written."

+ Booklist 22:112 D '25

"In this book which is intended to link up the history of the peace conference of Paris with a survey of international affairs for 1920-1923, Mr. Toynbee does not set the reader adrift on an uncharted sea of facts. He gives him the fixed points of history by which he may take his bearings and establish his position."

+ Boston Transcript p1 O 10 '25 200w

"A very real service has been accomplished with competence and distinction. When one thinks of all the useless, futile, imbecile volumes spawned every day in this overbooked world, one is devoutly thankful for such evidences of careful and useful industry, so intelligently applied." A. J.

+ Ind 115:275 S 5 '25 460w

Nation 121:581 N 18 '25 40w

Nation and Ath 37:572 Ag 8 '25 320w

"Indispensable to everyone who is trying to keep an intelligent eye upon the bewildering complexity of this distracted planet. A smoothly-flowing, vivid summary of the planet as the Treaty of Versailles left it; but it is more than that—it is a compact little philosophy of contemporary history, not too long to be read at a single sitting. A more profitable book for any modern reader is scarcely to be imagined." J: Bakeless

+ New Repub 44:181 O 7 '25 800w

"A masterly piece of analysis. It is not the least merit of this book that it prophesies nothing at all. It is precisely what is wanted by the student of the history of to-day—a dispassionate guide to the history of yesterday. And if the student does not agree with all that Professor Toynbee says, he will find disagreeing a hard and profitable exercise."

+ New Statesman 25:506 Ag 15 '25 220w

"A masterly analysis of recent international movements, and also of present conditions." W: S. Myers

+ No Am 222:381 D '25 860w

+ Spec 135:311 Ag 22 '25 100w

"It is the book, not of a propagandist, not of one who has a thesis to maintain or a scheme to advocate, but of one who regards the events he narrates with a cool and critical eye. The note of the book is intellectual detachment. This does not mean that criticism and comment are absent; what it means is that criticism is given only when it is forced upon the writer by a consideration of the facts themselves."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p515 Ag 6 '25 1200w

TOZZER, ALFRED MARSTON. Social origins and social continuities. 286p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

571 Society, Primitive. Civilization. Manners and customs 25-9030

In his course of lectures before the Lowell institute the professor of anthropology at Harvard university deals simply with some of the fundamental principles and facts concerning human institutions and man in his relationships with his fellow-beings. The lectures discuss the cultural history of man, the savage and his society, customs and beliefs in regard to birth, death and burial, marriage and the family, social organization and classes, government, law and ethics. The appendix gives some themes on personal superstitions, written by Harvard freshmen.

"A remarkably interesting book written for the cultivated reader by a Harvard professor, and showing how our social institutions have evolved from the taboos and customs of savagery."

+ Cleveland p94 S '25

Reviewed by G: A. Dorsey

New Repub 44:208 O 14 '25 700w

N Y Tribune p1 J1 26 '25 240w

Outlook 140:224 Je 10 '25 30w

"Prof Tozzier's series of Lowell lectures is largely filled with simple and informing examination and exposition."

+ Springfield Republican p10 Je 2 '25 800w

TRAIN, ARTHUR CHENEY. Lost gospel. 77p $1.50 Scribner

25-17275

A young American Egyptologist and a German scientist find within an ancient pyramid half buried in the sands of the Libyan desert, a precious papyrus. It is a letter from Marcus Claudius Silenus to the Emperor Tiberius in which the young Roman tells of meeting Christ, and gives in Christ's own words a new message to mankind. How the letter was sought and found, and lost again with its precious message forever irrecoverable, is the story of the lost gospel.

"Most intriguing and imaginative story." W. J. C.

+ Bookm 62:xliv N '25 120w

Lit R p7 N 7 '25 120w

"In a 'Postscript' Mr. Train tells how he was moved to write the story and what he read to prepare himself for the writing, analyzes in lawyer-like style the problems of construction which the theme presented, and narrates a peculiar incident which attended his beginning of the task."

N Y Times p21 O 11 '25 200w

TRAIN, ARTHUR CHENEY. On the trail of the bad men. 427p $3 Scribner

364 Crime and criminals. Justice, Administration of 25-8517

"This is a series of thirteen essays and brief narratives all focussed on matters of law and courts of law. He has drawn from many years' experience at the bar, revealing a sharp observation of human nature and hitting drily many foibles of law and lawyers. An interesting and instructive chapter on the work of the District Attorney, and another of sane observations on the legal features of marriage and divorce seem the most worth while of the thirteen. It is evident that Mr. Train's interest and point of view are fully as much of the novelist as of the lawyer."—Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by C: P. Curtis, jr.

Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '25 600w

Booklist 21:362 J1 '25

Bookm 61:715 Ag '25 120w

"The book as a whole will be fresh and interesting to any reader who has not had the pleasure of an acquaintance with Mr. Train's other essays."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 My 16 '25 320w

"A great deal of reminiscence and legal lore salted by a sense of humor and a keen instinct for story-telling make up a book which the least legal mind and the most will enjoy."

+ Ind 114:450 Ap 18 '25 80w

Reviewed by H. C. Burr

Lit R p6 Ap 18 '25 1100w

"The title of this volume does not convey an accurate idea of its contents. It was a mistake to take the caption from what is merely an amusing description of a Western trip in search of the elusive desperado, and apply it to a book which has so much that is more worth reading on more interesting topics. Mr. Train is particularly readable, and is almost alone in his field in writing of the law and its administration for the benefit of the lay reader." C: Puckette

+ — N Y Times p5 My 10 '25 1100w

"Mr. Train knows his subject. He treats it in a fashion that is as agreeable to those whose business it is to enforce the law as it is to those upon whom it is enforced. His books abound with friendly good humor and are in a style that is pleasing to read." G. W. Wynne

+ N Y Tribune p12 My 17 '25 550w

"Decidedly pleasant. Warmed-over reminiscences from Mr. Train are far and away better than the profound and original thoughts of most lawyers when they try to write anything outside their own dreary professional productions." Edmund Pearson

+ Outlook 141:26 S 2 '25 220w

St Louis p337 S '25

"A rather happy compromise between the sobriety of the subject and the vivacity of its presentation."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:15 Ag 1 '25 120w

TRAPROCK, WALTER E., pseud. See Chappell, G: S.

TRAVERS, BEN. Cuckoo in the nest. 328p $2 Doubleday

26-1386

One misunderstanding can lead to a surprising number of false situations. It can almost lead to divorce, Peter discovered, when having missed the train that was carrying his wife to a house party, he invited another man's wife to motor down with him. The car broke down, of course, and forced them to stop at an inn. The formidable landlady mistook their relationship, and both Peter and Margaret lacked the courage to explain it. Their subsequent trials involve all their relatives and friends and lead to complications and implications that are amusing only to the reader.

Booklist 22:165 Ja '26

"He writes nonsense well, and there are many laughs in this story of an estranged couple. Far be it from me to complain of such things in an Englishman, but Mr. Travers seems to be occasionally a trifle forced and—very occasionally—a trifle vulgar." J. F.

+ — Bookm 61:587 J1 '25 80w

"Personally it seems to us that Mr. Travers had the idea of a good bit of humor and then spoiled it by endeavoring to be too French—or shall we say 'New Yorky'? Many a good situation has been spoiled by going to bed, and it was quite properly banned as a farce motive in Victorian days, because it always seems dull. Otherwise the book would be amusing, and might call itself farce in high life."

+ — Boston Transcript p5 My 2 '25 350w

"In 'A Cuckoo in the Nest' Mr. Travers carries his action along almost entirely by means of witty dialogue that bubbles and sparkles, froths and ripples and may be said to contain 'a laugh a line.' But in the few descriptive paragraphs that link the various scenes together one has the feeling that the writer is padding to fill up space."

+ — N Y Times p17 Ap 19 '25 400w

"Mr. Travers will never convince the compilers of the Hundred Best. His fictions are so light, so careless, so amusing, that they must seem little other than irrelevant, if not impertinent, to those engaged in that grim line of work." Will Cuppy

+ — N Y Tribune p10 My 3 '25 270w

"Mr. Travers is highly inventive. He is never at a loss. And he maintains the only proper attitude toward life, that of entirely nonchalant enjoyment. No preposterous situation can stump him for a solution or stale his gusto. He not only takes impish pleasure in writing, but maintains it to the last word of the book. Bits here and there in all his books are simply priceless and the ripple of narrative never idles in a backwater." W: R. Benet

+ Sat R of Lit 2:82 Ag 29 '25 120w

TRAVERS, BEN. Mischief. 309p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Lane]

25-17144

The author writes another sprightly comedy on marital complications. The mischief begins when middle-aged, many-chinned Mr. Bingham sees his lively young bride dancing too happily with Algy, and later kissing him in the taxi. Unfortunately Mr. Bingham is called to Paris on business, but he arranges for Eleanor to stay with his sister Louise. No one could be blamed for trying to escape from Louise, tho it is rash of Eleanor to escape with Algy. Things are frightfully mixed up for a long time, but eventually the mischief is undone.

"Would be more able if the author got his effects with a little less suggestiveness."

Booklist 22:165 Ja '26

"The plots and counterplots make enticing reading and hold the reader's attention throughout."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ag 26 '25 280w

TRAVERS, BEN—Continued

"Contains all the elements of an uproarious Palais Royal farce, yet there is no touch of indelicacy or vulgarity. There is a constant skimming over very thin ice, but the reader never feels that he is about to break through into muddy water."

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 23 '25 500w

"'Mischief' contains enough of the author's wholesome audacities, bubbling dialogue and fun-masked social criticism to convert any reasonable person who has not yet met up with the Travers novels."

+ N Y Tribune p16 O 11 '25 150w

"'Mischief,' latest of his contributions to light fiction, will swell his merry band and strengthen the oath of allegiance pledged to him by readers of 'A Cuckoo in the Nest.'" H. S.

+ N Y World p4m O 4 '25 260w

"This is much the best of his four novels. The fun is mellowed and the action more spontaneous, and we are too much amused all round to keep thinking, 'Well, this man is being funny!'" H. W. Boynton

+ Outlook 141:126 S 23 '25 160w

"From start to finish this delightful comedy (for though it trembles on the verge sometimes, it never really topples over into farce) is handled with unflagging wit and ingenuity and with touches of whimsical poetry."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p203 Mr 19 '25 320w

TRAVERS, BEN. Rookery Nook. 315p $2 Doubleday

Rookery Nook is a riotous farce in the same mood as "A cuckoo in the nest." Augustus arrives at their summer quarters without his wife. He staggers into the house with a suitcase, and drops it simultaneously with his lower jaw. There on the table sits an entrancing creature. A mass of blond hair tumbles over her shoulders. She is wearing pink pyjamas. Her father has just run her out, the lovely apparition explains, and she had nowhere to go but here. Spite of fears and his sister-in-law Augustus shoulders the responsibility and steps into an uproariously hectic time.

"If you like slapstick it is extremely funny. Unfortunately, the book is full of English slang which is not always intelligible, and once or twice it runs very close to the border of vulgarity. The humor of the story is dependent upon the action and not on subtlety of phrase."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 23 '25 300w

N Y Times p17 Ap 19 '25 400w

TREGOE, JAMES HARRY, and WHYTE, JOHN. Effective collection letters. 514p $4 Prentice-Hall

652 Commercial correspondence 24-17957

"Except for a short introduction, is entirely made up of sample letters, with brief comments thereon."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"These letters have been successful and are presented as examples of methods that get results. Letters to meet practically every collection situation are included. An interesting addition is a number of exchanges between debtors and creditors illustrating debtor reactions to collections letters, and how the creditor obtains payment."

+ Management and Adm 8:543 N '24 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:425 Jl '25

St Louis 22:406 D '24

TRELEASE, SAM FARLOW, and YULE, EMMA SAREPTA. Preparation of scientific and technical papers; a real help in every stage of the preparation of a manuscript. 113p $1.50 Williams & Wilkins

029 Technical writing 25-3868

"The text treats of the assembling of scientific data, the organization of the text, its corrections for each and all of the numerous phases requiring review and inspection, its alteration and emendation, and its final form for the printer's use. Especial attention is given to the preparation of tabular matter, bibliographies of several types, citations, abbreviations, and the use of italics. A particularly useful list of abbreviations for a considerable number of scientific journals is included."—Am J Pub Health

"A precise, concise and comprehensive treatment of the technique of writing for publication. Its value for the beginner is enhanced by its simplicity and by the completeness of the discussion of even the elemental matters of preparation of manuscript and by the abundance of illustrative citations." C. A. K.

+ Am J Pub Health 15:351 Ap '25 200w

"A well-balanced, carefully prepared, skillfully manufactured style book." R. S. McBride

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:435 Ap '25 400w

"Condensed, well-ordered, and easy to use; includes lists of important scientific journals and their abbreviations and a brief list of other books and articles on scientific writing; a convenient little manual for both inexperienced and experienced writers."

+ J Home Econ 17:463 Ag '25 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:25 Ap '25

St Louis p121 My '25

TREVELYAN, ROBERT CALVERLEY. Thamyris, or, Is there a future for poetry? (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 89p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

808.1 Poetry 25-19528

Mr Trevelyan takes the Thessalian bard Thamyris, who displeased Apollo and the Muses by introducing certain innovations in the orthodox technique of poetry, as a symbol of the perennial revolt of the younger poets against the authority of the past. He shows how modern poetry which is spoken or read differs from the early poetry which was chanted or sung and how this change has affected the evolution of its technique and made possible the use of new themes. Is the history of poetry a tale of decadence or has its separation from music and intoning brought it a fuller freedom? These are the questions which Mr Trevelyan sets himself to answer in this little book.

Booklist 22:111 D '25

Boston Transcript p6 N 28 '25 1050w

"Altogether admirable. It is not only that he carries his learning lightly, or that he is willing to phrase the deeper truths in simple language. It is rather that he has a fine discernment of the issues between the older technique and the new; and of technique in relation to reality." T. S. Knowlson

+ Lit R p2 N 14 '25 150w

"He is well-known to be a devout and conscientious student of poetry, and of his sincerity there can be no question. But I venture to doubt whether his sympathy with the modern spirit is very receptive or very profound. I put it mildly. Possibly his pessimism as to the future of poetry may be due to this refusal to shelter a certain section of verse, as written to-day, under the wing of that august denomination?" V. Sackville-West

Nation and Ath 37:572 Ag 8 '25 820w

"Mr. Trevelyan has written a careful and penetrating study of the present position of poetry, and of its possible development in the future."

+ Nature 116:604 O 24 '25 320w

"Thamyris is learned, sensible and very well-written."

+ New Statesman 26:176 N 21 '25 200w

"The reader, whether he belongs to The Mountain or The Plain in his poetical affiliations, will find him suggestive and understanding, a friend of both your houses." R. Le Gallienne

+ N Y Times p2 D 20 '25 2150w

N Y Tribune p16 D 20 '25 180w

"Mr. Trevelyan is a great lover and competent critic of poetry, and what he has to say on the subject is of high authority."

+ Sat R 140:240 Ag 29 '25 180w

Sat R of Lit 2:343 N 28 '25 280w

"It is a very charming piece of work, and personally, I agree with all, or, at any rate, almost all its conclusions." J. St L. Strachey

+ Spec 135:370 S 5 '25 1000w

Springf'd Republican p8 N 28 '25 250w

"Mr. Trevelyan has written a very depressing pamphlet, for all his hopes are half-hearted, and all his reforms at the mercy of an uneasy pedantry. His suggestions for the enlivening of poetic technique amount to no more than the research for subtleties of quantity in blank verse and 'all sorts of new possibilities of lyrical structure.'"

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p573 S 10 '25 1800w

TRIPP, GUY EASTMAN. Super-power as an aid to progress. 61p il $1.50 Putnam

621.312 Hydroelectric plants 24-7872

"A collection of six short articles and addresses discussing some of the social, economic, and political aspects of the subject."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:165 Mr '25

TRISTAN, LECLERE. See Klingsor, T. L., pseud.

TROTSKY, LEON, pseud. (LEV DAVIDOVICH BRONSHTEIN). Lenin; auth. translation. 216p $2.50 Minton, Balch & co. [7s 6d Harrap]

B or 92 Lenin, Nikolai, pseud. (Vladimir Ilich Ulyanov) 25-6190

Recollections and impressions of the Russian communist leader by his co-worker. The book is not a complete biography. It consists of sketches and fragments relating chiefly to two periods in Lenin's life during which he and Trotsky were closely associated: first, their work together in London, during 1902, on Iskra, a journal published under Lenin's direction; second, recollections of the decisive year of the October revolution in Russia. Trotsky reveals frankly the course of their relations during these two periods, and adds several articles and speeches characterizing Lenin, the man.

Booklist 21:381 Jl '25

Reviewed by T. S. Knowlson
Lit R p3 My 23 '25 130w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
Nation 120:696 Je 17 '25 100w

Nation and Ath 37:465 Jl 11 '25 280w

"Trotsky's work on Lenin is not a masterpiece. It is hurriedly written, and does not tell so much about Lenin as it does about Trotsky. Nevertheless, it is important because it speaks with complete frankness of many of the intimate details of the revolution—the rough data from which genuine history and biography are constructed. Every careful student of Russian history should, of course, read these sketches, but the great book on Lenin's life and place has not yet been written." Jerome Davis

— + New Repub 43:213 Jl 15 '25 220w

"Lenin is not in itself highly provocative, though it is quite easy to see how it might annoy Trotsky's enemies. It is a glorification of Lenin, but it is also a glorification of Trotsky, who appears in every chapter as the chosen disciple."

New Statesman 25:204 My 30 '25 480w

Reviewed by J. D. Adams
N Y Times p3 F 22 '25 2200w

"The picture presented, if sketchy, is at least consistent, competent, and authentic. The casual reader, doubtless, will be bored by the many passages which make him feel like a man hearing strangers talking familiarly among themselves, and any peruser of the book will find it difficult to bear with the atrocious translation, the incognito of whose author is wisely guarded." Avraham Yarmolinsky

— + N Y Tribune p8 Je 28 '25 500w

"It makes no pretence at finish—which is decidedly annoying to anyone who approaches it with the idea of learning the truth about Russia at last. On the other hand there is an unexpected vein of humor and the account of Lenin's interview with H. G. Wells is really amusing."

— + Sat R 139:561 My 23 '25 230w

"Those who expect to find here revelations of secret Russian history or explanations why Trotsky has fallen from power or out of favour with jealous colleagues will be disappointed. So also will those who hope to learn from any self-revelation what was the secret of the power wielded by Lenin and Trotsky. Lenin is here held up as the master-mind, the man who could treat small affairs with thoroughness, great ones with imagination, and both with success."

Spec 134:564 Ap 4 '25 700w

TROTSKY, LEON, pseud. (LEV DAVIDOVICH BRONSHTEIN). Literature and revolution; tr. from the Russian by Rose Strunsky. 256p $2.50 International pub., 381 4th av., N.Y.

891.7 Russian literature 25-6452

The Russian revolutionary leader writes of the effect of the Bolshevik revolution on Russian literature. He reviews the inter-revolutionary literature of the period from 1905 to 1907 and finds it individualistic, decadent and bourgeois. Then he criticises the men and movements which make up the literature of Russia today—something transitional between the bourgeois art and an art that is not yet born. He believes that the proletarian revolution is "laying the foundations of a culture which is above classes, the first culture that is truly human."

"If we cannot follow Trotsky clear through to his glowing predictions of a greater Socialist art where 'the forms of life will become dynamically dramatic' we can get from this sharply outlined analysis and positive criticism some sort of picture of contemporary art developments in Russia today. It is not too much to say, also, that much of the clearness of the book is due to its expert translation, in the hands of Rose Strunsky."

+ Bookm 61:714 Ag '25 280w

"He is a well-informed observer, no doubt. As usual, he writes with acumen and with talent; this must be recognized, too. It is interesting to follow his pliant and cleverly directed thought even when one does not agree with him, even when one perceives that, instead of going on, he turns around on the same spot. But Trotsky sees everything through Marxist spectacles, and, whatever be the qualities of his narrative, a reader who does not suffer from mental short-sightedness becomes annoyed by these all-discoloring glasses." A. I. Nazarov

— + Int Bk R p476 Je '25 1450w

Reviewed by T. S. Knowlson
Lit R p8 My 23 '25 130w

"This book is an important book for artists (and for others) by an artist." Ernestine Evans
+ Nation 120:696 Je 17 '25 420w

"Trotsky displays as a critic not only, what one might perhaps expect, a kind of brilliant ferocity, but also considerable subtlety. I have not the space to do justice to his argument. But it will be seen how it is based on the theory that a living literature must have an intimate bond with the existing political and social system. There is a sense in which, I think this is certainly true. But the connection is extremely subtle, and the fault of Trotsky's book is that he has nowhere, calmly and with detachment, attempted to make clear to himself and to us what precisely this connection is." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 37:678 S 5 '25 1000w

TROTSKY, L., pseud—Continued

"Trotsky's theory of criticism is doubtful, but his practice of the art is consistent and brilliant, if not always sound. The critic is as forceful, as trenchant, as magnetic as was the Commissar of War. He is frankly hostile to the temper of the mystic, and obtuse to the subtleties of certain technical experiments, such as Bely's. But what he has to say on current Russian prose and verse shows the honest reaction of a sharp and militant intelligence." Avraham Yarmolinsky

+ New Repub 42:323 My 13 '25 1350w

"When Trotsky gets down to first principles and to get down to first principles is his main, or rather his only object—he can be read with unalloyed interest. It may be said at once that Literature and Revolution is an important book, and even more important as a revelation of the true meaning of the Revolution in the eyes of one who is best qualified to explain it, and of the mentality of one of the three or four most dynamic figures of post-war Europe, than as a criticism of literature pure and simple."

+ — New Statesman 25:670 S 26 '25 1200w

"In the almost complete absence of critical information upon the literary happenings in Russia during the last seven years, Trotsky's book, with all its imperfections, is most welcome."

+ N Y Tribune p8 J1 12 '25 360w

"Mostly, of course, his book is a portrait of Trotsky. It is a book of brilliant dialectic over which ripples a fierce humor, and through which shines a generous love for a human race, none of the members of which are yet born. It contains thundering slogans for future revolutionists. It is full of ironic plays upon revolutionary terminology, which might convulse a Commissar, but which are not so funny to a 'bourzhui.'" J: E. Mitchell

N Y World p7m Mr 29 '25 520w

"I read every word of his book, and you will do the same if you give yourself the chance. For this minister of war happens to be a master of the art of controversy." Upton Sinclair

+ Survey 54:584 S 1 '25 1000w

"It will be a pity if the truculent tone of this book should deter readers from studying it closely, particularly as Trotsky's argument grows more significant and less partisan the farther we advance from the terrifying portrait which serves as frontispiece. His book has the vices and the virtues of crude power ranging itself indiscriminately against self-conscious culture. Nevertheless his studies of particular authors are often as brilliant in analysis as they are violent in abuse; and the suggestiveness of much of his materialist dialectics is undeniable."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p530 Ag 13 '25 1100w

Reviewed by M. H. Hedges
World Tomorrow 8:218 J1 '25 350w

TROTSKY, LEON, pseud. (LEV DAVIDOVICH BRONSHTEIN). Whither England? 192p $1.75 International pub.

329.9 Great Britain—Politics and government. Labor party (Great Britain) 25-22055

With trenchant irony Trotsky scores England's political leaders, predicts disaster as the result of their policies, and foresees the rise of a revolutionary crisis out of which shall emerge from the ranks of the bourgeoisie, a strong, controlling, communist party.

Bookm 62:618 Ja '26 180w

"Mr. Trotsky's book can be called nothing else but revolutionary propaganda." A. M. Nikolai-eff

Lit R p3 O 31 '25 500w

"If Karl Marx's sailing chart of political and social evolution in England was made on the very eve of something that started to sail in just the opposite direction, it is conceivable that Leon Trotsky's forecast of a Britain declining into ruin and sliding into communism, may also have been framed on the very eve of something quite different. This would be particularly true of a notoriously illogical people like the British who seemingly take pleasure in flouting the inevitable." Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p4 O 4 '25 1200w

TROWBRIDGE, WILLIAM RUTHERFORD HAYES. In the sun with a passport. 287p il $5 Doran [18s Hurst & B.]

916.1 Africa, North [25-19176]

Two women friends seek health and diversion in a leisurely journey thru the north of Africa, visiting Algiers, Tunis and Carthage. They meet several interesting strangers en route, and learn thru them in a stimulating and agreeable way what they are eager to know about the country, its history and its inhabitants.

"Frequent reference to history, sprightly anecdote, and a pleasantly friendly spirit make this a lively and entertaining book."

+ Booklist 22:157 Ja '26

"A volume that is bound to have a wide appeal with its strikingly original method of presentation."

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 12 '25 300w

New Statesman 25:506 Ag 15 '25 100w

Reviewed by Dale Warren
Sat R of Lit 2:412 D 12 '25 80w

"The journey is by no means unusual, but this book is rather by way of being an example of how an occasional reference to the Past can help to render interesting the Present for the intelligent traveller. In spite of the amount of picturesque and interesting information imparted by the various characters who appear in its pages, this book avoids the somewhat dusty flavour of the guide book, and deserves approval as a pleasant narrative of what a well-informed traveller was able to draw from the interesting places visited."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p422 Je 15 '25 820w

TSANOFF, RADOSLAV ANDREA. Problem of immortality; studies in personality and value. 418p $3 Macmillan [12s 6d Allen & U.]

218 Immortality 25-27607

The book is a discussion of the philosophic significance of the idea of immortality, of the more important theories of human destiny that have been held by philosophers and of the relation of immortality to the ideas of personality and value.

"The task which the author set himself has been accomplished in a very happy manner. The historical survey is scholarly and is presented in a style that enlivens the argument. Poetical, religious, and philosophical thought are all brought under tribute; and the various attitudes to the problem are studied with painstaking care. Of course, as the author himself explicitly states, there are omissions; it is particularly unfortunate that the philosophic mystic was not permitted to speak more freely. As far as it goes, I know of no better compendium of the historical side of the problem than is to be found in this book. The chapters on materialism, pluralism, and absolutism are especially interesting and suggestive." G. W. Cunningham

+ — Int J Ethics 35:428 J1 '25 550w

"This is an interesting and valuable survey and criticism of human thought upon immortality." W: K. Wright

+ J Philos 22:326 Je 4 '25 1250w

J Religion 5:223 Mr '25 60w

"The treatment is historical, critical, and constructive in well-adjusted proportions. Insight and fairness characterize his interpretations of various thought systems which he discusses and the criticisms of them which he presents." J: W. Buckham

+ J Religion 5:426 J1 '25 920w

"An example of the admirable work in its own line that is now being done in America. Dr. Tsanoff is so broad in range, so comprehensive in his philosophical, literary, and scientific allusions, and so detailed and intricate in argument, that he could only be reviewed worthily at length and by one of his own peers." Gilbert Thomas

+ Nation and Ath 37:273 My 30 '25 180w

"He has written a serviceable book, which shows extensive reading, a talent for clear statement, and an avoidance of jargon."

+ New Statesman 25:704 O 8 '25 320w

Spec 134:536 Ap 4 '25 400w

"Presents a treatment of the question that is both erudite and profound. It is marked, that is to say, by careful scholarship on the historical side and by insight and cogent logic in its philosophical development of the historical material." J. S. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p10 Ap 14 '25 800w

"Professor Tsanoff's book is sustained in its interest and pleasant to read, though we think the sub-title, 'Studies in Personality and Value,' expresses more adequately the scope of the argument, and perhaps also softens the distinct disappointment awaiting the reader when he reaches the final chapter."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p440 J1 2 '25 1350w

TUELL, ANNE KIMBALL. Mrs Meynell and her literary generation. 286p $2.50 Dutton

B or 92 Meynell, Alice Christiana (Thompson) (Mrs Wilfrid Meynell) 25-5198

The entire literary product which Mrs Meynell has cared to preserve is contained in a few small volumes, but the critics have always paid homage to its unusual quality. In the present book, the author discusses every aspect of Mrs Meynell's work, the poetry, the venture into journalism, the essays, the literary criticism—and presents it all against the background of her life and personality.

Booklist 21:381 J1 '25

"Scholarly and humane study."

+ Bookm 61:606 J1 '25 160w

"Discerning and sympathetic critical study." E. B. T.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 1 '25 880w

"Its references to that honorable company of her critical admirers, beginning with Ruskin and Rossetti and far from ended yet, are but casual. Instead, we are given the most inclusive study yet made of Alice Meynell's literary achievement in prose and verse, and one which must long remain an invaluable storehouse of reference for lovers of her work." K. B.

+ Cath World 121:274 My '25 650w

"Speaking of Mrs Meynell's country home in Sussex, this authoress says, 'There is solitude without.' So unstylish a statement would be enough in itself to kill this book, but it dies of many wounds, for similar platitudes stab one from every page."

— Dial 79:78 J1 '25 70w

"A book of literary charm and scholarship."

+ Ind 114:423 Ap 11 '25 20w

"Having grasped a large and useful idea, Miss Tuell must be praised for her success in imparting to it the right significance, as well as literary distinction. In fact, the wealth of thought and felicity of style which make for readability seem almost more inherent in the writer than in the materials derived from her favorite author." C. C. Buel

+ Lit R p2 Ap 4 '25 950w

"At last a full recognition has been given to the important literary distinction of Alice Meynell's prose. It is a much needed contribution to American criticism, and fortunately, as rendered by Miss Tuell, it is not academic. But much of what the author understands in such phrases as 'Mrs. Meynell's socialism,' 'inward solitude,' 'spiritual sense,' 'the hidden infinitude of contradiction,' 'the ultimate paradox of sanctity,' she leaves for the general reader obscure."

+ Nation 121:288 S 9 '25 180w

"Miss Tuell's attitude is that of frankly admiring discipleship. She had the advantage of close personal association with Mrs. Meynell, and she has toned a well-studied style into close harmony with that of her friend. Quotations from the essays are abundant, and there is a notable accordance between the two pens." H. B. Fuller

New Repub 43:26 My 27 '25 550w

"A book of rare qualities. Were the quotation marks to be omitted from her numerous quotations from the author she is studying, the reader would frequently find it hard to say which passages were Mrs. Meynell's and which are Miss Tuell's. So seldom does a critic feel under any compulsion to bring his own expression anywhere near the level of his subject that so noteworthy an exception as this book deserves especial mention."

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 8 '25 2200w

"Miss Tuell's is a charming style, one that leads the mind gently, a courteous and enlightening guide. We are not dragged tempestuously from one conclusion to the next and bidden in phrases less authoritative than bullying to look well and believe. The whole is as a source, as a tribute, and as a delightful piece of writing, entirely felicitous." Cameron Rogers

+ N Y Tribune p4 Ap 5 '25 500w

"The title is deceptive, for the book tells us little about Mrs. Meynell's literary contemporaries. The preface, by the author, declares the book to be 'a critical study of the work in prose and verse of Alice Christiana Meynell.' 'Critical study' is, however, scarcely the right description; it is, rather, a eulogistic survey in a most irritatingly 'precious' style."

— Outlook 140:529 Ag 12 '25 220w

"It was important that somebody should make a full, precise, and permanent record of her achievement. This Miss Tuell has done, and with a workmanship that is beyond criticism." O. H. Dunbar

+ Sat R of Lit 1:836 Je 20 '25 820w

Reviewed by Harriet Sampson

Spring'd Republican p7a My 3 '25 850w

Wis Lib Bul 21:197 J1 '25

TUNGAY, SYDNEY J. Acid-resisting metals. (Chemical engineering lib., 2d ser.) 136p il $2 Van Nostrand [6s Benn]

669 Metals [25-6065]

"Mr. Tungay describes the principal classes of metals known as resistant to the action of mineral acids, giving their origin and history in brief and a general discussion of their resistance to corrosion. The classes covered are high-silicon iron, lead, and regulus metal, aluminium, stainless steels, monel metal, cast iron and steel, nickel and chromium alloys, copper and copper alloys."—Ind & Eng Chem

"Original and practical little book. The book is refreshingly free from broad generalizations and lengthy theorizing." R. J. McKay

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:766 J1 '25 260w

"The author has succeeded in giving a large amount of useful information in small compass. The information in the book, when it is not directly based on the author's own experience, is carefully compiled from good authorities, and the result is that one can rely on the correctness of the statements. The book can be warmly recommended."

+ Nature 116:391 S 12 '25 120w

"Apart from minor blemishes the book may be recommended as a useful brief summary."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 10:25 Ap '25

TUTTLE, MARGARETTA MUHLBERG (PERKINS) (MRS FREDERIC CROSBY TUTTLE). The cobweb. 330p $2 Little 25-8315

To give Linda, his flower-like young daughter, every opportunity to succeed in the small western town of whose leading newspaper he was the undervalued editor, George MacGrath turned down an offer made by his prosperous brother Sandy, to join forces with a newly launched gas company in Virginia. Linda and her father were inseparable companions, but when George MacGrath's health failed, Linda's courage asserts itself. She sends him to a health resort and to pay the expenses, accepts the position of housekeeper in her uncle's New York home. Her responsibilities there bring her into close contact with a group of self-centered men and women in whose business and love affairs Linda becomes peculiarly entangled. The return of George MacGrath to his old Virginia home to spend the remaining years of a useful life, and love and marriage for Linda, the kind she had always dreamed of, bring the story to a happy ending.

Booklist 22:74 N '25

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 29 '25 150w

"She is not always happy in her method. She appears to lack the humor that would forbid her the often stilted speech of her most romantic and dramatic moments. She is sometimes—and there seems to be no other word for it—prolix, and her characters stray not infrequently beyond the limits of her picture. It must be said, however, that her second novel is impressive. She strives for a rare and rich beauty and is frequently successful in achieving it." Walter Lyst

— + Lit R 3 My 29 '25 380w

"It is a long and complicated but not particularly interesting tale. The novel is weak in characterization and blurred in narrative."

— N Y Times p22 Ap 19 '25 450w

"The Cobweb' is not up to the standard of Mrs Tuttle's former novel, 'Feet of Clay.' It is a novel of too hurried incident and too many characters. There is the feeling that the author, in her desire to keep the story moving, has neglected the scenes of emotional description in which her writing is at its best."

— N Y Tribune p12 My 24 '25 330w

Pratt p40 autumn '25

"The author of 'Feet of Clay' has in her present novel accomplished, we believe, a vastly more appealing and substantial work than its forerunner. There are here an even grade of literary excellence, a subdued and mellow simplicity, a gift for sharply individualized character creation which should commend it strongly to those seeking fiction of a civilized and serious type rather than the less solid varieties."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:712 Ap 25 '25 470w

"The character of Linda MacGrath, a girl of Scotch-Virginian descent, rare in charm and eager in acceptance of life, rather than the plot, which is a desultory sequence of simple events, holds together this gossipy American novel."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p758 N 12 '25 160w

Wis Lib Bul 21:202 J1 '25

TWENTY miles out; indiscretions of a commuter's wife by herself. 156p il $1.25 Little 25-21912

This little book is the happy and humorous record of a young couple's first year in a cottage on top of a hill twenty miles out from the city.

"Delightfully diverting and well selected indiscretions."

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 14 '25 180w
Cleveland p122 D '25

"A slight little book in both theme and treatment. But it is cleverly and vivaciously written, and almost any young couple, whether or not they are commuters, will find it entertaining."

+ — N Y Times p21 O 25 '25 250w

"Eleven lightsome sketches of suburban existence."

N Y Tribune p16 N 1 '25 130w

Outlook 142:79 Ja 13 '26 10w

Springfd Republican p10 D 22 '25 220w

TYLER, MARY HUNT (PALMER) (MRS ROYALL TYLER). Grandmother Tyler's book; ed. by Frederick Tupper and Helen Tyler Brown. 366p $3.50 Putnam 25-5464

B or 92 Tyler family

"Mary Hunt Palmer, the 'Grandmother' of this book, married Royall Tyler, author of 'The Contrast,' a popular play of Washington's time which first brought upon the boards the rustic stage Yankee, and later of two tales, 'The Algerine Captive' and 'The Yankey in London,' which were probably the first, certainly among the first, American works of the imagination to be reprinted in England. Mrs. Tyler saw some historic scenes and was acquainted with a few historic personages. Her Recollections rarely cover great events; for the most part they chronicle the courtships, marriages, births, deaths, business enterprises and reverses, journeys, and accidents occurring among a wide circle of relatives and friends." —Outlook

"Here is no dry-as-dust narrative, no fulsome biography of merely family interest, but an intimate and veracious story of absorbing interest." G. H. S.

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 16 '25 960w

"For maintaining unity careful editing is, of course, partly responsible. Professor Tupper's sympathy with the essence and the style of the whole has enabled him to piece together some scattered fragments at the beginning and to insert passages from a similar narrative, written of Revolutionary days, by Madame Tyler's mother, in such a way as to amplify the text without impairing its distinctive tone." G. H. Busey

+ N Y Tribune p16 My 10 '25 500w

"They reflect accurately and interestingly the social atmosphere and the changing manners and customs of the long years lived through by a courageous, kindly, affectionate, useful, and observant old lady."

+ Outlook 139:622 Ap 22 '25 160w

"It is a sturdy, generous family life that is portrayed, one that enlists both sympathy and admiration for its participants. Mrs. Tyler's tale is told with simplicity and directness—and her narrative without any particularly arresting qualities is fluent and agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:633 Mr 23 '25 350w

"Grandmother Tyler's book is charming in its naive simplicity, as she lives over again her childhood in the excitement of the Revolutionary times. The narrative of such a life cannot escape being interesting, when written in the author's simple, unhurried manner. What it sometimes lacks in clearness and conciseness is compensated for by the picturesqueness of the story. It is quite probable that many outside the large group privileged to call Grandmother Tyler a relative will want to include this book in their collection of Americana."

+ Springfd Republican p7a Ap 12 '25 650w

U

UHL, WILLIS LEMON, comp. Principles of secondary education; a textbook for students of education based upon writings of representative educators. 692p $3 Silver

379.17 Education, Secondary 25-11406

"This volume makes four distinct contributions: first, it presents an organized collection of superior readings in secondary education; second, it presents comprehensive lists of principles of secondary education based upon the best writings of the present time; third, it presents a sufficient variety of education literature to enable teachers, if they choose, to approach each chapter by the problem method; and, fourth, it presents supplementary discussions which are designed to guide students successfully through a large body of professional reading."—Preface

"Fifteen brilliant chapters in the modern method, backed by facts, investigations, tables and diagrams. If anything worth while has been printed on high schools, it's here."

+ Educ R 70:165 O '25 300w

"It is a truism worn out by repetition that on education rests the success of our democracy. Professor Uhl's book will have served a useful purpose if it shows nothing more than how precarious that basis is."

N Y Times p5 S 6 '25 760w

"The selections included in the book are well chosen and show a wide acquaintance with the literature of secondary education. Mr. Uhl's own contributions reveal a mastery of the field. One of the chief merits of the work is that the public high school is conceived throughout as a great social enterprise." G: S. Counts

+ School R 33:707 N '25 380w

UKERS, WILLIAM HARRISON. Coffee merchandising; a handbook to the coffee business giving elementary and essential facts pertaining to the history, cultivation, preparation and marketing of coffee. 245p buck $4 Tea & coffee trade journal co., 79 Wall st., N.Y.

663.9 Coffee 24-22071

"Intended for beginners in the coffee business, but will be useful also to laymen. Condensed from the author's larger work, 'All about coffee.'"—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"A special book for the average small library but one that contains much of interest to the general reader. Useful for libraries that could not afford the earlier book."

+ Booklist 21:264 Ap '25

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 10 '25 200w

"Intended primarily for the trade, but containing information of interest to general readers and students of food products or cookery."

J Home Econ 17:169 Mr '25 100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:428 Jl '25

The Times [London] Lit Sup p25 Ja 8 '25 80w

ULLSWATER, JAMES WILLIAM LOWTHER, 2nd 1st viscount of. Speaker's commentaries. 2v 340;312p $12 Longmans [36s E. Arnold]

B or 92 Great Britain—Politics and government

Lord Ullswater was speaker of the House of commons from 1905 to 1921, during the entire period of the World war and of the struggle for the Irish Free State. These two volumes contain reminiscences of those momentous years, and are enlivened by informal sketches of the distinguished men of many countries, numbered among the writer's friends.

"There is an index, but it is annoyingly incomplete. Taken as a whole the 'Commentaries,' in spite of the rather repellant title, is one of the most entertaining of recent autobiographies: it is an admirable self-presentation of a rarely cultivated, genial, gentleman and statesman." N. H. Dole

+ — Boston Transcript p3 D 12 '25 2350w

"We began to read this two-volume autobiography expecting much, and among other things plenty of amusement. It is, however, a very disappointing book. Mr. Lowther had a great reputation as Speaker but Lord Ullswater has proved that a good Speaker may be a bad writer. He has poor eye for memories, and almost a genius for taking the edge off a story in print."

— Nation and Ath 38:362 D 5 '25 200w

"Mr. Lowther has written a volume of great interest and charm. The risqué intimacy of the modern memoir he avoids. He has no need to parade his acquaintance with the great, for he knows everybody. The modesty with which he displays his life is in pleasing contrast to the megalomaniacal self-advertisement of some of our professional autobiographers."

+ Sat R 140:537 N 7 '25 1200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p685 O 22 '25 950w

ULRICH, ANNA. Recollections of Johanna Spyri's childhood; tr. by Helen B. Dole. 54p il 60c Crowell

B or 92 Spyri, Frau Johanna (Heusser)

25-15382

A short account of the early life of the author of Heidi, with a supplemental chapter on her work.

Booklist 22:124 D '25

Ind 115:479 O 24 '25 30w

"Heretofore there has been no information accessible concerning the life and character of Johanna Spyri. But so great is the popularity of her stories for children that librarians have been much harassed by inquiries concerning her that they could not answer. All of these will doubtless be glad of this tiny book, written by a friend of Johanna Spyri, which gives the chief facts about her life and some interesting, colorful glimpses of her childhood in the vicinity of Zurich."

+ N Y Times p26 S 6 '25 350w

UNAMUNO Y JUGO, MIGUEL DE. Essays and soliloquies; tr. from the Spanish with an introductory essay, by J. E. Crawford Flitch. 244p $3 Knopf

864

25-9001

A selection of Unamuno's shorter articles and extracts from his more extensive writings brought together and translated with his authority and supervision. Contents: The spirit of Castile; Spanish individualism; Some arbitrary reflections upon Europeanization; The Spanish Christ; The sepulchre of Don Quixote; The helmet of Mambrino; Don Quixote's niece; The religion of quixotism; Large and small towns; To my readers; Soliloquies; My religion; Solitude; Intellectuality and spirituality; The materialism of the masses; The man of flesh and bone; The problem of immortality; Creative faith; The song of the eternal waters; The tower of Monterrey; Appendix; Bibliography.

Booklist 21:374 Jl '25

"The exiled gentleman writes reasonably pleasantly and with a style, if clarity can be called style. But his ideas are such as an aging, slipping Shaw might employ were he making a bid for readers become cold and forgetful."

Bookm 61:601 Jl '25 160w

"What his people bring to their bull-fights, Unamuno brings to his wrestlings with the soul. The result is a gory spirituality, in keeping with his inverted creed that martyrdom creates faith. His sincerity always commands our respects for him as a man; and frequently our admiration for him as a writer."

+ Dial 79:176 Ag '25 220w

"Mr. J. E. Crawford Flitch has chosen wisely and well, but the book is not one that should be read through after the fashion of a novel. Rather, a better understanding of Unamuno can be gained by reading, first the preface and introduction. This first American edition is painfully marred by inexcusable typographical errors, a defect not usually found in Knopf books." C: L. Scanlon

+ — Int Bk R p417 My '25 1250w

Reviewed by Ernesto Montenegro
Lit R p4 Je 20 '25 900w

UNAMUNO Y JUGO, M. de—Continued

"Unamuno, to be completely understood—and refuted—needs be completely read. Nor is the task of refutation an easy one. For while one's mind may abstract itself from the passionate influence of his arguments, one's heart will find it difficult to remain impassive to their subtle caresses. And it is to the heart, and not to the mind, that he addresses himself." Eliseo Vivas

Nation 121:336 S 23 '25 1000w

"As a revelation of an eager, inquiring, and warm-hearted spirit, this book is uncommonly readable, and it gains in interest from the light which it throws upon a distinguished and representative Spaniard's hostility towards 'Europeanization.'"

+ Nation and Ath 38:sup256 N 14 '25 160w

"It is unusual to find a collection from a writer in a foreign language which gives so complete and well rounded a picture of the man as does Mr. Fritch's anthology."

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 19 '25 1700w

"In this book Mr. Crawford Fritch has collected several very important short essays of Unamuno. But there is no very good reason for his inclusion of such slight pieces as 'Large and Small Towns' and 'The Tower of Monterrey,' for in Unamuno's seven volumes of collected essays are to be found many of far greater weight than these. In this translation, too, as in the former, the passionate moving style of Unamuno has been gelded. Mr. Fritch has sacrificed the blunt intensity of Unamuno for an urbanity which the great Spaniard would be the first to ridicule." Eliseo Vivas

— N Y Tribune p2 My 3 '25 800w

Reviewed by Muna Lee

N Y World p7m Ap 12 '25 1000w

"It seems that he cannot be sampled anywhere without giving forth his essential quality. Wherever you dip in, it is the same man, and not to be forgotten. He is not a philosopher with a system, but a teacher with a message and a protest. He protests that modern civilization is a school of triviality." A. W. Colton

+ Sat R of Lit 2:153 S 26 '25 650w

UNDERWOOD, ALFRED CLAIR. Conversion, Christian and non-Christian; a comparative and psychological study. 283p $2 Macmillan [10s 6d Allen & U.]

248 Conversion 25-6895

This book deals with conversion from the comparative as well as the psychological point of view. Students of comparative religion have recognized that conversion is not a distinctively Christian phenomenon but one which is also found in non-Christian religions. Part one is a study of the fact of conversion in the New Testament and other religions. Part two is mainly concerned with conversion as a psychological experience.

"The author, who was for years a professor in Serampore College, Bengal, India, is especially fitted to make the comparisons which are done with care and justice. The results are significant and surprising." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 23 '25 240w

J Religion 5:331 My '25 30w

Reviewed by A. G. Baker

J Religion 5:551 S '25 900w

"Dr. Underwood tells the old story of conflicting complexes which eventually are solved, but he refrains from making any use of modern psychological teaching as to the nature of the complexes involved, and the origin of the feeling of guilt, so that from a psychological point of view his book is worthless; its only value is as a compendium of interesting items of Oriental religious experience which are not usually to be found in such works."

— + Nation and Ath 37:81 Ap 18 '25 350w

"A very useful contribution to the study of a subject which still awaits final treatment."

+ New Statesman 25:670 S 26 '25 750w

"This is an important monograph, approved by the University of London as a thesis for the degree of D.D. It strikes out a new line by being a pioneer attempt to deal with the phenomena of Conversion from the comparative as well as the psychological point of view."

+ Spec 135:78 J1 11 '25 230w

"Fills a need and performs a notable service by assembling material from non-Christian religions and comparing them with the more familiar material from Christianity. In the variety and intrinsic interest of the illustrations lies much of the value of the book. The material here assembled will surely prove a treasure house for future writers on the psychology of religion. When the author turns to analysis his results are not quite so new in all respects, but are still interesting." J. S. B.

+ Springfield Republican p10 Je 16 '25 420w

"Professor Underwood's book, which makes a full and, as far as we have been able to check it, exact study of Hindu, Buddhist, and Islamic conversions, is an addition of serious value to the literature of the subject. Indeed, our only criticism of the greater part of the book would be to wish that the writer had eliminated altogether his study of certain religions from which only fragmentary material is available, on which no scientific speculations can safely be based, and further increased the space—for the size of which he apologizes—which he devotes to the religions of India."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p234 Ap 2 '25 820w

UNDET, SIGRID. Mistress of Husaby; tr. from the Norwegian, by Charles Archer. 371p $3 Knopf

25-10145

The second volume of Sigrid Undset's three-volume romance of medieval Norway takes up the story of Kristin Lavransdatter at the point where it was left in the "Bridal wreath." (Book Review Digest, 1923) Erlend Nikulausson brings the beautiful Kristin home as his wife to his manorial estate of Husaby and thru many closely written pages we watch her development as wife, mother and mistress of his estate.

Booklist 21:385 J1 '25

"Taken by itself, the volume is a rich and satisfying story which has achieved perfectly the psychology of the characters in relation to their medieval times, but it is rather tedious on the subject of the political intrigues of Erlend which result in his trial for treason."

+ Cleveland p82 J1 '25

"She makes her men and women appear to move so wholly within themselves and their own times that thereby she gives the most binding illusion of contemporary life. Kristin and Erlend (with a slight change of speech and costume) might very well and probably do live next door to your own house. 'The Mistress of Husaby' and 'The Tree of the Folkungs' interpret the Middle Ages with a difference that is an absolute distinction in art." Donald Douglas

+ Nation 121:170 Ag 5 '25 550w

"Womanly in her exactness of detail and her insight, Sigrid Undset renders the harshness of the age with masculine honesty. Her men characters, though indirectly treated, or perhaps avoided, are, nevertheless, vivid and convincing. The slightly archaic style adopted in the translation hardly compensates for the terse style of the original, based on the sagas and enriched by dialect words."

+ Nation and Ath 37:653 Ag 29 '25 220w

"The Mistress of Husaby offers a striking combination of old and new. The period is medieval; the setting, Scandinavian; the atmosphere more realistic than Ibsen's. The combination of subtly-studied mental and moral troubles with stark violence of habit and manner is very effective—there is a gloomy majesty in the whole." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 25:728 O 10 '25 50w

"The second part of the story of Kristin Lavransdatter confirms the impression left by the first; that here is a very remarkable piece of work, a story of medieval times told as naturally and with as little apparent strain as if it were a tale of today. The wealth of learning which must have been necessary to produce such a book is never paraded; the clothes and customs, the manners and beliefs and points of view of the time appear only as they are needed for the carrying on of the chronicle. 'The Mistress of Husaby' is interesting, dramatic, and very far indeed out of the ordinary."

+ N Y Times p17 My 17 '25 950w

"This is a deep, rich, serious novel, exhibiting the incidental defects of its qualities and the essential virtues of its species. Sigrid Undset has recreated the past as a living age. She has not only got inside the clothes of her fourteenth century Norse ancestors, but into their skins. For the purpose of the story she accepts their codes, adopts their perspectives and values. Nothing is more difficult and nothing is so vital to the illusion. It is a prerequisite for historical fiction of the highest quality. And 'The Mistress of Husaby' does thereby take place in the first rank, in spite of its obvious weaknesses." Isabel Paterson

+ — N Y Tribune p10 My 31 '25 1250w

"This is a very great novel, a really outstanding importation, despite the austere fact that it might be described as so much linked-dourness long drawn out. The publisher cannot be too highly commended for the illuminating and in no way distracting notes which he has insisted on inserting where they belong." A. W. Porterfield

+ Sat R of Lit 1:908 J1 18 '25 460w

"No higher praise can well be given to the present instalment of translation than to say that it is worthy of its original. The anonymous scholar responsible for the rendering is gifted with a style possessing that rare merit of making a translation read like an original. The characters are portrayed with a sure art, in which a certain rugged and elemental force is combined with tenderness."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p570 S 3 '25 160w

UPDEGRAFF, ALLAN EUGENE. Dancers in the wind. 368p $2 Boni & Liveright

25-20825

Being a hermit, he lives alone in partial untidiness and in easeful pursuance of his theories, of which, having been in and out of marriage three times, he has many. He has, perhaps naturally, eschewed the society of the opposite sex for a season, and has begun really to enjoy retirement when the never impossible she appears. Their affair is immediate, passionate and conventionally unconventional. It follows its appointed course in New York to a conclusion that is another beginning.

"Exceedingly interesting reading. 'Dancers in the Wind' is much the ablest of Mr. Updegraff's ventures into fiction and his picture of one phase of New York's creative life is brilliant and accurate." F. A. G.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 21 '25 1000w

"Beneath the gracile body of this story lies much of poignant beauty and not a little of rugged thinking, all the more acceptable because it is set forth in pellucid and euphonious speech. This is no book for the prurient; it is a work conceived in sincerity and executed in candor and good taste." J. E. Rosser

+ Int Bk R p21 D '25 640w

"One notes with a mild astonishment that what sets out as airy sophistication ends upon a note of sheer wistfulness. This does but endear Mr. Updegraff to his readers." E. B. H.

+ New Repub 45:198 Ja 6 '26 170w

"This new novel of Allan Updegraff's is different. It is quite out of the popular mode. In fact, it is very much like an expansive fable. As a novel it quite avoids modern realism, that realism that was discovered by the newer realists several years ago, and dedicated in total to the unpleasant. Yet in subject, 'Dancers in the Wind' is sophisticated and modern to the point of saturation. An air of defiance is in its manner and perhaps went into its making."

+ N Y Times p8 N 1 '25 620w

"It is unfortunate that Mr. Updegraff cannot maintain throughout the whimsical tone he sometimes achieves when he is alone with his hero in the hills. But his touch is not sure, his purpose not steady. He descends too often to the level of shabby erotic fiction. His occasional gleams of delicate humor lead us to believe that he can do better things than 'Dancers in the Wind.'"

— + N Y World p7m Ja 10 '26 380w

"Mr. Updegraff knows how to create character and to portray the subtleties in the relationship between two lovers. But in emphasizing to an unbridled degree a vein of light philosophizing instead of plot, he goes a long way toward spoiling the interest of the book. His achievement merits temperate praise; to be really successful it should evoke enthusiasm."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:416 D 12 '25 230w

V

VACHELL, HORACE ANNESLEY. Fellow travellers. 246p il $4 Stokes

B or 92

The author of "Quinneys" writes these reminiscences of a "super-Victorian" boyhood, experiences as a rancher in California, recollections of Paul Gauguin and others, of authors and actors, hunting and collecting.

"Aside from a slight tendency toward 'anecdote' and a certain overestimation of the interest inherent in his own acquaintance among the lesser London literary and dramatic lights, the book makes easy reading."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:167 O 4 '24 100w

VACHELL, HORACE ANNESLEY. Watling's. 341p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

25-7945

Watling's is a great department store in London built up by the push and enterprise of its self-made proprietor, William Watling, who had concentrated on the store every ounce of his mental and physical energy. Next to his store comes his daughter June, an attractive specimen of the modern girl. Over against the Watlings stand the Marrables, aristocrats impoverished by the war. The young son, Gerry Marrable, while he is still in the ranks of the unemployed falls in love with June Watling and it is June's proposal, furthered by her father's offer to give him a trial at Watling's, that Gerry prove himself and earn her by making good in the business. From the moment of his introduction to Watling's, complications arise which try Gerry's mettle and almost lead to disaster, but he stands the test and earns both his salary and June

Booklist 21:385 J1 '25

Boston Transcript p4 My 27 '25 300w

"An absorbing and entertaining novel."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 12 '25 600w

N Y Tribune p10 My 24 '25 160w

N Y World p6m Ap 12 '25 120w

Sat R of Lit 1:714 Ap 25 '25 180w

"Mr. Vachell succeeds in interesting the reader in his book whenever he deals with the commercial methods of Watling's, an enormous modern store, instead of with the private affairs of Mr. Watling and his daughter and the young man with whom she has fallen in love."

+ — Spec 134:981 Je 13 '25 60w

VACHELL, H. A.—Continued

"Again and again it has been demonstrated that a good writer can take a banal theme and a threadbare plot and raise them into another plane by his personality and style. But Mr. Vachell has taken the banal and the threadbare and left them pretty much where they were. The later chapters, which deal with an attempted seduction and a strike at the emporium, do seem to have a certain spark, but quite definitely not one of humour."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p224 Mr 26 '25 200w

Wis Lib Bul 21:202 J1 '25

VALENTINE, DOUGLAS, pseud. See Williams, V.

VANCE, LOUIS JOSEPH. Road to En-dor. 396p $2 Dutton

25-7675

The Reverend Andrew Streater is an ascetic with the stern uncompromising conscience of the New England zealot. Mary, his wife, is a character of singular strength and sweetness. Their married life is exceptionally happy until, to his dismay, Streater discovers that his love for his wife is obscuring his devotion to God. There ensues a terrific struggle between the man and the priest, from which the ascetic emerges triumphant. Chance brings into their lives an old friend of Andrew's, whom Mary welcomes for his sake. From that moment their domestic difficulties become tragic. The clergymen's continued moods of bitterness and suspicion drive his son from the house and all but alienate his wife. Thru varied scenes and dramatic incidents the story moves swiftly to a climax touched by the supernatural.

"A novel with many faults and one virtue, the latter being its hold on the reader's interest. The story drags out for too long before the really exciting climax."

— + Ind 114:331 Mr 21 '25 80w

"The story moves at a leisurely pace, but for all that it is an intense story. The last portion of it burns with interest. Mr. Vance is an accomplished story-teller, who can grope his way out of a trying situation credibly and creditably." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p5 Mr 7 '25 400w

"The novel is an astounding combination of sound observation, improbable developments, and somewhat stately circumlocutions of style."

N Y Times p22 Mr 22 '25 500w

N Y World p7m Mr 15 '25 150w

Outlook 139:543 Ap 8 '25 100w

"The Road to En-Dor" is a perilous compound of realism and sensationalism: perilous, because it will hardly win Mr. Vance the favor of the discriminating, and because it is likely to lose him the good-will of those who like their mystery to start on page one."

Sat R of Lit 1:674 Ap 11 '25 450w

VANDERWALKER, FRED NORMAN. Interior wall decoration; practical working methods for plain and decorative finishes, new and standard treatments. 451p il $4 Drake, F.J.

698 Walls. House decoration 24-31625

"A comprehensive manual, giving definite instructions for practical work."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"A practical working manual. Text is well illustrated with plates and diagrams."

Booklist 21:367 J1 '25

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:412 J1 '25

Pratt Technical Books p21 '24

VAN DOREN, CARL CLINTON. James Branch Cabell. (Modern American writers) 87p $1 McBride

813 Cabell, James Branch 25-6449

A brief and appreciative summing up of the genius of Cabell and his scheme of romance—

the Poictesme of his imagination, and the figures of legend with which he has peopled it. Mr. Van Doren assigns Cabell to a place in American literature beside Hawthorne and Melville.

Booklist 21:338 Je '25

"Mr. Van Doren's analysis of Mr. Cabell's work is an able one and no doubt he has made clearer for many people the ramifications of the Cabellian world of romance, but to us it seems that he has neglected to stress some of the real joy of Cabell, of his daring, his contrariness, the touch of impishness, which he never loses no matter how loftily his irony soars." D. L. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ap 15 '25 500w

"To those who know their Cabell well there will be little that is new in Mr. Van Doren's book but the summary of the author's literary achievement and the exposition of his spirit and philosophy, illustrated by remarkably felicitous quotations, are valuable." G. D. M.

+ Cath World 121:705 Ag '25 80w

Dial 79:175 Ag '25 60w

"Mr. Van Doren has done his work sympathetically and carefully."

Ind 114:386 Ap 4 '25 40w

"Mr. Van Doren has put so much of personal enthusiasm into the book that it stands outside the dusty air of academic research in a charming and poetic atmosphere of its own. In the nature of things, any one who loves Cabell is articulate, a worshiper of wit and wonder and magic words, and Mr. Van Doren, always a stylist of distinction, lends himself to his subject so sensitively that it will be unfortunate if his envisioned commentary is limited in its audience to collectors of Cabelliana and university students of the future." P. H. Gilkyson

+ Lit R p14 Mr 28 '25 450w

"An extraordinarily thorough and compact job. It is Cabell in epitome. It surveys Cabell's accomplishment as a whole and yet is not neglectful of important detail. The essence of each book is distilled into short paragraphs with what may be compared to a chemist's skill. The redaction of the Cabellian philosophy of life and art is accomplished in a few pages that might serve as a model of sympathetic and illuminating interpretation." Burton Rascoe

+ Nation 120:494 Ap 29 '25 1850w

"Mr. Van Doren keeps his head through the shifting scene; deals understandingly with Mr. Cabell's ideas; and exhibits, in his own trim style, the more studied and ornamental style cultivated by his subject." H. B. Fuller

+ New Repub 44:104 S 16 '25 200w

"An intelligent and revealing summary that may be read with pleasure even though the reader can hardly confirm the critic's enthusiasm for his subject." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p11 Mr 29 '25 2050w

"For the artist who is also a scholar there can be no more sympathetic interpreter than the scholar who is also an artist. Mr. Van Doren brings to his subject a flawless understanding, an appreciation tinged with enthusiasm, and that rare gift of luminous discernment which elevates the profession of criticism from a pedestrian pursuit into one of the nobly adventurous arts." Ellen Glasgow

+ N Y Tribune p3 Ap 5 '25 1250w

Reviewed by Morris Markey

N Y World p6m Ap 26 '25 300w

Outlook 120:528 Ag 12 '25 200w

St Louis p350 S '25

"This excellent little book is not as penetrative as he could, I think, if he had chosen, have made it. Yet Mr. Van Doren ought to succeed in drawing the attention of lovers of choice things to a writer of unquestionable distinction." A. W. Colton

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:62 Ag 22 '25 440w

Spring'd Republican p7a Mr 22 '25 50w

Wis Lib Bul 21:197 J1 '25

VAN DOREN, CARL CLINTON. Other provinces. 149p $1.75 Knopf

25-18852

"Mr. Van Doren presents a group of studies, everyone the center of a potential novel. His aim being 'not to tell stories but to present characters,' he gives the reader material to construct novels of his own. Rather, he writes the novels, everyone in its twosome or fewer pages. In The Shadow of the Triangle from the moment in which the wife develops the tendency to defer to her husband in trivial matters of opinion, through her delight in having her suitor conquer her in the water games, and on to her swift, indignant choice of her husband when the other man worsts him in physical encounter, she and the two men, all instinctive creatures, sophisticated but not sensitized, move with but a low fraction of the awareness of their recorder. In The Bitter Outline a man enters and chiefly lives within his own words; and through this study Mr. Van Doren has, with some soft acid, bitten upon his plate a figure as memorable as that of Ethan Frome."—Nation

"These studies would not be so searching if into them there had not gone the critic's practiced power of beholding, the power to see a man in all his projections, body, mind, and spirit; and to discern what projection, or projections, may be working at a given moment. To discern thus, moreover, through having arrived at a balance of his own power of divination, so that his body does not try to appraise another's spirit, nor his mind the body of another. To have achieved such a balance is the rarest arrow in a critic's quiver, and for a creative writer, with his more sustained performance, it forms one great secret of that arc which he is or is not able to send curving from his hand straight to another's heart." Zona Gale

+ Nation 121:600 N 25 '25 1050w

"As an expression of the author's philosophy, these stories drawn from 'Other Provinces' are even more impressive than as individual studies of human beings. Their extraordinary simplicity of method is of a piece with their breadth and inwardness. The secret of their impact on the mind lies, I think, when one grows tired of meticulous analysis, far back in their spiritual quality, a phrase that has been sadly corroded with much indiscriminate using. And yet, it is exactly this quality that gives them grace and value." Mary Siegrist

+ N Y Times p5 N 8 '25 1000w

"Doubtless Mr. Van Doren, who here announces his intention to devote himself in the future largely to fiction, will write more elaborate works, but it hardly seems likely that more observation, more intelligence or more life can be crowded into an equal number of pages. For the contact which 'Other Provinces' establishes with reality is singularly intimate and its communication singularly direct." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Tribune p5 D 13 '25 960w

"The tone of the book is quiet and unassuming, there is an avoidance of tragic or sensational issues, the author selecting characters little if at all above the average, and dwelling by preference on the very young or the very old whose lives in the nature of things are neither tragic nor sensational."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:261 O 31 '25 220w

VAN DOREN, CARL CLINTON, and VAN DOREN, MARK. American and British literature since 1890. 350p $2.50 Century

820.9 English literature—History and criticism. American literature—History and criticism 25-16893

Critical estimates of contemporary American, English and Irish writers whose work has meaning for its own age and gives promise of permanence. Only those writers are included whose reputations have been gained since 1890. Very little space is given to writers of an earlier period who during these thirty-five years have continued to build on an established reputation. The book is primarily intended for use in schools. Bibliographies and suggestions for study are included.

Booklist 22:153 Ja '26

"The method the Van Dorens have adopted is wholly admirable: they set down with accuracy, concision, and insight the claims that may be made for and against the authors they are discussing. The survey is by no means complete. But what there is of the survey is designed to quicken the student's interest in living literature." Burton Rascoe

+ — Bookm 62:209 O '25 820w

Boston Transcript p7 S 2 '25 820w

"If we object a little to the norm of the authors' selective process, we cannot decline to approve of the general excellence of the book itself." J. F. W.

+ — Cath World 122:422 D '25 450w

"The summaries are capable; the judgments cautious and unimportant."

+ — Dial 79:517 D '25 140w

"In the relatively small compass of some three hundred pages they have surveyed the literatures of America, Britain, and Ireland during the past twenty-five years, yet at no point does the work seem scamped or crowded, so well have the lines been laid down. They neither evade controversial figures nor lose the detachment of historians in their treatment of them." Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 115:362 S 26 '25 1000w

"Easy, sympathetic, and restrained. No one, of course, will agree with all the estimates and evaluations of the authors. Their summaries are just a little too simple, their values too delightfully exact, but it is an excellent book for those who wish to know something which may be used as dinner-table conversation about Mr. D. H. Lawrence, let us say, without going through all the grief of reading him."

+ — Ind 115:396 O 3 '25 80w

"The effectiveness of the volume derives simply from what might be called sound descriptive criticism. The authors have performed the serious task of judgment with continence of superlatives, with noiseless but firm suppression of the insignificant, and with all reasonable certitude." T. Trueblood

+ New Repub 44:310 N 11 '25 500w

"As an introduction to the more important literature of the immediate past, 'American and British Literature Since 1890' is distinguished by the clarity and simplicity of its exposition, as by the admirable thoroughness of its necessarily brief discussions. With but few exceptions, every discussion of every author studied is an adequate and comprehensive summary of an individual contribution." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Times p4 S 27 '25 1300w

"Its characteristic quality is that it deals, in well-mannered, orthodox fashion, certainly in the best 'international idiom,' with the work of men who up to a few years ago were regarded widely as rebels and iconoclasts and dismissed by the reigning literary historians in a footnote. . . . Here and there the reader strikes illuminating summaries. . . . The chapter on American essayists appears badly balanced." Harry Hansen

+ — N Y Tribune p8 N 8 '25 880w

"The Van Dorens have succeeded in convincing even a rather old-fashioned and somewhat skeptical reader of the essential integrity and worth of the modern writers. They are in earnest, these writers, and the proof of this is a certain ability to strip themselves to essentials." C. H. Gaines

+ No Am 222:357 D '25 520w

"A first-rate book."

+ Outlook 141:244 O 14 '25 60w

"The general reader who uses this volume as a guide will do well to make allowance for the authors' point of view, which, it is fair to say, there is no attempt to conceal. Subject to the qualifications indicated, the book may

VAN DOREN, C. C. and M.—Continued
be recommended as helpful and stimulating. Even those who would prefer a more catholic outlook will agree that it contains much craftsmanlike criticism and much excellent writing; it is eminently a readable book." J: W. Cunliffe

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:492 Ja 16 '26 1250w
Spring'd Republican p7a Ag 23 '25 80w

VAN LOON, HENDRIK WILLEM. Story of Wilbur the hat. 110p 1l $3.50 Boni & Liveright

25-8237

Wilbur was a hat. A loud green hat. So loud that even Zeus could hear him way up in Kingdom Gone. So Zeus sent a hurricane to blow Wilbur clean out of the picture. And it did. Now Wilbur fell at incredible speed for more miles than man can count, into a part of the world which does not exist. There he had many strange and stimulating adventures which should have set him to thinking. But Wilbur was only a hat. A loud green hat. So green that he could not think. Instead he felt relieved when Mickey fished him up from the river of time and sold him to a sophomore for ten cents. There is a moral to the story. It is in the puzzle picture on the last page. You have to find it.

"The narrative form of the book is atavistic. The pictures are futuristic. The ensemble entertaining." R. W. Thompson

Lit R p8 My 16 '25 320w

"The book is very far from being another 'Gulliver's Travels.' Not that it needed to be that; but it might have been almost as convincing as that. Mr. Van Loon has been too sure of himself, too jaunty with error and too slapdash with truth, to produce anything better than a primer of idealism. As such 'The Story of Wilbur the Hat' will serve to warn the youths who read it what they must not think and say. And in itself it promises pretty well for Mr. Van Loon's forthcoming history of human freedom." Mark Van Doren

+ — Nation 120:469 Ap 22 '25 700w

"It is too bad, on the whole, that Mr. Van Loon was not satisfied with the fun of writing and drawing Wilbur, without insisting on the fun of publishing it. For Wilbur the Hat is a great work of genius, but of a fireside genius of the family order, which shines with wit and wisdom in a small circle of relatives and friends." E. Vincent

+ — New Repub 43:53 Je 3 '25 600w

"All of this is very neat, and according to Hoyle, but it is hardly the stuff from which Dean Swifts are made. Mr. van Loon nips but he does not bite." Lloyd Morris

+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 29 '25 1500w

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes

N Y Tribune p5 Ap 5 '25 1700w

"A delightful satire, equally compounded of rollicking fun and wholesome earnest, and the pictures are almost as amusing as the text."

+ Outlook 139:659 Ap 29 '25 300w

"Seldom has didactic earnestness been so engagingly disguised with foolery. This book is flippantly profound."

Sat R of Lit 1:881 Jl 4 '25 450w

"A moderately entertaining fantastic satire." Spring'd Republican p7a My 24 '25 320w

VAN LOON, HENDRIK WILLEM. Tolerance. 399p $3 Boni & Liveright

272 Religious liberty. Persecution 25-22590

Intolerance, not tolerance, is the subject of Mr. Van Loon's book—in particular, religious intolerance, and of this the official rather than the private variety. The first half of the book traces the development of intolerance among Christians. The other half is concerned with such leaders in the fight against intolerance as Erasmus, Rabelais, Montaigne, Spinoza, Voltaire and Tom Paine.

Booklist 22:101 D '25

"The book's distinguishing mark is its boldness. The iconoclastic author minces no words. He charges straight through territories where the proverbial angel would seek to detour. Slashing right and left with the keen sword of his wit, he risks the eternal enmity of both Catholic and Protestant by daring to tell the whole truth about the Reformation. He is master of that period, and his essay on Erasmus, that most difficult personage, is a splendid bit of the new type of historical biography." C: F. Potter

+ Bookm 62:342 N '25 850w

Reviewed by Frances Bartlett

Boston Transcript p5 D 5 '25 950w

"The general tendency seems to be to overrate somewhat this rather pretentious volume by the author of 'The Story of Mankind.' It may be a powerful work, but it is not new. The value of the volume is in its gathering between one set of dark red covers, a sketchy panorama of the men who have fought for the right to their own thinking." C. M. Morrison

+ — Lit R p3 D 26 '25 460w

"Mr. Van Loon has brought the same engaging, vivacious style which he developed in 'The Story of Mankind and The Story of the Bible, to the story of the most enlarging and civilizing conception which the race has developed. . . It is the panorama of human history, of which Mr. Van Loon is so much a master, seen from one point of view, controlled by a single theme, and animated by a pervading spirit." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 44:309 N 11 '25 420w

"The book which, for some ungodly reason, he calls 'Tolerance' has nothing whatever to do with tolerance, being in fact a vindication of heresy in all ages. It is not even a historical work, though Mr. Van Loon makes swift excursions from Greece to Byzantium, to the Middle Ages and the French Revolution. It is simply Paine and Voltaire, and Ingersoll. . . The whole book, in fact, is written in a cocksure and assertive manner." C: W. Thompson

— N Y Times p5 O 18 '25 2000w

"It is full of wise sayings, amusing characterizations, diverting scenes, thrilling tales and stinging blasts." C: Beard

+ N Y Tribune p4 D 20 '25 850w

"In this book, as in his others, he shows the rare faculty of telling a story that is readable to John Doe and is interesting and instructive to the scholar. Mr. Van Loon's book shows haste in construction and is not as closely knit together as could have been done had more time been given to the subject, but it is a very important book and well worth the attention of any one interested in the subject." Clarence Darrow

+ N Y World p6m N 15 '25 1600w

"This is a disappointing book, and the more so because it contains sufficient evidence that if Mr. Van Loon had taken more time and pains and had consulted the groundlings less and his august theme more he could have given us a very fine piece of work. It is, after all, a good deal of a book; for Mr. Van Loon is a humanist, a humorist, learned without pedantry, and master of a lucid style."

+ — Outlook 142:34 Ja 6 '25 400w

"If 'Tolerance' turns out to be really a 'History of Intolerance,' hitting only the 'high spots,' is the author fairly to be blamed for that? Is there so much real tolerance in this strange world of ours that even the most gifted and imaginative writer could compile a scant ten-page pamphlet about it?" T. A. Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 2:293 N 14 '25 850w

"It must be said that 'Tolerance' does not exhibit the author's talent at its best and that the book is something of a disappointment. Van Loon does show here and there the penetrating insight of a liberal-minded commentator of Dutch Protestant antecedents. He has a gift for drawing out historical figures too often slighted in the conventional history books. But these gifts of the author are not reinforced by a sufficiently thorough account of the events of which he writes; nor are the pictures that he paints fair representations of the times described." P. B. McDonald

+ — Springf'd Republican p5a N 22 '25 650w

"Tolerance is as interesting a book as may be found in many moons—a history worth hocking one's shoes to buy."

+ World Tomorrow 8:383 D '25 100w

VAN SLYKE, LUCILLE (BALDWIN) (MRS GEORGE MARTIN VAN SLYKE). Nora pays. 309p $2 Stokes

25-2348

The problem presented in this dramatic novel is that of the woman in business. The story opens with Nora Laurens, a successful business woman at the height of her career, the owner of a smart Fifth Avenue shop. Fifteen years before in a fit of exasperation, she had abandoned her professor husband, her three young daughters and an over-bearing mother-in-law. With the passing of the years she was quite confident that she had overcome her desire for her children, but a note from Daphne, the youngest, sends her post-haste to the old home to make the acquaintance of her offspring. The story then concerns itself with Nora's problem—that of establishing motherly relations with her daughters and to this difficult job she gives herself unstintingly. Of the three daughters only Daphne finds happiness; for Nora there is the sad realization of the price she paid for her freedom.

"The charm of the story is its intense humaneness. Its events probably are happening somewhere at this very moment." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 4 '25 1400w

Cleveland p67 Je '25

"The book is bright in spots, and entertaining." Margery Latimer

+ Int Bk R p354 Ap '25 220w

"A book carrying such distinction as lies in the vivid telling of a consistently constructed tale."

N Y World p8e Ja 18 '25 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p721 O 29 '25 180w

Wis Lib Bul 21:90 Mr '25

VAN TUYL, FRANCIS MAURICE. Elements of petroleum geology; with an appendix of legal forms of the oil industry, by A. W. Heinemann. 275p il $3 Petroleum pub. co., box 1592, Denver, Col.

553.28 Petroleum. Gas, Natural 24-18548

"Based on a series of ten popular lectures delivered at the Denver institute of technology early in 1924. Intended for laymen interested in the oil industry but having no knowledge of the fundamental principles of geology. Includes brief descriptions of North American fields, and has short chapters on leasing of oil and gas lands, oil-field development, and hints on oil speculation."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:408 Jl '25

VAN VECHTEN, CARL. Firecrackers. 246p $2.50 Knopf

25-16657

This is the story of a New York smart set in which several familiar characters reappear. Gunnar O'Grady is an unusual young man. There is about him a dynamic quality that stirs up new and sometimes uncomfortable emotions in the people he meets. He is the fuse that sets them off. Paul Moody, Campaspe, and the child Consuelo each explodes in characteristic fashion. Lastly the young man blows himself up.

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

Bookm 62:84 S '25 250w

"Mr. Van Vechten is so very fascinated with the sketch that he has done that he cannot control himself. On individuals he is the Frueh of the printed page, but when he attempts a group picture he merely draws an advertisement for Kelly's Cord Tires." K. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 S 19 '25 1050w

"The book is dedicated to James B. Cabell, with a touch of the cher maître in it. One may fancy the 'master' a trifle embarrassed if he were called upon to speak as to the superficial style of it, as the author's search for the unusual word degenerates into a sophomoric mannerism. When Cabell uses a phrase unfamiliar to the groundlings, he does it because it is the best, if not the only one, for his purpose. Mr. Vechten does it here merely to 'show off,' often with unhappy results. And he really knows better. But there is meat in the book, and one may look forward to the next O'Grady with interest." H. L. Pangborn

+ — Int Bk R p740 O '25 700w

"If you like Carl Van Vechten, 'Firecrackers' will keep your admiration a-simmer. If you liked Aldous Huxley's 'Antic Hay,' here is inconsequential decadent mirth cut off the same sleazily shimmery pattern. Indeed, there is only a Tweedledum-Tweedledee difference between the two books." A. P. Terhune

Lit R p3 O 3 '25 800w

"'Firecrackers' is one of those obscure performances which leave the beholder puzzled to explain exactly the presence of so many damp squibs. . . . Bright figures come trooping in from 'Peter Whiffle' and 'The Tattooed Countess' and go on talking to one another in the now unmistakable Van Vechten manner. . . . They do not so much explode like firecrackers as shine like pale, pleasant ghosts in fashionable drawing-rooms of the intellectually unemployed." Donald Douglas

+ — Nation 121:491 O 28 '25 700w

"Some of the book is smart, some of it realistic, some of it fantastic, and a great deal of it pretty dreary." Moses Harper

+ — New Repub 44:105 S 16 '25 200w

"As usual, the style is witty, cynical and hard, perhaps a little harder than in the other novels. Mr. Van Vechten's mannerisms are more pronounced, the odd word and the cataloguing sometimes annoying. Just once the artifice is dropped; the account that Campaspe gave to Lou Poore of the death of her sister, the Countess, expresses real feeling."

+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 9 '25 550w

"His sly pedantries do not always hit their humorous mark. But for the most part his technique is well in hand. He has hit upon a world in which his imagination moves easily. He has invented a language which is his and no one else's. He has served notice that he claims the right to vary the fare which from time to time he sets forth. Within the limits of his interests, which means also his capacities, almost anything may be henceforth expected of him." Carl Van Doren

N Y Tribune p1 Ag 23 '25 1050w

"His extremely individualistic pages lead one on easily and irresistibly. One becomes a participant—almost an accomplice. If one scarcely knows now and then—subject-matter considered—whether to be glad or sorry, he can make up his account by crediting all this lightheaded whimsy and invention to that phase in the evolution of a metropolitan centre which gives it, eventually, a fairy-tale in consonance with its own nature and taste. The artist, true, may have been born beyond its bounds, yet he is best nourished within them. Mr. Van Vechten will doubtless leave any metropolitan epic to other pens, but his own seems equal to turning the peculiar lyrics that the 'time' and the 'place'—to borrow the language of the playbill—alike call for." H: B. Fuller

Sat R of Lit 2:39 Ag 15 '25 600w

VAN VECHTEN, CARL. Red. 205p $2.50 Knopf

780.4 Music

25-2662

Of these papers on musical subjects some are selected from earlier volumes of the author

VAN VECHTEN, CARL—Continued

now out of print and three have not previously appeared in book form. Contents: A valedictory; Why music is unpopular; The great American composer; The authoritative work on American music; Music for the movies; The importance of electrical picture concerts; Movies for program notes; The new art of the singer; Variations on a theme by Havellock Ellis; On the relative difficulties of depicting heaven and hell in music; On the rewriting of masterpieces; On hearing what you want when you want it; Cordite for concerts.

Booklist 21:266 Ap '25

Bookm 61:236 Ap '25 200w

Boston Transcript p6 F 18 '25 300w

Dial 78:522 Je '25 100w

"Readers who are acquainted with Mr. Van Vechten only as a writer of sophisticated, rather improper fiction, will be surprised to learn that his culture is genuine and broad, that his competency to comment on life and art is founded on knowledge as well as intelligence. His book is worth reading and worth keeping."

+ Ind 114:106 Ja 24 '25 150w

"After the disappointment of 'The Tattooed Countess' I have been reading and re-reading the essays collected by Carl Van Vechten in 'Red' with a pleasure that is all the keener on that account." Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 114:188 F 14 '25 1450w

"There are inaccuracies in this book and something too much of haste, but its speed is a part of its charm. In any case, the facts or the non-facts are not the important thing, but the vivacity with which it all is written and the myriad shafts of suggestion it throws off."

+ N Y Tribune p4 Ap 26 '25 150w

"The book is entertaining, witty, clever, and quite unimportant. The style is diluted Huneker with a dash of Mencken."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:711 Ap 25 '25 280w

Wis Lib Bul 21:141 My '25

VAN WATERS, MIRIAM. Youth in conflict.
293p $1 Republic pub co., 421 W. 21st st., N.Y.

364 Juvenile delinquency. Juvenile courts
25-2080

"Dr. Van Waters has been for some years a referee in the Juvenile Court of Los Angeles, California, and she bases this study on a dozen cases from that court selected 'with no thought of illustrating completely all types of problems and personalities dealt with.' Nor does she offer the book as an attempt at solution but as 'a description of forces in conflict, youth versus age, the moving versus the static.'"—Survey

"A vital and stimulating discussion. Author has facility and vividness of style that greatly enhance the book's interest and value."

+ Booklist 21:329 Je '25

"The most important thing which it brings out is the fact that most juvenile delinquency may be traced back to parental indifference and a social indifference to the value of childhood. The book is startling, but we believe it is true, and recommend it to all who scoff at the efforts of teachers and scientists who are endeavoring to reach back into heredity to find the cause of delinquency and who are trying to awaken the public at large to its responsibility in contributing its efforts and attention to the problem of the present."

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 5 '25 200w
Cleveland p94 S '25

"Her book is a definite answer to those sociological critics who claim that social work is nothing but mere pattering with individuals with no adequate return to society. Every college dean, high-school principal, and educational administrator should read 'Youth in Conflict,' so that he may render a more understanding service to the youth in his charge."

+ Nation 121:287 S 9 '25 130w

Reviewed by Stuart Chase

N Y Tribune p3 Ag 16 '25 680w

"One of the most valuable qualities of Dr. Van Waters' Youth in Conflict is strategic; the book has the brilliancy and sheer charm characteristic of Miriam Van Waters' mind and works. And thus it catches and holds the attention of not-too-completely earnest readers who are undoubtedly extremely important readers in the present state of the art of improving our social fabric. Never in my knowledge has the delinquency disclosed in the juvenile court and its treatment been discussed with a more scientific approach, a nicer human understanding, a more uncompromising sense of reality." J. C. Lathrop

+ Survey 53:771 Mr 15 '25 500w

"This is a book for parents, educators, probation officers, scientists, judges, institution workers, for it attempts to give 'a fresh approach to age-old problems of human associations.' It will leave all adults more conscious of how much they are contributing to the delinquency of youth." J. F. Binford

+ World Tomorrow 8:153 My '25 400w

VAUGHAN, CHARLES EDWYN. Studies in the history of political philosophy before and after Rousseau. (Manchester univ. publications) 2v 364;339p $14 (42s) Longmans

320.9 Political science 25-8182

"Anyone who knows anything at all of political philosophy knows Vaughan's great edition of Rousseau's political writings. For many years he had been writing a history of political philosophy; he died before its completion. Thanks, however, to the pious affection of a group of friends, of whom, particularly, A. G. Little, A. C. Bradley, and H. B. Charlton must be named, we have, in these two noble volumes a work that will be a permanent credit to English scholarship. The book is not, in the strict sense of the word, a history of political ideas; those who are most likely to profit by it are they who know their subject with some intimacy. It is rather a critical study of twelve great thinkers from the time of Hobbes, studied from the angle of an idealist of the school of T. H. Green, and with occasional, but not general, appreciation of the circumstances under which they wrote."—Nation and Ath

"The chief merit of the whole work is the truly philosophical way in which the problems of politics are stated and considered. Altogether the book is one which will make all scholars regret that the death of Professor Vaughan has deprived us of the larger work he had planned." C. D. B.

+ Int J Ethics 36:107 O '25 340w

"This is, granted its standpoint and method, a most valuable and suggestive work. Professor Vaughan takes the outstanding political thinkers since Hobbes and analyzes with infinite patience and exactness the systems they represent. The analysis is so made that there is combined with it criticism of a high order. It may perhaps be useful to warn the reader what he is not to expect. There are, in the first place, two great gaps; the treatment of Rousseau, and there is no treatment of the Utilitarians." H. J. Laski

+ — Nation 121:45 Jl 1 '25 700w

"It is not a book for beginners, and it cannot be called easy reading. But no one who has sought to wrest their secret from Hobbes or Locke, from Burke or Hegel or Mazzini, can rise from its study without a mind enriched by that new knowledge which comes only from contact with a mind stored with wisdom made luminous by profound reflection. We have deep cause for gratitude." H. J. Laski

+ Nation and Ath 37:18 Ap 4 '25 1150w

"The whole is a monumental work of the first importance."

+ Nature 116:241 Ag 15 '25 100w

"All his life Vaughan was working at a History of Political Philosophy which, if completed, would have been no unsatisfactory substitute for Acton's unwritten masterpiece, the History of Freedom. Apparently it would have run to four volumes. . . What is published is thus but a torso of what was projected, but the execution so far as it has gone is worthy of the noble plan. Much of the first volume is, indeed, masterly, and its publication is a service to scholarship such as only a University Press can render."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p307 My 7 '25 1950w

VAUGHAN, DOROTHY M. Great peoples of the ancient world. 178p il $1.20 (3s 6d) Longmans

930 History, Ancient 25-26569

"This book has been written to introduce children of ten to twelve years of age to the life of ancient times, as a background to their classical studies at a later age. The first part consists of the eight descriptive chapters (mostly in story form), and the second of a brief historical summary, bibliography, a few notes, a map and a time chart, for the use of teachers and any older readers who may care to take it up."—Preface

"The book is scholarly, archaeologically correct and each chapter is packed with information." Margaret Bancroft

+ Hist Outlook 16:238 My '25 220w

"The style of the book is simple, and the scholarship and literary feeling of the author have combined to give a sense of reality to the narrative of past events. The book is easily read on account of the conversational method of treatment and challenges the attention of the reader at once." A. F. Barnard

+ School R 33:555 S '25 460w

"Attractively written little book."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 5 '25 120w

"Text book appearance detracts from its attractiveness. The illustrations, from many sources, including the British Museum, will be appreciated by the teacher."

Wis Lib Bul 21:92 Mr '25

VAUGHAN, FLOYD L. Economics of our patent system. 288p $2.50 Macmillan

347.7 Patents 25-9268

By way of introduction, the author describes the causes of invention, the history of patents, the salient features of the patent law and the justification of patents. The rest of the book deals with the evils of the patent system—pools and consolidations, unfair competition, suppression of patents, litigation, delay in granting patents and discouragement of inventors. The final chapter deals with proposals for improvement of the patent system.

Reviewed by M. N. Nelson

Am Econ R 15:756 D '25 600w

Harvard Business R 3:512 Jl '25 80w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p585 S 10 '25 100w

VAUGHN, SAMUEL JESSE, and MAYS, ARTHUR BEVERLY. Content and methods of the industrial arts. (Century education ser.) 397p $2 Century

371.42 Industrial arts—Study and teaching 24-32132

"This book is the outgrowth of twenty years of experience in the industrial arts and in vocational shops. It brings together the authors' experiences in industry itself, in the early one-teacher, one-shop manual training, in city school systems, in teachers colleges, in state universities, and in the army educational work. . . Its purpose is to aid all teachers who in any way come in contact with the industrial education field to see more clearly the purposes of shop courses in the schools, to understand more completely the means and methods by which such purposes can be carried out, and to appreciate more fully the relation of industrial work to the general scheme of education."—Preface

Boston Transcript p3 My 23 '25 86w

"The book is no experiment, but the formulation of ideas worked over and revised from year to year. It is a teacher's book, for those in service and for those preparing."

Educ R 69:223 Ap '25 300w

"A very comprehensive bibliography appended to each chapter, as well as a few pertinent quotations, testifies that the authors are in touch with progressive ideas in this field. There is, however, no evidence of a consistent educational philosophy at work. The book remains a rather ordinary textbook reflecting current practice. For bold pioneering in this field we shall have to look further." S. L. Patrick

— + N Y Tribune p20 Ap 19 '25 400w

"This book comes as near being a one-volume library as any we have yet seen. The teacher in industrial arts or in vocational shops, for whom it is written, will find in its four hundred pages a complete, well organized, and unprejudiced presentation of the history, purposes, and methods of industrial education in this country, viewed from the vantage point of twenty years' experience."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:31 Ag 8 '25 350w

School Life 10:120 F '25 100w

VEDDER, EDWARD BRIGHT. Medical aspects of chemical warfare; with a chapter on the Naval medical aspects of chemical warfare, by Duncan C. Walton. 327p il $6.50 Williams & Wilkins

623.4 Chemical warfare 25-4088

"After a brief history of chemical warfare the author proceeds to discuss, comprehensively and systematically, the scientific aspects of the subject—physical, chemical, meteorological, physiological, pathological, and clinical. The several kinds of gas are reviewed in turn, and their pathological effects are illustrated by plates. Then there are chapters on protection, both individual and collective, giving an account of the different types of mask and how to use them, with numerous photographs showing mask drill. An account of the field organization for treatment and transport of gassed cases follows; and a chapter on the very important subject of the ultimate results of gas poisoning rounds off Colonel Vedder's survey."

—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"The most thorough, comprehensive, and intelligent study of chemical warfare which we have yet seen."

+ Ind 115:110 Jl 25 '25 250w

"In collecting the information contained in this book, Colonel Vedder has done a great service to the medical officers of the Army and Navy who will be called upon to treat men injured by war gases and by many of the gases which are met with through accident in civil life. The book will also enable chemists and others to gain an insight into the medical aspects of chemical warfare problems. The large number of references in the book add to its value." A. S. Loevenhart

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:546 My '25 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p260 Ap 16 '25 1200w

VEDETTE, pseud. See Williams, V.

VENABLE, CLARKE. Fleetfn, an idyll of a little river; with a prefatory note by Henry Van Dyke. 66p il $1.25 Reilly

25-8194

"The life story of a black bass. Fleetfn's minnowhood, the formation of his character, the birth of courage, his wooing and mating, his search for 'the home of heart's desire' are all told in poetic and often ecstatic style."—N Y Tribune

"If an adverse criticism may be made, it is that Mr. Venable is so charmed by his theme that he lingers over-long, sometimes repeating himself unnecessarily, in his description. It remains a question whether there was ever a true fisherman who was not carried away with enthusiasm when once launched on a tale. Certainly those who have felt a grudging admiration for an agile warrior, as well as many who enjoy books about the out-of-doors, will be interested in the book."

VENABLE, CLARKE—Continued

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 10 '25 180w

"A delightful little story."

+ Cleveland p97 S '25

"One might search far and wide and live to be a hundred and never make the acquaintance of a more enjoyable companion than 'Fleetfin.' The creator of 'Fleetfin' has revealed the inhabitants of fishdom as having soul or personality by endowing them from his imagination with the gift of thought and reason." E. S. Alexander

+ Lit R p9 Je 6 '25 320w

"It is told skillfully, in charming style, by an author whose love for the open and the wild things that dwell there is reflected in his pages."

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 26 '25 450w

N Y Tribune p11 My 31 '25 120w

VENABLE, WILLIAM HENRY. Poems; ed. by Emerson Venable. 240p $2 Dodd

811

25-7222

The collected verse of this Ohio poet and educator, 1836-1920, is here offered in a single volume.

"There is much human appeal in his poetry, though it lacks the qualities which make poetry great."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Jl 11 '25 150w

"A volume to be welcomed and cherished for its plenitude of nature imagery, human sympathies and earnest thought as well as for its true and sensitive diction and proficiency in the traditional forms of English verse." K. L. Bates

+ Lit R p6 Ap 25 '25 460w

"These poems are comradely and calm, a product of the hills. They are conventional, however, and one's interest in them is akin to that found in thumbing through an old scrap-book."

+ — N Y Tribune p3 Je 7 '25 150w

VENDRYES, JOSEPH. Language; a linguistic introduction to history; tr. by Paul Radin; with introd. by Henri Berr. (History of civilization) 378p $6 Knopf

409 Language and languages

25-5039

"This valuable study of language problems, originally issued from the French press in 1914, is now added in English translation to the series of volumes which have 'The History of Civilization' for their general theme. The book traces speech from its origin to their culmination in the developments which give it grammar, vocabulary and the more or less hard-and-fast forms that usage stereotypes and the dictionaries reproduce. One also learns from the exposition how the meanings of words come to be modified, how languages influence each other, and to what extent they mingle or even die out."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 14 '25 600w

Reviewed by Clement Wood

Lit R p4 My 29 '25 350w

"Wide, level-headed and erudite study."

+ Nation and Ath 36:724 F 21 '25 200w

Nature 116:38 Jl 11 '25 450w

"The whole of this book can well be recommended to the general reader who is however advised to avoid the formal phonetics of the first section until after he has read the rest." J: Langdon-Davies

New Repub 42:191 Ap 8 '25 1050w

New Statesman 25:18 Ap 18 '25 1300w

"It cannot but be recognized that he is far behind Jespersen (as who is not?) in the wealth and interest of illustration, and that he has none of the originality of Sapir. The merit of the book is that it provides a well informed, methodical and cautious synthesis of the available knowledge and speculation on the main problems of linguistic science." Jacob Zeitlin

— + N Y Tribune p12 Mr 15 '25 900w

Reviewed by G. P. Krapp

Sat R of Lit 2:118 S 12 '25 680w

VENNER, NORMAN. Imperfect impostor. 305p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Heinemann]

Having nothing better to do, Jeremy went to the races. He could not afford to bet, but he did, and the bookmaker, mistaking him for another man, placed his bet in the other man's name. Jeremy won £3,000. It wasn't his, he figured, it belonged to this Arthurton chap, so consulting the directory for the address, he went to give up his gains. Arthurton was highly pleased to meet a double at just that moment. He made an astounding proposal, and Jeremy, once more having nothing better to do, accepted. With vigor and aplomb he carried the imperfect imposture thru a series of trying situations until love added zest to the adventure and became its reward.

Booklist 22:165 Ja '26

"This book is sufficiently entertaining for any holiday afternoon; and Mr. Venner has plenty of talent for writing mystery stories. Later books from his pen will be even better ones."

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 18 '25 300w

Lit R p12 O 31 '25 200w

"In spite of the heavy and mechanical obligations laid upon a hero of comedy, Jeremy remains wonderfully human and amiable, and his engagement and sudden good fortune provide the almost pathetic sentimentality demanded by his rumped wistfulness. Mr. Venner's first novel is an extremely skilful piece of humorous invention."

+ Nation and Ath 38:124 O 17 '25 250w

"Mr. Venner makes certain people see through the disguise at once, and lets more and more see through it gradually, so that the interest is kept alive; and his sprightliness stops just on the right side of an intolerable facetiousness." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 26:146 N 14 '25 240w

"The Imperfect Impostor" [is] a gem in its kind. This novel belongs with the best in light fiction."

+ N Y Tribune p18 O 25 '25 160w

"The novel meets the standard expected by the readers of our popular periodicals. Its plot is intricate but smooth, artificial but engaging; and it is written with verve and in a racy slang. The opinion of 'the well-known critic' to the contrary, the story is an obvious tour de force and not 'as simply human as the intimate drama of each reader's own life.' Nevertheless it is written cleverly enough to retain the reader's interest to the end."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:223 O 17 '25 250w

"This book possesses that rare and delightful brand of futility which produces in the reader little involuntary giggles and spurts of laughter."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p640 O 1 '25 200w

VERGA, GIOVANNI. Little novels of Sicily; tr. by D. H. Lawrence. 226p $2 Seltzer [6s Blackwell]

25-6701

These short stories of Sicilian peasants belong to the period of Verga's youth. Most of the sketches are said to be drawn from actual life and from Verga's native village. Contents: Note on Giovanni Verga; His reverence; So much of the king; Don Licciu Papa; The mystery play; Malaria; The orphans; Property; Story of the Saint Joseph's ass; Black bread; The gentry; Liberty; Across the sea.

Booklist 22:36 O '25

Boston Transcript p5 My 29 '25 550w

Cleveland p82 Jl '25

"Individually, each tale has its own lights and shadows, but together they form a dun-coloured vista, like the vegetation along the dust-choked roads of southern Italy. Mr Lawrence's translation is good fortune for the reader no less than for the author."

— + Dial 79:76 J1 '25 120w

"Mr. Lawrence has done exceedingly well with the translation, exhibiting at all times his own technical skill." J: Ferris

+ Lit R p10 My 9 '25 380w

Nation 120:470 Ap 22 '25 80w

Reviewed by Edwin Muir

Nation and Ath 37:240 My 23 '25 80w

Reviewed by D. B. Woolsey

New Repub 42:349 My 20 '25 130w

Reviewed by P. C. Kennedy

New Statesman 52:286 Je 20 '25 200w

"The 'Little Novels of Sicily' have that sense of the wholeness of life, the spare exuberance, the endless inflections and overtones, and the magnificent and thrilling vitality of major literature."

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 29 '25 680w

"In their artistry these stories do not come up to the level of his novel. They are sketchy and without unity, and done in too self-conscious a manner. The characterization, especially in the first two, is shadowy." Eliseo Vivas

— N Y Tribune p15 Ap 19 '25 880w

"These are novels of incident rather than of plot; and they are literally novels of Sicily—to which land Sicilians are not very important. Verga is never so absorbed in a character that he will not leave his deathbed for a casual glance out of the window, where all of life is parading in many colors. This casualness is heightened by an informal, almost colloquial style, which does not change its cool monotone whether the incident be commonplace, sardonic, or sheerly savage."

Sat R of Lit 2:52 Ag 15 '25 260w

"In these stories the whole Sicily of the eighteen-sixties lives before us—poor gentry, priests, rich landowners, farmers, peasants, animals, seasons, and scenery; and whether his subject be the brutal bloodshed of an abortive revolution ('Liberty') or the simple human comedy that can attend even deep mourning ('Orphans') Verga never loses his complete artistic mastery of his material."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p507 J1 30 '25 1200w

VERONA, GUIDO DA. Life begins to-morrow: tr. from the Italian by Isabel Grazebrook. 442p $2 Dutton

25-16659

Impelled by his consuming love for Novella, the doctor is slowly poisoning his one time friend, her husband. The sick man sees with clear eyes that his beautiful wife is no longer his and with understanding and forgiveness for the guilty passion of the lovers, he begs from the doctor's hands the gift of death. From scenes of tensest tragedy to those of fierce exulting joy this powerful drama of passion and crime unfolds.

"Voluptuousness, vengeance, brutality, and some shocking medical details make this novel strong meat. But strength it has, and that is much." Will Cuppy

Bookm 62:214 O '25 120w

"After the restrained and almost bloodless representation of emotional scenes by our English-speaking authors, the full blown expression of the Latin strikes one forcibly. Yet the novel is an interesting one, and in places, especially those of tense emotion, is admirably told." E. B. S.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 4 '25 420w

"'Life Begins Tomorrow' has solid claims to greatness, if we measure it beside the enduring realistic masterpieces of the Continental moderns. Although the book is strong, red meat, for sheer power of imaginative prose, most admirably rendered from the original by Isabel Grazebrook, I have not read its equal in many a day." E. C. Beckwith

+ Lit R p2 Ag 15 '25 450w

Reviewed by Sylvia Lynd

Nation and Ath 34:838 Mr 15 '24 780w

"At last we feel that we understand Fascism a little better, for Life Begins Tomorrow has the kind of pop-eyed arrogance and sensational feverishness which we had thought was the sole property of Mussolini. The novel rushes on with the metallic fury of an express train. And there is not one single person in whom belief is even remotely possible. Unless the reader takes the precaution of putting on a black shirt."

— New Repub 45:119 D 16 '25 220w

"He has told his story in a manner always interesting and at times absorbing. That large public, however, that likes its fiction to be what it calls 'pleasant,' may be well advised to leave the pages of 'Life Begins Tomorrow' uncut and look around for something else."

+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 9 '25 680w

"If the book has moments of lyrical beauty it has also moments of absurdity. None of the characters are real; they walk and speak in beautiful rhetoric, like so many shadows on a painted stage." Marya Zaturenska

— + N Y Tribune p8 O 18 '25 580w

"There is undeniable magic in his atmosphere, which gives not only the physical aspect of the scenes, but their smouldering and foreboding moods. But the human figures which inhabit them are as grotesquely caricatured as the convulsive figures which swarm over the billboards in front of the cheap Neapolitan theaters—the pop-eyed villain, the swooning heroine, the bombs and stilettoes and gibbets which make up this lurid riot of love and gore." Alison Smith

+ — N Y World p3m Ag 16 '25 350w

"This is a sultry romance by a popular Italian novelist which can hardly appeal to American readers of work of its kind and quality by American writers. Unsophisticated and uncritical as these devotees of second and third-rate romance are supposed to be, they would find the agony piled too high long before the author comes to his first climax with a cold-blooded murder."

— Sat R of Lit 2:163 S 26 '25 150w

"All the characters are drawn with skill and insight, and the life of the household is evoked without the use of a great deal of detail but with full vivaciousness. Thanks to the realism of the secondary characters, we have the sensation of assisting at an actual drama."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p126 F 28 '24 400w

VETERANS all. 200p $2 Am. library service

25-9340

This is a story of love in the South when the last echoes of bitterness from the Civil war are wiped out in the common cause of 1914. The story centers about a typical southern family, Dr Macajah Moon, his patrician wife, their loved and wayward son Jefferson, and their daughter Virginia. To Grant, Virginia's northern suitor and Jeff's good friend in trouble, even the reluctant father at last capitulates.

"Everything is there that ought to be there, all the familiar ingredients swimming about in a fine, ripe, sentimental sauce. This book would Americanize a hundred Mr. Bok's, even if each one had two or three personalities like Edward. Aside from its moral value, it is terrible."

— Ind 114:274 Mr 7 '25 100w

"The book is a curious medley of disjointed parts, manifestly the work of some one who decided, after reading many novels, that it oughtn't to be difficult to write at least one. It is not only anonymous: it is nondescript."

— N Y Tribune p9 Mr 15 '25 100w

N Y World p7m Ap 15 '25 160w

VILLIERS, ALAN J. Whaling in the frozen South; being the story of the 1923-24 Norwegian whaling expedition to the Antarctic. 292p il $4 Bobbs

639.2 Whaling. Antarctic regions 25-23894

With a little fleet of six ships Captain Carl Larsen, the Norwegian commander of the Sir James Clark Ross, set out from Tasmania on a whaling expedition to the Antarctic. Word had been brought by explorers that whales were to be found in abundance in the Bay of Whales. With little definite information to go by, but with sturdy hopes for a large cargo of whale oil, the hardy adventurers set out. The story of the perils of the expedition and the discoveries they made is told by a young Australian member of the party who sent his first accounts of the trip to newspapers in Australia. The photographs which illustrate the book show the whalers at work.

"This volume is one that will appeal to all lovers of the dangerous and unusual in human adventure."

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 19 '25 280w

"It is an excellent description of processes that never fail to thrill the landlubber, and of lands and seas little known. Young Mr. Villiers has made a good start. Few writers of his age have placed at their disposal an equal store of material to draw upon for future fiction."

+ Ind 115:655 D 5 '25 70w

"A wonderful story."

+ R of Rs 72:666 D '25 130w

VINAL, HAROLD. Nor youth nor age. 48p $1.50 Harold Vinal

811

25-11264

"In 'Nor Youth Nor Age' Mr. Vinal has gathered his third budget of verses in the most attractive form. In 1922 the Yale University Press published his first 'White April,' in the Yale Series of Younger Poets. Since then Mr. Vinal has grown in poetic stature, learned many things not to do, and steadily advanced in craftsmanship."—Boston Transcript

"There is skilful portraiture in some of Mr. Vinal's poems, there is occasional cleverness and more than one deft trick of technique; but there is little inspiration, little spontaneity, little originality, little passion, and little music."

— + Bookm 62:94 S '25 150w

"Presents a more judicious selection of polished poems than either of its predecessors. Mr. Vinal is reaching, but he is closer to what he is after." D. McC.

Boston Transcript p5 Jl 11 '25 500w

"A collection of distinctly minor poems by a minor poet. Mr Vinal is stranger to the poetic imagination; he never rises above fancy."

— Dial 79:174 Ag '25 80w

"There are lines in the shapely 'Doomsday' which are magnificent. It is a pity that there are the occasional sag and the frequent perverse obscurity. Poems like 'Abandoned Acres,' 'Time Mends,' and some others, are wholly satisfying. 'Venture in Anthropology' mounts through cryptic logomachy to a splendid finish." Clement Wood

+ Lit R p4 Je 13 '25 350w

"Blessed with a certain lyrical sweetness, intelligently conceived and displaying now and then a neat irony, it is pleasing to read, but as light as thistledown." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p14 Je 28 '25 150w

"Harold Vinal ranks well forward in the middle group of poets who write correctly, who write pleasantly, who usually capture a mood, who often etch a rare picture, who diffuse the spirit of simplicity, of restraint, of deft craftsmanship—but do not leap the little ditch which separates them from greatness. He has a real gift for words, yet seldom uses a compelling rhythm. His material, mostly rural, has but slight substance, although it does not give the impression of being flimsy." L. G. Marshall

N Y Tribune p12 Je 21 '25 220w

"An improvement upon his former poetry. There is more originality in his work, though some of his poems miss making their point." W. R. Benét

+ Outlook 140:405 Jl 15 '25 50w

Sat R of Lit 2:52 Ag 15 '25 100w

VIRKUS, FREDERICK A., ed. Abridged compendium of American genealogy; first families of America; a genealogical encyclopedia of the United States. 1148p $17.50 Marquis

929.2 Genealogy. United States—Genealogy 25-1777

"This large and imposing volume contains some seven thousand lineages, conveniently arranged. It is well indexed, and the amount of biographical information given about each of the thousands of persons included is remarkably comprehensive. According to its preface it may well serve as the beginning for a really thorough treatment of the subject of 'First Families in America.' The book is strongly bound and printed on a good quality of paper."—Lit R

"This reviewer sees little to criticize in the arrangement or presentation of the records. The copy and proof reading seem to have been faithfully and accurately performed."

+ Ind 114:421 Ap 11 '25 130w

"It should prove useful as a library volume, and will interest many individuals who suspect that their ancestors came over in the Mayflower or did something else equally distinguished."

Lit R p11 F 28 '25 100w

N Y Times p20 F 15 '25 320w

Outlook 140:32 My 6 '25 380w

VOGAU, BORIS ANDREEVICH. See Pilniak, B., pseud.

VON ZIEKURSCH, THEODORE. White trail's end. 285p $2 Macrae-Smith co. [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

25-9492

"The story of a man and woman working at cross purposes among the Indians and half breeds of the north. John Stewart and Edith Mason are equally sincere in their efforts, but each has been led to suspect the motive of the other. Rodgers, superintendent of the lumber company, pretends sympathy for Edith's work while for his own purposes he fosters the suspicion against Stewart which develops into bitter enmity. The feeling is at its height when Stewart saves Edith's life and is in turn saved by his dog. The sharp crisis clears the situation and reveals them to each other."

"There is an exuberant vitality about this story of the north woods that carries the interest in crescendo to the end. Action and description are blended with such skill that even the reader accustomed to more conventional and sophisticated settings will enjoy its brisk unfolding." J: J. McLaughlin

+ Lit R p14 Ap 18 '25 200w

"Except for overdoses of mental questionnaires and inventories held in the first person by Edith, an occasional clumsy sentence and five weary pages describing a hand-to-hand combat between two men the story is smoothly and neatly related. The descriptions of nature tend to raise the book above the ordinary."

+ N Y Times p22 My 24 '25 320w

"The descriptions of scenery and wild life are capably written."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p417 Je 13 '25 160w

VULLIAMY, COLWYN EDWARD. Our prehistoric forerunners. 214p il $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Lane]

571 Man, Prehistoric [25-10444]

A popular account of prehistoric man which summarizes the more recent discoveries among his remains. The author builds up the framework on which the facts of prehistory have been pieced together, outlines a general chronology and classification and describes the typical man, implements, art and industries of each successive period. Chapters on primitive psychology and society emphasize the human interest of prehistory and some suggestions for field work in archeological research are given.

"This work presents as complete an account of Prehistoric Man as can be assimilated by the general reader or packed into the limits of some two hundred pages of readable type. There is good store of illustrations, many of them original, and the book has evidently been written for the uninformed reader."

+ Sat R 139:109 Ja 31 '25 100w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p139 F 26 '25 80w

W

WADSLEY, OLIVE. You and I. 287p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Cassell]

25-7833

There never was a girl so loved, so cared for as Toto, watched over by her adored and adoring father and waited on by the German governess, her dear funny old Squeak. They were all her world and she wanted nothing more. Then suddenly Toto's father remarried her mother, who had divorced him and whom he had never left off loving. Verona, lovely, imperious, wholly self centered, found this too charming daughter in the way, and packed her off to school in France. School speedily became intolerable after the freedom of her life with her father, and Toto ran off to Squeak in Vienna. She found her loyal old governess there, broken and needing her. Quite unexpectedly, she found love there too. Being the daughter of her father, she could but give her heart completely, gallantly braving the storm love brought, and unhesitatingly bearing its consequences.

"There is a vast amount of dashing action, and some charming character work. It is entirely readable, too much so, for you waste your time on people who do not know right from wrong and are perfectly delightful."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 13 '25 330w

"The style of the book is good, its characters well drawn, but it remains a depressing business, ending in disaster." H. L. Pangborn

— + Lit R p12 My 9 '25 130w

"Everything that happens appears logical; and when, in the end, the story is done, the reader feels, though it was light reading on the surface, that back in the mind of the author there exists a talent for a greater story."

+ — N Y Times p9 My 24 '25 600w

"A pathetic little story."

N Y World p6m Ap 12 '25 80w

"Though ridiculous in the mass, the story is told in so lively a fashion that it is quite pleasant to read."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p852 D 11 '24 120w

WAGNALLS, MABEL (MRS RICHARD J. JONES). Opera and its stars; a description of the music and stories of the enduring operas, and a series of interviews with the world's famous sopranos. 410p il $3 (8s 6d) Funk

782 Opera. Singers 25-3003

The author's plan is to give first an easy, informal, biographical sketch of the star, and in the following chapters, the story with a musical interpretation, of one of the operas in which she appeared. The interpretation is not technical, but such as the layman as well as the musician, will readily understand and enjoy. Contents: Galli-Curci; "Rigoletto"; Jeritza; "La Tosca"; Mary Garden as I found her; "Pelléas and Melisande"; A morning call on Frieda Hempel; "The magic flute"; The genius of Geraldine Farrar; "Madame Butterfly"; Melba; "Lakmé"; "I Pagliacci"; "Orpheus and Eurydice"; Emma Eames; "Faust"; "Werther"; Calvé and "Carmen"; "Carmen"; "Hamlet"; Lillian Nordica; "Lohengrin"; "Aida"; "The Huguenots"; An hour with Lilli Lehmann; "The flying Dutchmen"; Marcella Sembrich; "Semiramide."

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 21 '25 400w

"I do not know whether or not Miss Wagnalls is a portrait-painter; but she would be a peerless wielder of the brush if she could wield it as she wields the pen; for truly she has a power of introducing us in an intimate close-up with the great artists of the opera, and we forget for the nonce that we are merely reading about them, and they are not actually under the eye and within hand-touch." Hudson Maxim

+ Int Bk R p342 Ap '25 1600w

"In this copious volume anything so pedestrian as a fact is always brushed aside at the slightest beck or nod of fancy." Pitts Sanborn

— N Y Tribune p10 Mr 15 '25 580w

"None of the quoted ladies has anything particularly striking or interesting to say about music. These chapters thankfully, are brief, and we pass gladly to those of broader content and dimensions which have to do with the operas themselves and their composers. Here the worthy object has been intelligently followed of outlining themes of standard works with suggestive, illuminating comment and elementary criticism of a helpful sort for the student or amateur lover of operatic masterpieces."

+ — N Y World p9e D 14 '24 180w

"The interviews with great sopranos off stage are sparkling. Add to this the interpretation of the plays, with a running fire of editorial note and comment, and the mixture is edifying for those who need it."

+ Springfield Republican p7a J1 19 '25 220w

Wis Lib Bul 21:87 Mr '25

WAGNER, LEOPOLD. London inns and taverns. 252p $3 Stokes [7s 6d Allen & U.]

914.21 London—Hotels, taverns, etc. London —Social life and customs [25-728]

"Mr. Wagner has been exploring London minutely and devotedly for forty-five years, and he must have filled mountains of notebooks. He traces the convivial places of London from the guesthouses at monasteries right through to the cinema tea-lounges and theatre bars, and, of course, gives most space to the inns and taverns which have a tradition of great literary frequenters. There is an inexhaustible treasury of odd pieces of knowledge in the book—the derivation of the inn-sign, 'The Bag o' Nails' from—what would you guess?—The Bachchanals. There is a good index, and almost all the inns and public-houses of London which are not mere mushrooms will be found in it."—Spec

"Representing extensive research and written in an entertaining and discursive style it will interest both the student of social history and the leisurely reader. Large libraries."

+ Booklist 21:336 Je '25

Living Age 324:130 Ja 10 '25 200w

New Statesman 24:428 Ja 17 '25 330w

"Both scholarly and readable."

+ N Y Times p21 Mr 22 '25 400w

"The book is bursting with interesting information, which is, however, a little difficult to come at because of the awkward and bewildering ing diction in which much of it is expressed. Nevertheless, if you are going to London, it is worth while making the attempt."

WAGNER, LEOPOLD—Continued

+ — N Y Tribune p12 Ap 19 '25 180w

"The inns of London have often been explored by the antiquary, but Mr. Wagner is fairly entitled to have his say. He has gone deeper than most of them into well-concealed nooks, and is able to recreate the past with those touches of detail that make it lifelike."

+ Sat R 133:425 O 25 '24 450w

Spec 133:516 O 11 '24 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p627 O 9 '24 680w

WALDMAN, MILTON. Americana; the literature of American history. 271p $5 Holt

016.973 America—Bibliography. United States—History—Bibliography 25-20534

In a readable book and one not over-long Mr Waldman chronicles the early printed sources of American history—the narratives of the explorers, the early historians of America and the colonies, and the first books printed in the New World. The illustrations consist of early maps and engravings and fac-simile pages from old books.

"A well-written, well-illustrated book."

+ Ind 116:23 Ja 2 '26 120w

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice

N Y Times p20 D 27 '25 1450w

"Mr. Waldman's publishers suggest that his book is a catalog of the literature of American history. It is a true characterization, if an unfairly forbidding one. For one may pick up this 'catalog' and lay it down as reluctantly as any of the entrancing tales with which it deals. It is, indeed, a craftsmanly and winning bit of work." W. P. Beazell

+ N Y World p6m N 22 '25 850w

Outlook 142:78 Ja 13 '26 360w

"Bibliography is not ordinarily regarded as a peculiarly thrilling study. Yet Mr. Waldman succeeds in making it so in his volume. . . . The supreme value of Mr. Waldman's book, however, lies in the fact that it affords the first careful and adequate treatment of the materials of our history. It is amazingly complete, bringing together and weighing the pertinent data on nearly all the important records in the period of which it treats." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 2:408 D 12 '25 750w

WALDRON, WEBB. Shanklin. 334p $2 Bobbs 25-20410

After Anders left, Mark heard from his friend a few times. Then silence. An inner compulsion drives Mark from the West to New York to find him. His search is sidetracked while he pursues and marries Ida. A year later, in the last month of the war, he crosses to France, confident that Anders has called him. There he meets Judith and love, real love. In finding her, he feels that he has found his friend. They return to New York after the armistice. When, unexpectedly Anders and Judith are brought face to face before Mark, he sees them as one, belonging each to the other. He turns back to Ida and finds in making her happy, the meaning and the end of his quest.

"This semi-Main-Street theme has used up a great quantity of paper and a jaded public rebels at it. Mark's dabbling in Communism may appeal to some, and his playing with sex to others, but beyond this we cannot see where the amusement lies."

— Boston Transcript p3 O 10 '25 250w

"Mr. Waldron has written a stark book, though of romantic concept. His scenes of Paris, before and during the armistice, and post-war Germany just after the armistice, add nothing to the accounts we already have. But the novel has an unusual eery force in its perception of the individuality of Mark."

+ — N Y Times p8 O 18 '25 750w

"'Shanklin' is an autobiography in the smallest sense of the word. It simply recounts the dullish adventures of a perfectly ordinary young man. The author is ostensibly anxious to be unburdened of his numerous memories, and though he has not produced a worth while book he has at least achieved an amply factual reminiscence."

+ — N Y World p7m N 8 '25 220w

"'Shanklin' stands midway between the ephemeral fiction which at best can simply be interesting, and artistic work produced through contemplation of the values of life. Its merit, rather oddly, springs from the lower and not the higher plane of writing. For as romantic melodrama, pervaded by an excitement which carries you steadily on, the book is of compelling interest. But as serious creative work, representing a search of the spirit and a man's experience and adjustments and revolts as he goes through life, it is an incoherent and inconclusive novel."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:300 N 14 '25 280w

WALKLEY, ARTHUR BINGHAM. Still more prejudice. 243p $2.75 Knopf [7s 6d Heinemann]

824

[25-19458]

"These characteristic papers deal with Duse, with Sarah, with Congreve, with Compulsory Ignorance, and with almost every other kind of subject that can allure their author's somewhat deliberately butterfly intelligence."—Sat R

"'Still More Prejudice' falls with a whimsical, a mellowed irony from one of the most richly distinguished critical pens in England."

+ Bookm 62:218 O '25 200w

"Mr. Walkley is never tiring, never flippant, always sane and steady as a good Britisher should be. In fact he is very British, very conservative, and on occasions he can be gentlemanly snobbish. But, on the whole, if you are interested in essays that are generally marked by their culture you will enjoy 'Still More Prejudice.'"

+ — Boston Transcript p6 O 17 '25 250w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Ind 115:477 O 24 '25 500w

"Amid the too great sophistication of our age, strikes a welcome note of restfulness and refreshment."

+ Nation and Ath 37:492 J1 18 '25 650w

"Each essay is readable, each is brief, each bears at least one jewel in a setting of excellent workmanship. For Mr. Walkley is a stylist, and, like every true stylist, he follows a great tradition."

+ New Statesman 25:482 Ag 8 '25 1150w

"The quietly quizzical and urbane sophistication of Mr. Walkley, his fondness for literary allusion, the decent reticence of his humor, the meandering ease of his style and the bits of shrewd, even grave, criticism that are dropped in with the casualness of talk, all mark his work, no doubt, as a trifle old-fashioned. It is to be feared that his causeries would hardly do in an American dramatic column to-day. But they are delightful reading in the quiet of one's library and seem to sink more fittingly into the shelves beside, let us say, Saint-Beuve, than some other recent volumes we might mention." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Tribune p12 S 13 '25 560w

Sat R 139:589 My 30 '25 80w

"One begins inevitably by finding Mr. Walkley hugely pleasurable, becomes a trifle disconcerted to find him dealing with Duse and 'simple French cooking' in the same rhythm and evidently with the same relish, and ends by feeling just a bit irritated by his insistent and undifferentiated urbanity." Edwin Seaver

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:102 S 5 '25 650w

"No one could ever be offended or irritated by him, he has such perfect manners. At the same time he is careful never to insult our intelligence—he is always sufficiently stimulating to keep the reader feeling that he, too, is a person of culture and liveliness. One of the best chapters is a moving and dignified tribute to Duse."

+ Spec 134:934 Je 6 '25 240w

"The best of Mr Walkley is scarcely distilled in 'Still More Prejudice.' But the mood and the method are unchanged, and both communicate their old delight."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Ag 7 '25 950w

Springf'd Republican p6 O 3 '25 1100w

"Mr. Walkley's prejudices are sufficiently diverting to guarantee a warm reception for this new collection. He has the gift of suave, cultivated chaff. To read these pages is as refreshing as a good talk over coffee and cigarettes."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 10:69 Ja '26 100w

WALLACE, EDGAR. Hairy arm. 335p $2 Small

25-15849

"The characters, with two exceptions, are everyday people, who do everyday things. One is an educated ape, which understands everything told him and can do anything but talk and turn a doorknob; the other is a wholesale murderer, who decapitates his victims and ships the heads to friends. Of course, there is the super-detective, who helps Scotland Yard in ferreting out the criminal; this time he is a member of the Government Secret Service. The scene is laid in a motion picture 'lot' and 'on location' and the motion picture star and the ape are important figures in the plot."—Lit R

"It is literally 'a whale of a detective story' and the ending is a genuine surprise."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 18 '25 220w

"When the writer of a mystery tale plays the game of 'follow the leader' with his readers and takes them willingly along trail after trail on false scents, keeping their interest keen and their enthusiastic search alive until he finally shows them the culprit, whom they had never once suspected, he has told a successful story. Such is this latest book of this writer of tales that mystify." C: P. Sawyer

+ Lit R p4 Jl 25 '25 260w

"Ingenious, plausible, satisfying and has the desired bit of novelty." J: J. McLaughlin

+ Lit R p6 S 26 '25 350w

"The Hairy Arm," because of its author's virile, vigorous style makes most entertaining reading. It goes along at a smart pace from the first page; but the last quarter of the book carries the reader along at terrific speed until he comes upon the unexpected and unique climax."

+ N Y Times p13 Jl 19 '25 750w

"Mr. Wallace's solution is totally unexpected, and the whole may be regarded as a successful shocker of the less retiring sort."

+ N Y Tribune p7 S 6 '25 160w

WALLACE, EUGENIA. Filing methods. (Rono-graph ser.) 107p $1.25 Ronald

651.5 Files and filing (documents) 24-17234

"This is a 'book of rules' on the accepted modern methods of office filing. It does not, of course, cover the field of such books as Hudders' 'Indexing and Filing,' which is a complete treatise, or Schofield's 'Filing Department Operation and Control,' which is written from the point of view of the executive who has to determine plans and methods, and control their operation through an organization.' (Preface)" —Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"To those concerns who are unsatisfied with the results obtained from their present filing system, and to those who may be satisfied but are still seeking improvement, this book will be a source of valuable suggestions."

+ Management and Adm 8:321 S '24 120w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:301 My '25

WALLACE, FREDERICK WILLIAM. Captain Salvation. 397p $2 Minton, Balch & co.

25-17060

"Anson Campbell is a ruthlessly egoistic sea captain, imbued with Nietzschean ideals of personal omnipotence, enslaved by savage sensuality, the love of women and drink, which in the end claims its inevitable toll before he awakens to the need of regeneration. The dozen years of his Odyssey cover his rise from an able seaman of twenty to his attainment of a merchant master's command and the ownership of his sailing vessel, innumerable adventures in amorous dissipations, shipwreck, mutiny, gory combat, till finally comes his submission to simple, purifying peace."—Sat R of Lit

"Mr. Wallace's treatment of the sea is his own and owes nothing to any one. It is in bold line, with strong color, virile. One cherishes no illusions after reading 'Captain Salvation.'" Austin Bothwell

+ Int Bk R p824 N '25 480w

"The actors sustain their parts with spirit, there are tales of wrecks, of mutinies, of whippings; of New York thirty years ago; there are love passages to tickle sharply the palates; there are plotting vagabonds; there are harrowing pages of suffering in an open boat on the Patagonian shores. In short 'entertaining' is the epithet to apply to the story." C: J. Finger

+ N Y Tribune p18 N 1 '25 550w

"The undeniable dramatic power to which Mr. Wallace's sea romance rises when at its best is all but lost amid the alien mass of exaggerated, wildly unrestrained ravings incessantly uttered by the hero while defying the Will of God. There was distinct promise in the earlier stages of the book that Anson might develop into a convincing human likeness, but as the tale progresses he is gradually distorted into a bestial caricature, repellent and grotesque beyond reason."

— + Sat R of Lit 2:164 S 26 '25 200w

WALLACE, HENRY CANTWELL. Our debt and duty to the farmer. 232p $1.75 Century

338.1 Agriculture—United States. Agriculture—Economic aspects

25-6716

Henry C. Wallace was Secretary of agriculture in the cabinet of President Harding during a time of severe agricultural depression. He explains the nature and causes of this depression and shows the necessity of developing a well-balanced agriculture which will give farmers a fair share in the national income.

Booklist 21:367 Jl '25

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 29 '25 160w

"Mr. Wallace's discussion, the best published defense of the McNary-Haugen bill, is unconvincing to me. No reader, however, can fail to value the late Secretary's estimate of the social and economic function of the farmer, or can finish the book without a keener appreciation of the essential services rendered by agriculture." N. A. Crawford

+ Int Bk R p26 D '25 150w

Nation 121:493 O 28 '25 120w

N Y Times p12 Ap 5 '25 1900w

"In the late Secretary Wallace the American farmer had an able and devoted advocate. In this posthumous book Mr. Wallace gives a clear picture of the post-war agricultural depression and urges remedies for agricultural sickness." H: R. Mussey

+ N Y Tribune p1 Ap 12 '25 800w

"The volume is readable as well as useful, and it will stand as a permanent contribution to the literature of its subject." A. S.

+ R of Rs 71:555 My '25 250w

St Louis p344 S '25

Sat R of Lit 1:716 Ap 25 '25 180w

"While the reviewer does not accept fully the somber and in places even lurid picture of American farming depression drawn by the late

WALLACE, HENRY C.—Continued

secretary, yet he does believe emphatically that the thesis laid down by Mr. Wallace is one calling for the best thought of the country." E. G. Nourse

+ — Survey 55:259 N 15 '25 280w

WALLACE, SCHUYLER C. Our governmental machine. 223p $2 Knopf

353 United States—Politics and government
24-28690

Mr Wallace's book, which is intended for the beginner in the study of politics, is a departure from the formal civics textbook. It is lively in treatment, even humorous at times, and along with the necessary facts is readable comment and illustration. Book one is given to popular control—practical politics and an analysis of public opinion; book two, to the legal form of government; book three, to law-making; book four, to the executive and the administration.

"Though Mr. Wallace's book is particularly intended for beginners in the study of politics the reviewer agrees with Dr. Charles A. Beard's statement in the introduction 'that even the most seasoned veterans in book reading and political caucusing will find something to their advantage in these pages.'"

+ Am Pol Sci R 19:650 Ag '25 150w

"Has easy readability too often lacking where books on Government are concerned."

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 20 '24 100w

"Those who desire to understand the actual workings of our government and who are not satisfied with the formal descriptions of the usual civics book, will profit from reading Our Governmental Machine."

+ Hist Outlook 16:235 My '25 100w

"Rarely does there come from the press so readable an introduction to the problem of the organization of government, or one so compact of information and sound discussion."

+ Nation 121:240 Ag 26 '25 70w

WALLIN, JOHN EDWARD WALLACE. Education of handicapped children. (Riverside textbooks in education) 394p $2.25 Houghton

136.76 Children, Backward. Children, Defective
24-30322

Written from long experience in the clinical study of thousands of handicapped children, as found in various public school systems and child-welfare clinics, this volume is suitable for use in schools of education studying the problem or as a guide for social workers dealing with the care or training of handicapped children. The book gives a history of the education of this class of children and the development of a psychological theory of feeble-mindedness and discusses the public school questions relating to their education and the menace of their presence in the community.

"The book shows throughout the result of careful study, observation and a wide acquaintance with literature. It leaves one with a firm conviction of the necessity of taking care of these unfortunates, and of their menace to the future stability of our country." M. P. Ravenel, M.D.

+ Am J Pub Health 15:350 Ap '25 400w

Booklist 21:261 Ap '25

School Life 10:100 Ja '25 130w

"The book is one of the best contributions which has appeared in this field of education. Particularly good are the criticisms, interpretations, and evaluations of the various problems discussed. It is at these points that the value of Professor Wallin's mature experience becomes particularly evident. The treatment is careful and scientific throughout, and where the interpretations are abbreviated, the reader is referred to source material for further discussions. The book is well organized for use as a text with mature students." G. T. Buswell

+ School R 33:227 Mr '25 420w

WALLIS, CLAIRE, and GATES, NELLIE RYDER. Parties for occasions. 249p il $1.75 Century

790 Parties

25-5753

Parties appropriate to every month in the year, and several for each, are here described, with suggestions for invitations, decorations, refreshments, etc.

Booklist 21:370 Jl '25

"A fertile book for girls who want to give parties and for those who have to suggest and help in their entertaining is offered by these two authors. . . The book provides such good, wholesome fun to keep young minds and hands busy and interested that it ought to have a warm and wide welcome among parents and teachers."

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 19 '25 260w

Outlook 140:305 Je 24 '25 10w

Wis Lib Bul 21:196 Jl '25

WALPOLE, HUGH. Portrait of a man with red hair; a romantic macabre. 323p $2 Doran

[7s 6d Macmillan]

25-21068

Charles Percy Harkness was a cultivated American whose high expectations of life were always doomed to disappointment. Wandering about England in an aimless way with seven of his best loved etchings as his only companions he fell in one day at a London club with Sir James Maradick, an older man by fifteen years or more than "Maradick at forty." Their conversation turned to places. Maradick advised Harkness, if he wanted a holiday, to go to Trelliss in North Cornwall. Harkness went and encountered there in full measure, in one eventful night, the romance and adventure which had heretofore been so singularly lacking in his life. Tho the adventure into which he was so strangely injected was one of terror it was to Harkness like the opening of a magic door. Life could never be the same again.

"A melodramatic and thrilling novel written with the sure and delicate grace that characterized The old ladies but containing vastly more movement and vitality than that 'still life.'"

+ Booklist 22:120 D '25

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence

Boston Transcript p5 O 31 '25 1550w

"Mr. Walpole has written a story of good and evil and the dark battles of the human soul in the form of a thrilling melodrama. Just as Mr. Masfield infused the incredible adventures of Sard Harker with a spiritual element beyond their sheer dramatic values, so Mr. Walpole with the actors in this story. Incidentally, one notes Mr. Walpole's persistent interest in courage." D. R.

+ Ind 115:533 N 7 '25 580w

"The novel is far too rich not to permit of more than one possible interpretation, tho on the surface it is simply a romantic thriller." L. Moore

+ Int Bk R p98 Ja '26 600w

"The pattern of the book is perfect. Every brush stroke is clean and clear. There is no moral in the book, no 'lesson' to be learned and no sermon preached. It is like the etchings of the man with red hair and of young Harkness, a thing of beauty, sufficient unto itself." C. M. Morrison

+ Lit R p4 N 14 '25 360w

"A thrilling mystery-story."

+ Living Age 327:339 N 7 '25 120w

"Unless he is as good as Algernon Blackwood there is not much use in any other writer trying to make an Algernon Blackwood story. It isn't a question of Mr. Walpole's good intentions or the niceness of his characters. It is simply that he has no story to tell and any amount of lectures to deliver." Donald Douglas

— Nation 121:671 D 9 '25 1050w

"Mr. Walpole's 'Portrait of a Man with Red Hair' is disappointing. There are thrills, of course, in the black magic scenes, but was there any reason why there should be so many sentimentalities as well? Without the latter the book would be an excellent shocker. But the Cornish folk-dances, the unexpectedly luscious descriptions of scenery, the ceremoniousness of the style, impede our approach to the horrors, and the shudder comes too late." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 35:262 N 14 '25 80w

"Mr. Walpole is certainly exciting; his dexterity and his experience enable him to prolong and aggravate the agony; but I don't think it is a legitimate agony, and the glimpses he gives us into the philosophy and psychology of torture are not sufficient to redeem the plot and bring it on to a higher plane than that of the 'thriller.' Yet, for a mere thriller, the plot is too ugly. It is one of the books which I should not read for pleasure." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 26:114 N 7 '25 220w

"Although the reader is ever conscious of the story's urbane author, of his felicity in description, his cameo clarity of characterization, the actual narrative moves with surprising velocity."

+ N Y Times p9 O 25 '25 720w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

N Y Tribune p3 D 6 '25 440w

"The only literary stunt in the entire book, albeit that is a magnificent one, lies in the description of Crispin himself. It is a notable tour de force, for never once does the figure seem incongruous or the story descend to bathos. Here is indeed a book for a winter evening. Would there were more of its caliber!"

+ Outlook 142:30 Ja 6 '26 320w

"The red-headed man is as gruesome a creation as we have lately encountered in fiction, and when his sadist frenzy is allowed scope we experience a genuine shudder. Only, if Mr. Walpole must take this kind of holiday from his customary country of the mind, he should leave all scruples behind him, and plunge forward boldly, without preface and without any pretence that if sheer horror is not to the reader's taste there is compensation in the form of psychology."

Sat R 140:484 O 24 '25 130w

"The 'Portrait of a Man with Red Hair' is a rapidly moving mystery story, more than touched with horror, and, as the author admits, open to allegorical interpretation. There is no doubt that it is to the highest degree readable."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:499 Ja 16 '26 250w

"There is an almost unscrupulous cleverness in Mr. Walpole's way of flinging in a delightful picture of a fishing village on public holiday as a background to Crispin's enormities, and the whole story moves with an easy gait. Putting the book down, one hastens to reassure oneself that it was foolish to be so extremely anxious to turn over each next page, and that it was all very well for Mr. Walpole to remind us now and then of the almost submerged but existent 'better part' of the red-haired Crispin."

+ Spec 135:723 O 24 '25 550w

"A compound Poe-Hawthorne vein, wherein the mysterious central character approximates an impersonation of conscious and malevolent evil. The adventure is narrated with skill and the horror and indignation which its episodes excite are assimilated to the supposedly gentle mind of the reader."

Springf'd Republican p7a N 1 '25 220w

"Mr. Walpole has done his monster very well. He makes him convincingly horrific yet credible, and works us into a fine excitement over the reserve of Hesther, in which Harkness is involved."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p672 O 15 '25 500w

WALSH, JAMES JOSEPH. Eating and health. 223p $1.50 Stratford

613.2 Diet 25-16757

The author exposes some old time superstitions concerning foods and their effects, and makes suggestions about what to eat, when and how to eat it and what not to eat. The last chapter contains a group of suggestive menus for the stout and another for the thin.

"There are but few who cannot read this book without profit, as Dr. Walsh discusses every phase of food and its effect on the system. Menus at the end of the book are helpful for those who are either under weight or over weight."

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 17 '25 220w

"For the most part, sound and sensible as well as well informed with up-to-date knowledge. But physicians and other scientists of the human body have their fads as well as ordinary people, and they do not all accept and counsel the same regimen in all its particulars. There are some quite as modern and well informed as he who would reject as mistaken and injurious, at least for some people, some of the features and combinations of food that he recommends."

+ N Y Times p16 S 27 '25 400w

WALSH, JAMES JOSEPH, and FOOTE, JOHN AMBROSE. Safeguarding children's nerves; a handbook of mental hygiene; with a foreword by Herbert Hoover. 272p il $2 (9s) Lip-pincott

649.1 Mental hygiene. Children—Diseases. Nervous system—Diseases 24-31493

"We have attempted here to summarize what we believe should and should not be done as a means to upbui'd or restore the mental and nervous health of the infant and the child, and we have endeavored to make the summary as brief in scope and as practical in application as is possible within our limitations." (Preface) A part of the contents of the volume has appeared in the form of articles in the Ladies' Home Journal.

"The avoidance of all technical language and the treatment as a distinct topic of each of the numerous problems which the nervous child presents recommend this to the average parent. On the whole, sound, but necessarily superficial."

+ Booklist 21:367 Jl '25

"This book is one that may be read and re-read with both profit and pleasure by all who have the care and the love of children at heart." P. J. F.

+ Cath World 121:711 Ag '25 350w

"Many of the examples cited are valuable for the actual solution they may offer to an adult facing a similar problem. They will probably be of greater value, however, in arousing parents to a realization of the problems confronting them which they had not previously recognized or had not understood. The organizing of the subject matter into brief chapters which deal with specific problems makes it more valuable to readers somewhat acquainted with other books on child training than to those starting the search for the truth." C. R. Schmidt

+ J Home Econ 17:664 N '25 200w

N Y Tribune p9 O 11 '25 380w

Sat R of Lit 1:843 Je 20 '25 380w

WALTERS, RAYMOND. Educational jottings abroad. 85p 85c Science press, Lancaster, Pa. 370.4 Education—Europe 25-4869

The editor of School and Society contributed this correspondence concerning educational affairs from England, Scotland, Holland and France, during the summer of 1924.

"Walters's jottings are decidedly entertaining." W: McAndrew

+ Educ R 69:274 My '25 320w

"Brings together in readable form useful though by no means exhaustive information on educational institutions, tendencies, and opportunities for American summer visitors."

J Home Econ 17:354 Je '25 120w

WANDELL, SAMUEL HENRY, and MINNIGERODE, MEADE. Aaron Burr; with an introd. by Walter F. McCaleb. 2v il $10 Putnam B or 92 Burr, Aaron 25-21895

"A study of the character and career of Burr based on hitherto unpublished sources and profusely illustrated with portraits of his contemporaries."—Cleveland

"In 'Aaron Burr,' written in collaboration with Samuel H. Wandell, Meade Minnigerode again demonstrates his ability to present a period with decisive charm, and characters with color and conviction. It is a biography which is from first to last readable. The book will undoubtedly cause much discussion. The fact remains, however, that in this book an attempt is made to estimate Aaron Burr with neither passion nor partisanship. To one who knows little of history it seems a fascinating and a clear minded performance." J. F.

+ Bookm 62:499 D '25 450w

"A book written with cold clarity and a lack of partisanship would have been better for Burr. Now the reviewer is brought to scan every assertion and to make allowances and deductions. And yet when these allowances and deductions are made, Burr turns out to be a much greater and better man than he is usually conceived to be." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 31 '25 1850w

"Reveals research, but possibly struggles too hard to rehabilitate the reputation of a man whom the American people can never cease detesting." J. E. Chamberlin

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 25 '25 30w

"One of the most entertaining American historical biographies of recent years."

+ Cleveland p113 D '25

"In these two finely illustrated, and at times very well-written, volumes, the authors have handled a vast deal of material, much of it new, with great intelligence. The authors have presented their well-documented biography with a spontaneity and freshness which is engaging. At times their book is finely written, at times it is almost too youthful for so spacious and dignified a setting. Mr. Minnigerode, one suspects, has some of the qualities of the eternal sophomore."

+ Ind 115:685 D 12 '25 360w

Reviewed by W: C. McCloy

Lit R p6 D 12 '25 2150w

"Mr. Wandell's years of research have been supplemented by Mr. Minnigerode's literary ability. In many particulars the present writer is unable to agree with the conclusions drawn from the facts, particularly with the main conclusion that Burr was unfairly hounded from public life. That matters little. A composite picture of great depth is thrown upon the screen; all the established facts of Burr's stormy career, plus a great deal of hitherto unpublished material, lie before us, so that each may draw his own inference." Horace Green

+ N Y Times p3 D 6 '25 1400w

"This book is lacking in balance and the spirit of judicial impartiality, and therefore falls short of the highest standard of biographical achievement. Some of its judgments upon Burr's contemporaries are certainly calculated to make a reviewer arch his eyebrows, even if too rash or novel to awaken more active symptoms of surprise. Moreover, the style of the book is blemished by not a few little flippant ejaculations such as have never, so far as we know, escaped the lips of the muse of history before. But the book has its distinct merits, too. It is based on a wealth of published and unpublished material, and this material is worked up and presented in a sprightly and readable manner." W: C. Bruce

+ N Y World p6m N 8 '25 1100w

"In dealing with Burr's character the authors have adopted an impartial attitude. While they fail to pass condemnation for deeds which earlier writers censured most severely, on the other hand they make no attempt to hide or minimize Burr's personal faults and weaknesses. On the whole, their task, which was a most difficult one, seems to have been honestly carried out."

+ R of Rs 72:662 D '25 350w

"In portraying this amazing character, Mr. Minnigerode uses a broad brush and strong colors; perhaps Turner's tints would be too tame for Aaron Burr." C. A. Beard

Sat R of Lit 2:337 N 23 '25 750w

Reviewed by Sydney Greenbie

Springf'd Republican p7a N 29 '25 1500w

"The authors of this book are to be congratulated, not only upon a definitive biography of a former Vice-president of the United States, but also upon a narrative of plots and intrigues difficult to parallel in the annals of their country. Their story is a sidelight upon United States history as interesting as it is valuable."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p891 D 24 '25 1200w

WARD, ARTHUR SARSFIELD. See Rohmer, S., pseud.

WARD, CHRISTOPHER. Foolish fiction. 194p $1.90 Holt

817 Parodies 25-21525

More of the author's popular parodies, of which the first and longest is a take-off on Robinson Crusoe. Many of the others first appeared in the Saturday Review of Literature.

Cleveland p123 D '25

"It is unfortunate that he is not just a little more restrained for he has the observation, the sense of style, and the wicked wit of the genuine parodist. An amusing book, but not quite as good as the author's potentialities."

+ Ind 115:508 O 31 '25 100w

"Mr. Ward is very clever at this sort of thing, as he has proved also with several previous collections of parodies, and he makes out of each story not only a very amusing bit of entertainment but an effective criticism. For young authors who are not yet quite sure of their step there is no reading more wholesome than an occasional collection of such clever parodies as these."

+ N Y Times p10 N 8 '25 350w

"If it's fun you're looking for—and if you are, why not admit it?—you'd be perfectly silly to pass up 'Foolish Fiction.'" Will Cuppy

+ N Y Tribune p7 N 15 '25 680w

"Considered purely as derived humor, 'Foolish Fiction' is very successful indeed, alarmingly funny at times. 'Robinson Crusoe,' strangely in keeping with the modern novels, is most ambitious in scope. 'Country People' is the most rollicking. The rest (as some one ought to have said long before this, but since no one has, it may as well be said now) is hysteria."

+ N Y World p6m N 29 '25 360w

Outlook 141:677 D 30 '25 10w

WARD, MRS FLORENCE JEANNETTE (BAIER). Flame of happiness. 357p $2 Jacobs

24-30620

Barbara Fallows, brought up in the residential section of Chicago under the stern but loving eye of her Aunt Anne, spends her early youth in boarding school, and subsequently enters an Illinois college. Her romance with Ruddy Gannett, a wayward, carefree type of college man, comes to a halt when she discovers he is a cad. For a time she seeks forgetfulness in the theatrical world, but to protect herself from any further love making on the part of Ruddy, she marries Geoffrey Hale, a gentleman farmer, and eventually finds her happiness.

"Miss Ward has tried to write a tale of the old conflicting with the new, and in doing so has suffered from the prevalent belief that to be modern one must be ultra realistic. The last part of the book, however, is released from this inhibition, and is therefore interesting."

— + Boston Transcript p4 Ja 7 '25 450w

N Y World p9e Ja 18 '25 230w

WARD, FRANCIS KINGDON. From China to Hkamti Long. 317p il $6 Longmans [18s E. Arnold]

915 Asia, Central. Botany—Asia

With plant hunting for his purpose Captain Ward journeyed thru the heart of Asia. Starting from Likiang on the borders of western China his route led along the Yangtze-Kiang and the Tibetan boundary thru the Irrawaddy jungle into Burma. His narrative is an account of an interesting journey and full also of the plant collector's joy in revealing new flowers and bringing to light hidden beauties.

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 17 '25 1450w

"It possesses a very fine topographical sense, an excellent wit, acute discernment, and is capable in places of a genuinely inspired grasp of landscape." H. J. Massingham

+ Nation and Ath 36:sup386 D 6 '24 160w

"No other book since that of E. H. Wilson on Szechwan is so entertaining, instructive, and thoroughly satisfactory as this one. It is unfortunately miserably bound, and there is a misleading error in the index of plant names."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:247 O 24 '25 320w

Spect 134:84 Ja 17 '25 250w

"Although it is obvious enough that he is animated by the highest ideals of research, and although he writes with the accuracy of the trained scientist whenever necessary, his narrative is a very human account of a most interesting journey; and, as such, it will appeal not only to the botanist but, to every man and woman who loves flowers."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p677 O 30 '24 1050w

WARD, HENSHAW. Evolution for John Doe; with foreword by Lorange Loss Woodruff. 354p il $3.50 Bobbs

575 Evolution 25-15071

"Mr. Ward has demonstrated in the present volume that it is possible for the layman to put in forceful, popular language a vivid, general view of what is meant by organic evolution. He gives just such a survey as a person unacquainted with biology needs for an introduction to some of the large problems of life—problems so large that they have burst the confines of the biological laboratory to trouble unnecessarily some politicians and theologians."—Foreword

Booklist 22:107 D '25

"It is a delight to have a book designed for laymen that fulfills its purpose. In the whole range of evolutionary literature, recently augmented by the Tennessee furore, it is about time that controversy was forgotten and exposition substituted. In this book we have one of the most complete general accounts of evolution that we have ever come across."

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 9 '25 300w

"Various biologists and geologists have read his manuscript and pronounced it sound doctrine. Its great virtue is in its clear, simple development of its theme; the illustrations, both figurative and designed, illuminate the technical story. It is a valuable piece of exposition."

+ Ind 115:220 Ag 22 '25 150w

"Ward now summarizes, in a popular and effective way the familiar evidences of evolution. It is a picturesque and imaginative treatment that makes this book highly interesting."

Woodbridge Riley

+ Int BK R p113 Ja '26 520w

"He has produced a thrilling and dramatic story, done with a sure intuition of what to leave out, and with references marshaled unobtrusively where one can get at them when one wants them." R. W. T.

+ Lit R p9 Ja 2 '26 130w

"It is true that the person of normal intelligence can read this book with interest and understand it clearly, but it is also true that every professor of biology can study it with profit and see how far he comes from presenting evolution as it can and should be presented. So, for the next edition, let 'John Doe' be quietly dropped into the nearest ash can, and let the title read simply 'Evolution.' With this slight emendation the book will stand alone as the best in its field, quite safe, I venture to assert, from serious criticism." H. M. Parshley

+ N Y Tribune p4 O 4 '25 140w

Reviewed by Grove Wilson

N Y World p3m Ag 16 '25 300w

Outlook 141:293 O 21 '25 20w

R of Rs 72:336 S '25 130w

"The book is well organized and simply and clearly, even attractively, written." Vernon Kellogg

+ Sat R of Lit 2:237 O 24 '25 380w

WARD, ROBERT DE COURCY. Climates of the United States. 518p il $4 Ginn

551.5 United States—Climate 25-21094

"Professor Ward has summarized in this volume his study and teaching of the last twenty-five years. As the leading climatologist of our own country and one who at the same time by reason of travel and his translation of Hann's extensive contributions, is quite familiar with the climatic characteristics of other lands, his judgment is entitled to much weight. The present volume, too, has the great advantage of having been tried out, for the most part, in sections, in various scientific journals, where inaccuracies or even inadequate explanations would receive comment and correction if needed."—N Y Times

"This is a readable book on an interesting theme by a man who knows his subject. Professor Ward is not one to veil his meaning in a cloud of words. He presents his material in an orderly way and with a clearness not always characteristic of academic circles. The book lacks any trace of dogmatism. One hardly realizes that he is reading a textbook: the narrative as well as the matter of the text holds the interest. The secret may be found perhaps in the fact that the book has been slow in maturing." Alexander McAdie

+ Geog R 16:161 Ja '26 700w

"It fills a vacant space on library shelves, a space that has waited long for a standard treatise by an American on the climatic characteristics of the various sections of our country. Laymen can read and enjoy, and if they do not turn to good account the knowledge so acquired, that is their loss. It is in no wise the fault of Professor Ward." Alexander McAdie

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 10 '26 1300w

WARDE, MARGARET, pseud. See Dunton, E. K.

WARREN, CHARLES. Congress, the Constitution, and the Supreme court. 308p $3.50 Little

345 United States. Congress. United States. Supreme court. United States—Constitution 25-24363

This book is an exposition of the function of the Supreme court as an interpreter of the Constitution and in its relation to Congress. It considers also some of the proposals recently made to abolish or impair the power of the Court. The book includes a brief description of the cases in which the Court has held an act of Congress unconstitutional as well as a description of the cases especially affecting labor on which the Court has rendered a decision.

WARREN, CHARLES—Continued

"Remarkably clear visioned and simply and ably argued is Mr. Warren's new work. There is no writer on these subjects who has a firmer grasp than Mr. Warren and certainly none who has a more liquid style." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 19 '25 2250w

"Charles Warren's book deals with this subject of judicial review of Federal legislation. In no other single volume has the subject been so exhaustively considered. He sustains his reputation for indefatigable research." W: B. Linn

+ Lit R p4 Ja 2 '26 460w

"While he here uses to advantage the same burrowing powers which made his 'Supreme Court in United States History' such a welcome contribution, his failure to look at the whole of his problem, his shortcomings in analysis, and his weakness in evaluation must detract from the scholarly reputation which his earlier work had won for him." T: R. Powell

— Nation 121:736 D 23 '25 900w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

N Y Times p12 Ja 10 '26 1750w

N Y World p7m D 6 '25 60w

R of Rs 73:109 Ja '26 150w

WARREN, GEORGE FREDERICK, and PEARSON, FRANK ASHMORE. Agricultural situation; economic effects of fluctuating prices. (Price ser.) 306p $3 Wiley [15s Chapman & H.]

338.1 Agriculture—Economic aspects. Prices
25-1385

"Looked at as a treatise in economics, the essential doctrine of this book runs about as follows. Wars, at least as thus far conducted, are accompanied by inflation. Once this inflation begins, a fairly definite train of events is started, which is bound to run its full course, and there is very little that public agencies can do to help the situation, except to stabilize the dollar if possible. The level at which the dollar should be stabilized is the one which will do the least injustice to the largest number of debtors and creditors, bondholders and taxpayers, property-owners and property-less, etc. The chain of events accompanying the deflation includes sagging prices, lagging wages, lagging retail margins, lagging tax-rates, relatively low prices for farm products, and general agricultural depression. The movement ends when prices are again at their 'pre-war level.'"—Am Econ R

"There are those, of course, who will put Professors Warren and Pearson in the large class of the economic fatalists. But theirs is a larger undertaking than merely nursing a convalescent back to health—it is nothing less than complete prevention of the disease. On the score of construction, the book is not up to the usual high standard set by Professor Warren. There is a disconcerting tendency to repeat sentences and almost whole paragraphs verbatim in different chapters." J: D. Black

+ — Am Econ R 15:309 Je '25 2100w

"Many students of economic conditions in the United States believe that we can have no enduring prosperity unless agriculture is on a sound basis and is reasonably profitable to those engaged in it. In the light of this opinion, the facts presented in this book should be of more than passing interest to those concerned with American business conditions."

+ Harvard Business R 3:512 J1 '25 80w

"This work gives us the best summary of interpreted information that is now available anywhere; and the relevant facts, suitably arranged, rather than heated expressions of opinion, are what the reader gladly finds. . . . No student of current economic life in America can ignore this serviceable volume." A. S.

+ R of Rs 71:555 My '25 230w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p254 Ap 9 '25 250w

WARREN, IRENE; LYONS, MARION CRAWFORD; and MCCLELLAND, FRANK CLARK. Filing and indexing with business procedure. 251p il $2 Rand 651.5 Files and filing (documents). Indexing.

Office management 24-25812

"Text-book on filing of office records, emphasizing the relation between the filing department and the business as a whole."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 21:186 F '25

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:301 My '25

WARREN, MRS MAUDE LAVINIA (RADFORD). Carnival colors. 354p $2 Bobbs
25-5963

The Harringtons are a tradition-bound New England family whose every thought and action follows a well established groove. When Clark Harrington marries vivid, dark-eyed Juliana Cartwright he introduces into the staid old house, the spirit of carnival. The fierce, high flame of romantic passion descends to Juliana's daughter, Tennessee, and thru her to Florrie, the third of the line. Each in her own generation is the alien in the house, and each struggles for her own happiness against its crushing environment. The struggle culminates in Florrie's effort to choose between Lester Sheldon and her cousin Henry Roper, one of the Harringtons. A dramatic incident at the close of the book precipitates her choice and convinces her it is the right one.

Boston Transcript p4 My 6 '25 250w

"The novel moves slowly, with many 'flash-backs' to earlier periods, and is more than a little monotonous."

— N Y Times p8 Je 7 '25 520w

"'Carnival Colors' is a somber study, with moments of beauty and a basic reality that justifies the somewhat involved technique."

+ N Y Tribune p9 Mr 29 '25 200w

N Y World p7m Mr 29 '25 80w

WASHBURN, CLAUDE CARLOS. Green arch.
2 147p $2 A. & C. Boni
25-23113

"The story centers about a very delightful and mysterious southern family dwelling in an isolated spot far up among the hills of North Carolina. A certain eerie other-world mystery surrounds their home among the somber old woods of the mountains and Arthur Holland, who has fled from the shadow of war and disillusioned love finds therein adventure and at least momentary forgetfulness. He enters another world, as it were, when he rides beneath the Green Arch and loses himself only to come most unexpectedly upon a veritable mansion of dreams."—Springf'd Republican

"A fanciful little narrative, prettily conceived, and delightfully related."

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 12 '25 300w

"Very delicate and charming fantasy. Very delicately handled, with a deft manipulation of the slender line dividing the real from the unreal, the book has an unusual charm, of the kind it is almost impossible to analyze or to describe."

+ N Y Times p22 N 22 '25 520w

"It is more than a pleasant ride with Arthur Holland under the green arch and into the magic forest. It is an experience in the refreshment of a draught of unreality." Ruth Seinfeld

+ N Y Tribune p22 D 6 '25 480w

"The problem is indeed a dominant one in so intricately developed a civilization as the present, but it has fallen through Mr. Washburn's hands and he has produced merely a glamorously amusing story in place of the significant character study that one might have expected."

— + N Y World p6m Ja 10 '26 100w

"The book is slight, but it is not without quality. At the same time it would have benefited by more thorough craftsmanship on the part of Mr. Washburn. He has not given it quite the atmosphere and pictorial beauty it deserves, nor written it with quite the necessary regard for rhythm and movement. His lightness and his approach are just right."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:467 Ja 2 '26 280w

"An exquisite little story. It is scarcely more than a novellet and can easily be read at a sitting, yet it is a rounded and perfect whole, containing more beauty, adventure and suggestion than many a goodly novel twice its length."

+ Spring'd Republican p5a Ja 10 '26 230w

WASHBURN, CLAUDE CARLOS. Prince and the princess. 312p $2.50 A. & C. Boni

25-4341

"This novel and its several parts derive their titles from the movements of Rimsky-Korsakoff's 'Scheherazade.' This is an honest, thoughtful, wordy, biographic, carrying Conrad Brooke from the 1902 Harvard Class Day, via the proceeds of a successful novel, to a permanent residence in Italy, love, marriage, mild disenchantment, the War, further disillusionment, another love, renunciation, resignation."

—Sat R of Lit

"There is something very satisfying about 'The Prince and the Princess,' because it is an achievement derived from a combination of talents. Mr. Washburn knows how to tell a story and how to manage dialogue, besides having an ability for creating character and a pleasant sophistication, which is much nearer to culture than to smartness. Such qualities harmonize into a book it is intellectually a pleasure to read." L: Kronenberger

+ Lit R p9 Mr 14 '25 420w

"Mr. Washburn writes his tale throughout in pleasing and pliant prose. He has conceived it in sincerity and has told it with charm."

+ N Y Times p24 F 8 '25 650w

"A history intelligently conceived, and by no beginner, its style is yet calculated occasionally to irritate its proper class of readers."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:565 F 28 '25 250w

WASHBURN, LOUIS COPE, comp. Christ² church, Philadelphia. 317p il $4 Macrae-Smith
283 Christ church, Philadelphia. Philadelphia—Churches 25-27647

Historic Christ church, Philadelphia, where Washington, Benjamin Franklin and William Penn worshipped, was the first Church of England congregation gathered in Pennsylvania. The book, a symposium compiled in connection with the two hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of Christ church, consists of an historical sketch of the church and other sketches and addresses.

"The historic memories that cluster within its walls are all told in this series of papers by different authors, from their different points of view, a method which adds color to an already vivid picture. The collection forms a rarely comprehensive survey of a peculiarly compelling historical subject." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 2 '26 950w

"Dr. Washburn has admirably performed his task of compiling, editing and adding to the material prepared upon the occasion of the 225th anniversary of the founding of Christ Church, Philadelphia."

N Y Tribune p17 Ja 3 '26 180w

WASHINGTON, GEORGE. Diaries of George Washington, 1748-1799; ed. by John C. Fitzpatrick. 4v il $25 Houghton

.B or 92

25-21899

"No biography of Washington can possibly give so vivid a portrait of the man as his own diaries afford. Most of these were purchased by the Government from the Washington family early in the last century. A few still remain in private hands and until the present time only about one-sixth of the whole number had been published. The entire series has now been edited by Mr. Fitzpatrick of the Congressional Library."—R of Rs

"The Diaries of George Washington' hardly warrant, in our opinion, the expenditure of time put upon the work. In the first place, they are provokingly fragmentary, in spite of the hundreds of pages they fill. The parts that we should most like to have are 'missing or not written.' For the student of agriculture these interminable pages may have a charm (though that quality is strangely missing in Washington's style) and a significance. For the historian they are almost worthless." D: S. Muzzey

— Bookm 62:487 D '25 420w

"The present volumes are exceedingly important and the editorial work has been performed with a great deal of ability, to which has been added that infinite capacity for taking pains which is so nearly akin to genius. Open any of these volumes at random, and, should your eye fall on any of Washington's human contacts, you will find notations explaining and illuminating the identity of the person to whom the diarist has briefly referred, a piece of work done by Mr. Fitzpatrick with a completeness and care which is highly commendable." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 7 '25 2400w

"All the careful and painstaking work of editing so large a work has been carried through, as far as I can see, without a flaw. One cannot pretend that the diaries are consistently interesting. Most of them are rather on the dull side. Perhaps as interesting as any are the ones dealing with his tours through the Eastern States in 1789, and through the Southern States in 1791." D. R.

+ Ind 116:22 Ja 2 '26 1000w

"If these diaries throw no light on his political views, they illuminate Washington, the man, who has been so long in shadow. They show him dismounted from his high horse and in the mood for play. Here is a man who was evidently fond of good dinners, and not at all adverse to the liquid refreshments that once went with them. How Parson Weems would have blushed and hurried on had he seen some of the notations of the youthful hero who never told a lie." C. G. Bowers

+ Int Bk R p18 D '25 2250w

"In the current search for true history in the individual stories of the men who have made it, the publication of the complete journals of Washington serves a distinctly useful purpose. Even considered only in the light of the publication of important source material in the Congressional Library the venture is well worth while." A. S. Will

+ N Y Times p3 D 20 '25 1850w

"These four volumes very greatly augment the dimensions of Washington as a diarist. They will greatly augment our consciousness of the real nature of his personality and his career if we have the wit and the imagination and the industry to use them—and only so." Stuart Sherman

+ N Y Tribune p1 N 1 '25 4000w

"There are distressing gaps; the worst of these is from his appointment as Commander-in-Chief in June, 1775, to a day, nearly six years later in 1781. The historical importance of the diaries is therefore considerably impaired. Yet as a whole, no more important work of American history has been published this year."

+ Outlook 141:640 D 23 '25 300w

R of Rs 72:663 D '25 80w

"The material contained in these handsome volumes constitutes beyond question one of the most important human documents that has lately been added to the literature of American history." W: MacDonald

+ Sat R of Lit 2:477 Ja 9 '26 2200w

WASSERMANN, JACOB. Faber, or, The lost years; auth. tr. by Harry Hansen. 347p $2.50
Harcourt

25-20408

"The story is that of a young German architect who returns to his native city after a five-and-half years' absence, most of it as a prisoner, and after a sensational escape through Siberia—the glimpses we get of this remind us of Ossendowski's adventures—to find himself unable to resume his married life. But Wassermann, who is even more of a philosopher than a story teller, deals with this young man's crisis and with the corresponding difficulties of his wife, Martina, not only in terms of their individual relations, but in terms of the social forces which have made their personalities. And so his book becomes not only a dramatic story, but a criticism of life in central Europe to-day."
—N Y Tribune

Booklist 22:165 Ja '26
Cleveland p123 D '25

"Faber himself manages to be a rather dreary bore. If Mr. Wassermann had consented to lead his readers on a tour through the mind of the real Faber, it would have been an interesting business. The one character of the piece who invokes sympathy is Faith. But she is explored merely as a hurried aside. During the brief space devoted to the story of her tragic life, the novel quickens its pace and becomes almost moving. But once Faith has told her tale, the narrative subsides to its involved, misty inconsequence." Morris Markey
— + Int Bk R p825 N '25 620w

"In 'Faber' each word counts. It is a novel compact and intense. Jacob Wassermann, working more often on great canvases, confines himself here to a small one. In a fashion, then, more so than even 'Gold' or 'The Gooseman,' 'Faber' has the quality of concentration, the quality of a jewel into whose heart is tight pressed all the glory of color. 'Faber' holds in its essence the stuff of all life—even as 'The World's Illusion,' that tumultuous panorama, does." Walter Yust
+ Lit R p2 O 24 '25 280w

"Thanks to the passionate strength of his convictions his novels produce a powerful impression, and thanks to their apparently comprehensive sweep they seem to suggest that their author is a man capable of grasping modern life in something like its full complexity, but his tendency to schematize it becomes increasingly evident and his vision is seen to be less comprehensive than one was led to hope. 'Faber,' though it contains scenes of great power, clearly reveals this central defect of its author's work." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 121:579 N 18 '25 720w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 44:337 N 18 '25 220w

"'Faber' will please those most who are not dismayed by elaborate psychology and to whom the contemporary novel of plot and manners is not the be-all and the end-all of literature. It is not a happy book, but pessimism is far from being its conclusion."
+ N Y Times p6 N 1 '25 1450w

"In spite of Wassermann's semi-philosophical style (all his characters talk in those Teutonic abstractions which metaphysicians use) there is real drama in the book. And through his characters Wassermann shows his own dissatisfaction with all of the current tides of opinion and policy in central Europe. Mr. Hansen's translation is a most readable one. He has compelled his author to talk for us not an Anglicized German but a language that is English in structure as well as in vocabulary." Llewellyn Jones
+ N Y Tribune p6 O 25 '25 1300w

"Wassermann, in our humble opinion, has ended 'Faber' where he should have begun it. He has not made Eugene intelligible, nor the Princess credible; there is too much chair warming and too much unmotivated chewing of the intellectual cud." Harry Salpeter

— N Y World p6m N 15 '25 1200w

"Jacob Wassermann is unquestionably one of the greatest literary craftsmen of the age. Equally a master of swift narrative, dramatic incident, sharp but rich characterization, and veracious dialogue, his work is a delight from the standpoint of sheer technique. But more than a creator of character, Wassermann is also one of the greatest living analysts of the soul."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:404 D 12 '25 550w

"'The Lost Years' Wassermann adds to his title. The lost years not only in the love-life we fail to live, but lost years in the creative life we fail to live. They are not lost; we throw them away. With the art that is self-illuminating, the author of 'The World's Illusion' penetrates the recesses of the minds of both men and women." Sydney Greenbie

+ Springfield Republican p7a D 27 '25 750w

WATERMAN, WILLIAM RANDALL. Frances Wright. 267p $3.50; pa $2.75 Longmans

B or 92 Darusmont, Frances (Wright)
Mme Piquetpal-Darusmont 24-25188

"The name of Frances Wright was perhaps better known in America before the Civil War than it is to-day. She was one of the foremost leaders in the early agitation for 'Women's Rights' which began nearly one hundred years ago. Of Scotch parentage, she came to America in 1818, and remained here, writing and lecturing for about thirty years. The author of this monograph in the Columbia University 'Studies in History' believes that Miss Wright's greatest contribution was to the intellectual emancipation of women. She was a pioneer in demonstrating what the feminine mind could accomplish."—R of Rs

Am Econ R 15:96 Mr '25 30w

"Mr. Waterman assembles his facts with accuracy and general thoroughness and presents them in interesting style. His narrative flags towards the end, largely because of exhaustion of materials."

+ Am Hist R 30:614 Ap '25 760w

"Those interested should be grateful to Dr. Waterman for bringing forth from the shades of an undeserved forgetfulness one of the most brilliant of women, who, whether one agreed with her or not—and one generally did not—possessed a personality as persuasive as striking. It shines through all the pages of this absorbing biography." Frances Bartlett

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 14 '25 2050w

"Mr. Waterman's biography is not one of psychological interpretation; it is a careful and scholarly piece of research, well documented, and presented in a clear and agreeable style."

+ Nation 121:310 S 16 '25 300w

"This scholarly study adds materially to our understanding of a not too well-known period." E. A. Dexter

+ New Repub 41:239 Ja 21 '25 850w

R of Rs 71:109 Ja '25 100w

WATSON, FREDERICK (IAN FERGUSON, pseud.). Mr Kello. 288p $2 Appleton

25-12251

"1570 Oct. 4. Mr. John Kello, minister of Spott, hangit in Edinb." On this grim sentence hangs the tale. John Kello, merciless enemy of witches and witchcraft is relentless in his efforts to rid the Scottish countryside of their mischievous influence. Austere, compassionate, he holds himself God-appointed to his awful task, and succeeds in bringing one miserable old woman after another to the stake. To one of these poor wretches the brief madness of Kello's youth is known. He doubles his efforts against her in order that his secret may die with her. Caught in the toils of his own harsh weaving, the minister himself is denounced by his parish and hanged as a sorcerer.

"A real story lies behind this fury of persecution, one of those tangled historical tales such as Walter Scott delighted to write. Mr. Kello is possessed of a demon but it is, we suspect as the story progresses, the demon of a former self, and that he expiates his own sins by his relentless toward the sins of others. He is a dark figure but we come to understand him as the story advances. It is an absorbing story leaving a genuine shudder behind it."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 23 '25 250w
Cleveland p66 Je '25

"Beautifully has Mr. Ferguson caught the mystery and the foreboding darkeness of a harsh day. There are passages in this novel which stir the hair as no ghost story does." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p4 Ap 18 '25 220w

"The tale is told in a bare, harsh, and impressive manner, and rises at the end to a scene of tragic irony and intensity."

+ Sat R 137:541 My 24 '24 120w

"The book's good points are more than its bad ones. It is decidedly diverting and decidedly effective, especially if the reader's critical sense be not too well developed."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:841 Je 20 '25 180w

"In hanging his story on an historical peg (although the Mrs. Kello of the book is different from her actual counterpart), Mr. Ferguson has achieved a remarkable representation of contemporary life and morals."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p302 My 15 '24 550w

WATSON, FREDERICK (IAN FERGUSON, pseud.). Philosophy of witchcraft. 219p $2.50
Appleton [5s G. Harrap]

133.4 Witchcraft

"Mr. Ferguson attempts to explain why the witch in darker ages won such a hold on the imagination and indeed on the friendliness of commonalty. He traces her descent from the peculiarly religious function of vestal to the role of comforter for oppressed peoples—their physician, their counselor, their source of all, then forbidden, joys; finally he carries her to that sorry day when through fear of the sterner activity of men, of God and statesmen, her own folk not only deserted her, but to protect themselves from the charge of implication in the black arts, persecuted her."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p2 Je 27 '25 300w

"One wishes that he had developed more thoroughly the evidences of the actual witch cult in Europe and elsewhere, merely for the purpose of placing in juxtaposition, not only an explanation and interpretation, but the facts as well. On the whole, however, the book is a vivid survey of the subject despite omissions and confessions."

+ Ind 114:704 Je 20 '25 150w

"This book is not a sentimental plea for witches. It is an entertaining and illuminating study of the philosophy of comfort, as embodied in the witch and as it concerned early, and even late, social history." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p4 Ap 18 '25 200w

"This is probably learned; it is certainly dry."

— Outlook 140:194 Je 3 '25 10w

Sat R of Lit 1:798 My 30 '25 200w

"Mr. Ferguson has written a book original in scheme and forcible in modern applications, but not very notable for research."

+ Spec 133:742 N 15 '24 120w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p843 D 11 '24 750w

WATSON, JOHN M. Science as revelation. 2 303p il $2.25 Macmillan

215 Religion and science. Science 25-21398

The key to the creator lies in the creation. Science, which reveals the nature and laws of the physical universe must at the same time reveal the nature and laws of the creator of the universe. Each branch of science therefore contributes a part of this revelation of God, and on the testimony of the whole the author bases his religion, which adds to the truths taught by nature, "the spiritual truths of ethics and religion as taught by Jesus of Nazareth."

"The first part of the book, when the author is giving descriptions of the latest concepts in all the branches of science, is quite good, and should be read by everyone. But when the author tries to weld the facts that he has given us into a philosophic and religious system, he is not so successful." L. S. K.

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 12 '25 700w

"Mr. Watson has written an earnest, eloquent and sincere plea for the renovation of religion by the revelations of science."

+ N Y Times p14 N 29 '25 400w

WATSON, MRS LUCY ELEANOR (GILLMAN). Coleridge at Highgate. 196p il $3.75 (10s 6d) Longmans

B or 92 Coleridge, Samuel Taylor 25-23513

It was to relieve severe physical and mental pain that Coleridge contracted the opium habit. Then to cure the effects of the opium a physician's care was needed, and he went to live in the household of Dr and Mrs Gillman at Highgate. He was a loved member of the household for eighteen years. A granddaughter of Mrs Gillman has made this record from her remembrances of conversations with her grandmother whose wish it was to give to the world a juster view of the poet's character.

Boston Transcript p8 D 5 '25 500w

"Having made good her case, which deserved to be made good, Mrs. Watson draws, chiefly from her grandmother's recollections, a charming picture of a serene, seraphic old gentleman, living in an attic among his books."

+ Nation and Ath 38:504 Ja 2 '26 300w

"I dare recommend Mrs. Watson's book only to those who love Coleridge; you must be so fond of him and so fascinated by him that you can read anything about him—to enjoy it. It is a mistaken book."

— New Statesman 26:112 N 7 '25 1450w

Reviewed by J. B. Priestley

Sat R 140:536 N 7 '25 1350w

"Mrs. Watson's little book is an attractive supplement to the standard biographies of a great man of letters."

+ Spec 135:1104 D 12 '25 450w

"Mrs. Watson's narrative is scrupulously accurate in matters of fact, but it suffers because of her desire to represent a period of peaceful decline as one of creative activity. It was not; but it was assuredly not the fault of the Gillmans that it was not. In so far as the book is a vindication of the Gillmans it is welcome enough, though the Gillmans hardly needed vindication except from the scandal-mongers of their own day."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p769 N 19 '25 1150w

WATTS, RALPH LEVI. Rural Pennsylvania. (Rural state and province ser.) 331p il $2.50 Macmillan

630 Agriculture—Pennsylvania. Farm life 25-5166

The chapters of this book, contributed by specialists in their various fields, form a survey of the country life of Pennsylvania. Contents: Physical and climatic setting, by E. L. Worthen; Soils, by E. L. Worthen; Other resources, by J. A. Ferguson, G. R. Green and E. S. Moore; Historical setting, by George F. Zook; Survey of agricultural industries, plants and crops, by Frank D. Gardner; Animal industries, by Frank D. Gardner; Markets and marketing, by Guy C. Smith; Rural manufactures, by C. W. Larson; Governmental work for country life, by

WATTS, RALPH LEVI—Continued

William Frear; Educational and research organization, by T. I. Mairs; Rural outlook, and estimate, by R. L. Watts; Statistical appendices.

Am Econ R 15:315 Je '25 30w

Booklist 22:67 N '25

"In this latest volume of the Rural State and Province Series, an ambitious attempt is made to bring within the covers of a single book a comprehensive, widely inclusive survey of the many and varied aspects of country life in the Keystone State. A wide range of subjects is brought under discussion, and while the compilation aims at a general rather than a specialized study, each of the different matters considered is handled by an expert. Most of the men who have cooperated with Mr. Watts, himself dean and director of the School of Agriculture of Pennsylvania State College, are members of the faculty of that school and one or two of them have in addition held office in the agricultural departments of the State government." F. W. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 23 '25 450w

Reviewed by N. A. Crawford

Int Bk R p28 D '25 50w

"The volume as a whole is sound, balanced, though not a brilliant study." N. A. Crawford

+ Nation 121:708 D 16 '25 160w

WAUGH, ALEC. Card castle. 309p $2 A. & C. Boni [7s 6d G. Richards]

[24-9999]

"Roland Whately, happily married and seemingly secure in his business, is the chief figure in Alec Waugh's latest novel, wherein we read how the castle is overturned as a result of a little affair with a lady known as Frou-Frou—an affair perfectly innocent in itself, but leading to a vital misunderstanding with Whately's best friend, Gerald Marston. It is a long time before Roland finds out that Gerald has seen him emerge from a resort of no uncertain fame with the woman for whom young Marston's door has long been open. Mr. Waugh has written a rather intriguing tale of consequences."—N Y World

"The story seems to us labored and unreal, and Roland Whately never really wins our sympathy."

— Boston Transcript p4 My 6 '25 200w

Ind 114:703 Je 20 '25 220w

"Vice to be attractive must be sugar-coated. Mr. Waugh has chosen to present it in its sordid reality. Such a work, then, must be judged as a human document, as a testimonial to our common weakness. It must be viewed from all angles and with a detachment impossible when the author is himself still young. 'Card Castle' is not as good as 'The Loom of Youth.' But this much may be said about Mr. Waugh, another author—one whom the English consider among their most promising—is slowly finding himself." G. E. Hackney

— + Lit R p12 My 9 '25 520w

"This book is strongly written, with vital characters, a compact organization of its matter, and a keen zest for life, that avoids both smartness and smugness. 'Card Castle' is not dramatic or emotional, but it is soundly, sympathetically written, and conveys a sense of maturity and wisdom that compensates for its lack of enthusiasm."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 19 '25 1000w

"Done with competence, if not distinction, it is a real addition to the voluminous literature on modern marriage relations which has sprung up since the war." Mary Ross

+ N Y Tribune p5 Ag 9 '25 500w

N Y World p6m Ap 12 '25 100w

— Sat R of Lit 1:811 Je 6 '25 650w

"Mr. Waugh has apparently no longer anything to say, nor has he any particular style in which to say it. But he considers it very naughty to go into private rooms of restaurants, and he considers writing—if his recent memoir is to be believed—a delightfully simple and unlaborious way of making a living. So presumably he will go on building his Card Castles every few months."

— Spec 132:761 My 10 '24 60w

"It is a pity that Mr. Waugh had not devoted more attention to the analysis of his principal characters. His observation of manners is excellent, but his descriptions are heavy and passages are loaded with irrelevant information."

— + The Times [London] Lit Sup p222 Ap 10 '24 350w

WAUGH, ALEC. Kept. 303p $2 A. & C. Boni [7s 6d G. Richards]

25-19826

A story of post-war London society, of careless morals and a tangle of irregular affairs. In the gay set that revolves about her, the figure of Marjorie Fairfield stands out. She has become Everard Tristram's mistress, while waiting for his wife to divorce him. Marjorie has yielded to her middle aged lover from a sense of his need for her. Her affair with Ransom Heritage is quite different. And different still is the love impetuously offered by young Eric Somerset. It becomes impossible to keep all three in her life. Three courses are open to her. She may marry Everard and respectability, Eric and responsibility, or she may give herself and yet remain herself by continuing her relations with Ransom. She makes her choice.

"As a picture of certain social strata of London in the year 1924 the novel is possibly useful. After finishing 'Kept' the reader feels that he understands these poor devils pretty thoroughly. That introduction to an almost abnormal psychology is the greatest service that the novel renders. To many it will seem a service of doubtful value." R. B. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 16 '25 450w

"The garish night life of post-war London is brilliantly depicted in Alec Waugh's new novel, 'Kept.' One reviewer, at least, has found not a dull page in the book. The conversation is sparkling, with extremely clever descriptions of the Turkish bath, the raiding of a night club, the curse of being paged, and what not." R. L. Kurzman

+ Int Bk R p744 O '25 650w

"Mr. Waugh's characters are thoughtless; they do not believe in the value of taking thought and of coming to general and necessary conclusions about living. They are outside the practical world, where inevitably this must be done, and they are irritating as well as unreal. One feels that Mr. Waugh knows and has reflected upon post-war London better than he knows and more than he has reflected upon life. He is serious, but not with the kind of seriousness his theme demands." Edwin Muir

— + Nation and Ath 37:79 Ap 13 '25 160w

"Meticulous as are the stage directions, the characterisation is real and the dialogue always entertainingly vivacious, and, whether it be a merit or demerit, there is not a really objectionable person in the book. It is not an immoral world that Mr. Waugh describes, it is non-moral, and its dominant note is 'kindness,' a little flabby perhaps, but a distinct improvement on the hard viciousness which it has supplanted. One gathers that Mr. Waugh is a little frightened by what he sees and describes so clearly. He need not be. It was always there, it has greatly improved, and it does not matter in the least."

New Statesman 25:484 Ag 8 '25 500w

"Alec Waugh shows his usual facility in handling his characters. He presents an unsavory theme with force and balance, and with a saving touch of philosophy which does not pretend to set the reader up as judge."

N Y Times p6 Ag 23 '25 900w

"It may entertain those whom it shocks, or please those who wish testimony to support their own uncertain convictions of freedom. To one impartially in search of real people or new light on old problems it has little to offer." Mary Ross

— N Y Tribune p8 S 13 '26 500w

"Though certainly there are brains in 'Kept' too, I can discern no trace of inspiration. The plot is hackneyed, which would not matter in the least if the people lived; but unfortunately they come alive only at moments." Gerald Gould

— Sat R 139:389 Ap 11 '25 220w

Sat R of Lit 2:163 S 26 '25 200w

"Though the book is entirely occupied with love—or rather with sexual relations—the characters are scarcely even passionate. They are weak; they have physical needs; they have habits."

— The Times [London] Lit Sup p282 Ap 23 '25 360w

WEALE, PUTNAM, pseud. (BERTRAM LENOX SIMPSON). Why China sees red. 337p il $3 Dodd

951 China—politics and government. China—Foreign relations

Mr Weale has been for many years the official adviser on foreign affairs for the Chinese government. He explains the present mood of the Chinese people as affected by Bolshevik propaganda, the student movement, the press, the "unequal treaties," and the policies of foreign governments, American and British.

"His book is important. It is well written, thoroughly documented, shows a remarkable intimacy with the diplomatic and political background, and an astute appreciation of the forces at play in China. Mr. Simpson has not avoided prejudice. He is ineluctably British. His discussion of the policies of Russia, Japan, the United States and of the Chinese factions themselves is frankly in relation to British, not Chinese, interests." J: Carter

+ — N Y Times p1 D 27 '25 3000w

"His book is a powerful revelation and indictment of international policies, which must soon be drastically altered if the progress of China's exploitation by alien races is to be conducted secure from native obstruction and at the maximum of profit to foreign interests."

+ N Y World p6m Ja 10 '26 160w

"This book is a welcome contrast to the mass of sentimental literature on China which treats the complicated Chinese problems from purely emotional points of view, with utter disregard of the practical side. The author apparently believes that the real friends of China are those who tell the truth about the present situation." C: C. Batchelder

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:493 Ja 16 '26 1100w

WEATHERS, JOHN. My garden book: prepared for the daily use of all who own a garden big or little. 744p il $10.50 (36s) Longmans 716 Gardening Agr25-243

"In the first section the author tells something of the history of gardening and discusses the several ways in which it may be considered, as art, science, recreation, business. Then he takes up all the practical sides of garden making—situation, enclosures, soil, implements, cultivation, the functions of the different parts of plants, propagation and other matters. But the main part of the volume is devoted to practical advice on the making and cultivating of different kinds of gardens, flower, fruit, glass-house, vegetable. In each of these sections much space is given to lists of plants which are described with considerable detail as to scientific features and methods of cultivation."—N Y Times

"Frankly, at first sight the book is a bit appalling and rather the weight of an encyclopedia. Once the reader realizes how good it is he forgets and forgives the heavy exterior. It is the author's purpose to cover the entire field of gardening so completely that any question which may be asked on the subject will find an answer—a difficult task which he has done well." A. T. A. Quackenbush

+ — Lit R p14 Ap 25 '25 200w

"His large and very capable volume will doubtless be of invaluable service to gardeners in England, but its practical worth for most gardeners in the United States must be, of course, very greatly lessened by the differences in climate, soil, methods and plants. But it is notably comprehensive and thoroughly practical."

+ N Y Times p11 Ja 25 '25 230w

"He is always ready to tilt against the present vogue of spraying against pests. He does not always appreciate the proverbial difficulty of proving a negative."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p852 D 11 '24 160w

WEBSTER, CHARLES KINGSLEY. Foreign policy of Castlereagh, 1815-1822; Britain and the European alliance. 598p $7.50 Harcourt [25s Bell]

940.28 Europe—History—1815-1848. Great Britain—Foreign relations. Londonderry, Robert Stewart, 2d marquis of. Holy alliance. Quadruple alliance, 1815 [25-5104]

"Lord Castlereagh, one of the wisest and best foreign secretaries England ever had, is just coming into his own. Mr. Webster has given us a fair picture of Castlereagh the man, and a full, clear and accurate account of his foreign policy after the Congress of Vienna. The book opens with a series of portraits of George IV and his ministers, which are quite as lively as Strachey's, and more accurate. There is a valuable chapter on the diplomatic machine of Downing Street; and another, of particular interest to Americans, on Castlereagh's policy toward Latin America and the United States. But the book is chiefly concerned with Castlereagh's policy of preserving the peace in Europe, and obtaining a modicum of justice to France, through the European Alliance (so often and wrongly confused with the Holy Alliance) which he had done so much to create."—New Repub

"Professor Webster's book is a contribution of the first order in the field of diplomatic history. Too many works which deal with foreign policy draw their materials from the archives of a single power, and therefore give an incomplete and necessarily prejudiced account of the events with which they deal. Not so with Mr. Webster's volume. It is based upon exhaustive research in the archives of London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, and Petersburg and represents a synthesis not of some but of virtually all the most important first-hand materials. Next to the painstaking and thorough treatment of the sources, the most striking thing about the book is its judicious analysis of persons and policies." Dexter Perkins

+ Am Hist R 30:812 Jl '25 1050w

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 29 '25 900w

"The Foreign Policy of Castlereagh is a monument to the memory of a great man. It is a splendid contribution to the study of diplomacy and international relations. It has the European atmosphere. No praise is too high to be given to the scholarship of the book. Without being cumbered by its notes, it has numerous exact and interesting references to British and European archives, and has a valuable appendix of original documents." R. B. Mowat

+ Eng Hist R 40:445 Jl '25 2250w

"It is the great merit of Mr. Webster's book that despite the difficulties he has been able to show us a figure of very striking proportions." L: S. Gannett

+ Nation 121:671 D 9 '25 500w

"Professor Webster is an expert, and his book is primarily intended for learned persons. Its very excellences may make it appear rather formidable to the ordinary person. Moreover, he does not wield a very light or graceful pen, so that the book sometimes makes unneces-

WEBSTER, CHARLES K.—Continued
sarily crabbed or heavy reading. Despite this, I found it an absorbing book, an excellent study of the policy of a considerable statesman during a period which is unusually interesting to us at the moment, for we are passing through a similar crisis." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 36:613 Ja 31 '25 1150w

Reviewed by S. E. Morison
New Repub 43:187 Jl 8 '25 1250w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 44:258 O 28 '25 500w

"Mr. Webster's knowledge of the material on which [the book] is based is unrivalled, and he adds to his qualifications as a student the rare advantage of practical experience of international affairs. Actual contact with the diplomacy which followed the Armistice is the best possible preparation for the study of Castlereagh's work between 1815 and 1822."

+ New Statesman 24:537 F 14 '25 1650w

"Without exaggeration [this book and Temperley's Foreign policy of Canning] may be called the outstanding contributions of English historiography, perhaps without rivals in the field of diplomatic history." W. L. Langer

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 4 '25 480w

Sat R 139:193 F 21 '25 500w

"Mr. Webster writes clearly and well; his argument is well sustained, and the documentation is not excessive; from time to time, when he feels free to let himself go, there is even a certain liveliness. But, on the whole, we are conscious of the inevitable effect of trying to compress the substance of several hundred thousand documents into a book of some 500 pages. The result is not, and cannot be, light reading. It is primarily a work for historians, and students of nineteenth century politics will be grateful to Mr. Webster for opening to them so rich a quarry."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p79 F 5 '25 1900w

WEBSTER, NESTA H. (MRS ARTHUR WEBSTER). Secret societies and subversive movements. 419p $7 Dutton [20s Boswell pub. co.] 366 Secret societies. Freemasons. Revolutions [24-19770]

The object of the book is to continue the study which the author began in "World revolution," by going farther back into the past and tracing the course of revolutionary ideas thru secret societies from the earliest times. Beginning with the efforts of various sects and schisms directed against Christianity, orthodox Judaism and Islamism she follows the course of "associations working thruout nineteen centuries to undermine social and moral order and above all Christian civilization." She maintains with great conviction the importance of Freemasonry and Illuminism in the history of world-revolution. Most space is given to the history of Freemasonry and the various interpretations that have been placed on its rites and ceremonies. Her closing pages are given to an alarmist account of the theory of a Jewish world-conspiracy.

Am Pol Sci R 19:423 My '25 100w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 11 '25 400w

"Her scholarship and industry have unearthed and brought together a vast amount of occult material, much of it interesting and suggestive. She clearly fails, however, to show a continuing inner organization of moral and political anarchists working through the centuries for the destruction of human institutions and using to that end a coordinated series of secret societies."

+ Ind 114:190 F 14 '25 280w

"If some of it is rather entitled to the label, so popular with the makers of cross-word puzzles of 'lore' rather than of exact, scientifically impregnable data, the total nevertheless holds very much of interest, and for the most part it is pretty well documented and of some value to the critical student of history." H. L. P.

+ Lit R p11 Ap 25 '25 320w

"We must concede her scholarship, her sincerity, and her forceful presentation. Nevertheless we cannot but feel that all this effort is devoted to a thesis unworthy of its expenditure." D: S. Muzzey

+ Nation 121:309 S 16 '25 850w

"I do not think that any book that I have ever read has left me more mazed in the head than hers. She is in deadly earnest and she hardly ever makes a statement without giving her evidence, and yet no one has ever lived in a more fantastic political Cloudcuckooland than Mrs. Webster." Leonard Woolf

Nation and Ath 35:620 Ag 16 '24 1270w

"Mrs. Webster's book would be sensational if it were convincing. . . It is too bad. In this book she has presented a prodigious mass of historical and controversial material, in a well-printed, fat and substantially bound volume, at a price amazingly low considering the cost of publication nowadays." Silas Bent

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 8 '25 1600w

"In the very first chapter the author displays an enormous amount of useless erudition, inconsequential quotations from many sources, false views of ancient 'mysteries,' exploded theories of primitive lore. The volume is elaborately absurd; a sample of what might be called the persecutory hallucination of writing history." Woodbridge Riley

+ N Y Tribune p8 S 6 '25 1250w

"Her theory is plausible; her work is not hasty nor sketchy; her main contention is interesting, and to many minds extremely attractive. But it seems to require for its truth greater steadfastness, greater ability to hang together and avoid dissension through centuries, than conspirators have ever possessed."

+ Outlook 140:268 Je 17 '25 150w

"As in so many theorems and philosophies, the conclusion is peremptory, but the premises, however interesting, are insufficient."

+ Sat R 138:218 Ag 30 '24 900w

"If one may not accept her explanation of the French Revolution entire, or admit all her interpretation of succeeding events, it will not be possible for the future, to ignore the material which she has collected nor write history of revolution as once was done in the mere light of 'spontaneous combustion.'" W. C. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 2:214 O 17 '25 700w

Reviewed by Alan Porter

Spec 133:360 S 13 '24 1350w

"Her subject is too large for one volume, and if she treats at some length of secret societies chiefly in Europe, the subversive movements, among which are reckoned various heretical developments in Christianity and Islam, are but touched upon from lack of space. Some of Mrs. Webster's readers will doubtless be thrilled and stirred, and perhaps rendered a little uneasy by her conclusions. Others, however, may take heart from the fact that those arrayed in the forces of disorder are by no means exempt from stupidity and jealousy, that their discipline is frequently poor."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p485 Ag 7 '24 800w

WEEKES, AGNES RUSSELL. See Pryde, A., pseud.

WEEKS, ARLAND DEYETT. Psychology for child training. 312p $2.75 Appleton

136.7 Psychology, Educational. Child study 25-8065

Parents and adult relatives of small children are growingly interested in the psychological study of child life. There is an increasing demand among them for material that shall be authoritatively and at the same time simply stated. This book offers such material. The first part deals principally with instincts. The latter part of the volume deals with problems of the development of the child and his adjustment to environment. There are helpful questions and a bibliography at the end of each chapter.

"Mr. Weeks successfully presents the gist of modern pedagogical methods based upon accepted psychological principles. Teachers and parents can profit from his sane discussions of children's behavior and the ample variety of practical suggestions for training the young." Dr I. S. Wile

+ N Y Tribune p8 J1 19 '25 350w

"An elementary and academically conventional survey of the field of psychology as related to the training of the child. It emphasizes important factors, but treats them superficially."

+ — Survey 55:258 N 15 '25 30w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p465 J1 9 '25 40w

WEEKS, RAYMOND. Boys' own arithmetic. 188p il $2 Dutton

511 Arithmetic 24-29083

"This little book is meant mainly to be read at home, where its defects will be regarded with indulgence. It is intended to amuse and interest all the family, and draw them about the table of an evening, as in the olden time, to listen, to laugh—and to learn." (Preface) "It is a book of problems, all of them reflections in pleasantly distorted mirrors of the traditional textbook offering, and each characterized by an ingenuity that may possibly be worthy of a nobler cause, but that every reader will bless his stars was not so applied." (N Y Tribune)

Educ R 69:224 Ap '25 150w

Reviewed by Olivia Pound

El School J 25:797 Je '25 750w

"A clever, entertaining volume; its title is the only thing against it."

+ — Int Bk R p274 Mr '25 400w

"Its purpose, apparently, is to satirize the current textbook in arithmetic, and perhaps in other subjects also, and its most appreciative readers will be those teachers who have felt the inadequacy and ineptitude of these instruments of education. They will turn its pages with many a laugh, but the ordinary reader also will grin and chuckle over its grotesqueries that conceal no end of sly digs and sharp thrusts."

+ N Y Times p26 F 1 '25 400w

"It is an educational treatise, but happily few will suspect it, for Professor Weeks has given us one of the cleverest bits of satire that has hit the schools in a generation." D: E. Smith

+ N Y Tribune p12 D 21 '24 550w

N Y World p9e D 14 '24 150w

"People who are losing their sense of humor through addiction to crossword puzzles may deliver themselves, and at the same time rescue young people about them from the blighting effects of our horrible school methods, by acquiring 'Boys' Own Arithmetic.'"

+ R of Rs 71:335 Mr '25 260w

"Here is a book that will gladden the hearts and brighten the eyes of millions of boys if they get a chance to read it. And they will get the chance if their fathers and mothers and their other teachers discover the book and learn what it really is." C. J. Keyser

+ Sat R of Lit 1:448 Ja 10 '25 600w

Wis Lib Bul 21:92 Mr '25

WEGENER, ALFRED LOTHAR. Origin of continents and oceans; tr. from the third German ed. by J. G. A. Skerl; with an introd. by John W. Evans. 212p il $4.50 Dutton [10s 6d Methuen]

551.4 Geophysics

"Prof. Wegener's theory of the arrangement of ocean and continent is that the continents consist of rigid blocks of sial, or rock characterised by a high percentage of silica and alumina, which are floating partly submerged in a sheet of sima, or rock material composed mainly of silica and magnesia; that the existing continents are due to the breaking up of a once continuous sheet of sial, the fragments of which have drifted to their present positions in consequence of the earth's rotation; and that this drift occurs owing to the plasticity of the sima. Prof. Wegener believes that the continents have been moved for great distances even in geologically recent times, and he thereby explains many problems of geography, geology, climatology, biology, and geodetics." —Nature

"The favourable reception of Prof. Wegener's theory is significant of marked changes of opinion as regards the structure and history of the earth. It shows that the once widely adopted view that oceans and continents have always been in their present positions no longer hampers geological interpretation, and it marks the growing belief in the effective mobility of the earth's crust." J. W. Gregory

+ Nature 115:255 F 21 '25 1950w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:25 Ap '25

"Although one must sympathize with Wegener when one realizes the amount of labor he has spent upon the exposition of his theory, yet one may well feel that the established ideas in the field of geological history are left more firmly established than ever as a result of this assault upon them." T. T. Quirke

+ — N Y Tribune p8 S 20 '25 820w

"The careful reader will think of many questions and criticisms, but he must admit that the author is ingenious, fair, and stimulating." C. R. Longwell

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:896 J1 11 '26 620w

"Even though the theory is highly heterodox in the eyes of many American geologists, the book is, nevertheless, an able presentation of the subject. A great number of very suggestive facts have been marshalled in support of this interesting doctrine. Considerable leeway is, in all fairness, to be allowed the author in the presentation of such a revolutionary conception."

F. A. Melton

+ Science 62:14 J1 3 '25 800w

Springf'd Republican p5a Je 14 '25 80w

"It is a practical, helpful, almost indispensable handbook for leaders who have the social welfare of the community in their hearts."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Je 30 '25 320w

"Wegener moves the continents about like rafts on a lake, but his explanation is far too simple to be accepted without suspicion."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p148 Mr 5 '25 460w

WEIGALL, ARTHUR EDWARD PEARSE BROME. History of the Pharaohs; v 1, The first eleven dynasties. 328p il $6 Dutton [21s T. Butterworth]

932 Egypt—History, Ancient [25-13196]

"The spade of the archaeologist does not make the hand too horny to wield the pen of the historian. . . . Mr. Weigall [gives an] ingenious elucidation of the early dynastic annals of the Nile Valley and he has put the fruit of his researches into a form which makes it easy for the general reader to grasp the problems at issue and the method of their investigation. We think that he has made out a very strong case for fixing the beginning of the so-called First Dynasty within a few years of 3400 B.C."—Sat R

"Mr. Weigall has undoubtedly made an important contribution to the history of Egypt, but whether his work will prove of much immediate interest to the readers of this journal may be doubted." Kemper Fullerton

+ — Ann Am Acad 123:233 Ja '26 400w

"A valuable contribution to Egyptology, both for the student and the layman."

+ Booklist 22:154 Ja '26

"It is a real achievement to make a book accurate enough so that scholars will have to reckon with it in the history of Egypt in the future and so interesting that ordinary readers will be glad to peruse its 320 pages for the joy of reading."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 19 '25 380w

WEIGALL, ARTHUR E. P. B.—Continued

"A stimulating work, full of new reconstructions of early Egyptian history and new and peculiar spellings of kings' names. Many of the author's suggestion will require further testing."

+ — J Religion 5:657 N '25 40w

"Mr. Weigall's latest work is undoubtedly a very important contribution both to Egyptology and to its literature, but whether it is quite so important as he thinks is a question on which one is disposed to reserve judgment. Apart from his wide knowledge of his subject, the author brings two qualities to the writing of Egyptian history. One we may call dogmatism, for cocksureness is an impolite word. The other is something of a flair for making Egyptology 'popular.'"

+ — New Statesman 25:426 J1 '25 '25 600w

"We can only praise the lucidity and completeness with which Mr. Weigall has fitted into his frame work all that archaeology has revealed about Egyptian life in the third and fourth millenniums before Christ. His account of the great pyramid-builders of the Fourth Dynasty, for instance, is singularly clear and interesting, and the excursus on the mysterious Sphinx is an admirable piece of descriptive and elucidatory work. The illustrations are few but well selected, and Mr. Weigall's work promises to be the best history of ancient Egypt yet put at the disposal of the general reader in this country."

+ Sat R 140:103 J1 '25 '25 480w

WEIGAND, HERMANN J. Modern Ibsen; a reconsideration. 416p $3.75 Holt

839.82

25-16238

A critical study and interpretation of Ibsen's later work—the twelve social dramas beginning with "Pillars of society" and ending with "When we dead awaken." The dramas are taken up in turn and analyzed.

"This is a book in which all students of Ibsen will be deeply interested. It is a notable example of laborious, full, minute, imaginative and enthusiastic exposition. Whether it will carry conviction to the mind of the discriminating reader and accomplish its presumptive purpose of establishing the Norwegian dramatist on the pinnacle to which his idolaters would raise him, may be doubted. Professor Weigand, master of his subject in all its details, is an adroit, zealous and eloquent advocate, but does not always strengthen his case by the speculative arguments with which he seeks to support it." J. R. Towse

+ — Lit R p3 S 19 '25 400w

"It is certain, from Ibsen's letters that he made use of his personal psychology in drawing characters for his plays. It is possible to feel that they contain a story of aspiration and attainment and disillusionment on as grand a scale as is permitted to the dweller in the nineteenth century. This is to be inferred from Mr. Weigand's critique, read into, rather than out of it. But as he himself points out, Ibsen counts largely upon 'the creative response of his reader to complete what he finds suggested by the poet only in outline.' Mr. Weigand's criticism possesses the same stimulating quality." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 44:102 S 16 '25 1450w

"Professor Weigand presents his character interpretations with an insidious persuasiveness and an eminently readable prose style. Very frequently the reader finds himself in entire disagreement with the theories propounded, even while he admires the charm of their presentation. The 'creative interpretation,' which is the spirit of the book, seems occasionally too creative and too imaginative, too much the hatchment of the brain of the author and too little that of the brain of Ibsen." S: Rapport

+ — N Y Times p12 S 6 '25 1750w

"The impression should not be created that Professor Weigand is a closet analyst, or even a 'scholarly' one. The plays, for him, are living drama, and he has quite evidently neglected no opportunity to see them in action. His interpretation is vital and enthusiastic and whether or not you agree with many of his deductions, no student of these dramas can fail to find it interesting. His book is a stimulating, valuable and unusual contribution to genuine dramatic criticism." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Tribune p11 O 11 '25 960w

"Prof. Weigand, unlike his predecessors, concentrates on Ibsen and not on Ibsenism. Thus his book, without making the slightest claims to biography, emerges as an intrinsically compact delineation of the man Ibsen. A forceful and original book."

+ — N Y World p7m O 25 '25 360w

WEINBACH, MENDEL PENCO. Principles of transmission in telephony. (Engineering science ser.) 303p il $4 (17s) Macmillan

654.6 Telephone

25-714

"Presents a rigorous mathematical analysis of problems likely to arise in modern telephone practice. Primarily for advanced students in electrical engineering, but useful also to the designer."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y New Tech Bks 10:25 Ap '25

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:425 J1 '25

WEISSMANN, ADOLF. Problems of modern music; tr. by M. M. Bozman; with an introd. by Edward J. Dent. (Dent's international lib. of books on music) 244p il $2.50 Dutton

780.9 Music—History

Professor Weissmann studies the musical revolution of the last twenty-five years and the prophets of the new movements, analyzing the causes back of these movements. The composers whose work he specially studies are Anton Bruckner, Hans Pfitzner, Gustav Mahler, Richard Strauss, Claude Debussy and Arnold Schönberg. He also reviews the part played by each nationality in the musical development of the period.

"A trenchant, persuasive and admirably written introduction by Edward J. Dent prepares the reader for a more satisfactory book than Adolf Weissmann's 'Problems of Modern Music' turns out to be. For all its painstaking effort at thoroughness, it is narrow, parochial, involved, surprising in what it omits, as well as in the unnecessary matter that it includes, and by no means steadily illuminating in regard to the problems which it professes to study. . . Of course this book is not without serious interest and value, disappointing though one frequently finds it." Pitts Sanborn

+ — N Y Tribune p15 O 18 '25 650w

"Prof. Weissmann's alertness is amazing; he knows the music of every nationality and can express a judgment upon modern Finnish, Dutch, Polish or Norwegian musicians as confidently as upon more widely-known composers. His criticism is gentle but decided; the book will be of great value as an index of names and a guide to judgment."

+ Spec 135:412 S 12 '25 100w

"Professor Weissmann is a scholarly thinker, with abundance of artistic insight, and his pages are full of shrewd observations which are very stimulating and suggestive. Occasionally, of course, we may disagree but the fusion of personal experience with broad-minded detachment is very attractive, and we know of no other book covering all this ground so interestingly. Not indeed, that it is altogether easy reading. And Mr. Bozman's translation, excellently as much of it reads, wrestles at times rather inadequately with the difficulties."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p629 O 1 '25 650w

WELCH, WILLIAM HENRY. Public health in theory and practice. (William Thompson Sedgwick memorial lecture) 51p $1 Yale univ. press

614 Public health 25-10740

This historical review by the director of the School of hygiene and public health, Johns Hopkins university, is a summing-up of the evolution of the theory of preventive medicine and of public control of communicable diseases.

"Throughout the lecture shows the knowledge, the wisdom and the spirit to be expected from Dr. Welch."

+ Eng N 95:108 J1 16 '25 120w
N Y Tribune p8 S 27 '25 180w
Outlook 140:566 Ag 19 '25 20w

WELLS, CAROLYN (MRS HADWIN HOUGHTON). Anything but the truth. 319p $2 Lippincott

25-5770

The little town of Shoredale is shaken to its depths by the daring murder of its most prominent citizen, Austin Eldridge—a murder which covers a tragedy so sinister that for the sake of those interested it was best to reveal "anything but the truth." Young Peter Thorne, an amateur detective, for a time works patiently on the problem, but it is Fleming Stone, master detective, whose solution to the mystery brings peace and happiness to all concerned.

"Its characterization is woefully weak. But its plotting seems more sure."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 14 '25 250w
Cleveland p63 Je '25
N Y Times p9 F 8 '25 380w
N Y World p4m My 17 '25 100w
Springf'd Republican p5a Je 14 '25 100w

WELLS, CAROLYN (MRS HADWIN HOUGHTON). Daughter of the house. 317p $2 Lippincott

25-21210

The latest Fleming Stone story has for its situation the mysterious disappearance of both bride and groom an hour before the wedding, shortly followed by the equally mysterious murder of the bride's father. The obvious explanation of elopement has to be discarded at the outset and other theories prove as futile. Evidence is strong against the bride's uncle, who to clear his name from suspicion calls the great detective into the case. In an incredibly short time Fleming Stone solves the triple mystery.

Boston Transcript p5 N 14 '25 380w

"It is too bad that with such a fairly original cornerstone Miss Wells did not build a more substantial structure. The chronicle does not ring true. It fairly shrieks of improbability. But the true-blue devotee of detective fiction does not object to a lack of plausibility when he can have thorough enjoyment for two or three hours!" Harriet Henry

+ Int Bk R p58 D '25 200w

"The solution is ingenious and cleverly developed." C. P. Sawyer

+ Lit R p12 O 31 '25 220w

"The story of these manikins creeps rather slowly at first, but it is properly accelerated when the mysteries begin, and eventually it fulfills the one big necessity of a detective tale—that it keeps you sitting up in bed to finish it." Elizabeth Todd

+ N Y Tribune p14 N 15 '25 450w

WELLS, CAROLYN (MRS HADWIN HOUGHTON). Face cards. 334p $2 Putnam

25-9023

Stephen Clearman was known as the King of Clubs, because his was a well-known figure in so many and varied clubs. His wife, Carlotta, because of her inordinate love of diamonds, was called Queen of Diamonds. Gathered at the Clearman country home was a jolly house party, many of them friends of Clearman's daughter, Lulie. The talk usually drifted to Clearman's collection of masks, gathered from all parts of the world and the curse which the family was supposed to have inherited in obtaining certain masks. Then Stephen Clearman was found dead in his locked study. At the time of his death he had been wearing a particularly terrifying mask. Had the curse descended? Almost at the same hour Lulie disappeared and clues became so complicated that Tony Barron, the famous detective, had to be called.

Cleveland p88 S '25

Ind 114:619 My 30 '25 100w

"In spite of too many obvious attempts to mislead the reader, has a clever idea, and is decidedly the best of her recent detective stories." L. Moore

+ Int Bk R p471 Je '25 40w

"In her latest, 'Face Cards,' the solution is most ingenious and well concealed. This is a capital tale fully up to the writer's best standard." C. P. S.

+ Lit R p10 My 9 '25 160w

"There is a great deal of discussion, obviously ill-informed, upon magic generally and upon certain heathen masks which play an important rôle in the plot. The desire for enlightenment evinced by all the characters is a quality which is seldom provided for in English detective stories. Nevertheless, Miss Wells's style is quite incompetent, and the plot lacking in resource." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 38:119 O 17 '25 80w

"As one of the type of readers who prefers a logically foreshadowed solution, I found some of the denouement unfortunately far-fetched. The story, however, is ingenious and swift moving and more carefully written than many of the same author's previous successes." Ruth von Phul

+ N Y Tribune p11 My 17 '25 300w

"While the reader is prevented from divining the solution too easily, a proper number of clues are conscientiously given and the events nicely dovetailed together. The characters of the wealthy murdered man, his young wife and his daughter, as well as those of the servants and detectives are more than usually convincing and the story altogether adapted for effortless fireside reading."

+ Spec 135:614 O 10 '25 60w

"It is an excellent tale of its kind and goes merrily enough until all the complications are unravelled, quickly and surprisingly, in the last chapter."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p640 O 1 '25 180w

WELLS, CARVETH. Jungle man and his animals: introd. by Dr Frederic Augustus Lucas. 63p il $3 Duffield

Animals—Stories and legends 25-20955

Mr Wells was stationed for six years in the Malay jungles, and so these jolly animal stories for children are the result of his observations. There are stories of elephants, tigers, crocodiles and apes and of many of the smaller animals. The pictures are by Tony Sarg.

"Tony Sarg illustrates Mr. Wells's admirable book of jungle animals, and this time, strange to say, the pictures matter less than the text." Dorothy Graffe

+ Nation 121:602 N 25 '25 160w

"The Jungle Man' is a book that will make vivid the geography of the Eastern tropics; through the pages rush a procession of beasts and birds and insects presented with a clarity and economy that is startling. The value of the illustrations is uneven. Mr. Sarg has drawn a Malay that might have been an English schoolboy in pajamas, but the elephants are amazingly real. Yet in spite of the varied quality of his work he has taken over the book. It is Sarg from beginning to end." H. C. Forbes

WELLS, CARVETH—Continued

+ — N Y Tribune p10 O 25 '25 280w

WELLS, CARVETH. Six years in the Malay jungle; with a preface by Frederic Augustus Lucas. 261p il $3 Doubleday

915.95 Malay peninsula 25-26441

Sent to the Malay peninsula in 1913 to survey a railway route, Mr Wells was kept there by the fortunes of war for six years. His narrative of experiences in "Topsy Turvy Land" contains animal tales and jungle exploits so striking as sometimes to suggest nature fakers' and travellers' tales, but the accuracy of his natural history is vouched for in the preface by no less of an authority than F. A. Lucas of the American museum of natural history. Illustrations from photographs.

Booklist 21:336 Je '25

Bookm 61:470 Je '25 60w

"Whimsical and delightful. He has a keen sense of humor and an observant eye." S. L. Rich

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 2 '25 1100w
Cleveland p100 S '25

"It is not possible to set down here even a hint of all the astonishing things this book contains. It is thoroughly readable and entertaining, and for the seekers after dryer facts there is an appendix just packed with them. It is illustrated with many photographs."

+ Lit R p5 J1 25 '25 150w

"'Six Years in the Malay Jungle' is an amusing, but hardly instructive, book."

Nation and Ath 38:215 N 7 '25 80w

"An excellent example of the most amusing and interesting type of travel book, that of the 'tenderfoot' off the beaten track, viewing everything with the naive excitement of a child running from case to case of wonders in a museum. He has a strong sense of the dramatic, humour, and more than a passing interest in natural history; his book is genial talk set down on paper, rather than writing."

+ New Statesman 25:729 O 10 '25 280w

"Very sprightly and interesting."

+ N Y Times p3 My 3 '25 400w

"Carveth Wells writes not as one who went forth delegated to observe and report, but as one who undertook an adventure for the fun of it. An unusually entertaining book." Lawton Mackall

+ N Y Tribune p10 Ag 16 '25 300w

"A book of travel which is hilariously amusing. The illustrations from photographs, while excellent, put no strain on the imagination."

+ Outlook 140:114 My 20 '25 200w

St Louis p410 N '25

"Although Mr. Wells's style is fragmentary it is its freshness and sparkle, its pathos and humor, the scraps of description of softly gliding rivers, of elastic jungles, of native manners and native methods; the simple telling of accomplishment against the odds of the jealous jungle and the inertia of the native (he was surveying a railroad); it is this and the Alice point of view that gives us a most delightful three or four hours in the Malay Peninsula."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:438 D 19 '25 320w

"His sketches have all the fascination of fiction and the advantage of being based upon the facts of wild life. Mr. Sarg's illustrations delightfully supplement an interesting text."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:468 Ja 2 '26 60w

"Wading through swamps, and sometimes penetrating into places untrodden by man, Mr. Wells found the most fascinating work he had ever done, in spite of leeches, rain and fever; his account of this work is interesting and his enthusiasm is refreshing. Nor need one doubt his veracity, as he tells us some have done.

At the same time he adopts occasionally an exaggerated style which tends to inaccuracy."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p682 O 22 '25 440w

WELLS, FREDERIC DE WITT. Last cruise of the Shanghai; being the story of the teakwood boat over the Viking trail. 244p il $2.50 Minton, Balch & co.

910.4 Voyages and travels. Shanghai (sailboat) 25-6511

This is the absorbing narrative of a gallant attempt to sail in a small boat from Copenhagen to New York, via Iceland, Greenland and Labrador. The Shanghai was a Chinese built teakwood sailboat which had successfully made the 16,000 mile run from Shanghai to Denmark. Judge Wells, hearing of the exploit and fired to attempt a similar one in the same boat over Lief Ericson's route to America, hurried to Copenhagen and bought her. He provisioned her, and with a crew of four, including the Judge, his nephew and two sailors selected from a hundred volunteers, set sail for Bergen to meet his son. The account is given directly and without frills, but from the moment he sees the Shanghai thru Judge Wells' eyes, and steps aboard her with him, the reader feels a part of the daring adventure and shares its every episode from the daily minor mishaps to the final shipwreck and rescue off the coast of Nova Scotia.

Booklist 21:336 Je '25

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 25 '25 1150w

"Luckily Judge Wells and his shipmates escaped to compile this readable log. There is not a boastful word in it. And, surely, for a man to forsake the safety of the bench and embark on such an undertaking for the first time when well past his prime is just cause for self-congratulation." H. C. Burr

+ Lit R p6 Ap 4 '25 1050w

"It would be an act of supererogation to 'recommend' Judge Wells's little book. Faults of style might easily be found; it seems, if anything, not quite to do justice to the intrepid spirit of adventure which animated Captain and crew, or the hardihood with which the adventure was carried through. The Judge is overmodest. But there will be few, we hazard, but will be eager to read the narrative, and to feel the force which is surely there, if not always on the surface."

+ N Y Times p11 Mr 22 '25 1600w

"Judge Wells has given us a very readable and stirring account of a real adventure." H: Boston

+ N Y Tribune p7 My 31 '25 520w

"Gay it is, and amusing without artifice, and very human. And the shipwreck in a hurricane is vivid, thrilling."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:782 My 23 '25 250w

WELLS, GABRIEL. What is truth? with an introd. by J. L. Garvin. 123p $2.25 The author, 145 W. 57th st. N.Y. [6s Heinemann]

814 Versailles, Treaty of, 1919. European war, 1914-1918—Reparations [24-28734]

"This collected series of letters, published for the most part from time to time in American and English newspapers during the years 1914 to 1924, presents the opinions of a mildly conservative and strenuously idealistic observer on the events and personalities of that crowded period; it is given, in particular, to reflections on the enormities of the Treaty of Versailles and the failures of American and European statesmen in the crisis of 1918 and later."—Sat R of Lit

Boston Transcript p3 D 27 '24 650w

Reviewed by R: Le Gallienne
Int Bk R p188 F '25 460w

Reviewed by H. L. Pangborn
Lit R p7 Ap 4 '25 500w

New Statesman 24:90 O 25 '24 250w

"They have interest and value as part of what lawyers call res gestae, that is as current interpretations of the events of the war by a writer who is neither a politician nor a soldier."

+ N Y Times p14 D 14 '24 330w

Outlook 138:608 D 10 '24 30w

"Mr. Wells expresses himself with wit, logic, and always with fine humanity."

+ R of Rs 71:222 F '25 330w

"Flavored with common sense, wisdom, some wit, and a strong belief in moral rather than economic or political solutions to present-day problems; it is a terse and living, though brief, commentary on a crucial decade in the world's history." R. M. Eaton

+ Sat R of Lit 1:428 Ja 3 '25 700w

"On the whole, they show the intelligence and the point we expect in good newspaper correspondence. They hardly rise above that."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p634 O 9 '24 320w

WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE. Christina Alberta's father. 401p $2.50 Macmillan

25-17932

This is the story of a certain Mr Preemby, a retired laundryman and widower, and his daughter, Christina Alberta. On the death of his wife, who had owned and run both her husband and the Limpid Stream Laundry, he came to London with his daughter. Mr Preemby was a meek little ineffectual man and Christina Alberta the personification of the rebel youth of her day, but she loved her "Daddy." From much dreaming about the pyramids and the ancient Sumerians Mr Preemby became obsessed with the idea that he was the reincarnation of Sargon, king of kings, and that his mission was to redeem the world. He was only mildly mad but sufficiently so to get himself landed in a lunatic asylum from which he was with difficulty rescued. He was likewise rescued from his madness by a psychoanalyst who convinced him that as Sargon he was merely symbolizing. Shortly after the little man died of pneumonia.

Booklist 22:120 D '25

"A deftly constructed novel which may not be criticized on one score without being upheld upon another. For those of his admirers who applaud his attacks upon our social regulations there is plenty to applaud here, in Mr. Wells's denunciation of British insane asylums. For others who rejoice when he grows rhapsodic, philosophic and prophetic there are satisfactory pages at the end of the novel. Readers who like to be amused will be. For those who relish just a slight suggestion of what our Victorian forbears called 'impropriety,' this book will prove highly satisfactory. Into its pages Mr. Wells has unconsciously woven a curious silken emotionalism, the sweetness of age and a tender charity." D. F. Gilman

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 3 '25 1050w

"The book is full of the kind of thing which used to delight us in the Mr. Wells of a brighter, more innocent day, and which still does delight us in spite of our preoccupation with the ill-managed affairs of nations. This is not his greatest book, but it is done in the spirit of his most successful work." D. R.

+ Ind 115:533 N 7 '25 440w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

Int Bk R p793 N '25 1350w

"'Christina Alberta's Father' comes near to equaling 'Mr. Polly.' It is Mr. Wells at his whimsical, wistful and amusing best. One can but sit back and be grateful that Mr. Wells has given it to us and then—read the story again." W. O. T.

+ Lit R p3 N 7 '25 360w

"It is, perhaps, the best book that Mr. Wells has written, and if, in the last hundred pages, that sense of disappointment once more comes over us—as indeed it does—it is not because he has lured us into church or the lecture-room on the pretext that he was going to tell us a story. It is rather that his theme is too tremendous, too tragic, for him. It may sound ridiculous, but it is none the less true to say that in 'Christina Alberta's Father' Mr. Wells set out to write a modern 'King Lear.'" Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 37:734 S 19 '25 1100w

"The fertility of characterization, the liveliness of the action, the volubility of speech, the vivacity of the whole performance in short are undeniable." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 44:336 N 18 '25 240w

"Page after page is packed with Mr. Wells's choicest and most irresistibly compelling chuckles, those fine, frank, naughty, confidential, whimsical absurdities of exact description with which, in his happiest vein, he creates and cleanses a whole world. . . Mr. Preemby remains one of the essential, unmistakable, heroically conceived Wells characters, fit to be ranked with Mr. Hoopdriver and Mr. Polly and Art Kipps. But how to place the book as a whole is a different question. If it attempts too much, and does not quite pull it off, at least it demonstrates that Mr. Wells is still at the height of his powers. How warm, how vivacious, how delightful, how comradely, how compassionate is his genius!" P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 25:665 S 26 '25 1500w

"The fact is, in spite or because of his being a super-journalist and for all that he never seems quite to know what to do with the threads of his story at the end—the fact is that Wells is a literary artist of astounding deftness. He is admirably apt in putting into words his exceptional insight into life—exceptional insight which is not unconnected with a catholic taste for life itself and a sense of the enjoyment of life which embraces the sorrows as well as the joys."

+ N Y Times p10 S 27 '25 1150w

"Three-quarters of the book is vital, compelling, richly human; this tale of the ludicrous little laundryman who conceived himself to be a new Messiah moves dexterously between laughter and tears, but never relaxes the profound meaning which it embodies without explicitly stating. It is an almost great, certainly a notable, book." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Times p2 D 6 '25 150w

"He is not willing to let well enough alone, to tell this simple and charming tale. Mr. Wells must tack some sort of Utopia at the tail of this novel, as if he were a minister pointing a moral to his sermon. I do not mean that the book does not turn out satisfactorily. But it is too bad that one has to wade through a score of pages of rather rambling philosophy about 'the new world,' 'the Mind of the Race,' etc., etc., as a climax to a novel which no other man in England or America is capable of producing." Harrison Smith

+ N Y Tribune p1 O 4 '25 1850w

"Nothing could be more free-and-easy than the author's use of the persons of this romance—or novel—as mouthpieces for his latest animated comments on human experience and destiny. They all talk alike, and they all talk like H. G. Wells, with a certain perfunctory shifting of pitch and modification of accent to fit their sex and costume." H. W. Boynton

Outlook 141:356 N 4 '25 340w

"Mr. H. G. Wells appears to have returned to his best manner."

+ Sat R 140:291 S 12 '25 50w

"We grudge no man his seriousness, but surely Mr. Wells in the last twenty years has done enough, in prophetic and journalistic work, to say nothing of his history of the world, to convince the public that he is a man of science, a reformer, and altogether a very helpful person. We beseech him to relapse into the mere artist, to abandon himself to the promptings of his genius. We have so many writers who could give us Christina Alberta, so few who could give us Mr. Preemby."

+ Sat R 140:340 S 26 '25 1300w

WELLS, HERBERT G.—Continued

"Christina Alberta's Father" confronts us once more with the interesting paradox of the man and author H. G. Wells! Prides himself on being primarily scientist, not artist. Thinks himself a pursuer of truth through reason. Affects a manner cool, breezy, detached, smiling. Distrusts romance, avoids the happy ending; exalts change and progress and experiment; chuckles at sentiment, adores 'ideas'; admits cheerfully that he is a writer of tracts and treatises rather than a story-teller. And all the time, beneath his cool and chipper exterior, he remains a wistful seeker of romantic happiness." H. W. Boynton

Sat R of Lit 2:209 O 17 '25 900w

"Mr. H. G. Wells is not really by temperament or talent a prophet. He is something quite different; the best living writer of imaginative fiction in England. In Christina Alberta's Father he has fortunately abandoned what one of his own characters calls 'horrible Utopias,' and rejoices us again with those lovably meek and intelligent little men in whose creation he has specialized. One reads this delightfully human book with deep enjoyment mixed with something almost amounting to resentment with Mr. Wells for knowing too much."

+ Spec 135:459 S 19 '25 1050w

"Time irons out some of the more glaring inconsistencies and Edward Albert Preemby emerges as a lovably absurd and pathetic figure."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a D 27 '25 680w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p598 S 17 '25 750w

WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE. Year of prophesying. 352p $2 Macmillan [10s Unwin] 304 Social problems 25-2866

This volume consists of a year of Mr. Wells's journalistic writing, fifty-five articles altogether. They are discussions of human affairs today, the world over, and make a part of his long sustained adverse criticism of things as they are. Among the subjects of his criticism are the League of nations, British politics, French policy on the Ruhr, American lawlessness, and Fascism.

Booklist 21:330 Je '25

"Wellsian views are invariably stimulating, keen witted, profoundly rational; and his present lusty airing of them betrays no falling off in vigor of utterance."

+ Bookm 61:232 Ap '25 120w

Reviewed by S. L. Cook

Boston Transcript p4 F 7 '25 1650w

"The book has the defects of its qualities; it is timely in the sense that recent events, from the fall of 1923 to the fall of 1924, are vigorously discussed, but it suffers from that lack of perspective and proportion which is almost inevitable in this kind of writing." D. R.

+ — Ind 114:218 F 21 '25 1400w

"To many readers it will probably seem that Mr. Wells has only expressed his opinion about so much of the passing show as he was interested to observe. The dissent of today, however, especially if it is cleverly put and stoutly stuck to, is so likely to become the opinion of tomorrow that almost anyone who consistently challenges the existing order may turn out to have worn a prophet's mantle; and Mr. Wells is not only a dissenter but a consistent one." W. MacDonald

Nation 120:434 Ap 15 '25 1350w

Reviewed by G. L. Dickinson

Nation and Ath 36:554 Ja 17 '25 1150w

"He has skill, suspense, caustic qualities, a degree of specific knowledge, a sense of expository values, an editorial acumen. But he is altogether too dogmatic. While he undoubtedly knows his own mind, he never seems to be aware of his instinctive soap-box attitude. He seems tolerant; his approach to such things as the destructive egotism of France, the inefficient air service that is supposedly spanning Europe, the imperialistic ideal of the British Empire, the fatality of the attempt to smash Germany to pieces and the absurdity of attacking the established Bolshevik Government in Russia is broadminded and international in its essential expression. But that Wellsian sense of omniscient awareness hovers over it all."

+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 8 '25 700w

Reviewed by S. P. Sherman

N Y Tribune p1 Mr 22 '25 1800w

"There are many pages in this book of withering satire or irony, as in the article on Fascism and that on 'The Case of Unamuno.' By contrast, there is one passage of singular beauty about an airplane flight over Slovakia. There are, to be sure, things to condemn; but these are unimportant in comparison with the many more to praise."

+ — Outlook 139:504 Ap 1 '25 450w

"Mr. Wells writes with refreshing candor and without malice. His reflections are well worth reading."

+ R of Rs 71:559 My '25 150w

"His most serious limitation is an inadequate power of digestion. He has views on every subject, but they fit each other imperfectly or not at all. He is full of contradictions."

— Sat R 138:655 D 27 '24 700w

"Whatever else Mr. H. G. Wells is, or is not, he is a supreme journalist. . . . But this is a book of prophecy as well as of journalism, and here Mr. Wells is on weaker ground, for much of it is a book of prophecy of events which have already happened. Thus we may test the prophet. And here it seems to us Mr. Wells portrays his besetting weakness, that of an impatience with the slowness of the affairs of men so great that he cannot believe that anything so crude and clumsy as politics can have any significance whatever."

+ — Spec 134:124 Ja 24 '25 1100w

Spring'd Republican p7a Ap 19 '25 300w

"These articles are fifty-five revelations of the present state of Mr. Wells's vigorous, intolerant, aspiring mind. . . . But there is another human Mr. Wells who shows himself, but too rarely, in the pages of this book."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p881 D 25 '24 680w

WELSH, ROBERT GILBERT. Azrael, and other poems; preface by Charles Hanson Towne. (Appleton lib. of verse) 131p $1.50 (6s) Appleton

821

25-6881

"Robert Gilbert Welsh was born in Glasgow, but his life was spent in New York, where he was a successful dramatist and dramatic critic. He fought through the war, but was drowned a year ago in attempting to save a stranger off the coast of Bermuda. Mr. Towne, in the intimate tribute which he pays to his friend, describes him as 'cultured and kindly and wittily wise,' and adds that he 'saw not only through life with some almost uncanny clairvoyant vision, but around it,' and these qualities are very clearly reflected in this collection of his poetry."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"A volume containing poems of grace and dramatic power, and lyrics of beauty." J. F.

+ Bookm 61:471 Je '25 150w

"'Bob' Welsh will go down to posterity as a one-poem man—which after all is a happy fate, since most poets fail to reach posterity at all! Indeed, there is no surer basis for immortality than a lovely lyric. Azrael is a poem, which, assuredly, anthologists will never tire of quoting." B. E. Stevenson

+ Int Bk R p660 S '25 250w

"A delightful breath of old-world perfume blows from the pages of the slender volume, a leisurely setting down of rhymed fancies, with now and then a more quickening spark of genuine poetry." W. Berry

+ Lit R p11 Ap 18 '25 200w

N Y Times p6 Ap 5 '25 270w

"A great poet he was not. Rather he was a narrator in verse, and as such his work is skillful, charming, delightful." Lenore Marshall

+ N Y Tribune p8 My 10 '25 450w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman

Outlook 140:112 My 20 '25 50w

"Welsh's talent was not wholly obscure, for a number of his poems appeared in magazines which have high standards as to the verse they select."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:766 My 16 '25 250w

"It is vivid verse, direct and economical, and often, despite its appearance of candour, suggesting far more than it states."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p287 Ap 26 '25 400w

WENLEY, ROBERT MARK. Stoicism and its influence. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 194p $1.50 Marshall Jones [5s G. Harrap]

188 Stoics

25-1034

"In this volume, the twenty-first of the 'Our Debt to Greece and Rome' series, the author, a member of the faculty at the University of Michigan, outlines his views on Stoic philosophy. In his introduction, he sketches the background against which it rose, and gives a bird's-eye view of the situation in Greece prior to its conception. With the chapter entitled 'The Story of Stoicism,' he plunges into his subject and writes comprehensively and profoundly on the development of the movement and on the leaders who professed its tenets. 'Some Stoic Dogmas,' in the third chapter, are analyzed, and their component parts subjected to scrutiny. Theories and ideals and the application of them, take up the body of this chapter. Sequels and aftermaths are dealt with finally. The effects of Stoicism in other lands and in other centuries are recorded, as are its influences on later creeds and newer philosophers. Notes and a bibliography complete the volume."—Boston Transcript

"A brief but scholarly account of the origin and history of stoicism and an exposition of some of its dogmas."

+ Booklist 21:258 Ap '25

"It is easy to see that Professor Wenley is perfectly acquainted with his subject. In the comparatively brief space allotted him, he covers the five centuries between the earliest and the latest Stoics in a masterly fashion. The volume is one thoroughly worthy of inclusion in the scholarly series."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 10 '25 260w

"This little volume is no exception to the rule that Professor Wenley is always interesting and provocative of thought." Paul Shorey

+ Mod Philol 20:173 Ap '25 400w

"Prof. Wenley gives a sound and effective account of their beliefs and inconsistencies, and the changing world which modified them. He also takes his survey to quite modern times, quoting an American jurist. Fortunately, he is well up in the pertinent authorities, and does not show the indifference to English scholarship which has made some books of Our Debt to Greece and Rome look provincial. He quotes poetry effectively, which compensates for an academic style occasionally beyond English."

+ New Statesman 24:638 Mr 7 '25 350w

"Interesting book by a learned scholar."

+ Sat R 139:308 Mr 21 '25 260w

WENTWORTH, PATRICIA (MRS G. F. DILLON) (DELTA, pseud.). Annam Jewel. 315p $2 Small

25-7939

"Believing himself to be the possessor of the Annam Jewel, which he cannot see until he reaches his 25th birthday, Peter Waring weaves his whole future existence around this one possibility. He will have great power and wealth and will bring to the woman he loves the rarest of all gems. Imagine his dismay when he discovers that his jewel is a fake and the supposedly real one in the possession of a super-criminal, the one man in the world he has every reason to hate. Thus is begun a battle of keen wits, each man supposing the other to have the jewel he covets."—Springf'd Republican

"Miss Wentworth knows how to be effective. Without being really significant or tremendously well written, she has somehow conceived an opening scene that grips and carries one into the story."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 22 '25 130w

"Although the incidents are old the tale is mildly interesting and well told."

Lit R p7 S 26 '25 60w

"Miss Wentworth has written two good detective stories, but apparently someone has delighted in her love interest, and so in 'The Annam Jewel' she has decided to be sentimental."

Nation 121:738 D 23 '25 80w

"Altogether this is a very well done story, with some unusually 'possible' characters." Ruth Von Phul

+ N Y Tribune p11 S 27 '25 200w

Springf'd Republican p7a S 27 '25 180w

"With the usual machinery of thefts, mistakes, blackmailing, kidnapping, and motor-cars the story pursues the accustomed way. We have a good deal more praise for the minor plot. The story of the boy and girl contains both humour and pathos, while other characters, who are not jewel hunters, are drawn with dexterity and insight."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p670 O 23 '24 140w

WENTWORTH, PATRICIA (MRS G. F. DILLON) (DELTA, pseud.). Red lacquer case. 293p $2 Small [7s 6d Melrose]

24-27646

"When Sally Meredith's step-uncle, M. Fritz Lasalle, came to visit her in a small English town, he brought with him, in a red lacquer case, the formula for a deadly war gas which he had invented. A band of unscrupulous Russians were on his trail in search of the formula, and at the same time that the eccentric M. Lasalle disappeared the lacquer case was stolen. Except for her uncle, Sally was the only person who knew how to open the case, and the thieves abducted Sally in an effort to make her work the combination. They held her in a house in the country, and in spite of all their efforts she stoutly refused, of course, to do their bidding. Meanwhile Bill Armitage, formerly her fiancé and once again her suitor, began, with the aid of Scotland Yard, to search for her. But the situation, as well as the lives of those who are in it, is saved in time."—N Y Times

"It is all delectably thrilling." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 28 '25 680w

Cleveland p38 Ap '25

"Miss Wentworth possesses skill enough to make the book interesting reading and to enable the reader to finish it without being bored."

+ N Y Times p25 F 15 '25 400w

"There is a youthful spirit and spontaneity in the swift rush of 'The Red Lacquer Case,' of mingled gayety, sentiment, and breathless adventure which excuses much." Ethel Parton

+ Outlook 139:228 F 11 '25 70w

"The portrayal of one character in this otherwise quite normal detective-mystery yarn so stands out as to lift the book above its class. The other actors are little more than the familiar stock figures. But Etta, the former suffragette, who is a dupe and tool of the aggregation of conspirator-villains of the piece is conceived with a subtle understanding."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:530 F 14 '25 230w

Spec 133:66 J1 12 '24 60w

WENTWORTH, PATRICIA—Continued

"The finish of this clever detective story is totally unexpected and in piquant contrast to the preceding terrors."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p405 Je 26 '24 200w

WERNER, MORRIS ROBERT. Brigham Young. 478p il $5 Harcourt

B or 92 Young, Brigham. Smith, Joseph. Mormons and Mormonism 25-11448

The author of "Barnum" has found in the Mormon leader another American figure well fitted to his skill as a biographer. The book also carries out the task of recording the history of Mormonism and of its founder and prophet, Joseph Smith.

"Mr. Werner has done a skillful and a scholarly piece of biographical writing. He has dealt with a vast amount of material and his handling of it is as judicious as it must have been thorough. The narrative power which was evident in his Barnum shows here also, in the gift of drawing complicated threads together and of developing varied episodes so as to make the central figure stand out. One may not always agree with Mr. Werner's conclusions or sympathize with his attitude; but it must be admitted that the book is profoundly interesting and gives a vivid picture of an important episode in American history." Gamaliel Bradford

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ag '25 620w
Booklist 22:31 O '25

"Mr. Werner has again written a biography that calls for much praise. It is a better book than his 'Barnum,' though perhaps not quite so readable. The material, however, was heavier. Mr. Werner has great ability in reconstructing character; but he seems to me to fail in this book when he tries to show the sweep of the period. Yet here, surely, is the story of a revolt from Puritanism worldwide in its effect. Lovers of biography, those interested in religion, or in the complicated phases of great character, will find 'Brigham Young' essential." J. F.

+ — Bookm 61:696 Ag '25 200w

"Mr. Werner has depicted him with great acumen. He sees all sides of this enigmatic figure, from ruthlessness to humor. His adventures, his policies, his administrative acts are all here. It is not only an able but an important biography of a man who had a far greater part in the development of this Nation than that with which common understanding credits him. Good or bad, Brigham Young was a vital figure, and he is here vitally depicted." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 13 '25 2600w

Reviewed by J. E. Chamberlin

Boston Transcript p7 N 25 '25 100w

"A genial but just and not unsympathetic biography of the Mormon Moses." Cleveland p80 J1 '25

Ind 115:51 J1 11 '25 1150w

"Vigorous, impartial, dramatic study. Mr. Werner's book is notable, both as a double biography of Young and Smith and as a history of Mormonism; and it deals with dramatic adequacy and fidelity with a remarkable phase of the great American epic." T. Willis

+ Int Bk R p602 Ag '25 1850w

"It was time that these facts should be recognized and a fully adequate biography be written of him by a hand competent to do it. Mr. Werner has performed this service with entire impartiality and not as a propagandist for either side. And his book is an absorbing story." C. W. Thompson

+ Lit R p6 J1 3 '25 2200w

"On the whole, Werner has done exceptionally well in presenting Young's portrait. Especially happy is his frequent use of Young's sermons, which give the best clue to his mentality and philosophy." Kimball Young

+ Nation 121:144 J1 29 '25 700w

"It is well-informed, frank, sceptical, amusing—very much the biography of to-day. If Mr. Werner fails to hold one's interest for long, however, it is partly because Young is only superficially interesting."

+ — Nation and Ath 38:sup250 N 14 '25 120w

"Mr. Werner's performance as organizer of this curious page of history is a little disappointing. He is good-humored, sympathetic, tolerant to be sure, as too few of the chroniclers of Mormonism seem to have been before him; he is fair and painstaking, he comes back from long research into dark places with armfuls of rich fodder for the mind, but this harvest has not been quite thoroughly enough chewed; too often his ironic comment is merely a means of connecting one long quotation with another; too often these shafts of irony are found sunk in the easiest of marks (for the Mormons are hopelessly open to ridicule); most of our psychological curiosities remain unsatisfied, and he seems to follow his subject rather than to lead it." Robert Littell

+ — New Repub 43:129 Je 24 '25 2800w

"This career and personality make a gorgeous subject for the biographer. If Mr. Werner falls short of his own previous success with P. T. Barnum, the reason is that he has not disengaged his man from the mass of material, and from the detailed annals of the Church. Fifty pages of packed historical summary would have made an adequate, and a fascinating, introduction to Brigham Young, who might then have been hewn in the round. As it is, the book is packed with interest—the record of an extraordinary human being and a wonderful social experiment."

+ — New Statesman 26:116 N 7 '25 1150w

"Interesting as it is, the book is not at all superficial. The reader does not need the staggering bibliography which is affixed in order to perceive that Mr. Werner has studied everything that is to be had on the topic of Mormonism, and a good many collateral and distantly related subjects as well. He has gone deeply into the whole thing and has been at great pains to separate truth from error. He has taken very little for granted. He writes with a cool, somewhat ironic detachment and apparently from the standpoint of one who is no great believer in any Church or revelation, least of all those of the Latter-Day Saints; yet his attitude is not unsympathetic. . . Mr. Werner is beyond most of his fellows in that he is able to be dramatic and picturesque while being at the same time studious, thorough and accurate." C. W. Thompson

+ N Y Times p1 Je 14 '25 1750w

Reviewed by S. P. Sherman

N Y Tribune p1 Je 7 '25 1650w

"Mr. Werner is not so intent upon eliciting the reader's smile as he was throughout his 'Barnum.' He catches the epic quality in the story of the great folk-migration from Illinois to Utah, and he realizes that Young, for all his pomposity, coarseness, materialism and lack of principle, had qualities of leadership which made him almost a statesman. . . Toward the end the book is devoted in the main to the great outstanding feature of Mormonism, socially considered, polygamy. Mr. Werner treats it in detail. There is nowhere in print a better account of its beginnings, its workings, and its slow and inevitable decay." Allan Nevins

+ N Y World p4m Je 7 '25 1400w

Reviewed by Woodbridge Riley

Outlook 140:592 Ag 26 '25 1650w

Pratt p38 autumn '25

"To all except a half-dozen readers whose studies may have acquainted them with America's most peculiar heresy, Mr. Werner's life of Brigham Young will bring almost as much amazement as delight. For in attempting the first contemporary history of Mormonism, the author of 'Barnum' has struck a vein incomparably richer than even that splendid biography afforded him." Bernard DeVoto

+ Sat R of Lit 1:853 Je 27 '25 1000w

"To those who like to see the wheels of the human heart and mind go round, it is the beginning of Mr. Werner's book that will prove the most interesting."

+ Spec 135:sup830 N 7 '25 650w

"The author's point of view is that of the detached historian, though he permits his sense of humor to exercise when the grotesque incongruity of certain claims of his heroes is particularly glaring, and the freshness and vivacity of his style take the essentially historical work well out of the dry-as-dust class."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 30 '25 1500w

"Werner bows his hero in and out with no other emotions than the historian's passion for fact, the biographer's sense of the readable, and his own sense of humor. His humor, like a two-edged sword, cuts both ways, furnishing meat for low brows and high brows at the same stroke. For those who come for amusement, there is a laugh on every page. But the author cuts much deeper by introducing Brigham as statesman, pioneer, and organizer." Nels Anderson

+ Survey 54:502 Ag 1 '25 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 21:199 J1 '25

"It reveals again the penchant for the picturesque, the eye for interesting detail, the gift for broad sweeping narrative that made this author's 'Barnum' such a marked success. I cannot, however, feel that the author's gift for characterization equals his narrative power." E. Wagenknecht

+ — Yale R n s 15:410 Ja '26 280w

WEST, ELIZABETH, pseud. See Wilson, Margaret.

WESTON, GEORGE. Beauty prize. 275p $2
Dodd 25-12850

A trip to the Mediterranean for three months—Naples, Cairo, the Holy Land, London, Paris—sixty-four days of personally conducted travel with all the luxuries and side trips. That was the beauty prize! And it was awarded to Ethel Pennington of Milford, but Ethel happened to be the twin of Dot. Two more beautiful and irrepressibly jolly girls one could not imagine—alike as two peas! But since Ethel would not think of going on such a trip without Dot, there was only one thing to do—both go on one passage. And this is the story of their going. It was a wonderful trip for the twins, but a bit harrowing for their friends. Even the twins, as they neared the end of the cruise, began to feel rather uncomfortable, for the most unexpected things happened. There was Bob, for instance, who fell in love with Dot—or was it Ethel—and dear old Eric who was completely captivated by Ethel's—or were they Dot's eyes? By the time they arrived in London the situation was somewhat acute, and the twins began to tremble. But here entered a benignant lawyer with a mysterious document, a munificent legacy, even a title, and congratulations were in order!

"A welcome bit of literary fluff always amusing and never wholly betraying its impossibilities to any reader who is willing to be taken in and most of us are. Altogether it will give a few delectable hours to any reader who does not barricade himself against it." S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p3 J1 18 '25 680w

Cleveland p124 D '25

"Charming, trifling, genial: such a book as 'The Beauty Prize' will recommend itself to those people who prefer to escape from the dust, heat and worry of actual life into a world which doesn't talk obstetrics, where love is rewarded and all beginnings end well."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 28 '25 750w

N Y Tribune p9 J1 19 '25 150w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ag 23 '25 260w

Wis Lib Bul 21:202 J1 '25

WEYMAN, STANLEY JOHN. Queen's Folly.
357p $2 Longmans [7s 6d Murray] 25-17936

The household at Queen's Folly is not a happy one. Lord Ellingham's inconstancies have estranged his wife and their children are running wild. Rachel, the new governess, is only nineteen, and this is her first position. Handicapped by youth and inexperience she nevertheless makes a brave effort to manage her unruly charges and win their good will. The tutor's sly attentions do not make things easier, and what with Lady Ellingham's jealous suspicions and Captain Dunstan's gruff advice poor Ruth has a difficult time. The story recounts the year's misadventures at Queen's Folly and their outcome.

"Falls short of Mr. Weyman's best."

— Booklist 22:165 Ja '26

"Sometimes the motives upon which the characters in the story act are somewhat artificial and unconvincing. Nevertheless, we may forgive many short-comings in the story because of its quick-moving action, its fine adherence to the spirit of its time, its apt portrayal of the men and women who fill its pages, its conversation which seems to be the talk of human beings and not merely the words of a novelist's puppets." E. F. Edgett

+ — Boston Transcript p3 O 3 '25 1550w

Reviewed by H. A. Jaggard

Lit R p5 O 24 '25 160w

"There is much rest and comfort to be gained by reading one of Mr. Weyman's well-planned, well-regulated, unexacting stories of the eighteenth century. There is also plenteous excitement, comfortable to the reader however much it cost Rachel, Captain Dunstan is an excellent portrait of the prematurely aged and hardened naval officer of Miss Austen's day."

+ Nation and Ath 38:124 O 17 '25 250w

"The story is somewhat unsophisticated for Mr. Weyman: at times, indeed, one feels that it should have been published at Christmas time as a book for girls. The adventures, too, are fewer and less exciting than one expects in this author's romances, though the attempted abduction and rescue of the heroine are stirring enough. As usual, however, Mr. Weyman, though not at the top of his form, gets the right atmosphere of his period, which in the present case is round about 1800."

+ New Statesman 26:90 O 31 '25 260w

"A tale that will appeal alike through the pleasantness of its plot, the wealth of its detail and the evenness of its construction."

+ N Y Times p20 S 27 '25 650w

"Many, too many words are used to tell a tale which has very little action and uninteresting characterization."

— N Y Tribune p17 O 25 '25 140w

"A typical costume novel with the essential ingredient—spirit."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a D 13 '25 180w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p598 S 17 '25 560w

WHARTON, ANTHONY, pseud. See McAllister, A.

WHARTON, MRS EDITH NEWBOLD (JONES). Mother's recompense. 342p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

25-8793

Eighteen years before the story opens, Kate Clephane had left her husband and three-year-old daughter for a man who was nothing to her but a means of escape from the duress of her marriage. This man and his memory soon vanished out of her life and she took up her residence abroad, drifting from place to place. Then after the lapse of years she met Chris Penno, a young artist, who stirred whatever capacity for love she had and then left her. She continued her drifting till summoned back to New York to take up her life with her daughter, now fatherless and an heiress. Mrs

WHARTON, EDITH N.—Continued

Wharton is chiefly concerned with the delicate intricacies of Mrs Clephane's relations with her daughter, and the predicament in which she finds herself when Chris Fenno appears as Anne's lover.

"In many respects The Mother's Recompense is Mrs. Wharton at her best. It has the distinction of style, the wit, the emotional intensity, and under the sardonic manner that repels the sentimental reader, it has the deep pre-occupation with the ethical problem, and the sense of the ideal immanent in the actual, even in the shabby and shoddy actual, so characteristic of her fine art." E. W. Hawkins

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf J1 '25 500w

Booklist 21:385 J1 '25

"The Mother's Recompense' is, it seems to me, the best story Mrs. Wharton has ever written. The plot is simple; but in the character of Kate Clephane we have delicacy and complication of emotion that is dramatic and poignant. Mrs. Wharton tells this story swiftly, and with her usual command of masses of dialogue." J. F.

+ Bookm 61:469 Je '25 300w

"A novel that is fine and deep. Mrs. Wharton is never haphazard. She is delicately, strongly consistent. Her narrative and characters grow equally and together in her hands, under her very plastic art. It is this unity of the development of character and situation, this normal and always finely balanced progress, which is conspicuous among her many literary virtues." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 2 '25 1350w

"The Mother's Recompense is written with the indulgent perceptive irony of a refined woman of the world whose insight remains pure and light and whose intellect carries with perfect ease its somewhat familiar burden. The respect one continues to feel for Mrs Wharton's lucidity and skill can no longer compensate one, however, for a certain quality of thinness increasingly evident in each of her successive volumes."

+ Dial 79:431 N '25 80w

"Competent, skillful work, adequately chiseled and polished like a painting by a competent, but rather tired, artist."

+ Ind 114:619 My 30 '25 120w

"That 'The Mother's Recompense' is one of Mrs. Wharton's best novels, few will deny. I am inclined to place it above 'The Age of Innocence', because its central situation is one which transcends periods and classes; its tragedy is not one confined to any one rank of life, nor to any particular time." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p463 Je '25 480w

"A novel which is as much concerned with situation as with character. The tale from beginning to end is handled with a technical skill approached by only one other book we have read this year, 'The Great Gatsby.' 'The Mother's Recompense' is by no means a second 'Age of Innocence.' One is conscious of being led, by the skill of the author, into believing that there is more in it than meets the eye. The material has been spread a bit thin; one is conscious at times, despite the fine, hypnotic writing, of a certain thinness." L. Bromfield

+ Lit R p3 My 9 '25 1250w

"In all her long and honorable career Mrs. Wharton has selected no theme more difficult than that of A Mother's Recompense, and has never more signally triumphed over the difficulties. This is very nearly the best novel she has written." H. C. Harwood

+ Living Age 326:123 J1 11 '25 650w (Reprinted from London Outlook)

"She fails to reach a katharsis because, one might almost think, she is determined by an act of the will not to reach it; to maintain, rather, the intensity of tragedy at all cost, when it is past its term and our endurance. Yet the qualities which have contributed to this failure are high ones; and there can be nothing but praise for Mrs. Wharton's beautiful style, her integrity of imagination in her great scenes, and the sincerity of her art." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 37:328 Je 13 '25 280w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 43:79 Je 10 '25 580w

"Mrs. Wharton is not at her best in The Mother's Recompense. Her tone has become almost arch; she indicates her nuances; she underlines her delicacies of artistic perception. And she presents as of enormous importance issues which somehow seem essentially trivial. Still, Mrs. Wharton always writes well, and holds the interest." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 25:230 Je 6 '25 180w

"The features of the narrative are 'opaque and guarded' ever; 'The Mother's Recompense' is no blustering tale, easily as it might have been (and surely would have been) turned into melodrama in unskillful hands. But likewise are those features ever made 'luminous and transparent' by the incandescence of Mrs. Wharton's imagination, fed in turn by a heat and force, of what intensity one's own experience furnishes the thermal measure." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 26 '25 1650w

"This is a book which one can heartily recommend every American novelist to read before setting to work on his next novel. What strikes one first in 'The Mother's Recompense' is the perfection of the design with its dainty intricacies all so perfectly subordinated to its simple unity of effect, and the neatness and completeness of the workmanship." S. P. Sherman

+ N Y Tribune p1 My 17 '25 1750w

"Mrs. Edith Wharton, with that rare and precise art of spiritual adjustment that is so peculiarly her own, has ventured upon a theme in 'The Mother's Recompense' that might easily have turned out to be as candidly sentimental as the title of the book. It is a tribute to her cleverness that she has skirted the low beaches of sentimentality throughout and kept well within the somewhat tempestuous sea of a passionate imbrogio that is distasteful in itself, but which becomes, as a matter of fact, an affair of lifted tragic intensity. Mrs. Wharton has expended all of her art upon Kate Clephane and her predicament, and because of this she is the only figure in the novel who stands out as distinct and absolutely recognizable. All of the rest of them approach a shadowiness that but sets off the central figure the more." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y World p7m My 3 '25 700w

"One misses in this novel Mrs. Wharton's lighter and more satiric touch, but must admit that it would be out of place. And we have a keen study of a class of Americans abroad who live in 'a state of inaccuracy, excitement, and inertia.'" R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 140:69 My 13 '25 130w

"It is a novel so intelligently conceived, so conscientious and so competent in workmanship, that I feel reluctant to tell the whole truth about it, which is that it is largely an underlining of the obvious, a well-staged drama in which the expected always happens." Gerald Bullett

+ Sat R 139:588 My 30 '25 450w

"Many will be moved by the interest of the plot and the poignancy of certain scenes in this novel. As narrative it has its high merits. But as a novel it must disappoint Mrs. Wharton's admirers because she has chosen a subject beyond the powers of all but a few of our contemporaries, though not beyond her own, and has not wished to lift her story to meet its implications. Her imagination has been more tragic than her will." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 1:771 My 23 '25 550w

"Mrs. Wharton's new novel is a fine, sober piece of work; and it shows how good a novel can be written when an experienced author has no particular inspiration. For undoubtedly Mrs. Wharton has chosen a theme and embroidered it. She has not been driven to write; she is not transcribing from imagination. No, the novel is not one of her best. None the less, her tact and graciousness of style in building flesh upon the bones of her plot are unfailing and delightful."

+ Spec 134:940 Je 6 '25 320w

"Mrs. Wharton's touch has never been more certain than in this swiftly moving, admirably finished story."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p332 My 14 '25 560w

"The theme is disagreeable, the telling skillful, the human interest particularly intense."

+ Wis Lib Bul 21:170 Je '25

WHARTON, MRS EDITH NEWBOLD (JONES). Writing of fiction. 178p $2 Scribner

808.3 Fiction 25-21277

Mrs Wharton treats the practice of fiction in four divisions: general considerations of subject, form and style; the art of the short story; constructing a novel; character and situation in the novel. Her illustrations are drawn with rare discrimination from a wide range of reading. She has added to her discussion of the technique of fiction a criticism of the art of the late Marcel Proust.

Booklist 22:153 Ja '26

"They seem to be random comments, issued broadly to delight all who are interested in the technique of writing. The writer who knows his craft will find much to interest and aid him in the author's illumination of a score of fiction's stumblingblocks."

+ Ind 116:23 Ja 2 '26 100w

"In criticism as in creation she is a master-craftsman; and in this criticism she has supplied the standard by which she would desire to have her creation measured." Brander Matthews

+ Int Bk R p731 O '25 1650w

"We have here a brilliant example of Mrs. Wharton's power of constructive criticism. These essays may well be used as a textbook on the writing of fiction, in spite of their author's scoffing at modern fiction courses." Helen Wallerstein

+ Lit R p11 N 28 '25 240w

New Statesman 26:supxxii D 12 '25 120w

"Her little book serves admirably as an introduction to the general problems of narrative art. It may be pondered profitably by readers of fiction, and writers will find it at least provocative. Perhaps it is not too much to hope that Mrs. Wharton, at some future time, may be disposed to produce, for the benefit of both, a more comprehensive discussion of the esthetic of fiction." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Times p2 N 15 '25 2000w

"The book offers much valuable information and suggestion for all serious students and readers of modern fiction."

+ Outlook 142:34 Ja 6 '26 300w

"It is a direct and thoughtful piece of communication; a little book consisting of chapters on fiction and its development in general; on telling a short story; on character and situation in the novel; and on Marcel Proust."

+ Spec 135:836 N 7 '25 200w

"The fact that her study is slight and scrappy—a bundle of notes rather than a closely-woven argument—makes it disappointing, and we cannot accept it as a companion volume to Mr. Lubbock's Craft of Fiction. But Mrs. Wharton has practised and reflected upon her art too long and too scrupulously not to give us some really valuable comments on the novel." J. B. Priestley

+ Spec 135:1047 D 5 '25 1100w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 3 '26 750w

"We are not either surprised or disappointed to find that a great deal of Mrs. Wharton's instruction is negative. A novelist of her achievement and her fine taste can make her negatives very far-reaching; and so thoughtful a woman of letters can give very good reasons for them. If her remarks upon the right use of dialogue and upon the choice and employment of the 'illuminating incident' are well weighed, there will be more novels that are truly 'books,' and fewer of which the significance is hard to find."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p878 D 17 '25 700w

WHEELER, HOMER WEBSTER. Buffalo days; forty years in the old West: the personal narrative of a cattleman, Indian fighter and army officer; with an introd. by James G. Harbord. 369p il $4 Bobbs

B or 92 West—History. Frontier and pioneer life. Indians of North America—Wars 25-20712

"Fifty-three years ago Homer W. Wheeler, a descendant of Revolutionary stock, left his boyhood home in Vermont for the great plains. He became a part of that wild life, marching, scouting, fighting, raising cattle, riding to the rescue of Sandy Forsyth in the Arickaree fight, known and trusted by Sheridan, Merritt, Crook and Mackenzie. For his volunteer part in the desperate fight on Sappa Creek, Kansas, in April, 1875, he was offered a commission in the Fifth Cavalry and, accepting it, marched, fought and bivouacked with that famous regiment retiring as a colonel in September, 1911. Colonel Wheeler's story as told in these pages is the simple narrative of a fine soldier who knew the people and the scenes of which he writes."—Introd.

"His book is crammed with interesting material, filled with keen character sketches, starred with vigorous accounts of bloody encounters. It is true that Colonel Wheeler was never cut out to be a writer and that his prose leaves somewhat to be desired, but, save a captious reviewer, who would think of this while reading his book?"

+ N Y Times p7 N 15 '25 250w

R of Rs 72:556 N '25 80w

"We are indebted for the stirring saga of his life, told honestly and therefore admirably told." J. G. Neihardt

+ Sat R of Lit 2:445 D 26 '25 720w

WHELPLEY, JAMES DAVENPORT. Reconstruction. 383p $3.50 (12s 6d) Funk

330.94 Reconstruction (European war). Europe—Economic conditions 25-8805

In his summing up of the economic conditions of the nations most affected by the World war, Mr Whelpley analyzes the powerful forces at work in national and international affairs and shows that readjustment is much more than a matter of economics. The emotion of fear he says, is the dominating influence thruout the world today, and politics, prejudice, passion and self-interest play powerful parts. He compares international trade before and after the war, also emigration with immigration, and emphasizes the power and responsibility of the United States in international affairs.

"An interesting analysis of the economic conditions in Europe up to the close of 1924, marked by shrewd judgment and a degree of objectivity that is rarely found in this class of literature." A. P. U.

+ Am Econ R 15:498 S '25 400w

Am Pol Sci R 19:656 Ag '25 30w

"Unfortunately the arrangement of subject matter is not clear. The same subjects are treated in different places and there is a considerable amount of repetition. Also the typographical errors are numerous." E. M. P.

+ Ann Am Acad 121:194 S '25 150w

"It is unfortunate that a book which starts out so bravely should end so inconclusively."

+ Bookm 61:710 Ag '25 150w

Boston Transcript p5 My 9 '25 800w

"Readers desiring a full, lucid and interesting survey of the whole reconstruction situation will find it in Mr. Whelpley's volume." E. L. Shuman

+ Int Bk R p414 My '25 1000w

WHELPLEY, JAMES D.—Continued

Reviewed by Arthur Warner
Nation 121:173 Ag 5 '25 300w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky
N Y Times p4 My 10 '25 1900w

"Mr. Whelpley's book will help give the ordinary reader a sensible and intelligent, even if not profound, idea of what the war did to Europe, what has been accomplished toward recovery and what stands in the way of a rebuilding of that international economic life by which alone Europe can exist." H: R. Mussey
+ N Y Tribune p5 Ag 9 '25 620w

Reviewed by E. J. Young
N Y World p6m My 3 '25 550w

Outlook 139:623 Ap 22 '25 30w

"Business men, economists and public officials will here find information of the most practical value, for Mr. Whelpley has not limited himself to the extraction of material from public documents, but in every country which he visited he made it a point to form a direct contact with 'the man in the street' and to learn his reactions to the process of international reconstruction."

+ R of Rs 71:559 My '25 120w

St Louis p336 S '25

Springf'd Republican p12 O 14 '25 1000w

"Mr. Whelpley has done well in giving to the world, in a concise and inexpensive form, a clear diagnosis of the sickness which afflicts Europe, with certain suggestions for its cure."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p374 Je 4 '25 1350w

WHERRY, GEORGE EDWARD, ed. Cambridge and Charles Lamb. 90p $2 Macmillan [5s Cambridge univ. press]

B or 92 Lamb, Charles

"The book is a memorial account of six dinners given at Cambridge in memory of Charles Lamb. These dinners were held annually from 1909 to 1914, having been organized originally by Charles Sayle, a scholar and admirer of Elia. The book carries the following papers: 'The Cambridge Charles Lamb Dinners,' by George Wherry; 'Cambridge and Charles Lamb,' an address delivered by E. V. Lucas at the 1910 dinner; 'The Earliest Charles Lamb Dinner,' an address delivered by Sir Edmund Gosse at the 1912 dinner, and papers on 'George Dyer' and 'Dyer's Friend,' by George Wherry."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p7 S 23 '25 700w

"It is a highly diverting little volume."

+ Lit R p5 O 10 '25 120w

New Statesman 25:484 Ag 8 '25 160w

"A pleasant little book about Lamb's connexions with Cambridge and the dinners in his honour which were organized by Charles Sayle."

+ Sat R 139:592 My 30 '25 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p331 My 14 '25 850w

WHERRY, WILLIAM MACKEY. Public utilities and the law. 337p $3 Writers pub. co.

380.16 Public utilities 25-17127

A simple exposition of the rights of public utility companies to make and obtain profitable rates for their services without state interference.

"Mr. Wherry has written an excellent legal analysis of the law of public utilities as it relates to the question of rates, but like all legal analyses written by a member of the bar or an occupant of the bench, it suffers too much from the 'on the other hand' attitude to please the result-seeking engineer."

+ Eng N 95:643 O 15 '25 520w

"His volume should do much, not simply to inform its readers of what has happened and is happening in the field it covers, but also to bring about a better attitude of public utilities companies and the public toward each other to the great advantage of both." R. J. Davis

+ Lit R p13 O 31 '25 200w

WHITE, BENJAMIN. Smallpox and vaccination. (Harvard health talks) 90p $1 Harvard univ. press [4s 6d Milford]

614.47 Smallpox. Vaccination 24-30164

"Dr. White, a Harvard Professor connected also with the Public Health Department of Massachusetts, contributes to this series, based on public lectures to the Medical School of Harvard, an essay on small-pox. He describes the disease, discusses the practice of vaccination, and shows that compulsory vaccination is the only certain means of safeguarding the community."—The Times [London] Lit Sup

"This little book is particularly timely. It gives a fair history of smallpox and a good history of vaccination. It is written for laymen, but the health officer and physician will find it useful in furnishing material for bulletins and for public health talks. We trust that it will have a wide circulation." M. P. R.

+ Am J Pub Health 15:815 S '25 100w

"A compact reliable statement."

+ Booklist 21:293 My '25

N Y Tribune p12 Ja 11 '25 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p122 F 19 '25 60w

"Brief and authoritative little book."

+ Wis Lib Bul 21:54 F '25

WHITE, EDWARD LUCAS. Helen. 250p il $2.50 Doran

Helen of Troy 25-10420

The heroic legend of Helen of Troy is here retold in seven episodes—the seven crises of her life. In each of these Aithrae, wife of King Aegeus of Athens and mother of King Theseus of Attica, who became Helen's bonds slave and foster-mother, plays a prominent part.

Booklist 22:36 O '25

"Mr. White has sought to humanize Greek mythology and to a great extent he has succeeded. All his heroes and his heroines are depicted by him as real flesh and blood beings. . . . He has made actual men and women of these Greeks and Trojans; he has brought life and humanity into the ancient world." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 6 '25 1300w

"In bringing out this book, Mr. White has proved himself, once more, both a scholar and a pleasing writer."

+ Ind 115:52 Jl 11 '25 160w

"Mr. White has essayed to rewrite Homer and Vergil from the modern (as we say) slant. He attempts to make the love of Helen and Paris plausible, and to make them and their companions talk as Fifth Avenue talks. The modern method strikes against the antique theme with something less than admirable results. The author's modernized Helen may be more credible to the girls who peck at typewriters than Homer's Helen was. But she would have a dismal time in the ship-launching business." Morris Markey

— Int Bk R p547 Jl '25 550w

"It may be admissible for the purpose of inducing the mob to read to make an ancient Greek talk Bowery slang; it may be admissible, for the same high purpose, to slacken from time to time in the use of correct grammar. Neither the commission of slang nor the omission of grammar, however, succeeds in its presumable purpose. To the present reviewer it seems that the author has fallen between two stools—the desire to impart classical wisdom and at the same time to write down to the level of a supposedly ignorant audience. Neither Helen nor any one of her husbands ever comes to life.

There is no color, no feeling, no reality. The author does not for a single moment get under the skin of any of the characters." A. H. Gibbs
— Lit R p2 Je 6 '25 500w

N Y Times p8 My 31 '25 920w

"Mr. White's story is very tame. What we remember of it are the antiquarian passages, which are invariably informing, and which convey information not generally accessible to the novel-reading public. There is a sprightly narrative genius in all the old Helen fragments which we are sorry to see smoothed out or ignored in the present book." J. Erskine
— + N Y Tribune p3 Je 14 '25 1050w

"The romance seems to lie lifeless and inert in this author's hands. He writes just as the modern authors write—no better and no worse. His technique is not below the level of present magazine fiction. But he simply founders over the necessity of dealing with a pure romance." M. M.
— N Y World p9 J1 5 '25 120w

"There is a singular enjoyment to be had from this short and spirited narrative."
+ Outlook 141:675 D 30 '25 180w

"Mr. White explains disarmingly in his afterword that 'Helen' is the outcome of years of pondering on the possible historic basis of the Troy story. It is rather a pity that, while pondering, he did not also find time to read the more obvious authorities. He has been respectful, he has even copied the Homeric fashion of cataloguing name after name, attaining, however, rather less happy results than Homer. Sometimes he makes one jump a little, as at his curious habit of misfitting the Greek Gods with Roman names." Naomi Mitchison
— Sat R of Lit 1:835 Je 20 '25 650w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p837 D 3 '25 40w

WHITE, ELIZA ORNE. Tony. 164p $1.75
Houghton 24-19026

Tony's pets and his playmates, his adventures at home in the town, and by the seashore form the substance of this little book for children.

"A natural wholesome story simply told."

+ Booklist 21:73 N '24
Cleveland p11 F '25

"Like all of Eliza Orne White's work, 'Tony' stands refreshingly apart from the ordinary run of children's books. It is distinctly an enjoyable story and has a vividness that belongs only to good writing. The secret of Miss White's charm is her ability to make her people talk." Kathleen Elliott
+ N Y Tribune p6 Mr 8 '25 600w

Wis Lib Bul 20:258 N '24

WHITE, GILBERT. Natural history of Selborne; with notes by Richard Kearton. 248p il $6 McBride [21s Arrowsmith]

591.942 Natural history—England. Selborne. England 25-27479

Gilbert White's "Natural History of Selborne" which Mr Kearton calls "the most widely known book on the joys of outdoor life in the English language" has passed thru nearly a hundred different editions. The present edition is chiefly distinguished for the character of its illustrations, photographs obtained by Mr Kearton's painstaking and loving methods, many of them having been taken especially at Selborne.

"This new issue is by no means superfluous. On the contrary, by reason of the labor of love devoted to its illustration by the Keartons—Richard and Cherry—it deserves to rank with the best. It will be cherished both by the nature lovers to whom the book is a daily companion and refreshment—and those to whom it comes as a new friend." Edmund Stirling
+ Lit R p9 S 26 '25 320w

"This must remain for some time to come the most desirable edition of a perennially precious book."

+ Nation 121:100 J1 15 '25 40w

"If 'The Natural History' has been a cherished relique from the past, loved for its quaintness as much as for its nicety of observation, the photographs will seem impertinence. But if White's book be read in the spirit in which he wrote, undoubtedly these careful studies of nesting birds and coiled snakes will extend the service of the book and make vivid its descriptions."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:827 Je 12 '25 150w

Spring'd Republican p7a Mr 22 '25 100w

"In spite of a slight lack of that self-suppression which is among a good editor's merits, the notes are accurate, pointed and discriminating. The photographs are excellent and appropriate to their setting."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p763 N 20 '24 100w

WHITE, OWEN PAYNE. Them was the days; from El Paso to prohibition. 235p il $3 Minton, Balch & co.

917.64 Texas. Frontier and pioneer life. Southwest 25-19750

An old-timer from El Paso writes with frank gusto of the bad old days on the Mexican border, in Texas and New Mexico. He takes some of the romance but none of the thrill from the lives of cattle kings and cowboys, of gunmen and prospectors, of Apache Indians and Texas Rangers. El Paso was the "original Hollywood" where many a movie thriller was enacted. Mr White says when he looks back on the scenes of his childhood he feels sorry for the modern youngster.

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
Bookm 62:612 Ja '26 100w

"A delightful unregenerate book. He has a number of first-class stories to tell and a world of saturnine anecdotes."

+ Ind 115:366 S 26 '25 80w

"Few more amusing, unregenerate books have been written lately than Mr. White's, but he somehow fails to convert to his red-blooded dogma this cowardly and cloistered critic." D. R.
+ — Ind 115:588 N 21 '25 420w

"Mr. White's chapter on Mexicans is delightful and sensible. . . The author has been a lawyer, newspaper man and rancher. He doesn't write as well as Zola; his random pieces in this volume are neither stylish nor profound. But who cares! With broad strokes he gives a series of truthful pictures of the Southwest that was. It is a pity that with such genuine stuff so easily available so many persons should prefer the romantic and synthetic Southwest that, strictly speaking, never was except on the screen and in conventional fiction." Stanley Walker
N Y Times p6 S 13 '25 1550w

"If you like gun-men, bad-men, killers, rustlers, rangers, and cattle kings who make Jurgen seem an anaemic psychopathic failure. White offers you a couple of hundred pages of chuckles, laughs and guffaws."
+ N Y World p5m O 4 '25 260w

WHITE, STEWART EDWARD. Credo. 329p $2 Doubleday

110 Philosophy. Life 25-11210

This book is Mr White's attempt to establish his basic relations with the universe, "to place himself and to find out what it is all about." In simple terms he states the substance of his personal philosophy of life, consciousness and matter, continuity, free will, space and time.

Booklist 22:53 N '25

"A layman's book of philosophy, based on wide general scientific reading and observation, is apt to be invigorating even if it cannot be accepted as 'gospel.' There is a freshness of approach and statement in 'Credo' which is a boon to the tired reader."

WHITE, STEWART E.—Continued

+ Bookm 61:xxix Jl '25 100w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 6 '25 900w

Reviewed by W: McAndrew

Educ R 70:167 O '25 300w

"Of three reviews of this book which have already appeared, one praises it as strong, simple and definite; another, though evidently regarding it as highly important, asserts it to be a diverting museum of fallacies, and the third declares it to be 'sane, simple and optimistic,' but prosaic, without revelation and with no grip on realities. Well, it is just that kind of book—a work sure to draw forth the most diverse and even self-contradictory judgments. Perhaps the best advice to the reader is to peruse it without the aid of the critical fraternity and to judge it for himself." W. J. Ghent

Lit R p8 S 12 '25 580w

"Mr. White has written an admirable credo for these times. The exposition is dispassionate and coherent. There isn't a particle of fine rhetoric in it." S. P. Sherman

+ N Y Tribune p1 Ag 30 '25 2600w

"The substance of the philosophy that Stewart Edward White has resolved for himself he offers in this new book with every evidence that it is satisfactory to him, and he offers it with a simplicity of statement and a directness of argument that may well extend its satisfaction to others who will be content with a purely mechanistic concept of the world and of life." W. P. Beazell

+ N Y World p4m Je 21 '25 650w

"We agree with the author that 'every man must at some time establish his own basic relations with the universe. He must ask himself what it means and he must make a serious effort to answer.' Mr. White aids this effort with full scientific and philosophical equipment."

+ Outlook 141:566 D 9 '25 80w

St Louis p402 N '25

"His book is sane, it is simple, it is optimistic, it is prosaic. Because his style is the layman's, is prosaic throughout, and is without the quality of revelation, his argument, though it may be accepted by the intellect, is quite incapable of being absorbed by the whole organism and thus becoming a part of our working equipment."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:917 Jl 18 '25 260w

"Perhaps it is in the light that it throws on the kind of purposefulness there may be both in human life and in the life of the cosmos that Mr. White's book is most interesting, though it is difficult to single out any one feature from a book which is stimulating and suggestive in so many ways." J. S. Bixler

+ Spring'd Republican p7a Ag 23 '25 1350w

WHITE, STEWART EDWARD. Skookum Chuck. 296p $2 Doubleday

25-21915

"'Skookum Chuck,' besides being a Chinook expression for 'strong waters' (the fierce tides of the Northwest Pacific Coast), is an account of the mysterious X. Anaxagoras, 'Healer of Souls,' fully equipped with two fists, red blood, and a technical vocabulary; his pretty sister and his patient, one Jerry Marshall. Jerry, it seems, has more money than is strictly necessary, even in fiction, and a bad case of indifference. Whether Jerry would qualify as the justly noted 'most indifferent man in the world' is left indeterminate. He is attracted by a neat brass plate reading 'X. Anaxagoras, Healer of Souls,' while strolling about Vancouver. He puts himself in the doctor's hands and sundry adventures befall him."—N Y World

"The story is a good one, and is written in straightforward, matter-of-fact style, recalling somehow the freshening and invigorating Pacific winds which seem to be blowing through its pages."

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 24 '25 220w

"'Skookum Chuck' has the merit of providing fairly interesting reading matter, and the further merit of affording agreeable glimpses of the coast scenery of British Columbia; but its accomplishment falls so far beneath its promise that it leaves the reader with a sense of disappointment." S. A. Coblenz

+ Int Bk R p133 Ja '26 400w

"Readers who enjoy lively and well-written tales of the out-of-doors will take pleasure in this new novel by Stewart Edward White." L. M. Field

+ Lit R p5 D 5 '25 450w

"Mr. White dresses his story in somewhat grandiose language, and produces carefully detailed thrill. The hairbreadth escapes, the girl, and the fresh outdoor life combine to awaken Marshall's interest in life, but not the reader's interest in the book." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y World p7m O 18 '25 200w

WHITE, WILLIAM ALLEN. Calvin Coolidge; the man who is president. 252p il $2 Macmillan

B or 92.Coolidge, Calvin 25-23402

The book is not a formal biography of President Coolidge but a study of his personality, an endeavor to discover the man behind his baffling self-concealment. Mr. White finds the keywords of the puzzle in the three underlying traits of his character—silence, economy, caution—and shows how these qualities make him peculiarly acceptable to the American people in their present state of mind.

"He has written a most discerning book. At many points his evaluations may be open to question, but he has helped to explode two Coolidge myths and has added to our understanding of what often has seemed a strange phenomenon." T: R. Powell

+ New Repub 45:221 Ja 13 '26 1350w

"By and large we get an extraordinary picture not only of the dry New Englander, but of the man who is shouldering Presidential responsibilities. And, notwithstanding that it is a portrait colored strongly by Mr. White's predilection for the subject (unless he was writing with his tongue in his cheek), it is much more accurate than any other that has come to us." Silas Bent

+ N Y Times p3 D 13 '25 2050w

"Here is larger stuff than mere economics or any political theorem. Here is the truth of human effort upon which American business, meaning thereby American work, is founded. Mr. White shows sympathy and imagination in estimating these activities. Thereby he suggests the possibility that Kansas, after all, is not so far distant from Vermont." Geoffrey Parsons

+ N Y Tribune p4 D 6 '25 780w

"It is not a flatteringly high estimate of Mr. Coolidge that the Emporia editor gives us in these incisive 250 pages. As a Middle Westerner of broad sympathies, quick intuition, imagination and progressive temper, Mr. White finds much that is antipathetic in this chilly, careful, inscrutable New Englander and he does not conceal the fact. Of course he is very nice in his expression of distaste." Allan Nevins

N Y World p6m N 29 '25 820w

"Mr. White's portrait is sympathetic, but does not ignore what he regards as some of his subject's weak points. Like all of Mr. White's writings, this sketch is honest, straightforward and interesting throughout."

+ R of Rs 73:110 Ja '26 80w

WHITE, WILLIAM DUSTIN. Book of winter sports. 308p il $2.75 Houghton

796 Winter sports

25-3209

Mr White covers the entire field of outdoor life in winter, devoting a chapter each to snowshoeing, skiing, coasting and tobogganing, skating, ice hockey, curling, winter camping, ice-fishing, rabbit-hunting, fox-hunting, animal tracking, mountain climbing and winter photography. There are also chapters on wearing apparel, trail transportation, the winter carnival and the life of a logging camp.

"Pleasantly written and instructive."

+ Booklist 21:267 Ap '25

"It is well illustrated and well written. There is one picture showing how to cross a stone wall on snowshoes which alone is worth the price of the book."

+ Ind 114:162 F 7 '25 150w

"He has painted winter landscapes and winter sports in such enviable colors that no one can read the book without desiring to pack up and leave the city where snow is slush and hibernate in the mountains where the flakes remain white and glistening for months." M. L.

+ Lit R p10 F 21 '25 270w

N Y Times p14 Ja 25 '25 2050w

N Y Tribune p12 F 8 '25 350w

"Throughout the book there is an enthusiasm for snowy woods and all the charms which they conjure that should prove alluring to any but the hopeless slave of steam heat and furnace. The pages are brightened by many excellent photographs illustrative of scenes and activities discussed in the text."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:532 F 14 '25 170w

"The book is not a frigid and formal catalog of what to do and what not to do; some of Mr White's own enthusiasm has crept into his writing and his 'pointers,' presented always in lucid language, are spiced by bits of gossip and narration."

+ Spring'd Republican p12 Mr 11 '25 360w

WHITHAM, JAMES MILLS. Windlestraw. 324p $2.50 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d Allen & U.]

25-16660

The day after the storm brought to the Mead homestead in the West country a sick wayfarer with an infant boy. When the stranger died next day, Joan Mead accepted the child as the gift of God, and set him apart from her flock, marking him in her heart for the ministry. With anxious care she watched over his studies, alarmed at the least sign of lessening zeal. When the boy began to think for himself and to question the doctrines of the country preacher, the good woman despaired for the consummation of her hopes, tho she still clung to the idea that he might one day marry her own pious little Thirza, and be saved to the ministry thru her. Ranley's studies took him further and further from what Joan considered the truth, and consequently further and further from his foster family and the life at Hunnacombe. With his marriage to Laurette the rupture seemed complete, tho the threads of Destiny were still linking him to his early home. The tale covers his whole life, and is built upon the theme that as a straw shows which way the wind blows, so an early circumstance may mark the trend of a life time.

"The philosophy he advances is a depressing one, pessimistic and fatalistic. Yet, though at times the author grows unusually bitter, he never becomes excited, never loses his sense of proportion, never thrusts his views forcibly upon the reader. The book is admirable as a novel of majestic tragedy; it is no less admirable as an exhibition of effective and simple writing." B. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 9 '25 450w

"He who runs may read this book. The pace is a fine, even one, never lagging, and the trick of the sentences—long sentences made up of short, simple phrases—gives the reader, if he so wills it, a feeling of swiftly covering ground. Yet he who strolls and pauses will savor the book with very much deeper pleasure. It offers him for his refreshment and reflection not a mere continuation of actual life, but a life of its own, liberated through the medium of a beautiful art." Eva Goldbeck

+ Lit R p4 J1 3 '25 550w

Nation 121:sup443 O 14 '25 80w

"The style is, to my mind, a serious and unnecessary handicap to what would otherwise be a work of wide interest, and, at times, disconcerting insight into the lives and thoughts of men. The interest lies, not so much in the story itself, though the interest in that is well sustained, as in the implications of the story with which our imaginations are filled." F. H.

+ — Nation and Ath 35:513 J1 19 '24 580w

"Mr. Whitham's new story of the West Country, for all its power, would have been the better for considerable cutting. From start to finish the tale deals with dreary people, and dreariness, however clever its presentation, is improved by compression. There is movement all the time, but it never takes us into places lighted by laughter or shadowed by sorrow."

+ New Statesman 23:552 Ag 16 '24 200w

"Aside from the question of fundamental merit, 'The Windlestraw' is an amazingly thorough piece of observation and interpretation of an unfamiliar mode of life. Mr. Whitham deals with a wide range of character, and his people are real, concrete, convincing, if never very vivid."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 12 '25 980w

Reviewed by Francis Loretz

N Y Tribune p16 My 24 '25 1000w

"Clearly, Thomas Hardy is Mr. Whitham's master. Inevitably he is to be classed with Hardy. He is a lesser Hardy, but he has virtues of his own which give him a high place among contemporary writers of fiction." A. C. Sedgwick

+ N Y World p6m Ap 19 '25 270w

"In atmosphere, in realistic power of portrayal, in sincerity, in conception of tragic nobility and grandeur, Mr. Whitham is an artist. Accustomedness may sometime make us feel that his extraordinary looseness of prose structure is a defect forgivable for the sake of many merits; as yet we can but lament it."

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:810 Je 6 '25 450w

"The background of the rural part of the story is charming; the portraits of the villagers, old and young, and the descriptions of country doings make delightful reading."

+ Spec 132:136 J1 26 '24 80w

WHITMAN, HENRY ESMOND ORAM. Pirate of Pittsburgh. 259p $2 Houghton

25-6312

William Marmaduke York, generally known as the Pirate of Pittsburgh, is a man of sixty who by his daring operations in Wall Street has accumulated a fortune. York's diabolical scheming reaches its height when he revenges himself upon a business enemy by abducting that man's pretty daughter, Lorette Gibbs, on his yacht, at the same time making Henry Lovell, a well-known broker, a captive. He then forces these young people into an unwilling marriage and involves them in his piratical activities, which include the capture of rum-runners and the holdup of an ocean liner. There is desperate fighting, mutiny, and a shipwreck before the captives gain their freedom.

"It is a highly entertaining yarn even if the author does violate every law of probability"

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Mr 13 '25 350w

"A story as original as it is exciting." H. A. J.

+ Lit R p9 Mr 14 '25 320w

WHITMAN, HENRY E. O.—Continued

"The reader who likes his action fast and furious and who is willing to forego probability, will, no doubt, derive a certain amount of entertainment from the adventures of the hero and heroine held captives aboard the yacht Persifor."

N Y Times p24 My 31 '25 450w

Wis Lib Bul 21:144 My '25

WHITMAN, WALT. Walt Whitman; a study and a selection, by Gerald Bullett. 166p $7.50 Lippincott [15s G. Richards]

811

A selection from Whitman's poems prefaced by a biographical and a critical study.

"It makes no point of going into detail either critically or biographically, but in contrast to the effusive rhapsodies generally sung to Whitman, it has the distinction of taking a cool and detached point of view toward the poet and his work."

+ — Bookm 62:96 S '25 150w

"Gerald Bullett has written a significant book. I say this in spite of the fact that there is nothing particularly new in this biographical material nor particularly startling in his critical summary or even final in his selection of Walt Whitman's poems. But because he has tried to contribute something critical toward a Walt Whitman tradition, because his book is an indication that the poetry of Whitman awaits a literature of vital comment in this country, it seems to me that Mr. Bullett has endeavored importantly." Edwin Seaver

+ Lit R p2 My 29 '25 620w

Nation and Ath 36:502 Ja 3 '25 20w

"He was an extraordinary man. This beautifully-printed selection with its sensible introduction would have given him almost as much pleasure as another mausoleum; the only criticism is that it might perhaps have been a little enlarged to contain some of the best passages from poems not worth quoting as a whole." F. L. Lucas

+ — New Statesman 24:420 Ja 17 '25 1400w

"It is just the sort of book to give to the numerous estimable people who ought to know something of Whitman, but ought not to know everything of him." S. P. Sherman

+ — N Y Tribune p5 My 3 '25 180w

"This volume is a beautiful production, a delight to handle. Mr. Bullett tells us all we need to know of the poet, and his selection from the poems is admirable."

+ Sat R 133:655 D 27 '24 400w

Sat R of Lit 1:763 My 16 '25 280w

Spec 134:163 Ja 31 '25 650w

"Mr. Bullett's portrait and estimate of Whitman is singularly well balanced, comprehensive, and readable. His selection, too, which is of an original kind, is well made."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p52 Ja 22 '25 950w

WHITNEY, MILTON. Soil and civilization. (Library of modern sciences) 278p il $3 Van Nostrand

630 Agriculture. Soils 25-9256

From a presentation of his concept of the soil as a living, not an inert thing, with properties and functions analogous to those of the living animal Mr Whitney passes to a description of the important soils of the United States and their peculiarities, the rôle of fertilizers and an historical account of agriculture and its practice in the older countries of the world.

Booklist 22:17 O '25

"'Soil and Civilization' is a very readable and thought-provoking contribution. The soil scientist should be interested in the masterful marshaling of an effective analogy and in the effective presentation of a point of view. This book, moreover, presents a concept of the soil and an outlook upon history which deserve the careful study of economist, historian, and publicist. It will take its place along with such modern philosophic considerations as have been set forth in Huntington's 'Civilization and Climate,' East's 'Mankind at the Cross-roads,' and Henderson's 'Fitness of the Environment.'" H. L. Walster

+ Ind & Eng Chem 17:876 Ag '25 720w

"This book is at least three books in one. A single book, and a very good one, could have been made out of Professor Whitney's concept of the soil as a living thing. Another might have been made of his description of the various soil types of the United States. A third, perhaps the best of all, could have been made of his discussion of the soils of the earth in relation to the civilizations of the earth, past and present. I am apprehensive, however, of what Professor Whitney's brother scientists are going to do to him for writing this book. I do not think it is unscientific, but it departs from the orthodox method of saying whatever is to be said in such a way that nobody except a scientist can understand it." Dixon Merritt

N Y Tribune p16 S 13 '25 1000w

Sat R of Lit 1:864 Je 27 '25 200w

WHITTEN, WILFRED (JOHN O'LONDON, pseud.). Is it good English? 189p $2 Putnam

420 English language

25-9248

"A chatty and informal review of troublesome points in grammatical usage is this book, made up of articles from John O'London's Weekly. His book is a great deal more than a rehash of grammar. He tells his readers how the 'dickens' originated as a mild expletive; he corrects popular misquotations from Shakespeare; he pauses to toss off a moral reflection about the true meaning of the word religion; he gives us much quaint and whimsical verse and anecdotes old and new to sharpen his points."—Lit R

Booklist 22:13 O '25

"It sparkles from its dedication 'to men, women, and grammarians' to its closing treatise on the humor of definitions." W. McAndrew

+ Educ R 70:107 S '25 180w

"It covers the ground with a rather surprising thoroughness, considering its loose arrangement and its lack of any definite plan. It represents what a great many educated people wish to know about the finer points of the language, and John O'London answers their questions from the standpoint of a practical journalist rather than from that of the prim and precise purist or pedant." H. B.

+ Lit R p11 My 9 '25 300w

New Statesman 24:447 Ja 24 '25 600w

"Here is a book almost as fascinating as the dictionary—that is, for those who whenever they need to consult the dictionary about a single word succumb to the temptation to browse through its pages as long as they dare to take the time. In just the same way is this small volume luring and guileful."

+ N Y Times p20 My 10 '25 550w

"John O'London's little book is not the place to look for a complete philosophy of style. It is a book of moments, not of system, a book of entertainment and fancy with undertones of information and good sense." Philip Krapp

+ N Y Tribune p5 My 17 '25 650w

"Sprightly and readable."

+ Outlook 140:195 Je 3 '25 40w

"Though John O'London is obviously no philologist, he has a shrewd wit, a mellow common sense, and a fine taste in humor, and now and then he throws out an epigram or a pleasant piece of fooling, worthy of a more distinguished setting."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:747 My 9 '25 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p581 S 18 '24 280w

WHYTE, ARTHUR JAMES BERESFORD.
Early life and letters of Cavour, 1810-1848.
384p $5 Oxford [15s Milford]

B or 92 Cavour, Camillo Benso, comte di
25-11099

"The author proposed to himself the task of placing before the English-speaking public selections from the letters and the diary of Cavour and from other materials that have been brought to the surface since the publication in 1886 of Berti's Il Conte di Cavour avanti il 1848, with a connective tissue of explanation and comment. His object is to enrich the picture of Cavour the statesman, as he is presented in such a biography as Thayer's, with a portrait of Cavour the man, as he revealed himself during the period preceding his entrance into politics—a period embracing three-quarters of his life."—Am Hist R

"A book that is at once sound and entertaining." K. R. Greenfield

+ Am Hist R 31:170 O '25 520w

Reviewed by Oliver McKee, Jr.

Boston Transcript p3 Je 13 '25 2300w

"The story of how Cavour contrived, through long years of obscure waiting, to equip himself with the qualities essential for a diplomat and a statesman, has never before been told for English readers. For although many of his long letters have been preserved, they are scattered through a variety of editions, and few of them have been translated. Mr. Whyte's book would be welcome, therefore, if it were only for his translations of the letters; but he has happily threaded them together with a distinguished and nicely proportioned narrative, and made an admirable and absorbing book."

+ Nation and Ath 37:272 My 30 '25 750w

"Interesting and careful book."

+ New Statesman 25:48 Ap 25 '25 800w

"It is, on the whole, a pleasing picture. Mr. Whyte has done his work excellently. He has fulfilled his promise to allow Cavour, as far as possible, to be his own interpreter; but the book is not overweighted with documents, and Mr. Whyte's own contributions to the story are eminently readable. The work of translation has also been very well done."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p275 Ap 23 '25 1700w

WHYTE, FREDERIC. Life and letters of W. T. Stead. 2v 345;368p $12 Houghton [36s J. Cape]

B or 92 Stead, William Thomas

"A two-volume biography of a great English editor, with sidelights on such important contemporaries as Gladstone, Carlyle and Morley, and much social history parallel with his lifetime."—N Y World

"Mr. Whyte loved, admired, perhaps understood W. T. Stead, fighter and prophet and perhaps a bit of a charlatan as well. His amplification of Stead's own matter is careful, sound, illuminating, it is a well and carefully done piece of editing. If we miss a more rounded piece of literary work, a bit of real and absolutely balanced biography, we are asking for more than we are entitled to expect." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 28 '25 2100w

"An exceptionally fine picture of a many-sided, much-hated, much-admired man. Students of journalism will find this book exceptionally valuable, but readers of almost any category will enjoy it."

+ Ind 116:23 Ja 2 '26 120w

"Stead's influence, during forty-odd years of unparalleled toil for whatever seemed to him right for the passing day or season, is one with the history of his contemporaneous England. Of such asbestos fiber is his saga, immune to the red searing of setting suns, that the England of his time may not be adequately recorded without just such a compendium of ready reference as has here been compiled." Stanley Olmsted

+ Int Bk R p93 Ja '26 2200w

"Mr. Whyte has made a valuable if not entirely satisfactory biography. With such bulky materials and diversity of interests the matter of selection is of first importance, and here Mr. Whyte will not satisfy everyone. At times he is disappointingly meagre." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 45:115 D 16 '25 1650w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p15 D 27 '25 1150w

N Y World p7m D 6 '25 30w

Outlook 141:640 D 23 '25 60w

R of Rs 72:663 D '25 160w

"All English-speaking people will find this biography full of varied interest and constant enjoyment and as such it can be recommended to and even urged upon the general public; for it is a tale of a modern knight-errant who rode forth slaying evil dragons, tilting against impossible odds, and blazing his way through the world." T. J. C. Martyn

+ Sat R Lit 2:405 D 12 '25 1650w

WICKS, SIDNEY F. Public speaking for business men. 199p $2.25 Stokes

808.5 Public speaking [25-4081]

The author has been a public speaker for Wicks has many useful suggestions. He subjects. His book is the platform from which he speaks with authority and humor to encourage others who might have something to say if they knew how to say it. He discusses the speaker from two standpoints; his equipment—voice, gesture, vocabulary—and his message, its preparation and delivery, citing in illustration well known figures in the public life of England and America.

Booklist 22:24 O '25

"In the mechanics of preparing a speech Mr. Wicks has many useful suggestions. He submits samples to illuminate his points, and if reading about how to become a public speaker can make a public speaker the readers of this book should speak."

+ N Y Tribune p10 Jl 12 '25 200w

WIGGAM, ALBERT EDWARD. Fruit of the family tree. 390p il $3 Bobbs

575 Heredity. Eugenics 24-29768

For descriptive note see Annual for 1924.

"It is interestingly written in the breezy and forcible style for which the author is noted. The facts are taken from standard authorities, and the conclusions seem justified. We bespeak for the book a wide circulation among those who have not the time nor the scientific preparation to take up the more strictly scientific books." M. P. R.

+ Am J Pub Health 15:722 Ag '25 130w

"I have noted no errors of importance and can see little to quarrel with in spirit. Perhaps the note of optimism is too often struck, the level of seriousness a trifle exalted; but the book is reliable, on the whole well written, and for the most part very entertaining. It should become widely popular." H. M. Parsley

+ Am R 3:367 My '25 1350w

"Mr. Wiggam develops his thesis from the standpoint of the biologist, but with the reverence and spiritual insight which characterize much of the best scientific writing of to-day." A. E. Little

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ap '25 800w

"Very readable but written from a journalist's and not a scientist's standpoint."

Booklist 21:186 F '25

"An intelligent presentation of the problem of heredity done in a manner intelligible to laymen."

+ Ind 114:419 Ap 11 '25 40w

WIGGAM, ALBERT E.—Continued

"Mr. Wiggam's book is reliable in matters of scientific fact and for the most part entertainingly written. While it is happily devoid of the mystical verbiage, undue formulation and dogmatism, that marked the author's earlier (and widely popular) work on the same subject, it has some literary defects of its own."

+ — Nation 121:sup442 O 14 '25 180w

"His optimism is magnificently futile. There is moreover an even more serious fault in Mr. Wiggam's work. In America, as nowhere else, the general public is interested in science and this is fortunate, for through scientific control of humanity, and through nothing else, lies the hope that we may escape the ignoble end to which our past follies have fully entitled us. As Galton said long ago, eugenics must be introduced into the national conscience, like a new religion." Mr. Wiggam strives to introduce it like a sentimental best-seller." J: Langdon-Davies

— New Repub 42:75 Mr 11 '25 1500w

Reviewed by S. A. Coblentz

N Y Times p12 F 1 '25 900w

"I am unable to report any noteworthy departures from accuracy and can see but little to quarrel with in the spirit of the book. Possibly the tone of optimism is a trifle high, and the level of seriousness a little exalted . . . but no, it's a good book." H. M. Parshley

+ N Y Tribune p4 Ja 25 '25 1300w

"A. E. Wiggam combines the qualities necessary to the successful popularizer; he has the energy and intelligence to study and understand the subject, and he possesses the skill to make it available for the general reader. His new book is one of the best of the numerous attempts at popular science." H. M. Parshley

+ Springfield Republican p7a F 8 '25 450w

"The present is a more systematic study of heredity, written in a popular vein, and with the fluency and enthusiasm that characterized the former book, [The New Decalogue of Science]."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p499 J1 23 '25 100w

Wis Lib Bul 21:140 My '25

"A book of great value, witty and written in a fascinating style." P. W. and A. R. Whiting

+ World Tomorrow 8:284 S '25 600w

"It gathers together a great body of most interesting facts and sets them forth in a clear, logical, and convincing fashion. Mr. Wiggam's book is so full of quotable bits that I should like to expand this review indefinitely. Of course, he makes mistakes, and probably goes a good deal too far, as all enthusiasts do. But he gives no end of facts which are intrinsically interesting and extremely important." Ellsworth Huntington

+ Yale R n s 15:181 O '25 620w

WILCOX, WILLIAM C. Man from an African jungle. 248p il $2.50 Macmillan

266 Missions—Africa

25-8610

This book is a simple and very human account of the work of an American mission in the jungle of East Africa and of its chief convert, Tizora, a native Tonga. The author tells of his efforts to learn the language and of preaching and teaching the Gospel, of perils from pestilence, wild beasts and savage tribes—all the personal, human details of the mission and the task of civilizing a primitive tribe.

"This book, while it is about a preacher's work, does not preach. Thus, we can assure prospective readers that they will not be offended herein by moral platitudes or religious dogma, because such material is used purely in an historical way, and not with open attempt to convert us. If one is interested in foreign countries he will like this book; for even if the converting of savages to Christianity fails to impress him as being more than a futile business, he may still like to know about the savages themselves."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 20 '25 300w

"The Man From an African Jungle' is not put together with literary flourishes, but it derives vividness from its straightforward narrative of things experienced. It presents the problems of a central African mission as they have appeared to those who faced them at first hand and recounts the discouragements and the mishaps as well as the successes."

+ N Y Tribune p7 J1 5 '25 120w

"The intensely human story of an explorer-missionary in Africa; probably unlike any narrative of African missions that you have ever read."

+ R of Rs 71:670 Je '25 50w

WILDE, NORMAN. Ethical basis of the state. 236p $2.50 Princeton univ. press [11s 6d Milford]

320.1 State, The 24-23280

For descriptive note see Annual for 1924.

"The scope and purpose have been faithfully executed and, in the opinion of the reviewer, no better brief analysis of classical and recent theories has been published." K. F. Geiser

+ Ann Am Acad 119:153 My '25 380w

"The book provides a clear and illuminating statement of the philosophical issues which underlie historical and contemporary interpretations of political organization. This perspective of the ethical problems of the state fills a genuine need; it is the sort of thing that students, both elementary and mature, will be grateful for." G: P. Adams

+ Int J Ethics 35:426 J1 '25 2150w

"Professor Wilde's book is valuable chiefly for its success in relating a social and political ideal to the facts out of which it grows. His ability to see the good and bad in the present social order in the light of a definite social ideal enables him to provide for political theory a 'sound idealism' on which the structure of the new State can be more safely erected." Joseph Carson, Jr.

+ J Philos 22:355 Je 18 '25 950w

"It is a joy to find an American scholar combining the perspective of humanism with a lucid style and a wide acquaintance with the essential facts." W. Y. Elliott

+ Nation 121:285 S 9 '25 1150w

"Minor points of dissent in so good a book may well be omitted in favor of general appreciation and of hope for more extended favors yet to come." T. V. Smith

+ New Repub 41:263 Ja 28 '25 980w

Reviewed by W. F. Johnson

No Am 122:566 Mr '25 240w

"It is clear, it is well-informed, and it is cautious. He grasps the nature of the problem and makes the reader understand the consequences which attach to the various solutions proposed. We do not know a better introduction to contemporary social thought."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:402 D 20 '24 140w

WILE, IRA SOLOMON. Challenge of childhood; studies in personality and behavior. 305p $3.50 Seltzer

136.76 Children, Abnormal. Child study

25-4982

From an experience of twenty years' work with children in private practice and in dispensaries, schools and other institutions Dr Wile has selected fifty cases of maladjustment—physical, mental, emotional and social—in children. Each of these cases he describes in a readable narrative and then uses the case as a text for more general discussion of the problem involved and the method of treatment.

"Combines a sane and scientific point of view with a first-hand knowledge of children and is a study which parents, teachers, social workers and doctors will welcome."

+ Booklist 21:358 J1 '25

"Seldom have I encountered a more sympathetic (and not sentimental but understanding) explanation of the real motives and causes of children's behavior. Dr. Wile is not an adult judging from without; he is 'one of us' seeing from within. In spite of his technical vocabulary, his book is thrilling reading." E. v. B. Hansl

+ Bookm 61:592 J1 '25 200w

Cleveland p91 S '25

"The doctor's character perceptions are as acute as his diagnoses, and it is this combination which makes 'The Challenge of Childhood' so readable and so useful to analysts, to parents, to teachers, and to all who have to do with the young mind." T. S. Knowlson
+ Lit R p9 Je 6 '25 150w

"The book is somewhat wordy and involved. Like many scientific men writing for a lay public, Dr. Wile sometimes explains too much rather than too little to achieve clearness and form. But his total message is clear and most of his case histories are interesting and suggestive." Evelyn Dewey
+ — N Y Tribune p4 My 17 '25 900w

St Louis p333 S '25

"Here is a book that has been written by a man sensitive to realities—out of the heart of those realities. The reader finds himself involved, more and more completely, in the task of living and trying to understand the world, with every word he reads; and nearly every word carries its own convincing demonstration." J. K. Hart
+ Survey 54:110 Ap 15 '25 500w

"The stories are well told, and the treatment of the various cases is full of ingenuity and common sense. Such concrete handling is certain to realize the author's purpose to make the book valuable for professional workers with children, and for parents who are willing to face the facts in the rearing of their children." T. W. Galloway
+ World Tomorrow 8:314 O '25 160w

WILKES, FREDERICK A.; YORK, GEORGE MORELL; and TERRILL, CHESTER J. Elementary training for business. 353p il $1.60 Ronald

650.7 Business education 24-17423

"Intended for students who will engage in the more general work of the business office. Offers an introduction to the elements of business by describing the work of typical office positions, from messenger to assistant cashier. Illustrates the functions of production, distribution, financing, and risk-bearing by exhibiting them in connection with specific activities in an insurance company, a shoe factory, and a wholesale grocery."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:301 My '25

WILKINSON, MARGUERITE OGDEN (BIGELOW) (MRS JAMES G. WILKINSON). Way of the makers. 316p $3 Macmillan

808.1 Poetry 25-10726

The "makers" are the poets and Mrs Wilkinson's book deals with their ways and methods. In excerpts chosen from poets as far apart in time as Edmund Spenser and John Masefield she lets them speak for themselves of the nature of the creative process, of the ways in which poetic inspiration comes, of the poet's choice of themes, his manner of work and his motives for desiring fame. There is an abundance of illustrative material.

Booklist 22:66 N '25

"'The Way of the Makers' is one of those rare reference books that need gather no moss; it is an anthology of prose and poetry of the most vital nature."

+ Bookm 62:511 D '25 180w

Lit R p13 N 21 '25 50w

"We fail, to put it frankly, to see any useful purpose served by the book as a whole. Yet even the most unconvinced critic of 'The Way of the Makers' must show something of respect for the stupendous task Miss Wilkinson set for herself. We cannot quite give our consent to a book so indiscriminate in its inclusions; this is muddy scholarship. But the book cannot injure the adult mind. We should, however, have grave fears were it to be prescribed in a college course."

— + N Y Times p9 J1 12 '25 1700w

"What Mrs. Wilkinson has done in 'The Way of the Makers' has never, so far as I know, been done before; yet now that she has done it, one sees how obvious was the desirability of the undertaking. Doubtless it will be done again, since she has shown the way, and doubtless it will be done, in some senses, better than she has done it; she deserves, quand même, the always somewhat reluctant homage paid to the pioneer." Newton Arvin

+ N Y Tribune p5 J1 26 '25 820w

St Louis 23:434 D '25

"Entertaining, informative, and richly suggestive volume." Muna Lee

+ Sat R of Lit 2:39 Ag 15 '25 1150w

"The subject is challenging and should be further pursued. Mrs. Wilkinson is to be congratulated on the fertile originality of her idea and the courage with which she has attacked a formidable task."

+ Springfield Republican p7a Ag 2 '25 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 21:229 O '25

WILKINSON, MARGUERITE OGDEN (BIGELOW) (MRS JAMES G. WILKINSON), comp. Yule fire. 201p il $2.50 Macmillan

821.08 Christmas poetry 25-21043

An anthology of Christmas poetry, from George Herbert to Stephen Vincent Benét. The poems chosen are such as have really touched the mystery of Christ's birth and Marguerite Wilkinson supplies an introduction on the yule-fire—the spirit that was born into the world with that birth in Bethlehem.

Boston Transcript p3 D 26 '25 150w

"Marguerite Wilkinson has shown a fine discrimination in the selection of the poems to be included, and this is an anthology that should be alive for many Christmases to come." Dorothy Scarborough

+ Int Bk R p33 D '25 750w

"It is unique among Christmas anthologies in being a volume of Christmas poems devoid of sleigh-bells, tinsel and blown glass; a book of pure beauty and holy merriment, aglow with transfiguring mystic radiance." Muna Lee

+ Lit R p8 D 5 '25 800w

N Y Times p7 D 6 '25 70w

"Its eighty or more poems all face in adoration and reverence toward the Christ whose goodness, compassion and love they sing. Nevertheless, they are wonderfully varied in both spirit and form. The author has ranged far and long through the centuries to choose the verse that would harmonize perfectly with her purpose."

+ N Y Times p2 D 20 '25 320w

"Contains much one likes to read over and over in this season, and is prefaced by a zealous and well-informed essay in the Christian spirit, upon true and false mysticism among other things. Our own predilection is for a wild kind of faith, and when, at the end of the book, we swing into Chesterton's 'The House of Christmas' we are thrilled the most." W: R. Benét

+ Outlook 141:675 D 30 '25 130w

"Here, for once, is an anthology which requires neither self-justification nor apology from the compiler. Mrs. Wilkinson's purpose, to bring together in a single volume all the best poems about Christmas, is excellent and certainly fulfills a need. Her prefatory essay could be improved by some discriminating cuts and elisions. Her prose tones are not her own and the result is often irritating. But she has much to say that is true and interesting and her book, as a whole, deserves high praise."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:436 D 19 '25 280w

WILKINSON, WILLIAM JOHN. Tory democracy. (Columbia univ. studies in history, economics and public law) 315p $3.50 Longmans

329.9 Great Britain—Politics and government. Tories, English 25-6860

"This volume contains a useful study of the 'Progressive' movement in British domestic politics. It attempts by a careful examination of periodical literature, the daily press, parliamentary debates, collections of speeches, and recent biographies to mass together everything available in support of the thesis that Tory Democracy is a reality and a continuing force in Conservative ranks from the days of Disraeli to those of Lord Cecil. Chapter V., the Fruitage of Tory Democracy, is practically a review and a glorification of the social legislation passed in the days of Tory governments or advocated by individual Tories. As regards Ireland the social reforms inaugurated under Unionist leadership receive tribute."—Am Hist R

"Such a defense of Toryism was much needed, especially in the United States. References to the early sympathies of Lord Randolph Churchill with Egyptian nationalism and mention of his private flirtations with some aspects of Home Rule do not sufficiently expose the fact that in imperial questions Tory Democrats fail to carry the progressive colors which they most certainly do as regards social reforms at home. As a whole, however, the volume is, within its limitations, an excellent review of the subject." A. L. P. Dennis + — Am Hist R 30:860 Jl '25 400w

Am Pol Sci R 19:857 N '25 100w

"Prof Wilkinson has made a valuable study of political behavior." P. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p5a S 13 '25 320w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p206 Mr 19 '25 60w

WILLARD, MARGARET LOVE (WHEELER) (MRS JAMES FIELD WILLARD). ed. Letters on the American revolution, 1774-1776. 1td ed 370p $7.50 Houghton

973.3 United States—History—Revolution 25-6039

"A beautifully printed volume of contemporary letters from individuals on both sides of the contest. A considerable part of this correspondence appeared in English newspapers of the period. It was from a file of Felix Farley's Bristol Journal for the year 1775 that Mrs. Willard gleaned the letters from America which suggested to her the collection of such material. The present volume covers only the years 1774-76."—R of Rs

"The letters are chiefly valuable in revealing current opinion, for of course there are many fabrications, rumors, and exaggerated reports." C. H. Van Tyne

Am Hist R 31:179 O '25 450w

"Margaret Wheeler Willard has been through the files of these British journals and offers in 'Letters on the American Revolution, 1774-1776' a judicious selection which is both interesting and informative. She has also exhumed illuminating bits of private correspondence which throw light on the sentiment that prevailed in America during those critical days."

+ Bookm 62:91 S '25 150w

"This is a book which touches nearly every issue in the early days of the Revolution. Sometimes the letters are clear, flowing, logical. At other times they reveal the spirited partisanship which carries the writers along to denunciation and exaggeration. Taken together, they add tremendously to the appreciation of the understanding reader who realizes that in the history of any event, the heroes are not all cast upon one side or the villains entirely upon the other." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 4 '25 1400w

"These letters as mirrors of human life and opinion are as vivid as if they had been written yesterday." C. C. Buel

+ Lit R p5 My 16 '25 480w

Nation 121:628 D 2 '25 160w

"The book should be read rather for the light it sheds on English opinion than on American facts." J. T. Adams

New Repub 43:133 Je 24 '25 280w

N Y Tribune p4 N 1 '25 240w

Reviewed by E. B. Greene

Pol Sci Q 40:457 S '25 580w

R of Rs 71:446 Ap '25 160w

WILLIAMS, ARTHUR BRYAN. Game trails in British Columbia; big game and other sport in the wilds of British Columbia. 360p il $5 Scribner [21s Murray]

799 Hunting—British Columbia [25-20651]

"The author of this book has been for thirteen years Head of the Provincial Game Department of British Columbia; and it is to be gathered from his narrative that one of his qualifications for his appointment was that he had himself hunted every sort of game over the whole district placed under his control." (The Times [London] Lit Sup) "He has hunted everything—mountain sheep, mountain goats, grizzlies, moose, caribou, wapiti, cougars, and wolves—and done a little fishing, including spinning for steelheads." (Outlook)

Booklist 22:149 Ja '26

"This book holds much that is instructive to those who like to hunt with a gun as well as with a camera. For others, who like to do their hunting by proxy, the author's easy narrative writing and anecdotes of adventure make good reading."

+ Ind 115:655 D 5 '25 100w

"The real charm of the book lies in the many stories of hunting trips told by the author. These stories are somewhat ramblingly told, but with a wealth of detail that takes the reader right out on the trail with the hunters and makes one share the hardships as well as the joy of getting back to camp." A. C. Bierce

+ Lit R D 26 '25 350w

Nation and Ath 38:215 N 7 '25 40w

"Who is better equipped for writing a soundly informative book about the big and small game hunting and the fishing in North-West Canada than a man who for thirteen years has been head of the Provincial Game Department of British Columbia?"

+ New Statesman 25:729 O 10 '25 500w

N Y Tribune p8 N 29 '25 150w

"A well-made volume adds to the pleasure of reading Mr. Williams's adventures, which yield in fascination only to his illustrations." Earle Walbridge

+ Outlook 141:450 N 18 '25 150w

"The work is full of valuable information for all who are interested in the life out of doors but will find an even larger public through its sheer readability."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:438 D 19 '25 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p632 O 1 '25 920w

WILLIAMS, BEN AMES. Rational hind. 242p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Mills & B.]

25-11001

The scene of the story is a farming community of Maine. The center of the town and of the story is the old Dillard farm where many generations of Dillards have dwelt, building up the fine old place till it has become an ancestral domain and a local tradition. But the Dillard blood has begun to thin and their broad lands are becoming impoverished. When the story opens the family consists of four people, two brothers and two sisters, all unmarried. The elder sister, Esther, a congenital old maid, rules the household with a firm hand, none the less tyrannical for all her seeming gentleness. Clash comes when the younger brother Leon marries into a family of newer and more vigorous breed. Esther refuses to receive Jennie in the home and Leon is obliged to build up one for himself. Jennie's health and wholesomeness are the means of renewing the thin blood of the Dillard stock. The old Dillard lands dwindle till in her old age Esther has to swallow her pride and become reconciled to the new Dillards.

Booklist 22:120 D '25

"It is both a story and an analysis, a visualization of life itself. Every person in it is easily recognizable as a man or a woman that may be encountered any day. It is a statement of facts as they are, a chronicle of events as they have happened, not as they might happen; a deep exploration into the mind of humanity in general and of specific men and women. And best of all it is a most enjoyable story in the reading, a story that may be read for the pleasure that all good stories should give to the reader, a story that seems to be a record of the realities of life." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 13 '25 1700w

"Both incidents and characters are very real, and there are descriptive passages of rare beauty."

+ Ind 114:731 Je 27 '25 80w

"To see life as an interesting experience, neither completely measured by its cramping monotones nor unduly controlled by romance, and to be able to transfer that effect to others, is a gift of price. Mr. Ben Ames Williams has proved his possession of it in 'The Rational Hind.'" E. H. Wyman

+ Int Bk R p681 S '25 450w

Reviewed by N. A. Crawford

Int Bk R p101 Ja '26 120w

"The entire chronicle is held very close to the soil; it moves slowly, its events are for the most part the simple, fundamental ones, marriage and birth and death. It is an existence quite apart from any life of the intellect, an existence usually hard-working, quiet, sober, restrained. Yet at the end of the book, the current from the main stream cuts through the stagnant backwater and goes 'scouring through, sweeping away the scum, the drift and the mold upon the bottom' of the place where a new Nathan Dillard was one day to reign."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 14 '25 900w

"Ben Ames Williams has woven into the fabric of his story a relentless mood that admits no wavering, no doubt. He plays his theme with fidelity, a theme, which, however, grows at times monotonous through over-emphasis and repetition." C. M. Purdy

+ N Y Tribune p8 Ag 9 '25 860w

"Since the men in this novel are not satyrs nor the women drabs, it will win no literary prizes and will never receive a second look from a vice society. Mr. Williams must console himself with the knowledge that he has written a notable novel and created a character in Esther whom all New Englanders and many others will recognize as a true type."

+ Outlook 141:56 S 9 '25 120w

Sat R of Lit 2:223 O 17 '25 280w

"'The Rational Hind' is sincere and genuine. It is in tales such as this that the flavor of America is brought to the surface."

+ Springfield Republican p7a Je 28 '25 280w

"There is but little plot in all this, and nothing at all startling, but the characters are live people, wholesome, upright, and racy of the soil."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 5 '25 200w

WILLIAMS, BLANCHE COLTON, and others, eds. Copy—1925; stories, plays, poems and essays; introd. by Donald Lemen Clark. 335p $2 Appleton

810.8 American literature—Collections

The publication of Copy is a project of the Writers club of Columbia university. The book contains short stories, essays and special articles, verse, and two one-act plays all of which were written by members in some one of the special courses in writing, Columbia university extension. The short stories cover varied fields of interest.

"Viewed merely as a collection, 'Copy, 1925' has its unique points. There are many anthologies of verse and there are collections of short stories, of essays or of plays. In this volume all four types of writing may be found. To many people the book has a deeper interest because it stands as the published work of students in the university extension special courses in writing, at Columbia University. The general excellence as well as the range of the collection is unusual."

+ Boston Transcript p4 J1 18 '25 380w

"The essays are only average, not quite so good as last year's." Hugo Sonnenschein

+ Lit R p8 J1 18 '25 400w

"It must not be thought that these are rapid maunderings of callow undergraduates. Most of the authors are mature men and women who know life thoroughly and who have something arresting to tell regarding its varied and kaleidoscopic phases. Though nothing in the book ranks as great literature, everything in it, at least is interesting."

+ N Y Times p4 My 3 '25 420w

"The reader will almost certainly find something to his taste in the wide scope afforded by this volume. This book will go far toward vindicating belief in the efficacy of popular courses in creative literature."

+ Outlook 141:101 S 16 '25 100w

Springfield Republican p7a S 20 '25 200w

Wis Lib Bul 21:197 J1 '25

WILLIAMS, CHARLES. Windows of night. 152p $2.25 Oxford [5s Milford]

821

[25-18085]

"Mr. Williams is an Englishman and a contributor to The London Mercury and The New Witness." (N Y Times) "The first few pieces are of a meditative character, describing the horrors that lie in wait for those who stop to think. The love-poems conjure up a charming vision of domestic happiness." (Nation and Ath)

"The imagery everywhere lacks colour. His passion is too sleepy; no fire and ice within him fight. Perhaps that is because most of the love-poems are so happy. One cannot grudge him that, but might it not have been better for his poetry had he not shut down the window so soon?"

+ Nation and Ath 36:721 F 21 '25 180w

"He scolds modern Doubt in many lines, some of them graceful in a synthetic melody put together from the rhetorical Victorian poets, nearly all of them devoid of artistic value—empty of the vitality attached to words only by a very alert experience of either books or living. His production is fundamentally a piece of ironical levity unconsciously performed, set against the English tradition in all its distinguished phases: solemn, it lacks seriousness altogether. Dulness comes close to vulgarity."

Allen Tate

+ New Repub 44:209 O 14 '25 550w

"He is scholarly and philosophical, but never in a dull or devious way. Keeping tight reign on his metrical schemes and always essaying an utterance that is not stuccoed with clichés, he manages to inject a sincerity into his work that is unmistakable. A certain coldness marks a portion of his work, but it is the sort of coldness that predicates an intellectual brooding."

H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p14 Je 28 '25 380w

"Mr. Williams seldom strains for the unusual word or overreaches his natural range for an effect; consequently his work has a naive and a freshness and a charm which defy monotony. Fragments remain after the book has been closed."

L. G. Marshall

+ N Y Tribune p8 O 11 '25 320w

WILLIAMS, CHARLES—Continued

"This book of very noble poetry can safely challenge comparison with anything of its kind in modern letters. And yet, from one point of view, there is a sense of incomplete accomplishment overhanging it. For, excellent as so many of its minor pieces are, it is evident that Mr. Williams wished to write poetry which should have a larger scope than he has been able to achieve, except in a solitary instance. That instance is 'The Window.'" Theodore Maynard

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:294 N 14 '25 450w

"These poems are the work of a mind that is finely concentrated on whatever plane of thought it moves. Sometimes the precision is too mathematical, the design too strict, and the argument too angular for emotion to struggle through. It is doubtful, too, whether that central reality in the deep, hidden places of the mind to which Mr. Williams seeks to probe in some of his most ambitious poems can ever be captured or adequately communicated by so cool and conscious a method as he adopts."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p135 F 26 '25 380w

WILLIAMS, EDWARD HUNTINGTON, and HOAG, ERNEST BRYANT. Rest and grow strong. 335p $2.50 Bobbs

613.7 Rest. Hygiene. Glands, Ductless 25-8722

The title is not entirely descriptive, for rest is only one of the cures of which the book treats. It is really a book about health, both physical and mental, and its attainment. In a simple and direct style, with many actual medical cases by way of illustration, the authors discuss the effects of rest and sleep and work and of therapeutic psychology. Several chapters are given to the action of the endocrine glands and the glandular treatment of disease.

"The whole is for the general customer rather than the specialist."

N Y Tribune p10 S 13 '25 150w

Outlook 140:268 Je 17 '25 40w

"The authors of this practical and reliable guide to health have written their book in non-scientific terms of direct appeal to the lay reader. It is so methodically simple that a child could understand the greater part, and yet so profoundly enlightening that its values should be apparent even to the best informed skeptic."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:937 J1 25 '25 200w

WILLIAMS, J. HAROLD. Graphic methods in education. (Riverside textbooks in education) 319p il $2 Houghton

370 Graphic methods. Education 25-694

The threefold purpose of the book is to emphasize the value of the graphic method in representing educational statistics, to give examples of the various types of charts, and to show how to prepare them. The directions are clear and concise, and the copious illustrations full of suggestion for the school superintendent or principal. The author at one time conducted a course in graphic methods at Stanford university. The book is the outgrowth of that course.

Booklist 21:291 My '25

Reviewed by W: McAndrew

Educ R 70:152 O '25 230w

"If those who write articles for publication or prepare extended papers or theses would consult this book before making their visual representations, the quality of their diagrams would be greatly improved. The book meets a real need in the field of education and provides an excellent handbook for the use of students."

+ El School J 25:718 My '25 230w

"As a whole, the volume should prove definitely useful to all who are concerned in any way with the preparation of charts." C. V. Good

+ School R 33:314 Ap '25 380w

WILLIAMS, JAMES MICKEL. Our rural heritage. 246p $5 Knopf

630.1 Sociology, Rural. Social psychology. Country life 25-7905

A study of the social psychology of rural life, of the attitudes and beliefs that are a part of rural psychology. The work is based on a minute study of a typical rural community in the state of New York and is an outgrowth of his "American Town," a book published nearly twenty years ago.

Reviewed by Dwight Sanderson

Am J Soc 31:392 N '25 1250w

"This book is a penetrating inspection and analysis of the social psychology of an old-time, New York state, rural community. This is, as far as the reviewer knows, the first systematic analysis of early American rural attitudes, and as such is a valuable and important contribution." J. O. Hertzler

+ Ann Am Acad 121:198 S '25 320w

Booklist 22:13 O '25

Boston Transcript p5 My 23 '25 250

Reviewed by B. L. Melvin

Hist Outlook 16:404 D '25 420w

"Professor Williams is no stylist, but he does make the farmer live before his readers. His book, an inductive study in social psychology, with strong emphasis on economic determinism, deals intensively with a typical farm community in the State of New York. On the basis of this and data from other places are explained historically the attitudes and beliefs of much of the rural population of the United States." N. A. Crawford

+ — Int Bk R 26 D '25 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Tugwell

Nation 121:467 O 21 '25 600w

"It should not be judged that this book is written in a critical spirit. Rather is it written with sympathy and deep understanding. The present volume covers primarily the first or self-sufficient period of rural development. If the subsequent volume, soon to appear, is as interesting and full of information as this one, the two books will constitute one of the most important sociological studies of recent years." N: Roosevelt

+ N Y Times p10 My 17 '25 1250w

"The book is an ambitious attempt to do a very difficult thing. It is far from successful. Its author would be the first to admit that he has covered a very narrow field; but I feel that owing to a faulty method he has not done as much as may reasonably be required of him." Herbert Quick

— Sat R of Lit 1:773 My 23 '25 1150w

WILLIAMS, LINSLEY RUDD. Tuberculosis; nature, treatment and prevention. (National health council. National health ser.) 78p 30c Funk

616.246 Tuberculosis 24-11899

"Every one will . . . form his own opinion of how well Dr. Williams has accomplished the formidable effort to cover practically the entire subject of tuberculosis in not much more space than would ordinarily be devoted to a single lecture. But, whatever may be individual opinions, it may well be doubted whether any work now in existence will convey to the average mind, in less time and with less tax on the attention, as well balanced and as accurate a view of tuberculosis as will this little volume." (Introduction by Allen K. Krause) "The author is managing director of the National tuberculosis association." (Pittsburgh Mo Bul)

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:415 J1 '25

WILLIAMS, SIDNEY CLARK. Mystery in red. 320p $2 Penn

25-6313

"'Mystery in Red,' as the name implies, is along the same lines as the author's other novels. His story has for its scene a small island off the Massachusetts coast, and it includes the modern necessities of an up-to-date mystery tale, including gun-play, bootlegging and a whiff of motion-picture atmosphere. Three friends, Edward Anthony, Richard Delancey and Dr. Caswell, sail to the island for a brief holiday. Upon landing, a rather sinister stranger mistakes Delancey for a well-known motion picture producer, and Delancey, in an adventurous mood, does not enlighten him. His companions follow his lead, and within twenty-four hours find themselves deeply involved in intrigue."—Boston Transcript

"Mr. Williams has here a satisfactory plot, fully as good as the usual run of such fiction. His narration, however, is somewhat stiff, and his style, particularly as evidenced in his conversations, is a trifle stilted. The story is one that will doubtless satisfy the majority of its readers."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ap 15 '25 300w

Reviewed by L: Moore

Int Bk R p471 Je '25 20w

"A good yarn, but the title is a misnomer." Simeon Strunsky

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 5 '25 200w

"This might have been a very good story had not Mr. Williams, in his ambition to create mystery, so mystified the reader as regards the events and characters that it becomes rather heavy going at times." G. W. Wynne

— + N Y Tribune p11 Ap 26 '25 200w

"If there must be mystery stories (we are one who owns to a secret weakness for them), their quality could be immeasurably bettered were less creditable workers in the field to study Mr. Williams's prose as a guide to the mastery of pure and yet intensely vital diction."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:749 My 9 '25 250w

WILLIAMS, VALENTINE (DOUGLAS VALENTINE, 'VEDETTE, pseud.). Red mass. 310p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

25-2349

For insulting the Prince of Wales, Hector Fotheringay, officer of the King's Guards in the year 1794, is banished to Paris to act as spy during the days of the Revolution. In his first venture there, he meets Loison, a lonely little French girl, who risks her life to befriend him, and Hector in gratitude assumes the responsibility of the girl. Then begin for Hector and Loison a perilous existence filled with hazards and intrigues. They are finally haled before the Tribunal and sentenced to the guillotine, but the downfall of Robespierre delivers them from death, and they find happiness in their love for each other.

Booklist 21:305 My '25

"A thoroughly exciting tale where danger and adventure are worked up to a very high pitch and the delicate thread of love story adds to the excitement of the tale."

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 18 '25 450w

N Y Times p19 Ja 25 '25 620w

N Y Tribune p14 Ja 25 '25 220w

"It seems rather a hackneyed enterprise." J: W. Crawford

— N Y World p5m F 1 '25 550w

"Not a novel of distinction, but a lively plot story."

+ Outlook 139:230 F 11 '25 100w

Pratt p40 autumn '25

Spec 134:981 Je 13 '25 150w

"The historical setting is accurate and, as the story is told, the mass of adventure does not seem excessive."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p140 F 26 '25 220w

Wis Lib Bul 21:90 Mr '25

WILLIAMSON, MRS ALICE MURIEL (LIVINGSTON). Secret gold. 290p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Methuen]

25-3846

Story of search for hidden treasure in the desert country of the Southwest by a beautiful girl whose step-father leaves her a strange legacy. Under the protection of Dick Mannerling and his "aunt," Santa Raines begins her search, which is beset every step of the way by the murderous attempts of Hopi Jim, a renegade Indian. Dick several times shields the girl from her enemies and she in turn saves his life. The finding of the treasure brings to light the history of the legacy, and the beginning of another love story.

"Even as her story is of the mingling of old and new so it is the same quality which makes Mrs Williamson's style so attractive. To the modern zest for 'something happening' she has added the old-fashioned virtue of gentle grace." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 11 '25 800w
Cleveland p68 Je '25

"A well told tale and of great interest. Of course, the scenic descriptions—an average of one outburst to each chapter—are well done, but they are overdone."

+ — Lit R p10 Ja 31 '25 230w

"This is a really excellent story."

+ Nation and Ath 37:334 Je 13 '25 180w

"A clever and continuously fascinating mystery tale."

+ N Y Tribune p9 Ja 25 '25 270w

Springf'd Republican p7a O 25 '25 150w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Je 11 '25 150w

WILLIAMSON, HENRY. Sun brothers. 298p $2.50 Dutton

Animals—Stories and legends 25-10089

Eighteen intimate sketches of bird and animal life filled with tragedy, comedy and romance. Ravens and falcons, badgers and field-mice, rats and owls, and even a weed play the principal rôles. The opening tale of "Li'l Jearge" tells of a hurt field-mouse who in agony crawls into the dilapidated cabin of Granfer Jearge, a lonely decrepit old man whose only companions are affectionate rats. A strange friendship develops between Granfer and "Li'l Jearge" the field-mouse, but one day the old man is compelled to leave his tumble-down cabin, and "Li'l Jearge" comes to a tragic end. There is also the chronicle of Halbert, a little gutter-snipe, and his pet carrion-crow, Znarr, whose fighting instinct brought trouble to his master.

"A collection of sixteen animal stories that are only mildly sentimental, at times too obviously ironical, but which for the most part read like authentic tales. . . One of Mr Williamson's most annoying imperfections of style is his habit of transposing a sentence to achieve lyrical effect, and many of his sentences are awkward. But he has simplified his style since his first book, purified his perceptions, and he is expressing himself in a more fundamental fashion."

+ — N Y Tribune p9 Je 14 '25 400w

"The stories are vivid, splendidly written and grip the heart. The book is full of poetry in prose, color, and a vague, haunting sadness, so common since the war, but is lightened with hope—the hope of Life." J. O. Swift

+ N Y World p4m Je 21 '25 420w

Outlook 140:371 Jl 8 '25 10w

WILLIAMSON, THAMES ROSS. Run sheep run. 277p $2.50 Small

26-188

"In 'Run Sheep Run!' we are confronted with a quite unconventional novel of primal life and force. It is the story of a simple, taciturn clod, Bill, who has been a shepherd herding sheep for nine years in the Lost Mountains of California. Naturally, his story is constantly in a setting of beautiful scenery. It is realism—with a great deal of restrained exuberance—in a pastoral background."—N Y Times

WILLIAMSON, THAMES R.—Continued

"As a piece of psychology wherein is pictured the effect of solitude upon a man, the story is sound and sure. But may we ask why the author had to choose a shepherd whose evil instincts were far beyond the ordinary? The author knows and loves animals. He makes his readers feel deep and firm seated pity for the dog and the sheep which the herder mistreats. He also is well acquainted with nature in all its aspects. It is in the passages of nature description in which we see his poetic touch."

+ — Boston Transcript p5 N 21 '25 150w

"This novel has been written with delicacy of imagination and realistic insight. It reveals an elemental struggle of honest vigor, as distinguished from so much of our whining literature."

+ N Y Times p8 N 22 '25 650w

"Two hundred and thirty-six pages of this book are as good as 'Maria Chappelaine,' better certainly than anything that has come out of the Sierras since Muir's rare passages of lyric prose amidst his incoherencies. And at page 236, Mr. Williamson, who in his excellent narrative has been held to simplicity by the rough, simple talk of his characters (he was a herder once himself), suddenly breaks into emotional description and mars an otherwise perfect story with glub-glub about man 'with his mate at his side.'"

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:289 N 14 '25 380w

WILLIS, EOLA. Charleston stage in the XVIII² century, with social settings of the time. 483p $5 State co.

792 Theater—Charleston, South Carolina
25-1687

"This book is a useful addition to the history of the American stage. The author has gone to valuable new sources as well as to the old, familiar ones. In about one hundred of the nearly five hundred pages of text there are reprinted playbills, press announcements, lists of casts, and summaries of seasons, which are in the nature of genuine source-material. In these lies the very considerable value of the volume. These data are scattered through a text which is not so much a history as a running commentary of varying degrees of relevance."—Am Hist R

"The author and the book deserve commendation for the accumulation of useful material, but unhappily they do not deserve even faint praise for the method and manner in which the material has been presented."

+ — Am Hist R 31:178 O '25 400w

"An immense amount of careful research work has gone into the making of this ample volume, which offers a real contribution to the history of the stage in the United States. Her account is rendered still more valuable historically by her custom of frequently reinforcing her account of theatrical affairs with portrayals of the social life, the manners and customs and the general conditions of the town during the successive decades."

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 25 '25 450w

"This generously large volume preserves in excellent fashion the proud, picturesque dramatic past of a picturesque city with a colonial civilization full of color. No history of the American theater can be considered hereafter without consulting this book. And that is measure of its service."

+ Outlook 139:583 Ap 15 '25 350w

"Miss Willis has endeavored to produce a reliable book as well as an entertaining one. Her most important contribution, however, has been a reprinting of the casts of the early plays given in Charleston. For owing to her acquaintance with recent publications in her field she has rediscovered a great deal that is already known."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:382 D 5 '25 550w

"The pity is that Monsieur Audin and many of the other figures do not come completely to life by Miss Willis' own comments, which are too scarce and limited. Miss Willis has, however, provided a fully authenticated record of the Charleston stage, such as few of our Colonial cities have of their eighteenth century theatres, and one that is of rare interest and value to anyone desiring to understand fully our theatre backgrounds." J: M. Brown

+ — Theatre Arts Mo 9:277 Ap '25 620w

WILLOUGHBY, BARRETT. Rocking Moon.
360p $2 (7s 6d) Putnam

25-8268

"'Rocking Moon' is one of a group of islands off the western coast of Alaska, inhabited by Aleuts and by the descendants of the first Russian settlers. Here in order to restore her family's fortunes, Sasha, daughter of a priest of the Greek Russian Church has started a fox farm, and now, at the end of her second year, she is ready to sell some of her valuable animals. On a neighboring island is located the roving trader, Nicholas Nash, whose passionate love-making worries Sasha more than it pleases her. And into this scene, already rich with possibilities, comes, by strange accident, the young American, Gary Tynan, bringing no credentials, and with only his own personality as a voucher. In the absence of Sasha's chief helper, who has broken his arm, Gary goes to work on the fox farm. The story now proceeds with increasing impetus. . . The denouement is the natural outcome of the plot and the closing scenes are really exciting."—Lit R

"Barrett Willoughby, the writer of the story, has spent most of her life among the islands where the scene is laid. She knows the country, the Aleuts, the Russian-Americans, and how to mate primitive passion to a virgin country."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 24 '25 280w

Reviewed by Donald Douglas
Int Bk R p656 S '25 80w

"The author's backgrounds are excellent and the characters of the book are alive." Helen Wallerstein

+ — Lit R p4 Jl 11 '25 280w

"An unusual and fascinating subject."

+ Outlook 141:164 S 30 '25 40w

"It is a novelty if not a pleasure to find a writer of romances of the type of 'Rocking Moon' presenting a new setting."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a My 24 '25 280w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Je 11 '25 180w

WILLOUGHBY, WESTEL WOODBURY. Opium as an international problem, the Geneva conferences. 585p $4.50 Johns Hopkins

178.8 Opium 25-11931

"Professor Willoughby's book may be described as semi-official in character, being a report upon the work of the two opium conferences recently held in Geneva. There is a long chapter on the international situation as it was in 1924, before the Conference at which Mr. Porter and the American delegation took the action that made the question once again a matter of acute international controversy. This is followed by a summary of the Conference proceedings, and chapters on the different forms and uses of opium, general conclusions and the text of the most important documents."—New Statesman

"It enjoys the advantage which any volume coming from the pen of its distinguished author would enjoy, namely, that of orderly arrangement, clear exposition, detailed treatment, and well-focussed interpretation." P. B. P.

+ Am Pol Sci R 19:855 N '25 180w

"This volume is a really splendid piece of restrained, calm exposition and historical narrative which is written throughout in a spirit of emotion, but always fully documented and thoroughly controlled. It should rank as one of those historic presentations of unanswerable logic which are the more forceful for being human."

+ Ind 115:163 Ag 8 '25 200w
Nation 121:582 N 18 '25 30w

"The volume is highly serviceable, and is a companion to Professor Willoughby's China at the Conference, written after the Washington discussions of 1922."

+ New Statesman 26:124 N 7 '25 120w

WILM, EMIL CARL, ed. Immanuel Kant, 1724-1924; by George Herbert Palmer (and others). 88p $2 Yale univ. press

193 Kant, Immanuel 25-5491

These eight addresses given in Boston, on the two-hundredth anniversary of Kant's birth, epitomize the life and work of this man who left his impress upon every subject of philosophic thought. Contents: Opening words, by George Herbert Palmer; Knowledge, by Mary Whiton Calkins; Ethics, by E. C. Wilm; The postulates, by William Ernest Hocking; Science, by Harlow Shapley; Art, by Kuno Francke; Law, by Roscoe Pound; Peace, by Gerhart von Schulze-Gaevernitz.

Booklist 22:7 O '25

"Kant is split up, so to speak, and each fragment is dealt with by a master in his own field. We might add that such a plan has its disadvantages; but in this instance it makes for a fairly intelligible mosaic." N. R. C.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 23 '25 380w

Reviewed by B. Ginzburg
N Y Tribune p11 Ap 26 '25 680w

WILSON, DAVID ALEC. Carlyle on Cromwell and others (1837-48). 421p il $5 Dutton [15s K. Paul]

B or 92 Carlyle, Thomas

"Here is the third volume of this new Life of Carlyle. It covers one of the most vigorous periods of his life. The chief point of interest in this book is the story of how Carlyle came to write Oliver Cromwell's Letters and Speeches—not only one of his greatest works but the first successful attempt to vindicate the life and character of the hitherto condemned historical Puritan."—Publisher's note

"His biography is finely documented and his pictures of main and subordinate characters well drawn."

+ Ind 116:50 Ja 9 '26 80w

Reviewed by Stanley Williams
+ Lit R p3 Ja 2 '26 850w

"Mr. Wilson's method is highly original and illuminative, and one not likely to be imitated by the professional biographer." Augustine Birrell

+ Nation and Ath 37:573 Ag 8 '25 1400w

"He was one who desired a world to his pattern, and could not imagine that there was merit or utility in services to mankind which did not conform to his own intense but narrow standards. It is this unlovely aspect of his genius which has made him fall so out of favour with a later generation. That disfavour has gone much too far; and Mr. Wilson's biography will do a useful work if it turns our attention to this figure in our literature, a figure which is, of all the men of that time, most symbolic of the unease which overcame our world in the days of the industrial revolution."

New Statesman 26:120 N 7 '25 1200w

N Y Times p14 Ja 10 '26 2300w

"Mr. Wilson provides such a feast of good things that it seems ungracious to criticize him. It is impossible, however, to accept his judgment when he departs from the path of the biographer and assumes the function of the historian. These mistakes, however, do not seriously detract from the value of this admirable book."

+ — Sat R 140:192 Ag 15 '25 650w

"Here we have a judicious selection of Carlyle's comments on all manner of men and all manner of questions. While the principal literary subject of the book is Carlyle's work on Cromwell, the personal record of the Carlyles and their acquaintances is of preponderating interest."

+ Springf'd Republican p14 Ja 1 '26 580w

"Mr. Wilson, in spite of his curious way of adding abrupt little chapters together, and his undignified habit of hustling the characters condemned by Carlyle off the stage with kicks of his own, like an overzealous doorkeeper, creates the atmosphere at which he aims, a deep and luminous serenity crossed but not quenched by squalls."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p477 J1
16 '25 2300w

WILSON, ERNEST HENRY. America's greatest garden. 123p il $3 Stratford

582 Harvard university. Arnold Arboretum.
Trees. Shrubs 25-11600

The Arnold Arboretum, a branch of Harvard university, is devoted to the acclimatization, cultivation and study of hardy trees and shrubs and in this particular field is without a peer the world over. In this volume Mr Wilson, the assistant director of the Arboretum, describes many of its beauty spots. There are fifty charming illustrations, mostly from photographs by the author.

Reviewed by Mrs Schuyler Van Rensselaer
Atlantic's Bookshelf O '25 460w

Booklist 22:60 N '25

"He pictures America's greatest garden in a way that will appeal to the layman as well as the dendrologist. The book has fifty full-page illustrations of the beautiful wooded plants for which the Arboretum is famous."

+ Ind 115:80 J1 18 '25 60w

"The author of this exposition of the Arnold Arboretum has been for several years its assistant director and the thorough knowledge of its features with which he writes is complemented by his love for its beauty, interest in its usefulness and keen appreciation of the service it can render. His own satisfaction in its varied loveliness is constantly manifest and is the more engaging because of an occasional quaintness and unconventionality of expression."

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 2 '25 1550w

"In firm, verbal vignettes he presents the passage of the four seasons in this unrivalled horticultural treasure-trove. Out of the 6,000 species and varieties which the Arboretum now contains he selects some of the best for specific mention, and in doing so contrives to register a composite impression of the whole assemblage that is surprisingly well defined." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Tribune p16 S 27 '25 450w

Reviewed by Norman Taylor

Sat R of Lit 2:465 Ja 2 '26 250w

"The book will surely lure many new visitors to stop en route or make a special trip to see what thousands annually already enjoy in the edge of metropolitan Boston."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 D 23 '25 280w

WILSON, GROVE. Man of strife. 348p $2 Maurice

25-21212

"Bruce Darton is the man of strife, racked by the dualism of sentiment and intense individualism, at odds with his world, struggling ineffectually to slip from the circle in which his life moves. First appearing as city editor of a Minnesota daily, he can stand as a composite of types that may be found in any big news-room. His life as projected by the author falls into three divisions, the first while his mother lived, a kindred spirit, each warming the other with mutual understanding; the second when Darton's interest was bound up wholly in his son, to the gradual exclusion of his wife; the third when the war came and gray-eyed Margaret tumbled the walls of self-sufficiency that he had reared around himself."—Lit R

WILSON, GROVE—Continued

"The story is well written and has many dramatic situations, but it is a morbid, gloomy picture."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 D 19 '25 280w

"What the book needs is some steady continuity. A certain quiet pace of development, a little less excitement of language, and this would stand as a very solid contribution to the realistic American novel upon a social section that has not been overtreated." L. R. Gottschalk

+ — Int Bk R p64 D '25 450w

Reviewed by J: J. McLaughlin

Lit R p5 N 7 '25 420w

"A disjointed story, with much action and little significance, yet touching in sudden moments an emotional reality which elevates it all too briefly."

+ Nation 121:764 D 30 '25 60w

"Mr. Wilson's book is full of fine thinking, true thinking and emotional intensity. Bruce Dalton, man of strife, struggles his way through pages alternately sordid, agonized, exalted and piteous. Environment and heredity play their crushing parts, painted with hard staccato phrases and words darkly dramatic. It is this headline sensationalism which often mars the beauty of the writing and makes it indigestible." M. M.

+ — New Repub 45:171 D 30 '25 180w

"Most heroes in most American novels are, in a fashion, good salesmen; that is to say, they are on the surface at least palatable and ingratiating; they dare not be disliked seriously, else they will not sell. Yet Bruce Darton, hero of a strange feather in this somehow amazing book, is not pleasant for the sake of selling, nor is he a pose. He is the physiological and psychological outgrowth of old seed in newly tilled ground, of old honors scattered in bewildering dishonors, of sound ethics blasted by mediocre ethics."

N Y Times p14 O 25 '25 620w

"Grove Wilson's 'Man of Strife' is the first simple and sympathetic picture of the typical temperament that goes into the making of a daily newspaper. Mr. Wilson has achieved sharp, clear, definition by focusing upon a single character. The crazy, casual business of getting out the sheet and its ardors, fascinations and recompenses, has at last been convincingly set down." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y World p4m O 11 '25 600w

"'Man of Strife' is reasonably true to American detail, and the story of Bruce Darton can be followed through with some interest. But it will probably seem more significant if the reader have in mind all the time the outcome; for the outcome is perhaps underemphasized if we are to regard it as the author's interpretation of what has gone before. It presents his theme too suddenly and briefly for instant realization."

+ — Spring'd Republican p7a N 15 '25 280w

WILSON, HARRY LEON. Cousin Jane. 388p $2 Cosmopolitan bk.

25-21775

Ten year old Jane is brought from a fashionable school to the decaying grandeur of an old California house and introduced to the grown-up cousins who are all that is left of the family: cousin Sally, beautiful, rebellious, who runs away with the silver doorknobs to buy her way into "life"; cousin Wiley, scouting invalidism and facing life with a flourish from his bed; cousin Marcy cynically mocking them both. It is a queer environment for little Jane, fresh, unsophisticated and eager. Yet as the years go by, life in the old house is not without its breath of adventure and when the time comes that Jane is free to go or stay, there is a new little cousin in the shabby old house, and the cycle is ready to repeat itself again.

Boston Transcript p3 D 5 '25 340w

"Two literary traditions blend and blossom in this new novel, namely, those of Charles Dickens and Bret Harte. This union is a most happy one. It means a truly and purely American novel comparable to the works of the greatest among the Victorians." Edwin Bjorkman

+ Lit R p2 N 21 '25 600w

"The novel mirrors life with a glowing, delicate, yet searching, curiously enveloping observation. Jane might have been a Cinderella, if she weren't too human. There is no character in the exquisite writings of Katherine Mansfield that has been developed with defter portrayal of nuance, mood, sympathy or understanding than this of Jane."

+ N Y Times p8 N 8 '25 850w

"The story would seem static were it not for the manner of its telling. Mr. Wilson's laughter of the past is tempered with pathos; but if his humor has lost in uproariousness, it has gained in the quality of its charm. Mr. Wilson is to be congratulated on his graceful escape into new pastures." Ruth Seinfeld

+ N Y Tribune p21 D 6 '25 820w

"Mr. Wilson, like all comedians and humorous jesters, likes to play practical jokes on his audience. He succeeds in interesting us deeply in the development of this genuine young person—Jane—who grows better and better as the story moves on. Then, just at the opportune moment when the fairies are flying gayly out of the long-closed box of her future, we behold it empty again and the lid slammed down upon its vacancy. Of course we are outraged."

+ — Outlook 142:74 Ja 13 '26 120w

"Two hundred and thirty-seven pages of 'Cousin Jane' are as good as anything in American fiction, and that is enough to prove that Mr. Wilson may be Mr. Howells's successor, and better, if he wishes to leave satire for the ampler study of human nature viewed all round. At page 237 Mr. Wilson wearies of human character and seeks in his old merry fashion to have some fun with the human race. And though Jane returns to reality the story never quite recovers its immense possibilities nor adds to its real achievement."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:289 N 14 '25 450w

WILSON, LILLIAN MAY. Roman toga. (Johns Hopkins univ. studies in archaeology) 132p il $5 Johns Hopkins

391 Costume

25-2260

"[The author] has evidently searched diligently through Roman and Greek writings for every possible reference to the toga, and not merely visited and studied hundreds of statues and sculptured memorials in museums and galleries in this country and abroad, but she has measured and reproduced in different kinds of cloth the models of this famous garment. In many cases she presents photographs of young men wearing or in the act of donning the toga so as to show it in contrast or similitude of ancient examples. There are about a hundred of these pictures, including the outline measurements. Her idea is to furnish correct patterns to students and others who should wish to present in pageantry or on the stage scenes from Roman life."—Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 14 '25 500w

"The book is well and carefully written. It is naturally difficult to explain the form of any complicated dress like the toga without the aid of a visible demonstration. But the utmost pains have been taken in every case to make form and draping clear to the reader. . . The crowning merit of this study is, of course, the many diagrams and large, clear photographs not only of all the toga forms but of the process of draping them. The author takes nothing for granted but by parallel photographs of sculptures and togated models she shows the actual correspondence of the shapes she has worked out to their ancient counterparts." H. L. Axtell

+ Mod Philol 20:186 Ap '25 1000w

"An extraordinary study of a famous garment, based upon researches in Roman sculpture and literature of all periods."
+ Nation 120:441 Ap 15 '25 50w

WILSON, MARGARET (MRS G. D. TURNER) (ELIZABETH WEST and ELDERLY SPINSTER, pseud.). The Kenworthys. 385p $2 Harper

25-15984

A foolish quarrel over a book ends an engagement that might have meant perfect happiness for two people. Within six months Jim finds a bride who seems to promise all that he has lost, and some time later Emily, married to his younger brother Bob, becomes the daughter his mother's heart has craved. The disastrous ending of Jim's marriage sends him back to his mother for her unflinching comfort and healing. There he and Emily are brought together again. Their love remains unacknowledged, but is a conscious, potent factor in all that follows. Jim's hard, sullen, defiant, almost savage young son comes into Emily's home. The boy's life under his mother's roof has left its ugly mark upon him. With the utmost gentleness and skill Emily tries to win him over to his father. Then begins the tender, searching love story of father and son.

Booklist 22:120 D '25

"Aside from the ethical tangles the story is rather original and interesting. The whole book, with its earnest muddle of melodrama, propaganda, ingenuousness and ingenuity, is quite readable." Isabel Paterson

+ Bookm 62:85 S '25 450w

"A novel of much merit."

+ Ind 115:332 S 19 '25 40w

Int Bk R p826 N '25 780w

"With this book she goes definitely into the short list of authentic American novelists. She is a trifle heavy, a trifle long; the perfect artistry of Willa Cather and of Edith Wharton at her best she will probably never have; but she covers in this book American ground heretofore unbroken, and she does it with a steadiness, a seeing of things whole, an unafraidness in carrying through, an unswerving and loyal quality, which sets her permanently above the little writers." L. T. Nicholl

+ Lit R p2 S 12 '25 550w

"Margaret Wilson has done more, this time, than write a clever novel. She has shown a mastery of her material which marks her for the future." Hazelton Spencer

+ New Repub 44:132 S 23 '25 400w

"It is, apparently, a novel with a purpose, yet that purpose leaves a vague and diffused impression upon the reader's mind. Miss Wilson's weakest point is dialogue, and she indulges herself in endless and irrelevant stretches of conversation, which is seldom convincing. 'The Kenworthys' is almost painfully a genteel novel. Its tacit acceptance of certain items of belief are almost ludicrously a confirmation of Mr. Mencken's 'American Credo.'"

— N Y Times p6 Ag 23 '25 700w

"This is a foolish book, although its predecessor, 'The Able McLaughlins,' won the Harper novel prize and the Pulitzer prize for 1923. That fact lends the present volume a rather fictitious importance; without some such background, 'The Kenworthys' would undoubtedly be allowed to slip quietly into the beyond that welcomes unimportant and uninteresting books." Freda Kirchwey

— N Y Tribune p2 S 6 '25 1000w

"I am disappointed and puzzled by 'The Kenworthys.' It is thin and hectic and long-drawn-out; equally sentimental and disagreeable; there is nothing much worse than that in a novel." H. W. Boynton

— Outlook 141:126 S 23 '25 80w

"'The Kenworthys' is not so striking a novel as 'The Able McLaughlins,' chiefly because its setting and characters are far less fresh and unusual. But if not a work of high distinction, it shows that Miss Wilson is to be counted a permanent addition to our list of novelists." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:191 O 10 '25 850w

"The novel cannot be dismissed summarily. If one is disappointed, it is because one expects much (perhaps too much) of the author. In a time when smartness is at a premium Miss Wilson has kept a calm mood and a reasonable as well as humane point of view. Her style is not remarkable, but neither is it offensively mannered. Sturdiness, self-respect, kindness, are qualities not too common in contemporary writing and therefore to be honored."

+ — Spring'd Republican p5a S 13 '25 600w

Reviewed by Walter Millis

Survey 55:310 D 1 '25 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p741 N 5 '25 180w

Wis Lib Bul 21:232 O '25

WILSON, MAY, comp. Special libraries directory; ed. by Rebecca B. Rankin, introd. by John Cotton Dana. 2d ed 254p $4 Special libraries assn., 195 Broadway, N.Y.

026 Libraries, Special. Libraries—Directories 25-26593

Nine hundred and seventy-five special libraries with the names of their librarians, number of volumes, the class of service rendered, and important subject headings for each library, are listed in the new edition of this useful directory. Geographic, title, personnel and subject indexes are included.

"General type and make-up of this second edition have been improved and its usefulness greatly increased by the addition of title and personnel indexes."

+ Booklist 21:394 J1 '25

Chem & Met Eng 32:878 N '25 70w

"Comments as to omissions are made with the realization of the difficulties of the task of making up a directory in a new and rapidly growing field. The volume as a whole is commendable. If given the wide support it deserves, its completeness and usefulness will be increased accordingly."

+ — Eng N 95:846 N 19 '25 380w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:25 Ap '25

WILSON, ROBERT FORREST. Paris on parade. 356p il $5 Bobbs

914.436 Paris—Description. Paris—Social life and customs 25-23276

As its title implies, this book is all about the gaieties and vanities of Paris—the great dress-making houses and the industries that cater to women's adornment, restaurants and dining, cabarets, the gathering-places of the Latin Quarter, etc. There is a chapter on the American colony and another on the Paris underworld.

"In this study, whose alluring illustrations are all reproductions of famous paintings, Mr. Wilson does more than describe. He does more even than interpret. He makes the very stones of Paris human." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 21 '25 1150w

"Mr. Wilson writes of Paris as one who really knows Parisian life, at least as much Parisian life as an intelligent foreigner can expect to know and understand. His book is instructive, amusing, and eminently sincere."

+ Ind 115:534 N 7 '25 160w

WILSON, ROBERT F.—Continued

"Mr. Wilson has caught the spirit of the city in more ways than one. Probably some of the most pleasurable research work in the world was done in preparing to write the chapter 'An Apératif on the Terrace.' The charm of the book is doubled by the characteristic and beautiful paintings of the city by A. G. Warshawsky, which are reproduced as illustrations."

+ Outlook 142:32 Ja 6 '26 400w

"Here is a genial book about several sides of Paris, that is nicely calculated to provoke in American hearts that endemic ailment, the wanderlust. His book is one to interest the old friend of Paris, as much as the wistful would-be traveler."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:325 N 21 '25 220w

WILSON, THOMAS. Discourse upon usury (1572); with an historical introd. by R. H. Tawney. (Classics of social and political science) 392p $5 Harcourt [15s Bell]

332.8 Interest and usury 25-3588

"Thomas Wilson, Secretary of State, diplomatist, scholar and lay Dean of Durham, published in 1572 a discourse on usury, 'by way of dialogue and oration for the better variety and more delight of all those that shall read this treatise.' Mr. Tawney has republished this work in the Classics of Social and Political Science because it is typical of the argument that was urged against usury in the famous controversy of the sixteenth century. The origin, circumstances and course of that controversy are described in an introduction of 170 pages [by Mr Tawney]."—New Statesman

"In the introduction Mr. Tawney gives an account of the types of borrowers and of the credit system of the time. He modestly apologizes for its length, but the student will value it for that reason. Not only does it throw light on one of the most interesting aspects of early economic thought, but it provides a basis for a clear understanding of these institutions upon which the complex economic structure of to-day has been built."

+ Nation and Ath 36:753 F 28 '25 650w

"Mr. Tawney has made out of Dr. Wilson's half-forgotten treatise a book that is indispensable no less to students of politics than to economic historians." H. J. Laski

+ New Repub 42:105 Mr 18 '25 1000w

"[In the introduction] Mr. Tawney's special gifts, his scholarship, his wit, and the rare charm and distinction of his prose, are all displayed to the greatest advantage."

+ New Statesman 24:749 Ap 4 '25 1550w

Reviewed by H. R. Mussey

N Y Tribune p12 My 10 '25 620w

Pratt p9 autumn '25

"The work is a valuable addition to the library of economic science."

+ Sat R 139:334 Mr 28 '25 200w

"Mr. Tawney's is altogether a very 'live' volume. It puts new meaning into Elizabethan history, and therefore makes it more modern. There are a few trifling slips and some misprints."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p261 Ap 16 '25 1650w

"If the republication of Dr. Wilson's treatise serves no other purpose than to give Mr. Tawney an opportunity to present to the public his admirable introduction on the social and economic life of the Elizabethan England, it is more than justified. But lest we forget Dr. Wilson's contribution may we say that the author succeeds remarkably well in marshalling in his quaint sixteenth century English the chief arguments against usury which theologians had urged during the first six centuries of the Christian era. Throughout the book throws a flood of light on the effect of economic change upon ethical and religious codes." H. W. Laidler

+ World Tomorrow 8:253 Ag '25 400w

WILSON, VIOLET ALICE (MORLAND) (MRS ALEXANDER ROBERT GRAHAM WILSON). Society women of Shakespeare's time. 259p il $5 Dutton

942.05 Great Britain—Court and courtiers. England—Social life and customs [25-5637]

"England is a Paradise for women," so ran a popular sixteenth century saying. The high regard in which they were held in Queen Elizabeth's time, the effect partly of the popular idolization of the great queen herself, gave women opportunity for a freedom and influence equalled only in modern times. Among these women who left their impress on the life of their times were the learned Lady Russell, Lady Barbara Sidney, the beautiful Penelope Rich, immortalized in Sir Philip Sidney's sonnets to Stella, and Ann, countess of Warwick. Mrs Wilson binds together her sketches of these and other women in a continuous narrative illustrating the history and society of Shakespeare's England.

Boston Transcript p5 Je 20 '25 850w

"Brilliant study of certain great ladies of the days of Elizabeth and James First. Tho it gives the history of more than one tragic episode, Miss Wilson's is on the whole a gay book, full of color, vivid, aglow with tingling enjoyment of life and luxury and laughter." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p600 Ag '25 1000w

"It is gossipy but rather of the slangy, journalistic sort. One feels that there is little serious knowledge of her subject behind these somewhat fanciful sketches of Elizabethan women."

— New Statesman 24:538 F 14 '25 250w

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey

N Y Times p5 Ja 25 '25 1900w (Same as Spec)

"No book about such vital and forthright persons could fail to repay reading." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Tribune p4 Ag 9 '25 1450w

Outlook 141:293 O 21 '25 200w

"Mrs. Wilson's work stands apart. She is the able craftswoman. In method and manner, tone and texture, she eludes fault-finding."

+ Sat R 139:33 Ja 10 '25 550w

"There can be no question as to the fascination of Mrs. Wilson's book. It is delightful in itself, and it throws many beams of illumination upon the women of Shakespeare's time and enhances even their charm." J. St L. Strachey

+ Spec 134:79 Ja 17 '25 1900w

"Entertaining and carefully constructed work."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 14 '25 450w

"There is some useful and entertaining matter in this agreeable book. One must look askance at the first sentence of the preface: 'Shakespeare's heroines undoubtedly had their origin in the society women of the time'; but the book turns out, to our relief, not to be one more attempt to find a source in real life for every word that Shakespeare wrote."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p874 D 18 '25 320w

WILSON, WARREN HUGH. Farmer's church. (Century rural life bks.) 264p $2 Century

261 Country church 25-8803

The author, a specialist in rural sociology and organizer of the Department of rural education in Teachers' college, surveys the church in its broad relationships to country life. He shows the connection between the widespread dissatisfaction of the farmers and the decline of the country church, and he makes clear how great is the need of a religious motive in an occupation so exacting as farming. The development of the country church movement is sketched and some of the ways by which the church can become of greater usefulness in the rural community are outlined.

Outlook 140:33 My 6 '25 10w

"Dr. Wilson has portrayed here in colorful language the problems which confront the country church and the country pastor. His book is brimful of inspirational suggestions of what the church might and must be if it is to survive as a vital influence in the social and spiritual life of our rural communities."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:900 JI 11 '25 180w

Wis Lib Bul 21:140 My '25

WILSON, WOODROW. Public papers, college and state; educational, literary and political papers (1875-1913); ed. by Ray Stannard Baker and William E. Dodd. 2v 521:523p $7 (30s) Harper

308

(25-3224)

"The Public Papers of Woodrow Wilson' is the authorized collection, in six volumes, of the addresses, messages and other writings of President Wilson. The first two volumes, here presented, cover the preparatory period of 'College and State,' from the earliest published writing, an essay on 'Prince Bismarck,' signed Atticus, prepared while Mr. Wilson was a sophomore at Princeton, to March 4, 1913, when he became President of the United States. None of these papers is included in any of Mr. Wilson's published books. The other four volumes of the series will contain Mr. Wilson's messages to Congress, and other great public papers of the Presidency, including the more important addresses, especially those made in Europe, and significant published letters."—Preface

Booklist 21:330 Je '25

"Any statesman is sure, ultimately, of a long and happy renown who leaves behind him writings so free of partisan bias and so full of everyday wisdom as make up these two volumes of 'The Public Papers of Woodrow Wilson,' written prior to his inauguration as President and not contained in any of his books. His final acts, as he understood his duty, which were made the object of fierce partisan attack, partly in the way of electoral strategy, are still in the maelstrom of politics. But apart from whether the judgment of the country swings wholly back to his side, the time is opportune for considering his opinions and influence previous to his responsibility for certain vexed questions that emerged from the greatest war affecting human destiny." C. C. Buel

+ Lit R p2 My 23 '25 800w

"We are not likely to understand Mr. Wilson unless we take into account the story of his career before he became President. In 'College and State' we have a collection of his speeches and essays covering the years between his undergraduate days and his governorship of New Jersey. They are not for the most part very distinguished productions, but they are interesting for the light they throw on his career." Kingsley Martin

+ — Nation and Ath 37:110 Ap 25 '25 1350w

"These volumes will be read, and will deserve to be read, both for the many felicitous passages and the much valuable criticism on government, politics, and education they contain, and for the considerable (though less considerable than could be wished) light they throw on the intellectual development of one of the most interesting and important men of recent times."

+ — Outlook 140:266 Je 17 '25 360w

"One cannot read these papers without feeling the charm and mastery of the man who wrote them. He had a gay wit that startles and fascinates. He dealt with hearer and reader in words of challenge and defiance, and yet with graciousness and courtesy. He speaks to bankers and tells them what bankers might do and do not do. He has the same message for the lawyers, for the teachers, for the ministers. And when he speaks to the descendants of New England he gaily explains the virtues which New England did not possess. All in all, whether or not one agree with him, one must admire and thrill at the gallantry of his spirit." Alexander Meiklejohn

+ Sat R of Lit 1:785 My 30 '25 1900w

"While no one of Wilson's utterances reaches the heights of eloquence and literary perfection of Lincoln's Gettysburg address, nevertheless, the writer of this review after turning from a reading of several of Lincoln's most masterful efforts cannot escape the conclusion that a number of Wilson's addresses will not suffer in a comparison with these, not only in loftiness of purpose and clearness of vision but in logical precision of statement and felicity of expression generally." L. H. Gipson

+ Sat R of Lit 1:820 Je 13 '25 1300w

"Some of the earlier papers were hardly worth publishing except from the point of view of showing Mr. Wilson's development from the neatness but ineffectualness of the literary undergraduate to the maturity and power of the statesman."

Spec 135:339 Ag 29 '25 180w

"Mr. Wilson's literary executors have done good service to his memory in preparing an authoritative collection of his public papers. During the years when he had the ear first of his country and then of the world, he used a method of address without parallel in European records. His messages were written, documents composed in the study amid every circumstance of elaborate reflection. They were written, however, not so much to be read as to be heard. Though they have the poise of measured wisdom and never assume the unpremeditated air of oratory, their every sentence hints at search for the cadence of the spoken word. The student of Mr. Wilson's career will therefore need an unimpeachable text of these messages, based on their author's own corrected manuscripts; and this text will be supplied by the future volumes of the present series."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p232 Ap 2 '25 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 21:194 JI '25

WILSTACH, PAUL. Along the Pyrenees. 302p il $4 Bobbs

914.4 Pyrenees, France—Description and travel. Spain—Description and travel

25-4932

The author approached the Pyrenees by way of Toulouse and did most of his travelling on the French side of the great wall between France and Spain, since "the French mountains are the real wonderland of the Pyrenees." He crossed and recrossed the boundary several times, going into Andorra and again into the Basque country at the western end of the Pyrenees. History and legend are combined with description.

Booklist 21:299 My '25

"Now and then, even the most sedate will find himself tripping rhythmically to the accompaniment of lutes and the songs of forgotten troubadours, and at no time will the journey be a wearisome one."

+ Bookm 61:600 JI '25 200w

"The writer's style is agreeable, his matter well informed and arranged, while the volume itself is a notably satisfactory one, with its generous illustrations and careful indexing."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 8 '25 150w

Cleveland p55 Je '25

"This is one of the most entertaining as well as one of the best written books of travel that have appeared in many months, a breezy account of a wandering through and around the romantic Pyrenees country that is worthy of a place beside Hilaire Belloc's volume on the same subject." Sherril Schell

+ Lit R p16 Mr 28 '25 520w

"A book that is entertaining throughout." S. A. Coblenz

+ N Y Times p15 My 10 '25 850w

"There is a great deal more in this book than the mere information. Facts and physical descriptions there are in plenty, and there is also a charming background of history and art and lore of all sort."

+ N Y Tribune p9 Mr 15 '25 620w

WILSTACH, PAUL—Continued

N Y World p4m F 1 '25 280w

"This is a book of uncommon freshness and variety, and notable as well for its beautiful half-tone illustrations."

+ Outlook 139:425 Mr 18 '25 200w

"This should be a valuable guidebook, for he has done nothing that is impossible to the most casual traveller. But for pure enjoyment and fireside consumption, Mr. Wilstach's volume falls far short of other books upon the Pyrenees and the far corners of France and Spain."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:653 Ap 4 '25 300w

"Mr. Wilstach has claimed too much for his book, is too inclined to generalize on a small acquaintance with the country, and by his very title suggests a comprehensiveness which he is far from displaying. But the book, in its very limited way, is a good book. The author chats agreeably about history, legend, custom and old buildings, and is not insensible to the beauty of mountain views, though his were for the most part but worm's-eye views."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p687 O 22 '25 560w

WILSTACH, PAUL. Jefferson and Monticello. 258p il $5 Doubleday

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas. Monticello, Virginia 25-8549

Mr Wilstach tells the story of Thomas Jefferson and his beautiful home at Monticello, which the young Virginian built on a mountain top, from plans of his own drawing inspired by the great Palladio. His home for fifty years, it was the fulfilment of the fond desire: "All my wishes end where I hope my days will end, at Monticello." Mr Wilstach follows the history of the home after the death of its master and today's movement to free it from debt and make it a permanent memorial to Jefferson.

Ann Am Acad 122:265 N '25 100w

Booklist 22:31 O '25

"Mr. Wilstach's book is intelligently but unevenly written. He quotes liberally from Jefferson's notes and correspondence, and from diaries and books written about Monticello and Jefferson's life there. He gives an interesting picture of the old man on his estate. But Mr. Wilstach sticks to facts. He does not venture into the realms of interpretation." C: C. Colt

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 25 '25 1000w
Cleveland p113 D '25

"Mr. Wilstach has written a book as pleasant as it is enlightening."

+ N Y Times p19 My 31 '25 900w

"Told simply and straightforwardly with a wealth of detail that leaves little to be desired." W: MacDonald

+ N Y Tribune p14 Je 14 '25 650w

N Y World p6m Ap 19 '25 500w

R of Rs 71:558 My '25 200w

Sat R of Lit 1:863 Je 27 '25 400w

WILTSHIRE, MARY. Thursday's child. 256p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Mills & B.]

25-17121

The story has a conventional beginning. Thursday's child is born of a fresh-cheeked country maid and the son of the house whose intentions are better than his deeds. Martha goes home in disgrace. Her mother receives her with fury, her gentle father with despair. Her little son is born with a contradictory heritage; something of the manor house and something of the cottage mingle in his blood. His grandfather alone gives the child love and companionship. His stern old grandmother hates him, his listless mother is indifferent. When Jacob is eighteen his grandmother, in a fit of temper that costs her her life, tells him about his birth. He leaves home to join the army. The latter half of the story follows his career along the high road he sets himself to travel.

"An earnest but mediocre novel."

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 23 '25 220w

"The tale is less powerful than it might be; if it commanded emotion as readily as belief, it would be a very memorable novel—instead of being, as it is, no more than sound, pleasant and workmanlike."

+ N Y Tribune p10 O 4 '25 550w

"In the course of his headlong ascent to military eminence and renown, the hero passes through every rank to the attainment of an acting Lieutenant-General's command in the last year of the World War. One realizes that he is a remarkably fast and efficient worker, though how he manages it all we are left at a loss to explain. Possibly we are unfair to cite these instances of the book's vagueness and omissions, for apart from them it is an exceptionally readable and satisfying novel."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:163 S 26 '25 230w

Springf'd Republican p7a O 4 '25 280w

"This story does not err on the side of profundity, but its character-drawing is straightforward and convincing as far as it goes."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p370 My 28 '25 120w

WIND; anonymous. 337p $2 (7s 6d) Harper

26-137

The stranger on the train was right. Sweetwater was nothing the name implied. In place of the charming village Letty had visioned she saw a desolate tract of sand dotted with a few straggling houses. Miles from the town itself lay her cousin's ranch—a bare unpainted house in the West Texas plain, full in the pitiless path of the wind. The wind! The stranger on the train had been right about that, too. It moaned about the house, beat against the windows in sudden frenzy, or blew with an insistent crescendo that maddened the sensitive listener. It maddened Letty. It drove her with tragic inevitability from the first folly to the second and from the second to the third and final one. In spite of its sombre theme, the book draws humor from the cowboy pals, Lige and Sourdough.

"The story is real, but too severe and too unrelenting. It goes to completion too soon, and as a result it lacks balance; but the treatment of the characters and the setting incline us to the opinion that the author shows promise."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 23 '25 300w

"The power of the wind beating down and finally destroying the helpless girl, whose inequality dooms her from the first, has a real effect on the reader. In the hands of a finer artist it might have roused deeper terror, it might have had a subtler and yet more cumulative force. The author writes fluently and sometimes drivingly, but a book like this, so serious in intention and large in scope, should be distinguished, and not just well done." L: Kronenberger

+ Int Bk R p132 Ja '26 450w

New Repub 45:93 D 9 '25 60w

"The writing has a somewhat monotonous, but all the more appropriate, power." P. C. Kennedy
New Statesman 26:178 N 21 '25 100w

"The Wind," belongs to that type of story which followed the success of the late Emerson Hough in striving to recreate in fiction form the pioneering period in various parts of the country. Its detailed pictures of the conditions faced by the early settlers in the great Southwest should commend it to the large public who enjoyed 'The Covered Wagon,' though it lacks that particular story's sweep and variety."

+ N Y Times p8 O 25 '25 720w

"The ending of 'The Wind' is one of those uncommon endings which come back to the reader for an uncomfortably long time after the book is closed. And the whole book has an emotion and a strong spirit which triumph over some rather crude writing and a remarkable number of exclamation points, that leave me wondering if, after all, a novel can be better than its style." Frances Newman

+ N Y Tribune p11 D 20 '25 560w

"Largeness of theme usually seems to make for sombreness. In this case it has not done so. There is a quick and delightful humor in the gallery of portraits, and the flashes of the old dry speech—alas, too nearly forgotten—of the old American—are as authentic as they are amusing." Margaret Widdemer

+ N Y World p1m O 18 '25 400w

"One might expect such a mood as produces the marble-like poetry of 'Maria Chapdelaine.' But in 'The Wind' there is a different type of poetry, the poetry of realism. The old West,—with its picturesque slang, its humor, its ballad-making, its legends of Indians and pioneers, its wild imagination,—is again revealed to us, not this time with sentimental glamour, but with cold truth. The author has thrown his emphasis on this realism, and in it lies the great strength which 'The Wind' and as a work of art attains." Vernon Loggins

+ Sat R of Lit 2:255 O 31 '25 500w

"For a novel of the Texas prairie to be vital and fresh is a rare achievement; such, none the less, is 'The Wind.'"

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p741 N 5 '25 260w

WINSHIP, GLEN BRION. Volonor. 313p $2 Seltzer

25-20411

John Wentworth 'plans Utopia. He has purchased an island in the far seas there to establish the ideal state. Marriage laws are to be abolished and the economic independence of woman assured. Thereby shall be guaranteed the stability of the state and the inviolability of the home. But a difficulty arises in getting people to go. When at last the group of colonists set sail, there are scruples and misgivings aboard. With dashes of wierd adventure and splashes of high-tensioned love-making the book comes to a close, but arrives at no conclusion.

"'Volonor' runs to slightly over three hundred pages, but one must be either a Sherlock Holmes or well past the middle to determine what all the writing is for. It offers mystery, melodrama, sex stuff, economic problems and philosophic hypotheses—plus mild doses of bunk." Hugo Sonnenschein

Lit R p9 D 12 '25 180w

"The first part of the book, which is something in the nature of an expanded prologue dealing with the depopulation of the island, holds some real thrills for a dull evening."

+ N Y Tribune p15 O 4 '25 200w

N Y World p5m O 11 '25 130w

Outlook 141:565 D 9 '25 120w

"In 'Volonor' Mr. Winship brings to us his conception of Utopia. Unfortunately that conception is vaporous, unreal, and intellectually flaccid. Some readers may find enjoyment in the melodrama scattered through the story, others in the gaudy trappings of the love scenes. But anyone who perceives the sterile superficiality of the novel will merely be bored."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:244 O 24 '25 200w

"The story has an embracing Transatlantic quality that is either novel or amusing in itself."

The Times [London] Lit Sup p640 O 1 '25 200w

WINTER, ALICE (AMES) (MRS THOMAS GERALD WINTER). Business of being a club woman. 286p $1.25 Century

374.2 Women's clubs 25-15372

This book by a former president of the General federation of women's clubs answers in a practical and suggestive way the questions of the would-be club woman concerning the organization and functioning of her club. There are chapters which discuss club membership, the financial problem, a working program, club houses, club ethics, etc.

"The book should be a boon to club women everywhere."

+ Booklist 22:55 N '25

"The book is as thoroughly business like as its title indicates. It wastes no words, it indulges in no sentiment, it holds strictly to its theme and purpose, and it is so thoroughly and accurately informed that any new or untrained recruit, whether group or individual, to the great, organized army of club women will find in it all the information needed for effective management and cooperation."

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 16 '25 920w

WITTELS, FRITZ. Sigmund Freud; his personality, his teaching, and his school; tr. from the German by Eden and Cedar Paul. 287p $3.50 Dodd [10s 6d Allen & U.]

B or 92 Freud, Sigmund. Psychoanalysis

25-6903

For descriptive note see Annual for 1924.

"An intelligent introduction to psychoanalysis."

+ Dial 78:340 Ap '25 120w

"The distinctive part of Herr Wittels' account of Freud is the contribution to the intimate story of the psychoanalytic movement and the part played in it by the personality of its founder. It contains as well an estimate, critical and eclectic, of the place and value of the several segments and periods of the Freudian architectural system, which, though valuable, is not notable, and may be found in many other available surveys of similar scope." Joseph Jastrow

+ Lit R p2 Ja 3 '25 1300w

"This critical history of the psycho-analytical movement, as seen from within by Dr. Fritz Wittels, is of necessity, and admittedly, biased by his own temperament. For the ordinary reader of this book there will be difficulty in separating science from art, observation from deduction, accepted theory from individual speculation, and it is indisputable that the same difficulty will meet him in many books on psycho-analysis. Yet it is desirable that psycho-analysis should be subject to the canons of science, and the author indicates a starting-point at which scientific judgment may be applied." M. C.

+ Nature 115:867 Je 6 '25 520w

"Viewing the whole book the word 'fascinating' comes to the mind which may not be as dignified a characterization as the work merits. Objectively speaking the present work gives a concise and somewhat fragmentary, but very interesting presentation of some of Freud's theories. As to its throwing more light on Freud the man, the best that can be said is that the author has made a good effort in his own way and has illumined some features." A. A. Brill, M.D.

+ Sat R of Lit 1:460 Je 17 '25 1100w

WITTICH, WALTER J., and REUTER, H. C. Exercises on the apparatus. 110p il $2 Barnes, A. S. & co.

613.7 Gymnastics 25-5471

"Detailed instructions for exercises on gymnasium apparatus for men. The first two chapters contain suggestions for the instructor and a general description of the positions, grips and activities which are utilized in the exercises which follow. Illustrated with photographs of performances."—Booklist

"Should be useful to physical directors and to all men and boys interested in this work."

Booklist 21:367 Jl '25

"Carefully and elaborately prepared."

Boston Transcript p10 Mr 28 '25 120w

Wis Lib Bul 21:228 O '25

WODEHOUSE, PELHAM GRENVILLE. Bill the conqueror; his invasion of England in the springtime. 323p $2 Doran [7s 6d Methuen]

25-5157

The day that Bill, the conquering hero, saved pretty Felicia Sheridan from drowning the gods decreed that they should meet again, and five years later Bill does meet Flick in London in a most unconventional way. Subsequently he loses his heart to Flick even tho that same heart had been pledged to a good-looking girl at home. The romance of Bill and Flick is filled with humorous and improbable episodes.

WODEHOUSE, PELHAM G.—Continued

Booklist 21:342 Je '25
Boston Transcript p4 Mr 25 '25 1050w
Cleveland p68 Je '25
Ind 114:386 Ap 4 '25 50w

"An entertaining yarn, full of typical Wodehouse characters. The tale drags a bit toward the end, but for the most part it is whimsical and lively farce."

+ Int Bk R p355 Ap '25 430w
N Y Times p19 Mr 22 '25 750w

"If it be true, as Dame Rumor hath it, that P. G. Wodehouse shows a slight tendency to write the same story over and over again, the only reply of a philosophical apologist can be, 'So much the better.' It is a perfectly good story and, deeply or even superficially considered, it is always new." Will Cuppy

N Y Tribune p15 Mr 15 '25 650w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p828 D 4 '24 180w
Wis Lib Bul 21:113 Ap '25

WODEHOUSE, PELHAM GRENVILLE. Sam in the suburbs (Eng title Sam the sudden). 346p $2 Doran

An easy-going, well-meaning lad, Sam is surprised and pained when his uncle fires him for disrupting the office force, and ships him forthwith to England to a position wrested by strategy from Lord Tilbury, head of the Mammoth publishing company. Sam drifts to Valley Fields, a quiet London suburb, and there to his great delight finds the beautiful original of a treasured photograph torn from a society weekly and ever since dumbly adored. He rents the house next door to hers, and with a pal of former seagoing days as cook, takes possession. To the romantic pursuit of his love there is now added the excitement of mystery. The house he has rented is the hiding place for a fortune in stolen bonds. Several persons of shady repute are on the search for the loot, causing a series of hilarious complications from which the modest hero emerges, engaging and engaged.

Boston Transcript p6 N 25 '25 1300w

"Wodehouse extracts from his situations by his sure technique much farcical laughter. The hearty merriment is up to standard Wodehouse production and will give the reader several hours of pleasant amusement."

+ N Y Times p8 D 13 '25 630w
N Y Tribune p12 Ja 3 '26 330w
The Times [London] Lit Sup p757 N 12 '25 250w

WOLFE, HUMBERT. Unknown goddess. 107p $1.75 Harcourt [5s Methuen]

821 25-18290

"Hitherto Mr. Wolfe has been known chiefly as a writer of ironic verse; but in 'The Unknown Goddess' he turns to themes of seriousness. The love for irony remains, however, with him; and the lessons he learned in quick, economic expression stand him in good stead."—N Y Times

"The freshest, the most magical volume of verses that has come this way in many months." J. F.

+ Bookm 62:331 N '25 340w

"His metres are well matched to the subjects and are even leavened by originality at times. If Mr. Wolfe continues to salute the immortalities of Hellas his voice should carry far and high with the voices of the true poets. This collection has a beauty of tone which makes it as vital and as sure in its emotional effect upon us as is the sight of a child dead." J. R. S.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 31 '25 420w

Reviewed by K. L. Bates
Lit R p2 O 10 '25 600w

"He is as neat as his desk in the arrangement of words, shifting and changing them with as delicate fingers as De la Mare; but the texture of Mr. Wolfe's faint but unfrayed embroidery is closer and more compact. Embroidery or old china, it is of some art such as these that one is reminded, after reading his 'Torchbearer'; fragile, painted poems, not for use, set on the shelves of a cabinet behind glass doors."

Nation and Ath 37:sup344 Je 13 '25 160w

"One of Mr. Wolfe's critics has objected that a form so slight cannot carry the weight of philosophy he puts upon it; but it is not easy to establish this sort of mathematical relation between length of lines and depth of thought; and in fact, Æschylus has packed some of his profound meditation into verse no longer. The metre, like any other, can be made ridiculous by abuse; but there is no reason to feel that it has been. In short lines or long, this is a poet with an ear. And with it goes a definite gift for phrase and imagery." F. L. Lucas

+ New Statesman 22:423 J1 25 '25 1700w
N Y Times p6 O 11 '25 300w

Reviewed by Eileen Hall
N Y Tribune p12 O 18 '25 200w

"We do not suggest that every one of these sixty pieces is on the same level: we detect places where he seems still to be merely trying his hand. But the bulk of the volume is poetry—poetry in the high and strict sense—poetry invested with all the magic of a vital and irresistible impulse—poetry that could not have been written save in this way, at this time, by this poet."

+ Sat R 139:558 My 23 '25 450w

"Mr. Wolfe is not yet mature, as his rather boyish mannerisms suggest. But fine things are argued by his firm and delicate touch. His most dangerous fault at present is a certain tendency to mistake his fancy for his imagination." E. Davison

+ Sat R of Lit 2:464 Ja 2 '26 450w

"In The Unknown Goddess Mr. Wolfe has cast off the fear of being thought sentimental, and writes less in miniature. Because he has chosen larger subjects, and to show his heart's feelings rather than be brilliant, he has courted danger by exposing his poetic heart to the world that often smiles in embarrassment of any real feeling, however sentimental it may itself be in secret. Now both his faults and his virtues are more easy to discern."

Spec 134:1051 Je 27 '25 760w

"Both Mr. Wolfe's bewitching and baffling qualities as a poet are due to this conception of verse as an end in itself. He is so conscious of words as a substance to be worked and moulded that he tends to neglect their function as mediums of emotion and ideas. He is not self-conscious, but so word-conscious that the suggestiveness of language is always eluding him."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p506 J1 30 '25 560w

WOLMAN, LEO. Growth of American trade unions, 1880-1923; with a foreword by Wesley C. Mitchell. (Publications of the National bureau of economic research, inc.) 170p $3 National bur. of economic research

331.88 Trade unions 25-705

A statistical study of the membership of American trade unions during the last forty-four years, showing the fluctuations of growth in the different industry groups and the relation between the business cycle and changes in union membership.

Management and Adm 9:292 Mr '25 120w

"At last there is a book which answers with authority and precision the perennial questions about labor." Evans Clark

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 19 '25 1550w

WOOD, CLEMENT. Poets of America. 392p $3
Dutton

811.09 American poetry—History and criticism. Poets, American 25-8501

The study is confined mostly to the living poets of America. Edgar Allan Poe, Walt Whitman, Sidney Lanier, Emily Dickinson and Adah Isaacs Menken are the only ones of the older poets to whom separate chapters are devoted. The others who are individually studied are Edwin Arlington Robinson, Robert Frost, Edgar Lee Masters, John Hall Wheelock, Edna St Vincent Millay, Amy Lowell, Vachel Lindsay, Carl Sandburg, Elinor Wylie and Rose O'Neill. The studies are both biographical and critical and the poets are largely quoted.

Booklist 22:25 O '25

"Mr. Wood is a man of strong opinions. Frequently we would disagree with him. He is inclined to a florid style of writing and he jumps at conclusions—a fault by no means unusual, alas! His book is largely valuable for the effort he makes to provide an adequate survey of American Indian poetry and of American negro poetry."

+ Boston Transcript p5 J1 11 '25 300w
Dial 79:352 O '25 120w

"He has the excellent habit of illustrating his critical opinions with adequate quotations from the poets criticized, and in most instances contrives to uphold his verdicts by chapter and verse. Altogether, a stimulating and interesting book."

+ Ind 114:591 My 23 '25 200w

"Full of sound and fury, the pages of 'Poets of America' cannot but be impressive. They are written with the earnest conviction of a prophet; they flash as the swords of avenging angels bearing the grim justice of their Creator Lord. The book of his Judgment Day is heavy and long with good deeds and with sins of his subjects. He stirs to constant indignation; yet he serves the cause of poetry, for most readers will hurry off to reread the poets, to substantiate and reestablish their opinions after the thundering prejudice of Clement Wood." J. T. Shipley

Lit R p2 My 16 '25 800w

Nation 120:723 Je 24 '25 120w

"Hectic, contradictory, now and then inaccurate, yet on the whole it gives brilliantly the main outline of our past and the rich promise of our present Renaissance." Edwin Clark

+ N Y Times p12 My 17 '25 2000w

"A potpourri of classroom pabulum comprising biographical fragments, philosophical excursions, numerous quotations and revised estimates. It is time that a book covering the whole field of American poetry were written. But the job demands knowledge, detachment and a certain judicial quality that together forms the basis for distinguished criticism." Wilbert Snow

+ N Y Tribune p12 N 1 '25 1450w

"Mr. Wood is bitten by the craze for being saucy to Longfellow, and his condescension toward all the gray-bearded poets of old (except Whitman, of course) is laughable. It is easy to quarrel with Mr. Wood's choice, and with many of his opinions. But—unless we demand that every one like the food we like—why must every one agree with us about poetry? This is a stimulating book, filled with apt quotations. The chapters upon some of the living poets are especially discriminating."

+ Outlook 140:405 J1 15 '25 200w

Pratt p27 autumn '25

"'Poets of America' is undoubtedly a valuable book. It may well serve as an approach or as a summary, for it is always interesting. But when Mr Wood is phrasing his opinions of young poets he would do well to trade a little virility for a little more justice."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 25 '25 560w

Wis Lib Bul 21:168 Je '25

WOODBURY, HELEN (MRS TRELL W. YOCUM). Misty flats. 342p $2 Little

25-17116

This is the life story of a girl whose struggle for freedom is hampered by the exacting love of her mother. Linda's mother has always been jealous of her play, jealous of her friends, jealous of her very thoughts; her frail beauty and her dependence weave a net from which Linda cannot free herself. Her engagement to Jerry offers temporary escape, but Linda, fundamentally honest, realizes that their love is not real. As her gift for writing develops she finds in Peter the perfect response to her needs. He offers an understanding and a freedom far beyond the gift of her selfish mother. But when the decisive moment comes, Linda's choice is foreordained.

"The story is so natural, so human, so inevitable, as to seem truly startling. One longs to snatch Linda away before the fateful door closes forever!" D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p1 O 10 '25 800w

"A well-written, but sombre, story."

+ Ind 115:365 S 26 '25 70w

"Our own distinctly favorable impression of the book demands that we record objection to the first third of the story. Aside from its extensive monotony, even this part is admirably done and above cavil, written with an excellence in keeping with the high quality maintained throughout the whole." E. C. Beckwith

+ Lit R p4 S 19 '25 460w

"The Misty Flats is quite unusually honest, and quite unusually full of effort. And that is about all one can say for it."

+ New Repub 44:184 O 7 '25 100w

"The one thing sure and unerring and real in the story all through is the relationship between the mother and daughter. That rings true without fail; and since that is the story, the book achieves its purpose. It also leaves a rather flat taste in the mouth."

+ N Y Times p8 S 6 '25 720w

"Miss Woodbury is perhaps too open in her sympathy for Linda: her style has the tone which a mother uses in speaking to a sick child when other people are about. It seems to hint at a secret understanding between the author and the reader. But there is no such understanding. Mrs. Bradley is so much more human than Linda that one is more ready to sympathize with her; one nearly does." Fitzhugh Grey

N Y Tribune p12 S 27 '25 550w

"Miss Woodbury writes engagingly and holds the attention with no visible effort. Her purpose is not too heavily stressed. It is on the whole, an entertaining and thoughtful book, and one of much promise."

+ N Y World p7m N 29 '25 160w

"Miss Woodbury has enough felt and conveyed this most frequent of human tragedies to let us hope that in a second book she may be able to write about wholly real people, and to cast off the conventionality and sentiment that lessen the importance of her first work."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:228 O 17 '25 500w

Springf'd Republican p5a N 22 '25 200w

WOODROW, NANCY MANN (WADDEL) (MRS WILSON WOODROW). Burned evidence. 329p $2 Putnam

25-8368

"A wealthy multimillionaire, aged and eccentric, with a beautiful independent granddaughter, are prey for many blackmailers, especially when the world knows but little about the granddaughter's mother, and there is much good reason to think that she probably belonged to the underworld of Spain. Of course the mystery is relieved by a charming romance, wherein the young lawyer representing the grandfather succumbs to the charms of the granddaughter."—Springf'd Republican

WOODROW, NANCY M.—Continued

"There are good, bad and indifferent mystery stories. In Mrs. Wilson Woodrow's story we have a combination of elements which work together exceedingly well."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 16 '25 300w

"Mrs. Wilson Woodrow has lived up to her reputation as a writer of good detective stories."

+ Ind 114:563 My 16 '25 70w

"One of the best of the American detective stories, and one of the few written by women."

L: Moore

+ Int Bk R p471 Je '25 140w

"Does not pretend to be anything more than entertaining. And it is that—a very good yarn."

H. L. Pangborn

+ Lit R p12 My 9 '25 100w

"The style is smart—too smart for enjoyable reading."

— N Y Tribune p7 Je 7 '25 120w

"This is a thoroughly first rate detective story, rapid, absorbing and credible."

+ Sat R of Lit 1:841 Je 20 '25 200w

Springf'd Republican p7a My 24 '25 200w

WOODSON, CARTER GODWIN, ed. Negro orators and their orations. 711p $5.25 Associated publishers

808.5 Orations. Negroes 25-20434

The editor has gathered all of the important speeches delivered by Negroes in the United States, from the first protest against slavery to an address of thanksgiving at the close of the world war, and following a generally chronological order, has grouped them according to kind. A biographical note of the orator is given and mention made of the circumstances under which the oration was delivered. The whole forms a study of the development of the Negro in his use of the modern idiom and also a study of the history of the race.

"Dr. Woodson tells us that he collected these orators 'to inspire the Negro youth of today.' The book should inspire its white readers as well." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 19 '25 1350w

"Mr. Woodson, who is the author of half a dozen previous volumes dealing with as many phases of the history of the negro in this country, has done very acceptably his work of selection and editing. The specimens of negro oratory he presents are notable and representative of the race at its best."

+ N Y Times p12 N 8 '25 360w

"The outstanding impression of the book is its surprising revelation of the active and sustained character of leadership from within the Negro group during periods of which even the average well-informed person has no knowledge of any such activity. The book provides a useful and authentic survey of the changes and development of Negro opinion as reflected by representative spokesmen."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:484 Ja 9 '26 180w

WOODWARD, WILLIAM E. Bread & circuses. 2 353p $2 Harper

25-22986

Michael Webb capitalized his ability to think. All sorts of people came to him, stated their problems and paid for his advice. He knew a good many life histories that other people only guessed at. One summer at Gus Buford's famous Inn in the Connecticut hills, Michael played the rôle of deus ex machina for several of his friends, among them, William Brill, a youth with charming manners and no money; Ernest Torbay, novelist and hedonist, in a delicate situation between his secretary Jean and his patroness Mrs Priddell; Rannie Kipp, inventor and bootlegger, in love with Alice Wayne, and the lovely Alice herself who, defying inhibitions, longed to run away with him. The book is a compound of humor, philosophy and satire.

"While this may not be the great American novel, it is unquestionably one of the kindest satires on the foibles of the great American people that we have had the pleasure of reading." L. H. G.

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 26 '25 550w

"Into Michael Webb's mouth and into the mouths of other characters. Mr. Woodward puts a satiric philosophy which as a critique of American life has seldom been equaled. Compared with the author's quiet, calm, gentle, and yet devastating satire, the noisy shouts and bel-lows of Mr. Mencken are mere horseplay and buffoonery."

+ Ind 116:79 Ja 16 '26 200w

"'Bread & Circuses' is, I think, the best of Mr. Woodward's books because in it he has achieved a thoroughly personal form which gives him ample opportunity for using the inexhaustible store of anecdotes with which his mind seems to be stored and yet supplies a unifying thread." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 121:762 D 30 '25 1050w

"'Bread & Circuses' has many of Michael Webb's former ideas—the play with the soul, illusion, appearances and reality. Its exuberance and racy spirit is still exposing bunk. The humorist is still laughing at human follies. But it has also a new note of emotion depth. For there is something of the poet as well as the satirist in Woodward. Certainly Woodward is going somewhere. He really has something to say—sometimes too much. To this reader he has a primary gift—he entertains." Edwin Clark

+ N Y Times p11 N 29 '25 1100w

Reviewed by G. H. Carson

N Y Tribune p6 D 13 '25 1250w

"This reviewer feels less enthusiastic over 'Bread and Circuses' than over Mr Woodward's 'Bunk.' The trouble, he suspects, is neither with 'Bread and Circuses,' nor with himself. He suspects that it lies in the fact that 'Bread and Circuses' is merely another version of the same theme. The cook ought to be master of more than one sort of dish. Is it perhaps true that the effect of Mr Woodward's whimsical satire, when it first struck us, was owed more to the whimsy than to the satire—and that he is repeating with the recipe?"

+ — Springf'd Republican p5a Ja 10 '26 260w

WOOFER, THOMAS JACKSON. Basis of racial adjustment. 258p $1.40 Ginn

326 Negroes. United States—Race question 25-10023

The racial adjustment here studied is that between black and white in the United States. The author shows the mutual interest which the two races have in adapting themselves to each other and tells of the leaders and organizations that are working toward cooperation. Other chapters deal with the growth and distribution of the Negro population, the Negro in agriculture and industry and his development in education, religion and citizenship.

"This is far and away the best balanced and sanest survey we have seen of the American race (negro) problem. As a textbook it is all that could be asked. It covers the ground accurately, without prejudice, and with a thoughtful sympathy for both whites and blacks; it is simple but interestingly written; it is free from sensationalism; it avoids biological and psychological dogmatism; it is informative and constructive." A. B. W.

+ Am Econ R 15:778 D '25 120w

"The book is informed and temperate."

+ Am Pol Sci R 19:866 N '25 40w

"The so-called 'negro problem' now gets the illumination of investigation at the sources; it is treated, moreover, in quite impartial fashion, needful as the author sometimes finds it to criticize unfair attitudes towards the colored man." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 27 '25 450w

"A very readable and fair-minded attempt to throw light on existing conditions among the Negroes, with some excellent suggestions regarding the solution of problems confronting both their race and ours." K. M.

+ Cath World 121:861 S '25 40w

"It is primarily a textbook, but contains a wealth of information for all who are in any way interested in the race question as it applies to our own land." H. B.

+ Lit R p7 S 26 '25 80w

N Y Times p10 Je 7 '25 460w

"A most readable volume for professional and amateur sociologists, filled with anecdote and illustration." F. A. Ross

+ Pol Sci Q 40:638 D '25 650w

"Gives concisely and dispassionately an immense amount of invaluable information and analysis, dealing with the relation of the white and Negro races in this country."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 S 15 '25 280w

"Because of the accuracy and adequacy of its information on present-day relationships between white and colored in the United States, this book at once takes the front rank among textbooks available for study and discussion of this subject. Nevertheless, it is not possible to recommend this textbook for adoption except in the South because the positions taken on race relations in northern colleges and religious institutions are far in advance of those implied in the two opening chapters and specifically stated in the concluding chapter." B. L.

+ Survey 55:257 N 15 '25 260w

WOOLF, VIRGINIA (STEPHEN) (MRS LEONARD SIDNEY WOOLF). Common reader. 332p $2.50 Harcourt

824 Literature. English literature—History and criticism 25-10098

"The Common Reader contains twenty-five essays, five of which are character sketches of minor literary figures, the rest being critical essays on authors as famous as Chaucer, Defoe, Montaigne, Jane Austen, George Eliot, Conrad and others. They have been reprinted from various papers and retouched." (New Statesman) "Mrs Woolf is a peculiar flower from an intellectual stock which for a hundred years had put forth logicians. She is a daughter of Sir Leslie Stephen. This collection of some twenty-four essays makes a book. When they were brought together they coalesced. They were conceived by one mind, fully awake, cultivated, eager, widely ranging for the sustenance of a life both intellectual and emotional, ranging from the Greeks and Chaucer to Joseph Conrad, yet always seeking materials for the building of a dwelling place. They are unified in their objective, they are honestly addressed to the 'common reader.'"—N Y Tribune

"They do not, of course, represent the reactions of the merely average reader; they reflect the taste and sensibility of an unusually talented writer. Yet they do not pretend to the consistency or conform to the methods of professional criticism. They are the work of a brilliant amateur who, with plentiful jumbling of the trivial and the significant, now delightedly rescues some bit of a freakish book or personality from oblivion, now rubs and polishes some dulling reputation into renewed, momentary brightness." G. B. Dutton

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf O '25 450w

Booklist 22:25 O '25

"They are well written, obviously the work of a wholly competent journalist, or novelist turned journalist, but they are distinguished from merely competent journalism by the bite and tang of their comment, by that indefinable personal touch of superiority which differentiates first-class intellectual writing from hack work. In themselves, they are a contribution to the literature of criticism."

+ Ind 115:276 S 5 '25 100w

"Two essays stand out. That on Jane Austen, for all its unpretentiousness, seems at once quite new and conclusive. And if one were to read but a single essay on Greek literature we should recommend 'On Not Knowing Greek.' For here there is divination like lightning as well as the comprehensive sunshine of intellect." Eva Goldbeck

+ Lit R p3 Ag 29 '25 350w

Nation 121:76 J1 8 '25 30w

"A most uncommon book. This delightful critic combines with a sensibility, extreme, personal and modern, a traditional sense of balance."

+ New Statesman 25:199 My 30 '25 1200w

"It is decidedly worth while, for 'The Common Reader' has been shaped into a work that is compact with charm, a strenuous sinew of underlying thought and unity, and a frequent turn of paragraph that will remind the reader of Lytton Strachey."

+ N Y Times p15 My 31 '25 1900w

"Her collection of essays has more style and character than anything English of the sort which has come my way since the second collection, 'Books and Characters' of Lytton Strachey, to whom, significantly, it is dedicated." S. P. Sherman

+ N Y Tribune p1 J1 5 '25 2300w

"We feel that 'The Common Reader' is the best book of essays since 'Books and Characters,' barring anthologies. Mrs. Woolf represents a happy fusion of knowledge, taste and sense: she possesses furthermore a gracious ease in the orchestration of her impressions." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p4m My 24 '25 620w

"Little masterpieces—firm, rapid, brilliant and sympathetic."

+ Sat R 140:17 J1 4 '25 350w

"Her essays seem to us much more exciting than fiction usually is; her speech has an ease and simplicity which permit a beautiful and complete expression of her temperament." Matthew Josephson

+ Sat R of Lit 1:872 J1 4 '25 950w

"That delightful thing for book-lovers, a work of criticism that is at once personal in perception and fresh in thought—a record of a soul's unhackneyed adventures among masterpieces and things less masterly—yet naturally, through inherent rightness, assimilated to the abiding tradition of judgment."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a J1 12 '25 1500w

"From Mrs. Woolf we get that valuable thing, a true perspective. It was not her ambition to evoke principles, and it can hardly be said that she does, although she lets fall sentences which illuminate a great deal. But we find a standard which we never distrust, and this is possibly something rarer. It has the breadth which only a real possession of the past can give, and the vitality of a fresh imaginativeness."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p313 My 7 '25 1800w

WOOLF, VIRGINIA (STEPHEN) (MRS LEONARD SIDNEY WOOLF). Mrs Dalloway. 296p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Hogarth press]

25-9749

"Mrs. Woolf's method consists in recording the stream of consciousness as it flows through the minds of her characters, and her new novel, dealing with the events of a single day, tells such a story as it has to tell through the medium of the recollections which stir vaguely in the memories of her people. . . The day which she has chosen to present is the day upon which her central character meets after many years the old lover whom she did not marry, and in the course of the three hundred pages which record this day nothing happens except that the reader is brought into intimate contact with a group of people and made to participate in their consciousness. Mrs. Dalloway is not, by ordinary standards, a remarkable person. She has played no important role in life and she is not consciously a philosopher, but it is obvious that as she has moved through the world she has achieved a certain serenity in the midst of the eternal flux; and this, so I think, Mrs. Woolf

WOOLF, VIRGINIA—Continued
means us to guess to be the secret of her charm."—Nation

Booklist 21:385 J1 '25

Bookm 61:586 J1 '25 60w

"Mrs Dalloway has character; and it does not discredit that character to say that one would realize it more clearly if its charm were not overshadowed by Mrs Woolf's almost incomparable charm."

+ Dial 79:352 O '25 80w

"It is a book which will be highly praised by the sensitive minority." D. K.

+ Ind 114:703 Je 20 '25 150w

"Tight-rope dancing, no doubt, must be listed as an art. But one may be left with a certain doubt as to its value as a means of locomotion. It does not, in fact, 'get anywhere.' Literary tight-rope dancing has had a certain vogue during the past few years. Mrs. Woolf is one of the most expert performers among the newly 'arrived' British writers, with a large enough body of admirers to form something of a cult. She does it very deftly indeed." H. L. Pangborn

Int Bk R p617 Ag '25 400w

"We believe this book is another highly commendable experiment. As a novel, however, it lacks that quality of illusion which can turn the day (the only unity of the book) into a life richer than any single figure groping through it. In one day Mrs. Woolf reaches into the past and, so far as mortals can, into the future. She characterizes figures richly; London perspires in her book; but the day is sometimes dull and dreary under a fog of words and (sensitive realized) redundances." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p2 Ag 1 '25 600w

"Mrs. Woolf reinvestigates a very old sort of loveliness. The method which she uses is the newest and most radical, but the charm which she exploits—the charm of decorum and resignation—is the most conservative thing in the world." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 120:631 Je 3 '25 1000w

"Mrs. Woolf has extraordinary gifts; the only doubt is whether they are the specific gifts of the novelist. She excels in description of mood or sudden scene; but the mood might always be anybody's; anybody might occupy the scene. In all this brilliant novel (and the brilliance is at times quite dazzling) there are no people. It is like that ghostly world of Mr. Bertrand Russell's philosophy, in which there are lots of sensations but no one to have them. . . She understands a mood; she analyses it; she presents it; she catches its finer implications; but she never moves me with it, because she never makes me feel that the person credited with it is other than an object of the keenest and most skilful study." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 25:229 Je 6 '25 1050w

"Mrs. Woolf has set free a new clarity of thought and rendered possible a more precise and more evocative agglutination of complicated ideas in simplicity of expression. Her design, in effect, is no more than another of those fashionable pictures of an attractive, pretty woman, who is selfish and worldly, and preternaturally fearful." J. W. Crawford

N Y Times p10 My 10 '25 1300w

"Her style, so beautiful at its best, suffers occasionally, I think, from the necessity of being always incontrovertibly individual. But in a book so beautiful as this reservations, even if sustained, can do no more than brush a little of the bloom off the butterfly's wings." A. B. Parsons

+ N Y Tribune p5 My 31 '25 1100w

"It is a very fine and very beautiful novel." J. W. Crawford

+ N Y World p4m My 10 '25 50w

"Mrs. Woolf writes a plastic and distinguished prose. It is the merest transparent film over the being of Clarissa Dalloway, which is evoked in sheer palpitating splendor before the very eyes of the reader. . . It is beautiful writing and a beautiful novel." J. W. C.

+ N Y World p4m Je 7 '25 220w

Pratt p40 autumn '25

"The searchlight of Mrs. Woolf's suggestive art passes zigzag over the minds of men and women; illuminating those dark interiors with the light of an extraordinarily subtle vision." Gerald Bullett

+ Sat R 139:588 My 30 '25 700w

"This is an unusually coherent, lucid, and enthralling book." R: Hughes

+ Sat R of Lit 1:755 My 16 '25 750w

"An exceedingly interesting book, it is also beautiful—unreal in one way, it is truly real in a deeper significance." H. S.

+ Spring'd Republican p7a Ag 2 '25 800w

"The cinema-like speed of the picture robs us of a great deal of the delight in Mrs. Woolf's style. It has to be a little clipped, a little breathless; and the reading of her book is not so easy as it seems. Her wit is irresistible. In the end no one will complain of her for using all the freedom that she can. All her technical suppleness is needed to cope with the new form. It remains experimental in so far as we are uncertain what more can be done with it, and whether it can give the author's rare gifts full play. But something real has been achieved."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p349 My 21 '25 800w

WOOLLCOTT, ALEXANDER. Story of Irving Berlin. 237p $2.50 (10s 6d) Putnam

B or 92 Berlin, Irving 25-9033

"The book is a romance rather than an estimate of values. It is chiefly an attempt to record in the music of the printed word the themes and harmonies of Bowerly life from which the Principal of our own music school drew his peculiar inspiration. One-third of the short volume is concerned with the vagrant life in east side beer halls that was Irving Berlin's introduction to the world of rhymes and odes."—N Y World

"Alexander Woolcott I suspect has written his masterpiece in 'The Story of Irving Berlin.' He writes with the same mixture of sentiment and intellectuality that characterized his fine essay, 'Madame Cocotte.'" J. F.

+ Bookm 61:345 My '25 250w

Cleveland p81 J1 '25

"One objects, at moments, to certain strainings at the gnat of rhetoric. But one great and saving grace Mr Woolcott possesses, and for this let him go down, forgiven and exalted, among the biographers of the Lively Arts. He has not found it necessary to write of a great popular artist in the Vanity Fair mode; he has simply written the intimate story of New York, of popular melody, of Irving Berlin himself, and in doing these things with approximate simplicity he has produced something brimming with humanity and music, resonant with half-forgotten glorious tunes."

+ Dial 79:78 J1 '25 150w

"Once in a while Mr. Woolcott forgets himself and, in his own inimitable style, tells us entertaining things, and then away he goes into a history of the ephemeral successes of Berlin, which is not interesting." C. P. Sawyer

+ Lit R p6 Ap 4 '25 920w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren

Nation 120:574 My 20 '25 400w

"It is a readable biography, always interesting, somewhat padded with digressions." Abbe Niles

+ New Repub 45:64 D 2 '25 1150w

"That the book has gusto and geniality and a fairly pleasant sentimentalism, that it is informative and varied, that the author is aware and explicit concerning its shortcomings, helps much, but does not prevent its failure as biography. It does not seem quite worthy enough of Mr. Woolcott and Mr. Berlin." L: Kronenberger

+ N Y Times p11 Ap 12 '25 1050w

"It is an unwelcome surprise to find comparatively little in this volume concerning Irving Berlin the composer. Mr. Woolcott has been most painstaking in assembling a social and business background for Mr. Berlin, but he has almost entirely neglected his musical background." Carl Van Vechten

— + N Y Tribune p1 Ap 5 '25 1250w

"If one quarrels with Mr. Woolcott, it will be on the score of his portrait's personality. When the book is finally closed, it is with a feeling that a singularly facile background, bright with color and the truth of detail, has been painted. An immensely entertaining story has been told in terms of high romance." Wells Root

+ — N Y World p6m Mr 29 '25 1250w

"The story is most entertainingly told and many interesting revelations are made." Douglas Moore

+ Sat R of Lit 1:823 Je 13 '25 600w

Springf'd Republican p6 My 4 '25 950w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p415 Je 18 '25 700w

WOOLLEN, WILLIAM WATSON. Inside passage to Alaska, 1792-1920; ed. from his original manuscripts by Paul L. Haworth. 2v 342:318p il $12.50 Clark, A.H.

979.5 Alaska. Pacific states 24-22049

"With an account of the North Pacific coast from Cape Mendocino to Cook Inlet, from the accounts left by Vancouver and other early explorers, and from the author's journals of exploration and travel in that region." (Subtitle) "A long, rambling study of historic background and geographic conditions which have combined in the development of this little-known area. The author spent many years compiling material from the British archives and made several trips to Alaska to observe conditions at first hand." (Ind)

"The book is well indexed: a valuable compendium of information and also a fluent narrative of travel among the myriad islands and waters of the region."

+ Bookm 61:606 Jl '25 280w

"Mr. Woollen does not write in a propagandist spirit, but as the sincere student of nature who would protect the country's wild life and its natural resources from the hands of the exploiter and preserve this great scenic territory as among the greatest possessions of the nation."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 8 '25 500w

"Well printed and well illustrated volumes. In spite of errors, large and small, it must be said that the volumes are a valuable contribution to the subject and bear witness to a keen interest and to a considerable amount of study and research performed under the heavy burden of increasing years beyond the allotted span and of weak and failing eyesight." F. W. Howay

+ — Canadian Hist R 6:81 Mr '25 1300w

Cath World 121:571 Jl '25 350w

"Conscientious, but lacks the style and the thrill of personal experiences of his contemporary, John Muir, who wrote so much about this same region."

+ — Ind 114:450 Ap 18 '25 80w

"These volumes [have] a wealth of descriptive and historical material such as no other single work on the subject affords."

+ R of Rs 71:659 My '25 220w

WORTLEY, MRS E. STUART, ed. Prime minister and his son; with an introd. by Sir Rennell Rodd. 357p $6 Dutton

B or 92 Great Britain—History—1714-1837. United States—History—Revolution. Bute, John Stuart, 3d earl of. Stuart, Sir Charles [25-10718]

These letters taken largely from the correspondence of Lord Bute, for a short time Prime Minister under George III, and his son Sir Charles Stuart, follow particularly the adventurous career of the son. During the Revolution Sir Charles came to America and became a Lieutenant-General with the British forces. His letters to his father at that time contain comments on the war and its conduct, and interesting pictures of Washington and his army.

"The letters make interesting reading and are a worth while contribution to English and American history."

+ Am Pol Sci R 19:848 N '25 160w

"One does not get any epic quality from these letters. They are too matter-of-fact for that and often too unhappy. The epic was largely written by the Americans and there is no sympathetic entering upon their point of view. This is as it should be. Stuart was a soldier, not a literary man. The value of these letters is as frank and immediate transcripts of the time. Any literary musings would detract from their obvious reality." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 1 '25 1750w

"On the whole, the volume reveals no important additions to historical knowledge. The character of that grossly abused and maligned man, Lord Bute, is rehabilitated without disclosing his possession of an atom of personal charm or genuine ability. The reader does, however, come to admire the downright military talents and devoted public service of Sir Charles Stuart."

Ind 115:192 Ag 15 '25 180w

"It is a book full of great names and accounts of great events, full of information of the period, though perhaps it is displayed from the point of view of one family. In fact, it is a book in praise of great men."

Nation and Ath 37:376 Je 20 '25 650w

N Y Times p12 N 1 '25 240w

R of Rs 72:334 S '25 100w

"Gratitude is owing to Mrs. Stuart Wortley for her pleasant and skilful use of the archives stored at Highcliffe."

+ Sat R 140:46 Jl 11 '25 500w

"Mrs. Stuart Wortley says nothing about the MSS. from which these letters are extracted; e.g., whether she has reproduced most of them, or whether this is a mere selection. Nor has she collated them with the rich extant literature on the events about which they treat, and even the explanatory notes are quite insufficient. Still one hardly regrets this, seeing her unfortunate gift for getting even the most common facts wrong." L. B. Namier

— Spec 135:199 Ag 1 '25 1450w

"An interesting book. But somehow it has scarcely made a readable book. In the first place, none of the letter-writers, except the famous high priestess of that art, have much of the talent that makes letters live when their writers have been dead a hundred years."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p343 My 21 '25 900w

WRIGHT, CHARLES ALLEN. Telephone communication; with particular application to medium-frequency alternating currents and electromotive forces; with the collaboration in the development of part II and Appendix A of Albert Frederick Puchstein. 515p il $5 McGraw

654.6 Telephone 25-8275

"Sections on 'Wire Telegraphy' and a chapter on 'Radio Telephony' have been included because of the relation of these subjects to 'Telephone Communication,' although they utilize currents which do not lie within the medium-frequency range. Because of limitations of space, the treatment of these subjects is necessarily general."—Preface

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:425 Jl '25

WRIGHT, FREDERICK ADAM, ed. Greek social life. (Library of Greek thought) 246p $2 Dutton [5s Dent]

313.38 Greece—Social life and customs. Greek literature—Collections 25-14844

A collection of extracts, in translation, from Greek literature picturing chiefly the social life and customs of Athens in the fifth and fourth centuries, B.C. with a short section devoted to the Homeric age and early Greece and Ionia. These extracts from the Greek dramatists, historians and orators give glimpses of the family life of the time, the position of women, and the social side of Greek life.

"This volume is a welcome addition to the Library of Greek Thought."

+ New Statesman 25:146 My 16 '25 350w

"A good deal of the translation is Mr. Wright's own work; and his introduction is a good estimate of Greek society; it tolerated much that we would not, and vice versa; the ensuing pages, he concludes, will probably show us 'as many things to avoid as to imitate.'"

The Times [London] Lit Sup p317 My 7 '25 200w

WRIGHT, HENRY WARDEL SNAREY. Conquest of cancer; with an introd. by F. G. Crookshank. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 82p $1 Dutton

616.994 Cancer 25-10830

The book is a plea for public education on the subject of cancer. The present high mortality from advanced stages of the disease can be prevented only when the old attitude of "Wait and see; it may not be cancer." changes to one of "Look and see that it is not." The curability of cancer in the early stages is hopefully stressed.

Booklist 22:17 O '25

"Dr. Wright presents in non-technical language the problem of conquering cancer, in a manner so intelligent and so heartening that it cannot fail to dispel some of the fear with which the malady has been regarded."

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 5 '25 130w

Ind 114:730 Je 27 '25 100w

Reviewed by T. S. Knowlson
Lit R p2 N 14 '25 50w

"Modest but very clever effort to present a serious subject in light and attractive form." James Ewing

+ N Y Tribune p16 N 8 '25 500w

Outlook 140:530 Ag 12 '25 10w

"A very successful attempt to state the problem of cancer in plain language."

+ Sat R 139:467 My 2 '25 150w

"Mr. Wright's book will be found instructive and useful."

+ Spec 134:504 Mr 28 '25 120w

Reviewed by G. A. Soper
Survey 54:533 Ag 15 '25 200w

WRIGHT, HENRY WILKES. Moral standards of democracy. 309p $2 Appleton

301 Democracy. Social psychology 25-14551

Mr Wright conceives of democracy as the "fullest and freest and most comprehensive type of human association, an association made possible by the intelligence and will which is common to all men." Throughout the book he identifies the aim of democracy with the hopes and vision of moral idealism.

"A decidedly thought-provocative and informing book." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 19 '25 720w

Reviewed by Lyman Bryson
New Repub 45:62 D 2 '25 600w

"A successful attempt to take the chill out of contemporary speculation on man as a gregarious animal. There are passages, there is at least one entire chapter dealing with Public Opinion, in which Professor Wright has swallowed whole the plaintive and depressing vision of the group life and the group mind. But, in the main, he has lifted himself above the fashions of the moment to a comprehensive view of man in society, which is at the same time, or because of that very fact, a cheerful view." Simeon Strunsky

+ — N Y Times p4 Ag 16 '25 1950w

"This book should have a wide welcome in academic circles, as well as others in which the still small voice of the herd keeps conduct safe and sane." W. Orton

N Y Tribune p5 S 20 '25 600w

Sat R of Lit 2:262 O 31 '25 300w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p606 S 24 '25 620w

WRIGHT, JOSEPH, comp. Selected readings in municipal problems; with an introd. by William Bennett Munro. (Selections and documents in economics ser.) 961p $4 Ginn
352 Municipal government 25-4345

"This volume aims to bring together a number of selections on municipal government and administration drawn from sources that are widely scattered and not easily accessible in the average library. The book is divided into two parts. Part I deals with the various general phases of city government, such as the history and growth of cities, the relation of the city to the state, legal problems, city charters, and municipal organization. Part II is devoted to problems of administration. In the choice of material an attempt has been made to select readings which not only bear directly upon the more important phases of the subject but are authoritative, interesting, and timely as well. In the case of controversial topics an endeavor has been made to present opinions on both sides. The book is primarily intended for use as supplementary reading in university and college courses."—Preface

"In what may be called a vertical sense, the readings are, like Professor Munro's now standard work, highly inclusive. In a horizontal or geographical sense, however, the readings have a more limited scope." W. Anderson

+ — Am Pol Sci R 19:414 My '25 580w

"The teacher using Mr. Wright's 'Selected Readings' for collateral purposes is very apt to find that any article he chooses parallels the textbook discussion it is intended to supplement. The compilation is not without real value, however. It is very comprehensive." A. F. Macdonald

+ Ann Am Acad 120:175 Jl '25 300w

WYLIE, ELINOR (HOYT) (MRS WILLIAM ROSE BENET). Venetian glass nephew. 182p $2 Doran

25-17616

"Peter Innocent Bon, cardinal priest and cardinal prefect of the Congregation of the Propaganda, desires a nephew. . . On a visit to Venice in 1782 the cardinal encounters no less an artist than Alvise Luna, the glass-blower of Murano, and no less a necromancer than M. de Chastelneuf, Chevalier de Langeist, in whom a more secular person than the cardinal might have recognized Giacomo Casanova, Chevalier de Seingait. These two devise for the cardinal, and sell to him at a good price, a nephew of Venetian glass, whom the ascetic uncle names Virginio. Virginio has enough of Casanova in his constitution to fall promptly in love with Rosalba, known among the Arcadians of Italy as Sappho the Younger. But when the two are married it turns out that Virginio has also a good deal of Luna's glass in his constitution. He is, in short, rather brittle for a bridegroom. The resourceful Chastelneuf suggests, since Virginio cannot be changed, that they bake Rosalba into congenial porcelain. Rosalba unflinchingly enters the furnace to become Sèvres. She emerges the perfect bride for her fragile husband."—N Y Tribune

Booklist 22:74 N '25

"A fascinating story, this, saved from being merely a lovely fantasy—although that might have been enough—by the intelligence of its author manifesting itself in subtle and delicate humor." Herschel Brickell

+ Bookm 62:339 N '25 280w

"The charm of this book is as brittle as its hero. It has charm, definite, pervasive charm, but it is a charm of artificiality, of fragile elusiveness, of an overpoweringly sweet scent." D. L. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 N 21 '25 900w

"She achieves a subtle but pervasive irony, elegance, a style faultlessly particularized, and very often a cold, hard beauty." L: Kronenberger

+ Int Bk R p824 N '25 720w

"The book itself might have been passed through fire—so shining, so final, is its surface and its form." L. T. Nicholl

+ Lit R p2 O 31 '25 520w

"Mrs. Wylie's book contains a fantasy of surprising delicacy and beauty, writing which is touched here and there by an irony so light as to be hardly distinguishable from tenderness." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 121:465 O 21 '25 820w

New Repub 44:176 O 7 '25 1400w

"A theme so brittle and so tenuous called for a very sure and expert hand if it were not to be shattered into ridiculous fragments. The best tribute one can pay to Miss Wylie's unique genius is to say that she never gives us a moment's anxiety. The little, sad moral lurks, as it should, unuttered or half whispered." H: L. Stuart

+ N Y Times p11 S 27 '25 1400w

"Mrs. Wylie is set at liberty by the fantasticalness of her plot to play with her characters and to enamel her surfaces as she likes. A single touch of earnest realism anywhere in the book would deny her the privilege of writing, without disharmony, the free, witty, chastely embroidered prose which is a sign that she is a poet. . . Mrs. Wylie shapes [her erudition] with a gay intelligence. She enamels it with a style brilliant enough to be always savored and yet restrained enough to be on the praiseworthy side of artifice. And she somehow keeps it alive by that green fire of pride burning at the core." Carl Van Doren

+ N Y Tribune p1 S 20 '25 1500w

Reviewed by J. S. Martin

N Y World p6m O 18 '25 360w

"A highly imaginative story, by a writer who commands a delicate style."

+ Outlook 141:640 D 23 '25 70w

"Of this book it seems sufficient to say that its fragrant charm has an air of perdurability, as such things go. The appreciative reader will return often to derive æsthetic sustenance from the rich variety of its treasures." Carl Van Vechten

Sat R of Lit 2:171 O 3 '25 500w

WYNNE, ANTHONY. Sign of evil. 366p $2 Lippincott

25-6618

A tale of crime which traces its inception to a horrible ancient religious rite. The only clue to the death of Sir William Armand of Calthorpe Hall, is a peculiar white "berry," found in the woods in which he met his death. Dr Hailey, surgeon, scientist and detective, sees in this clue the work of a madman. In running his criminal to cover he makes nocturnal visits to asylums and graveyards with most astounding results. The romance of Sir William's pretty daughter and a young lawyer alleviates the grimness of the story.

Boston Transcript p4 My 20 '25 230w

Cleveland p84 J1 '25

"Here is a novel of vivid characterization, nervous, flexible style, abundant ingenuity, dramatic quality, a complicated plot well worked out, a gruesome theme developed in connection with a really admirable study of abnormal psychology, and, intermingled with it all, enough of romance and picturesque description to balance the book." L: Moore

+ Int Bk R p471 Je '25 150w

Reviewed by Oliver Claxton

Lit R p9 My 2 '25 280w

"One of the best mystery stories of a good many years. In two instances it does that very rare thing in a murder story—it creates human character. There is one chapter which would do credit to a serious psychological novel." Simeon Strunsky

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 5 '25 150w

"Entirely admirable, both as regards material and style." G. W. Wynne

+ N Y Tribune p11 Ap 26 '25 240w

WYNNNTON, PATRICK. Black turret. 308p $2 Bobbs

25-14945

This is a fairy tale with trimmings; a tower in the woods, a princess in the tower and a witch and an ogre to guard it. Two roving Englishmen come that way and set the princess free. Freedom but increases the danger, for the three are lost in a forest maze and face death from starvation or torture from the hands of their pursuers. In all the perils that thereupon beset her, the princess is well served by her champions, to each of whom comes, at last, the reward he seeks.

"The author indulges overmuch in fine writing; the pathetic fallacy frequently appears." — N Y Times p6 Ag 16 '25 300w

"In the present outbreak of reconstructed, McCutcheon-esque fossils there is achieved at least a likeness of closely packed action. The museum of fiction antiques has been raided for a generous number of its most precious specimens. After several hours passed in the company of such ghostly shadows, one is left perplexedly trying to find any reasonable excuse for parading them before a reading world which years ago had gladly forgotten their existence."

— Sat R of Lit 2:51 Ag 15 '25 200w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p641 O 1 '25 180w

X

X, 7, pseud. Return of the kings. 271p $2.50 Dodd [10s 6d Nash & G.]

25-11974

A narrative in the form of a novel describing an imaginary intrigue to restore monarchy in the countries of Central Europe. The book purports to tell the experiences of a former German secret service agent who travels about Europe interviewing royalties with a view to bringing back the world of pre-war times and re-establishing the kings on their thrones. Among the persons he interviews are such ex-royalties as the Crown Princess Cecile, Prince Rupprecht and Princess Antoinette of Bavaria, and the Empress Zita of Austria.

"The book is unconvincing throughout. The opinions put into the mouths of the exalted and high born are interesting if true. There is no particular reason to believe that they are true."

— Ind 115:52 J1 11 '25 100w

X, 7, pseud.—Continued

"The publishers assure us that the anonymous author figures in the Almanach de Gotha. Very possibly; but, though spying is not the nicest of trades, there is not a spies' club in Europe for which he would not be ignominiously blackballed, either as too ardent a rogue or too impudent an imposter."

— New Statesman 25:294 Je 20 '25 320w

Reviewed by Walter Littlefield

N Y Times p1 S 20 '25 2000w

Outlook 141:565 D 9 '25 580w

Y

YERKES, ROBERT MEARNES. Almost human. 278p il $3 Century

599.8 Apes. Monkeys 25-18123

In 1915 the first chimpanzee ever born in captivity was born at Quinta Palatino, Havana, the estate of Madame Rosalia Abreu. The author's attention was then attracted to the Abreu collection of primates, and in 1923, under the auspices of the Carnegie institute he visited Quinta Palatino to study the animals at first hand. This volume is the result of several months of close observation of the primates in the beautiful setting provided for them. It describes Madame Abreu's method of handling and caring for her charges and her deductions over many years concerning them.

Booklist 22:107 D '25

Boston Transcript p6 O 10 '25 1000w

"His book is more suggestive than definitive; it contains more thoughtful advice to his probable successors than dogmatic assertions about the behavior of the monkey family. The illustrations are exceptionally fine, notably some of the chimpanzees, which are apparently the choicest spirits among man's cousins both in intelligence and disposition." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p4 S 12 '25 160w

"Despite the unquestioned authority of Mr. Yerkes, the value of the book to science is, in the nature of the case, distinctly minor." Lorine Pruette

+ — Nation 121:678 D 9 '25 760w

Reviewed by T. H. Raines

N Y Times p6 N 29 '25 2000w

N Y Tribune p17 D 13 '25 200w

Outlook 141:453 N 18 '25 160w

"The book is written in a spirit obviously fair and with the careful reserve of the scientist who strives to draw the layman into his laboratory. It should be read by everyone given to arguing, or even to thinking, about the evolution of man." L. S. Crandall

+ Sat R of Lit 2:340 N 28 '25 500w

"The book is not to be mistaken for a polemic against the antievolutionists. The question of evolution is kept quite in the background, the author confining himself to a simple and very readable account of the animals and their activities. It is an account worth reading."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 28 '25 300w
Wls Lib Bul 21:228 O '25

YEZIERSKA, ANZIA. Bread givers. 297p $2 Doubleday

25-18697

Skinny, half starved, half clothed tho she was, there was yet in the little Sara Smolinsky the germ of stubborn strength that made her old Hebrew father call her Blut und Eisen. With fierce determination to know, to do and to be, she dragged herself up from the sordid Hester street environment, away from the despot temper of her father that had worked its disastrous will with her unhappy sisters, to work, to night school, to college, and at last—goal of her feverish ambition—to teach. Sara tells her own story. The trace of foreign idiom in her words lends vividness to spontaneity.

"Not since Mary Antin's 'The Promised Land' has there been so moving a story as this one of Anzia Yezierska, for 'Bread Givers' is autobiographical. There is far less poetry in the story than in Mary Antin's. There is something profoundly moving in this whole story." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 12 '25 1050w

"She writes about life, not as a reporter, observer, social student, slummer, or reformer, but as one who has lived it before describing it. In reading her latest novel, 'Breadgivers,' I feel as I did in reading her previous books, as if looking not at the picture of life, but at life itself. She has, in one sense of the word, no literary style; you do not see her people through curiously stained glass, or through a magnifying lens. There was so much style in some of the books of Meredith and Henry James, that it got between the reader and the object, with so little translucent power as to be almost opaque; in the works of Tolstoy, the admirable style is like plate-glass, so perfectly does the plain simple word fit the thought; but in Anzia Yezierska's tales there is nothing. One does not seem to read; one is too completely inside." W: L. Phelps

+ Int Bk R p719 O '25 1100w

"This new book by Anzia Yezierska is, as may be surmised, loaded with ammunition for many a fruitful discussion. It is, we are told, an autobiographical novel. It must be. There is a heat from it that is of blistering intensity. As though its author had written it in the interior of the melting pot. There is no let-up from the first page to the last. Grim, stark tragedy, unrelieved by anything approaching a grain of humor, is made palatable only by the suspicion that the teller of the story will win through in the end. But that doesn't help much if one remembers the ninety and nine who go under. 'Bread Givers' would have been stronger for some relief from the tenseness of its tenseness." W. O. T.

+ — Lit R p2 S 5 '25 500w

"This colorful, almost barbaric tapestry of the east side, this 'Bread Givers,' makes us all debtors to Anzia Yezierska, who came here herself an immigrant and made her way much as her Sara did. 'Bread Givers' enables us to see our life more clearly, to test its values, to reckon up what it is that our aims and achievements may mean. It has a raw, uncontrollable poetry and a powerful, sweeping design that is comparable only to another poem of a similar subject, Lola Ridge's 'The Ghetto.'" + N Y Times p8 S 13 '25 1100w

"Miss Yezierska has accomplished for the Yiddish what John Synge has done for the Gaelic. She has rendered its beauty in English without losing any of the color of the original." Samson Raphaelson

+ N Y Tribune p20 O 25 '25 220w

"Her work is tense, emotional and true, and 'Bread Givers' is her best book. With one paragraph after another she climbs slowly until she reaches a high peak in excellence, and succeeds in writing what, in my opinion, is the best book about the east side of New York so far written." Jim Tully

+ N Y World p4m S 20 '25 400w

"There is no tragedy here, but plenty of realism and not a little incidental humor. The book reminds me of the stories Myra Kelly used to write, but has more color and action." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 141:98 S 16 '25 100w

"A certain measure of achievement there is in this new novel of Mrs. Yezierska's: complete and colorful personalities live in it; strange, sordid scenes from the Ghetto depths are vividly depicted here; and the fierce vitality of the author seethes through its pages. But this unharnessed and little directed vitality is the author's undoing. Like a canoe in the rapids, the frail bark, creative genius, is dented again and again by rocks that may easily be avoided in a quieter current. And Mrs. Yezierska has heedlessly ignored her light craft and her inadequate equipment and trusted herself to the mercy of the foamiest torrent. In the primary matter of dialogue, Mrs. Yezierska fails utterly." J. J. Smertenko

— + Sat R of Lit 2:192 O 10 '25 560w

"Throughout the book, the characterizations are extremely convincing. They are living, breathing persons, this family, and the lesser figures are just as real. It is this fact, perhaps, which makes the story so appealing."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a S 27 '25 700w

YOI-OVER, pseud. Hold hard! hounds, please! with an introd. by Viscount Valentia. 258p il $3.75 Scribner [10s 6d Witherby]

799 Foxhounds

"A discourse on the fox-hound in field, covert and kennel; with hunting yarns, character sketches from life, and some notes on breeding and kennel treatment."—Subtitle

"'Yoi-Over' has learned his trade professionally, for he has been for forty years huntsman and whipper-in to many well-known English packs. His advice is professionally keen. He speaks from experience, for he has earned his bread by the chase."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 29 '25 280w

"His style borrows something of pretention from the gentry he has served, ridden ahead of and swapped yarns with; but his book owes its flavor to his native wit and homely knowledge of the life he has lived as a practical man among amateurs." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 26 '25 1600w

"His discussion of the craft of the huntsman enables one to enter vicariously into a great sport, and his collection of hunting yarns is racy and rich in tradition. Nor is the practical side neglected, for one may learn here all about feeding and breeding and first-aid, to say nothing of such technical details as the pros and cons of rounding, litter-marking and the dew-claw."

+ N Y Tribune p7 S 6 '25 200w

"This book is in a rare class, being a technical treatise by an expert which is also literature."

+ Spec 134:123 Ja 24 '25 500w

"'Yoi-Over,' who tells us that he is no scholar but has read a little, can write more than a little, with both point and humour. His book is not only readable but ought to be of use to all who follow hounds, though particularly to beginners in his own trade and to young Masters hankering to hunt hounds themselves."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p703 N 6 '24 750w

YOUNG, EMILY HILDA. William. 316p $2
Harcourt [7s 6d J. Cape]

26-189

"Family life in fiction brings of itself a comfortable sense of perspective, and the recognition of the familiar likeness in son or daughter is a pleasant task. All the Nesbit girls have married, and, accompanying grandmother on her rounds, we gain happy glimpses of varied households so full of children that we may feel all is well with the future of the nation. Only one daughter raises a moral problem by running away from her husband with a lover. Consternation rules in the Nesbit camps, and a great family consultation is held. How William Nesbit, a self-made man of unusual broad-mindedness, and vision, believing in the real happiness of his favorite daughter, battles with his furious family and relatives, is the essence of this story."—Nation and Ath

"The novel has a touch of humor which lightens and vivifies it."

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 2 '25 260w

"Mr. Young's novel is gracefully written; it is rich in atmospheric descriptive passages, firm in its character delineation and natural in its dialogue. That one may experience a sense of tedium while reading it is conceivable—indeed, one may expect a measure of boredom. But for ourselves, the presence of William more than repaid us for the book's prosier elements." E. C. Beckwith

+ — Lit R p2 Ag 29 '25 300w

"Quiet and skilful comedy."

+ Nation and Ath 37:82 Ap 18 '25 180w

New Repub 44:78 S 9 '25 400w

"E. H. Young is an artist. It can be felt in the balance of the book, in the fineness of the shading, in the rhythms of the structure, in the melody of the prose. And nowhere is there a let-down or a false note." Leonard Hess

+ N Y Tribune p8 S 20 '25 700w

Pratt p40 autumn '25

"Mr. Young has the essential gift of creation: however lightly sketched his minor characters may be, they immediately put on flesh-and-blood and become parts of a vital and coherent whole. I cannot recommend this novel to those who seek sensation in their fiction; but to those who can appreciate something quiet, sympathetic, and true to life, I recommend it with some confidence." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 139:464 My 2 '25 180w

"A remarkable and a profound novel."

+ Spec 134:896 My 30 '25 260w

"In its contrast of fine perceptions and motives with ready-made judgments and conventional malice this novel attains an enjoyable distinction. It fails of high delineative value because the author does not always embody his intuitions with psychological truth."

+ — Spring'd Republican p7a S 27 '25 850w

"It is all done quietly, accurately, sympathetically. The family relationships are not sentimentalized and the various individuals are clearly differentiated. Lydia, aware of her husband's sterling qualities and at times exasperated by the failings of her lover's artistic temperament, is less conventional and lifeless than one had feared. But Mr. Young's general manner of writing is too often cramped and angular."

+ — The Times [London] Lit Sup p298 Ap 30 '25 300w

YOUNG, FRANCIS BRETT. Cold Harbour. 286p $2.50 Knopf

25-19110

"As Ronald Wake and his wife tell by turns of their mystifying and nerve-shattering experiences in the house of Humphrey Furnal in the Black Country of Wales there arises gradually the mood of monstrous evil and sinister forces which the author has sought for with a sure hand. Whether Furnal is a fiend incarnate who uses black magic, a clever manufacturer of materializations and poltergeist phenomena or a criminal lunatic intent upon driving his already demented wife to madness and death is a problem readers may ponder at their leisure."—N Y Tribune

"The book is a serious disappointment. It has, of course, its points to be admired—notably some characteristically striking descriptive passages, including a fine vista of the Black Country, and an impression of a moonlight night in Italy—but it is, in almost every respect, far below its author's standard." J. F. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p1 D 12 '25 300w

"Francis Brett Young's new novel is a ghost-story warranted to chill the most blasé spine." J. W. Crawford

Int Bk R p822 N '25 400w

"It is not a bad novel, but it is far inferior to Mr. Young's best work. I found it tiresome at times and that with the memory still fresh of the pleasure I had from both 'Woodsmoke' and 'Sea Horses.'" Herschel Brickell

+ — Lit R p2 N 21 '25 320w

YOUNG, FRANCIS BRETT—Continued

"Visible malice, invisible horrors and goose-flesh are all in 'Cold Harbour.' It is a technical tour de force and, what is more, a good story."

+ N Y Tribune p2 O 25 '25 180w

"An unusual ghost story presented in a finished style and showing close reasoning."

+ Pratt p40 autumn '25

YOUNG, FRANCIS BRETT. Sea horses. 321p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Cassell]

25-9022

"The Vega, a tramp steamer nosing round the Mediterranean in search of freight, finds herself, at Naples, chartered anew for a trip to Panda, a feverstricken Portuguese settlement on the West African coast. George Glanvil, her master, is sombre, aloof and embittered by a broken engagement. At Naples, a girl from his own Devonshire, who has been deserted and left with a child on her hands by a ruffianly young Italian, is forced upon the reluctant skipper as far as Panda, where her husband was last heard of as employe of a shady trading concern. The effect of this arrangement upon the temper and discipline of the Vega, the clumsy attempts of her officers to engross the attention of their fair supercargo and of little Gina, are treated with pleasant comedy. The interlude comes to an end when Panda is reached and the recreant husband is discovered as a drunken fugitive. Helen's determination to rejoin her degraded mate at all costs leads to disaster and unspeakable humiliation, and the whole affair of her rescue is involved in a web of treachery and villainy through which the strong arm of the captain has to hew his way in two thrilling rescues by night."—N Y Times

"It reads from cover to cover as a story dependent on acute perception of individuality and the mystery of individuality in the reactions of one person in contact with others; it expresses beauty, and is carried forward in scenes, places, and under circumstances that are made convincing by art." Ralph Bergengren

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf S '25 580w

Booklist 22:36 O '25

"The book starts as notable literature and ends as glorified melodrama. There is not a dull page in the latter part of 'Sea Horses.' There is scarcely a page which is wholly convincing. Fled is the reticence and delicacy of the opening portions of the tale, and one views Dr. Brett Young's growing love of the melodramatic with keen anxiety for his future as an artist. For the fine things in the book—and they are many and striking—one feels warranted in saying that 'Sea Horses' is the best novel he has written since 'The Black Diamond.' But the opinion is ventured with some hesitancy." J. F. S.

— + Boston Transcript p4 My 6 '25 900w

"A very marked advance on 'Woodsmoke,' 'Sea Horses,' in spite of its obvious and genuine excellencies, impresses the reader as almost more Conradian than Conrad. It is a good story; it has a splendidly convincing atmosphere and genuine, convincing characters; it is interesting as a good story should be interesting. A splendid story, a fine piece of work, but one which strikes the reader as imitative."

+ — Ind 114:563 My 16 '25 130w

"It is that woven scheme of melodrama and psychology which Conrad brought to lift the adventure story from the cockpit of a naive bloody-minded literature." Donald Douglas

Int Bk R p587 Ag '25 120w

"We wonder that we read it through. But it is easier reading than certain of Mr. Brett Young's more difficult South African tales, and there are allurements. The characterization is consistently excellent. The book has passages of descriptive beauty, vivid and unforgettable pictures of that sleepy trading town. There are flashes of the Brett Young whom we have known previously. But we ask for more than that from a writer who has given such hostage to the reading public." Margaret Williamson

— + Lit R p3 My 16 '25 550w

"It is work of admitted distinction and enchantment, but Mr. Young herein is too often going about Conrad's business."

+ — Nation 121:146 JI 29 '25 150w

Reviewed by Edwin Muir

Nation and Ath 37:240 My 23 '25 120w

"Altogether Mr. Young has shown himself an artist worthy of the tradition to which he belongs." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 43:212 JI 15 '25 250w

"Mr. Brett Young writes finely, with strength and sincerity and an almost too-alert consciousness of aesthetic responsibility: he sees his people clearly, too, and makes them true to themselves. But still, he lacks the Conrad magic; and he has chosen a subject in which we cannot help expecting just what he lacks." P. C. Kennedy

+ — New Statesman 25:504 Ag 15 '25 220w

"What lends dignity and importance to 'Sea Horses' is the striking beauty of its phrasing. There are sentences that are cameos of writing. For all its felicities, 'Sea Horses' lingers in the memory with a sense of frustration—a hybrid affair, half melodrama, half 'belles-lettres'."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 26 '25 950w

"The main theme of the book is not quite fresh enough and the climax a little hurried, but for the rest this is a fine book. The style marches along like a procession with all its drums beating and its banners flying. The characters are so individual that their histories continue long after the book is closed. There is no sentimentality, but there is much feeling, and there is an underlying nobility of motive that it is good, in these cynical days, to meet with." Hugh Walpole

+ — N Y Tribune p1 My 24 '25 950w

"Mr. Brett Young is master of a nervous, sensitive prose, by means of which he is able to make us experience his story only one degree less vividly than he himself experienced it. The result is a romantic adventure of the best kind, a vision at once of the strange places of the earth and of the deep places of the heart." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 139:493 My 9 '25 300w

"If the voice is still the voice of 'Lord Jim' (at a distance), the hands are the hands of Hollywood. But just there is the fatal other part of sailing Mr. Conrad's ship. You can get it to sea pretty simply. But can you make his land-fall; can you bring it home at last to his kind of an anchorage? As a matter of fact, after sinking to the depths of recollecting at the last moment that an eleventh-hour reef is called the Sea Horses, all quite palpably to provide the book with a legitimate salty name, Mr. Brett does let his anchor go in a style suddenly again authentic—in the type." W. D. Steele

+ — Sat R of Lit 1:723 My 2 '25 600w

Spec 134:819 My 16 '25 500w

"Every page of this inspiring romance bears witness that Mr. Brett Young is interested rather in the psychology of adventure than in its externals. His Captain Glanvil is an admirably studied character; Helen Salvia, seen through his eyes, possesses something of the magic of that other Helen. But this pathetic, imperiously wilful woman is something more than a mere symbol of romance; and Glanvil's slow waking to the fact of his love for her is a delicately conceived, and finely dramatised, human experience."

+ The Times [London] Lit Sup p314 My 7 '25 500w

Wis Lib Bul 21:199 JI '25

YOUNG, GORDON RAY. Seibert of the island. 313p $2 Doran

25-20979

Seibert was huge, heavy of mind and body, a man whose unrelenting industry had made of his wild South Sea island across a prime paradise. There were ugly rumors of his cruelty to his blacks, but though they remained rumors, the big German was feared and hated. His passion was divided between his grounds and his slender half-caste wife. Oreena was lucky to have such a home, thought Nada when she came back to the island and first saw her sister after the marriage. On the ship with Nada came Paulen. He captured Oreena's facile fancy at once, and with Nada's unwilling connivance an affair began. It could only end in tragedy, a tragedy that revealed a Seibert they had never known.

Booklist 22:166 Ja '26

"Young writes with sweep and power. His characters are vividly and simply drawn. In a long time I have read no book I so thoroughly enjoyed." J. F.

+ Bookm 61:695 Ag '25 150w

Boston Transcript p6 J1 8 '25 1100w

"An adventure story with plenty of action and interest. For hammock reading, the book may be highly recommended though it hardly deserves the lyric phrases on the jacket which class it with the great romances of Conrad, Stevenson, and so forth."

+ Ind 115:110 J1 25 '25 100w

Reviewed by Edwin Bjorkman

Lit R p2 D 26 '25 280w

Nation and Ath 35:730 S 13 '24 160w

Reviewed by H: L. Stuart

N Y Times p9 Je 28 '25 1100w

"His characterization is a first rate performance which will serve to focus attention upon Mr. Young as a psychologist as well as a romancer of much skill."

+ N Y Tribune p12 J1 5 '25 300w

N Y World p4m S 13 '25 100w

"The book has been compared with the work of Conrad and Stevenson; it is not at all like either in its manner of writing, but one can easily see how Conrad at least would have wound himself around the complex personality of Seibert. The book is queerly put together, but it certainly does hold one's attention."

Outlook 140:433 J1 22 '25 100w

"Mr. Young has a graphic and highly colored style, calculated to entertain a reader of not too critical tastes. An occasional clumsiness in sentence structure detracts somewhat from the enjoyment that the book might have for a person of discrimination."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:110 S 5 '25 200w

Spec 133:396 S 20 '24 50w

"A spirited, well-knit story."

+ Springfd Republican p7a S 27 '25 460w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p557 S 11 '24 140w

YOUNG, STARK. Glamour; essays on the art of the theatre. 208p $2 (8s 6d) Scribner

792 Theatre. Acting

25-9674

Among Stark Young's essays on the art of the theatre are criticisms of visiting actors and actresses—Duse, Madame Sorel and the Moscow art theater—essays on movement, illusion and wonder in acting and on the art of directing, and an interesting group of letters from dead actors to living ones—David Garrick to John Barrymore, Rachel to Pauline Lord, Molly Nelson to Margalo Gillmore.

Booklist 22:21 O '25

"Mr Young on 'feeling the scene,' on 'being the part,' is excellent; he is one of the few critics with whose judgments one may disagree, yet whose reasons none the less command respect."

+ Dial 80:72 Ja '26 130w

Ind 114:675 Je 13 '25 120w

"Unquestionably Stark Young comes armed for his task with a very considerable equipment. He has scholarship and cultivated taste, is a facile and fluent writer—possibly a trifle too fluent, for he is apt at times to be over-elaborate at the cost of clarity and precision—with a lively imagination and more than common fertility of illustration and firm convictions based upon a fine, if sometimes somewhat fanciful, idealism." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p2 S 12 '25 800w

"These essays are by one of the very few American dramatic critics who have anything to say. It is Mr. Young's defect that he sometimes loses himself in the blue, but he has set himself especially the task of discussing one of the most intangible of the attributes which belong to every work of art."

+ Nation 121:sup443 O 14 '25 130w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf

Nation and Ath 37:269 My 30 '25 600w

"He is the artist as critic. The reactions of his sensibility are those of an artist and so is his instinct for perfection in literary form. It is possible to disagree with some of the theories advanced in Glamour; it is not possible to dispute the emotional intuition displayed in this book and the felicity with which this intuition is expressed. This book must place Mr. Young as the most profound, original and eloquent critical talent in the American theatre." M. C. Canfield

+ New Repub 43:214 J1 15 '25 1600w

New Statesman 26:154 N 14 '25 180w

Reviewed by Edwin Clark

N Y Times p18 My 31 '25 800w

"A little too cool and too analytical to be truly hedonistic, still Mr. Young seems to seek in the theater something of Pater's flame-point—to seek, and indeed to find it. To seek it is not so wonderful, but to find it is a triumph!" W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Tribune p2 J1 12 '25 580w

"Mr. Young possesses above all a great breadth of learning, a remarkable assimilation of tradition. He knows the theatre and its plays of many countries, and his knowledge moves evenly through all periods and changes in the theatre. . . . As broad as his knowledge of the drama is, he ever brings that knowledge to bear on and illuminate the movement, the shortcomings and possibilities of an American drama." E: Hussey

+ No Am 221:763 Je '25 2300w

"It is a book which should prove valuable to all who have more than a cursory interest in our stage and makes its appeal to both sides of the footlights."

+ Outlook 141:358 N 4 '25 340w

St Louis p407 N '25

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Sat R of Lit 2:42 Ag 15 '25 320w

"He keeps his head, even in the theater, and sees below the glamor of its lights. . . . In 'Letters From Dead Actors,' Mr Young puts into the mouths of the great ones of the past praise and advice to those of the present who most resemble them upon the speaking stage. This type of criticism is less pedantic, touched with the wit and the understanding of the imagination. It combines in most acceptable form a criticism of the present in the light of the past, and a hint of what may be accomplished by thus viewing our own dramatic era."

Springfd Republican p7a Je 21 '25 250w

The Times [London] Lit Sup p336 My 14 '25 30w

"Acting is of all the arts of the theatre the most difficult to catch and recreate in writing. Generally it eludes the phrase as music escapes it. In the essays brought together in Glamour, however, Mr. Young seizes upon its essentials with such an uncanny comprehension of the actor's problems and the actor's art, and writes of them in a style at once so glamorous, revealing and precise, that the volume is lifted to that lean shelf reserved for the few permanently contributive books on the theatre. At its best, and he is at his best in almost all of Glamour, Mr. Young surpasses all contemporary critics when he writes of acting." J: M. Brown

YOUNG, STARK—Continued

+ Theatre Arts Mo 9:417 Je '25 650w

YOUNG, STARK. The saint; a play in four acts. (Provincetown-Greenwich plays) 143p $1.75 Boni & Liveright

812

25-17293

The saint is a young student in a seminary on the Mexican border. When the play opens he has fallen in love with Marietta, an actress in a variety show. Valdez joins the show to be with her. As Charlie Chaplin he makes a great hit, but success does not bring the inner happiness he craves. Marietta's half-protective, half-adoring tenderness toward him is overwhelmed by passionate love for Dedaux with whom she runs away. The third act opens on the same scene as the first. Marietta, Dedaux and Valdez meet again in the portico outside the seminary gates as again the religious procession streams across the stage to the throbbing accompaniment of music. When the procession goes by, Valdez is alone. He turns toward the gate leading back to his old life, hesitates, and passes on.

"Mr. Young, perhaps, might be described as an æsthetic mystic, endeavoring to work in the practical theater, for he distinctly says in his preface that he hopes any good stock company can produce this play. I rather doubt if any good stock company can, and, I very much doubt if any will try. However, I gladly confess that from a mere reading I have small right to any opinion of the play's effectiveness, and I even more gladly confess to the subtle workmanship and beautiful intention everywhere apparent in this drama." W. P. Eaton
N Y Tribune p5 O 4 '25 280w

"This is the theme—the continuity of human life, or 'the long line of the soul's days that makes life possible to bear.' There are moments when Mr. Young is highly successful in achieving this effect, almost as successful as Mr. Lawson was throughout his entire play of 'Processional.' But at other times 'The Saint' drops back to the dramatic mediocrity of 'The Fool,' although it is only fair to say that no two plays could be more unlike in mood and method."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:127 S 12 '25 350w

"'The Saint' is an intellectual play and must be viewed and read with an attentive mind and sympathetic heart."

+ Springfield Republican p7a S 6 '25 480w

"The Saint is good reading for anyone who has visual imagination, yet it is distinctly an actor's play, a play for the theatre where the parts, for their completion, require filling in by the body and the mind of the player. The story is as thrilling and as bold and as bare as melodrama, full of the Mexican vigor and color that have left their mark on Texas. It is not the story alone, nor the idea, nor the style that makes The Saint what it is, but the union of them all."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 9:846 D '25 150w

YOUNG, STARK. Sweet times and The blue policeman; a book of children's plays. 215p il $2 Holt

812 Children's plays

25-25576

"This collection of fairy plays originally created for the children of Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, recently President of Amherst, can really be read to children and really acted, without scenery or costumes."—Sat R of Lit

"Like most good work of the kind, these plays were done in the playtime of the author for a group of real children to act whenever and wherever they pleased. They have the touch of poesy and child fun that is missing from most plays for children, and an imaginative appeal that makes the book a delightful one to read aloud with small children." A. C. Moore

+ Bookm 62:182 O '25 100w

"They are one-act plays, with varied casts, but none for an impracticably large number of children. And they will be good to read as well as act, for the words have been chosen with regard for a young child's reading vocabulary as well as the words he uses in familiar speech. The plays are practicable for toy theaters also, or for marionettes." H. C. Forbes

+ N Y Tribune p6 O 4 '25 600w

"They are thoroughly natural and appealing. The illustrations by Edwin Avery Park are charming."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:302 N 14 '25 60w

"It is a charming and spirited collection of thirteen minute plays written especially for children to read and play at home, catching childish dreams and childhood terrors in an unsophisticated dramatic form."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 10:70 Ja '26 150w

Z

ZAMIATIN, EVGENII IVANOVICH. We; auth. tr. from the Russian by Gregory Zilboorg. 286p $2 Dutton

25-761

"Only a man of talent who, as Zamiatin, has been and still is amidst the greatest experiment in the 'standardization' and 'communization' of human beings, could write this Utopia of an absolutely standardized and socialized society. This does not mean that 'We' is a propagandist book ridiculing Communist Russia. Not a bit. The Communist experiment gave only the first patterns necessary for a start. The rest is the creation of the thought and fantasy of the author. Everything in the United State is rationalized and socialized. Instead of individuals we have here only he-Numbers and she-Numbers. Their behavior is completely regulated by 'The Table of Hours.' All Numbers are equal, dwell in identical glass apartments beneath the eye of everyone, get up at the same moment, 'at the same very second, designated by the Table, carry the spoons to their mouths,' chew their meals the same number of times, simultaneously go out to walk, to the Auditorium and so on; briefly, they are all equal particles of the gigantic State-machinery."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 21:305 My '25

Reviewed by A. W. Porterfield

Bookm 61:110 Mr '25 320w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 22 '25 320w

"A brilliant satire."

+ Cleveland p82 Jl '25

Ind 114:162 F 7 '25 80w

"Into this yet-young year has come a novel which, if it gets its deserts, will still be in demand when we are trying to remember to write 1926. The exploration of the future by fictioneers is not a literary novelty, but this Russian writer brings to the venture a great deal of imagination and ingenuity plus a sense of humor with cutting edges." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p4 Ja 17 '25 660w

Reviewed by Dorothy Brewster

Nation 121:237 Ag 26 '25 450w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

New Repub 42:104 Mr 18 '25 500w

"Zamiatin has written with power upon a theme of wide scope. His style is terse, impressionistic, futuristic, with a sort of prismatic sense to his vision. It is exciting and even terrible. His satire lashes the by-play of humans against theory."

N Y Times p16 Ja 18 '25 870w

"The book is brilliantly written, sharp and swift, brittle as glass, with darting, unexpected rays of laughter, and beneath that a complex network of tragedy. But if Alice stayed very long in the wonderland of Mr. Zamiatin's style she, too, would have to submit to an operation." Margery Latimer
 + — N Y Tribune p9 F 15 '25 800w

"'We' is splendid in its costuming—the biting laughter of what Zamiatin calls his 'funniest and most earnest' work. Its cubistic outlook, its bold, definite imagination, its harsh humor, is Russian in the best of the Balieff style." Dorothy Borg
 + N Y World p4m F 1 '25 500w

Reviewed by Ethel Parton
 Outlook 139:229 F 11 '25 330w

"Philosophical as Plato's 'The Republic,' interesting as the best Utopias of H. G. Wells, cold as a muzzle of a loaded revolver, and sarcastic as 'Gulliver's Travels,' 'We' is a powerful challenge to all Socialist Utopias." Pitrim Sorokin
 Sat R of Lit 1:507 F 7 '25 1550w

"A highly elaborate caricature of what life in a completely mechanized and synchronized state would be. Its satiric intent is allied to those German architectural designs which subtly parody Greek sublimity; the Greeks aimed at the perfection and symmetry of a temple, the moderns at a factory."
 Springfield Republican p7a Mr 8 '25 650w

ZANGWILL, ISRAEL. Too much money; a farcical comedy in three acts. 102p $1.50 Macmillan [3s 6d Heinemann]

822 25-26329

The chief ingredients for this farcical comedy are an indulgent husband, a pampered wife, a scheming Scotchman and a futurist artist and all his works. The wife finds the cubist pictures "life-enhancing," but her husband not so much so. He has too much money. So enter the scheming Scotchman, and exit the money. The couple are next discovered in Billingsgate lodgings, with Annabel at the "life-enhancing" wash-tub and Sir Robert, the Scotch friend, scouting among the markets for bargains in fish. Meanwhile the millionaire husband Thomas furtively enjoys a steak and a good cigar at his club. Fortunes are made and fortunes lost and the conclusion brings a new note to the old refrain "Too much money."

Booklist 21:297 My '25
 Cleveland p120 D '25

"The chief entertainment of the reader will be in the dialogue rather than in the drama." J. R. Towse

Lit R p9 Mr 28 '25 420w

"In 'Too Much Money' Mr. Zangwill tries a sort of Charley's Aunt and hardly even lands a nephew. On the stage it might have been saved by hardworking actors. In print it does nothing but remind one that the mantle of Elijah is wearing very thin with the years." Donald Douglas

— N Y World p7m Mr 8 '25 340w

"Mr. Zangwill knows his theatre, and has been able to accumulate a rapid succession of broadly comical but entirely arbitrary situations, which individually are amusing enough, but in its entirety the piece is too preposterous to invite serious comment. The literary adornment is scarcely compensation for the cheapness of the dramatic fabric."

— Sat R of Lit 1:585 Mr 7 '25 330w

ZWEIG, STEFAN. Passion and pain; tr. by Eden and Cedar Paul. 273p $2.50 Richards, B.G.

"[A collection of seven short stories]. Vieing with 'Compulsion' for intensity is 'Letter from an Unknown Woman,' an engrossing tale, despite its highly improbable situation. 'Transfiguration' is a cool analysis of the mental change in a man who believes himself to have lost all interest in living. The remaining four stories are varied. 'The Runaway' is a description of a returning Russian prisoner and gives the indelible impression of futility. 'The Fowler Snared' is a sophisticated portrayal of an elderly dilettante who makes love anonymously to an adolescent girl. 'Virata, or the Eyes of the Undying Brother' is a bit too ponderous in its allegory. The last story is 'The Governess.'" —Lit R

"There is a fatalistic monotone underlying almost all German fiction and these seven stories by Stefan Zweig, pinned under the title, 'Passion and Pain,' are not immune from this characteristic. In every one of the stories the reader finds intensity. This quality is best handled in 'Compulsion,' which is a remarkable psychological study." Elizabeth Sanderson

+ — Lit R p9 Je 6 '25 380w

"The romantic mood which Stefan Zweig evokes in the short stories and novelettes of 'Passion and Pain' is a curious compound of gayety and elegance, of ethical earnestness, of passive and pervasive sweetness, of Viennese esprit and Bavarian gemütlichkeit."

N Y Times p8 Ap 26 '25 700w

"I know that my enthusiasm for this book courts suspicion. But since it must out eventually let me set down as the keynote to this criticism the opinion—to which ten years of reviewing give some point—that no living author has to his credit a better collection of short stories than 'Passion and Pain,' and that with the exception of Thomas Hardy, Maxim Gorky and Thomas Mann no writer alive to-day has arrested more of both the elemental and rational nature of man between the covers of a book." J. J. Smertenko

+ N Y Tribune p5 Ag 16 '25 750w

"This collection of short stories is the finest this reviewer has read in several seasons. Almost every one of the seven stories in it is masterly. 'The Letter From an Unknown Woman' is especially compelling."

+ N Y World p7m My 3 '25 300w

List of Documents for Use in the Smaller Libraries

Compiled by

MARY E. FURBECK,

Public Affairs Information Service

Adoption

Adoption laws in the United States. E. F. Peck. (U.S. Children's bur. Bur. pub. 148) 51p pa '25

"A summary of the development of adoption legislation and significant features of adoption statutes, with the text of selected laws."

Africa

British West Africa. T. R. Wilson. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 331) 36p pa '25

Agricultural colleges

Land-grant college education, 1910 to 1920. Part I: History and educational objectives. W. C. John. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1924, no. 30) 51p pa '25

Agricultural education

Agricultural education. G. A. Works. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1925, no. 32)

Agriculture

Agriculture yearbook, 1924. U.S. Agriculture dept. 1252p '25

Alfalfa

Utilization of alfalfa. R. A. Oakley and H. L. Westover. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1229) 36p pa '25

Algeria

Algeria: a commercial handbook. C. L. Jones and E. A. Dow. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade promotion ser. 8) 51p pa '25

American literature

Studies in Southern literature: a program for women's clubs. C. A. Hibbard. rev. ed. (North Carolina. Univ. Extension bul. v.5, no. 10) 44p pa '26 50c University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Antelope

Status of the pronghorn antelope, 1922-1924. E. W. Nelson. (U.S. Agriculture. dept. Dept. bul. 1346) 64p pa '25

Art

Necessities and opportunities for art in the public schools. M. R. Hardman. (Utah. Univ. Bul. v.15, no.7) 15p pa '25 University of Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah

Australia

Australia: its resources and production. Australia. Immigration office. 109p pa '24 Commonwealth Immigration office, Melbourne, Australia

Aviation

U.S. President's aircraft board. Report, November 30, 1925. 30p pa '25

Baking

Home baking. Charlotte Chatfield.* (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1450) 14p pa '25

Barberries

The common barberry and how to kill it. F. E. Kempton and N. F. Thompson. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. circ. 356) 4p pa '25

Barns

Barns. H. B. White and M. G. Jacobson. (Minnesota. Agricultural experiment station. Special bul. 98) 24p pa '25 College of Agriculture, University of Minnesota, St Paul, Minn.

Bees

Beekkeeping for beginners. H. Garman. (Kentucky. Agricultural experiment station Circ. 35) 34p pa '25 Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky.

Suggestions on queen rearing. H. B. Parks and A. H. Alex. (Texas. Agricultural Experiment Station. Circ. 35) 19p pa '25 Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, College Station, Brazos County, Texas

Birds

Homes for birds. E. R. Kalmbach and W. L. McAtee. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1456) 21p pa '25

How to attract birds in northeastern United States. W. L. McAtee. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 621) 14p pa '25

Books and reading

Best books of 1924, selected for a small public library. (New York State. Univ. Bul. 827) 58p pa '25 New York State Library, Albany

Boys' clubs

Boys' and girls' 4-H club work, 1923. I. W. Hill and G. S. Warren. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. circ. 348) 46p pa '25

Club work and the farm boy. R. W. Blacklock. (Florida. Univ. Agricultural Extension Division. Bul. 43) 20p pa '25 Agricultural Extension Division, Gainesville, Florida

Brazil

Brazil: an economic review by states. R. C. Long. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 349) 32p pa '25

Building

Building permits in the principal cities of the United States in 1924. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 397) 95p pa '25

Statistics

Building permits in the principal cities of the United States in 1923. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 368) 127p pa '25

Canning and preserving

Home canning of fruits and vegetables. M. E. Dakin and Elsie Trabue. (Connecticut. Agricultural college. Extension service. Bul. 90) 19p pa '25 Connecticut Agricultural College, Storrs, Conn.

Cattle

Beef cattle, Wade Toole. (Ontario. Agriculture college Bul. 310) 48p pa '25 Ontario Agricultural College.

Dairy cattle. J. C. Steckley. (Ontario. Agricultural college. Bul. 311) 48p pa '25

Dairy cattle breeds. A. B. Nystrom. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1443) 32p pa '25

Cheese

Cheese. A. L. Marlatt and Edna Huffman. (Wisconsin. Agricultural College Extension Service. Special Circ.) 31p pa '25 Agricultural Extension Service, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

Making and using cottage cheese in the home. K. J. Matheson and J. M. Hoover. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1451) 14p pa '25

Child labor

The health of the working child. (New York State Labor Dept. Special bul. 134) 91p pa '24 New York State Library, Albany, N.Y.

Bibliography

References on child labor and minors in industry, 1916-1924. L. A. Thompson. (U.S. Children's bur. Bur. pub. 147) 153p pa '25

Child welfare

Child welfare. Texas State college for women. Home economics dept. 55p pa '25 Texas State college for Women, Denton, Texas

Children indentured by the Wisconsin state public school. (U.S. Children's bur. Bur. pub. 150) 132p pa '25

Laws

Laws relating to sex offenses against children. Reuben Oppenheimer and L. L. Eckman. (U.S. Children's bur. Pub. 145) 74p pa '25

ChildrenCare and hygiene

Posters prepared by school children in milk-for-health campaigns. J. M. Hoover. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Misc. circ. 21) 16p pa '25 Progress and prospect in school health work. (U.S. Education bur. School health studies 10) 54p pa '25

ChinaEconomic conditions

Changing factors in the economic life of China. J. H. Nelson. (U.S. Foreign and Domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 312) 21p pa '25

CitizenshipBibliography

List of references on education for citizenship. (U.S. Education bur. Library leaflet no. 30) 16p pa '25

Citrus fruits

Citrus fruit growing in the Southwest. A. D. Shamel, C. S. Pomeroy and R. E. Caryl. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1447) 42p pa '25

Colleges and universitiesStatistics

Statistics of state universities and state colleges for year ending June 30, 1924 (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1925, no. 12) 23p pa '25

Commerce, Foreign

International trade in 1924. J. J. Kral. (U.S. Bur. of foreign and domestic commerce. Trade information bul. 373) 69p pa '25

Community life

Rural planning the village. W. C. Nason. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1441) 46p pa '25

Consolidation of schools

Recent data on consolidation of schools and transportation of pupils. J. F. Abel. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1925, no. 22) 24p pa '25

Convict labor

Convict labor in 1923. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 372) 265p pa '25

Cookery

Menus and recipes. Margaret Gleason. (Texas. College of industrial arts. Reprint 106) 89p pa '23 College of Industrial Arts, Denton Vegetable cookery. A. L. Marlatt. (Wisconsin. College of agriculture. Extension service. Circ. 182) 31p pa '24 University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

Cotton

Lessons on cotton for elementary schools. F. A. Merrill. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Misc. circ. 43) 27p pa '25

Dairying

Dairy calf care and management. H. P. Davis and R. F. Morgan. (Nebraska. College of agriculture. Experiment Station Circ. 30) 31p pa '25 University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb.

Dairy farm devices. J. W. Bartlett and E. R. Gross. (New Jersey. State college of agriculture. Extension bul. 47) 16p pa '25 New Jersey state college of agriculture, New Brunswick, N.J.

Feeding the dairy cow. H. P. Davis. (Nebraska. College of agriculture. Experiment station Circ. 29) 29p pa '25 University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb.

Intensive dairying in New Zealand and Wisconsin. H. L. Russell and Theodore Macklin. (Wisconsin. Agricultural experiment station Bul. 377) 40p pa '25 Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

The pure bred sire adds dollars to dairying. J. W. Bartlett and W. R. Robbers. (New Jersey. State college of agriculture. Extension bul. 45) 20p pa '25 New Jersey State College of Agriculture, New Brunswick, N.J.

Domestic workers

Domestic workers and their employment relations; a study based on the records of the Domestic Efficiency Association of Baltimore, Maryland. M. V. Robinson. (U.S. Women's bur. Bul. 39) 87p pa '24

Drainage

The drainage of irrigated farms. R. A. Hart. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 805) 31p pa '25

Dressmaking

The house dress. B. L. Knight. (Maryland. University. Extension bul. 39) 19p pa '25 Extension Service, University of Maryland, College Park, Md.

EducationLegislation

Important state laws relating to education, enacted in 1922 and 1923. W. R. Hood. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1925, no. 2) 82p pa '25

A manual of educational legislation for the guidance of committees on education in the state legislatures. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1924, no. 36) 51p pa '25

Statistics

Statistics of city school systems, 1921-22. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1924, no. 34) 222p pa '25

Eggs

What the consumer should know about eggs. A. E. Albrecht. (New York State. Farms and markets dept. Agricultural bul. 172) 68p pa '25 New York State Library, Albany, N.Y.

Electric industries

Census of electrical industries, 1922: central electric light and power stations. U.S. Census bur. 174p pa '25

Electric power

How farmers can secure electric service by cooperative effort. G. H. Morse. (Pennsylvania. Agriculture dept. bul. 412) 22p pa '25 Department of Agriculture, Harrisburg, Pa.

Electricity on the farm.

Electricity for Indiana farms. T. E. Hinton. (Purdue univ. Agricultural experiment station Circ. 127) 15p pa '25 Purdue university, Lafayette, Ind.

The farm electrified. (Pennsylvania. Agriculture dept. Bul. 407) 37p pa '25 Department of Agriculture, Harrisburg, Pa.

English language for foreigners

Lessons in oral English for beginners in rural schools. Ethel Swain, comp. (California Immigrant education division. Bul. 5E) 38p pa '25 State Department of Education, Sacramento, Calif.

Lessons in oral English for classes of beginners—women. Ethel Swain, comp. (California Immigrant education division. Bul. 5D) 45p pa '25 State Department of Education, Sacramento, Calif.

Farm management

An agricultural economic survey of Rockwall county, Texas; a typical blackland cotton farming area. L. P. Gabbard. (Texas. Agricultural experiment station Bul. 327) Texas Agricultural Experiment station, College Station, Brazos Co., Texas

A review of the agriculture of the Big Bend country. Byron Hunter and others. (Washington (state) Agricultural experiment station bul. 192) 47p pa '25

Farm records

Farm accounts made easier; how to use Wisconsin farm record book. J. S. Donald. (Wisconsin. College of Agriculture, Extension service. Circ. 179) 37p pa '25 University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

Farm tenancy

Landlords of Nebraska farms. J. O. Rankin. (Nebraska. Agriculture experiment station bul. 202) 38p pa '24

Fertilizers

Bacteria feed legumes with air nitrogen. E. G. Hastings and E. B. Fred. (Wisconsin. Agricultural college Extension service. Circ. 185) 20p pa '25 Agricultural Extension Service, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

Profits from phosphates. A. R. Whitson and Griffith Richards. (Wisconsin. Agricultural experiment station Bul. 376) 22p pa '25

Sour soils and lime materials. Henry Dorsey. (Connecticut. Agricultural college. Extension service. Bul. 89) 16p pa '25 Connecticut Agricultural College, Storrs, Conn.

Flies

Flytraps and their operation. F. C. Bishopp. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 734) 14p pa '25

Flowers

About wild flowers. A. C. Hottes. (Ohio. State univ. Extension bul. v. 20, no. 6) 20p pa '25 Ohio State university, Columbus

Folk dancing

Folk dancing for high school girls. Miriam Taylor. (Iowa. Univ. Extension bul. 129) 64p pa '25 University of Iowa, Iowa City

Foreign exchange

Foreign exchange in Latin America; a survey of conditions since 1914; C. A. McQueen. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 316) 55p pa '25

Forest fires

Effects of forest fires on land clearing and crop production. M. J. Thompson. (Minnesota. Agricultural experiment station. Bul. 220) 23p pa '25 University of Minnesota, University Farm, St Paul

Forests and forestry

Common forest trees of Connecticut. W. R. Mattoon and A. F. Hawes. (Conn. State forester). 44p pa '25 Connecticut State Park and Forest Commission, Hartford

Fire and the forest (California pine region) S. B. Shaw and E. I. Kotok. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Circ. 358) 20p pa '25

Fruit

Grafting, budding and early care of fruit trees. T. J. Talbert. (Missouri. Agricultural experiment station. Bul. 233) 36p pa '25 University of Missouri, Columbia

Growing fruit for home use. H. P. Gould and G. M. Darrow. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1001) 36p pa '25

Fungicides

New Jersey dry-mix; an effective summer fungicide for tree fruits. A. J. Farley. (New Jersey. Agricultural experiment station Circ. 177) 8p pa '25 New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Stations, New Brunswick, N.J.

Game laws

Game laws for the season 1925-26. G. A. Lawyer and F. L. Earnshaw. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1466) 46p pa '25 A summary of the provisions of federal, state and provincial statutes.

Gardens

The home garden. M. C. Doermann and others. (New Jersey State College of Agriculture. Extension Bul. 42) 32p pa '25 New Jersey State College of Agriculture, New Brunswick, N.J.

Gary system

The Gary system and the platoon plan. G. M. Wiley. (New York State. University of the State of New York. Bul. 812) 17p pa '25 New York State Library, Albany, N.Y.

Gasoline poisoning

Proceedings of a conference to determine whether or not there is a public health question in the manufacture, distribution or use of tetraethyl lead gasoline. (U.S. Public health service. Public health bul. 158) 116p pa '25

Georgia

Physical geography of Georgia. Laurence LaForge and others. (Georgia. Geological survey. Bul. 42) 189p pa '25 State Geological Survey, Atlanta, Ga.

Grape juice

Unfermented grape juice: how to make it in the home. Charles Dearing. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1075) 32p pa '25

Grapes

Home utilization of Muscadine grapes. Charles Dearing. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1454) 27p pa '25

High schools

Legal provisions for rural high schools. W. R. Hood. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1924, no. 40) 69p pa '25

HospitalsStatistics

Hospitals and dispensaries, 1923. (U.S. Census bur.) 40p pa '25

Hours of labor

Standard and scheduled hours of work for women in industry; a study based on hour data from 13 states. R. I. Voris. (U.S. Women's bur. Bul. 43) 63p pa '25

Hygiene

Health and personal appearance. E. A. Reynolds. (N.Y. (state) College of home economics. Cornell bul. for homemakers 119) 23p pa '25 New York State college of Agriculture, Ithaca, N.Y.

IndiaCommerce

India as a market for American goods. E. A. Chapman. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 348) 50p pa '25

Industrial representation

Works council movement in Germany. Boris Stern. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 383) 114p pa '25

Infant mortality

Causal factors in infant mortality. R. M. Woodbury. (U.S. Children's bur. Pub. 142) 245p pa '25

InfantsCare and hygiene

The care of the baby. (Kansas. State bd. of health. 8p pa '25 Kansas. State Board of Health.) Topeka, Kansas

Prepared by a committee of the American association for the study and prevention of infant mortality

What builds babies? the mother's diet in the pregnant and nursing periods. (U.S. Children's bur. Folder 4) 8p pa '25

Insects, injurious and beneficial

Scale insects injurious in Pennsylvania. F. M. Trimble. (Pennsylvania. Agriculture dept. Gen. bul. 398) 21p pa '25

Investments, Foreign

The balance of international payments of the United States in 1924. R. S. Tucker. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 340) 28p pa '25

Iris

Bearded iris: a perennial suited to all gardens. A. W. W. Sand. (N.Y. (state) Agricultural college. Cornell ext. bul. 112) 92p pa '25 New York State college of Agriculture, Ithaca, N.Y.

Jelly

Jellies, jams, marmalades and pickles. D. A. Loudon and H. B. Spencer. (North Dakota. Agricultural College. Agricultural extension division. Circ. 64) 19p pa '24. North Dakota Agricultural College. Agricultural College, N.D.

Juvenile courts

Juvenile courts at work; a study of the organization and methods of ten courts. K. F. Lenroot and E. O. Lundberg. (U.S. Children's bur. Pub. 141) 323p pa '25

Kitchens

Working heights for kitchen equipment. Fra Clark. (Missouri college of agriculture circ. 167) 8p pa '25 University of Missouri College of agriculture, Columbia

Labor laws and legislation

Decisions of courts affecting labor, 1923-1924. L. D. Clark and S. J. Tracy. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 391) 551p pa '25

Labor and laboring classesGermany

Postwar labor conditions in Germany. R. R. Kuczynski. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 380) 199p pa '25

Land settlement

Land settlement and colonization in the Great Lakes states. J. D. Black and L. C. Gray. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. bul. 1295) 88p pa '25

Land tenure

Landlords of Nebraska farms. J. O. Rankin. (Nebraska. Agricultural experiment station Bul. 202) 38p pa '24 Agricultural Experiment Station, Lincoln, Nebraska

Lawns

Control of Japanese beetle in lawns. B. R. Leach. (Pennsylvania. Agriculture dept. Gen. bul. 410) 12p pa '25

Lawns and lawn making. H. F. Major. (Missouri Agricultural experiment station circ. 136) 12p pa '25 University of Missouri, Columbia

Louisiana

Louisiana today. S. C. Arthur and E. B. Arthur. (Louisiana. Agriculture and immigration dept.) 206p pa '24. Dept. of agriculture and immigration, Baton Rouge, La.

Marketing, Cooperative

Cooperative central marketing organization. J. D. Black and H. B. Price. (Minnesota. Agricultural experiment station. Bul. 211) 112p pa '24 Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station, University Farm, St Paul, Minn.

Marketing of agricultural products

Agricultural production and marketing in Atlantic county, New Jersey. W. C. Funk and others. (N.J. Agricultural experiment station. Bul. 416) 39p pa '25 New Jersey Agricultural College, New Brunswick, N.J.

Transportation of Pacific Coast perishables. A. L. Cricher. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade promotion service 12) 91p pa '24

MarriageStatistics

Marriage and divorce. U.S. Census bur. 58p pa '25

Meat

Efficient methods of retailing meat. R. C. Lindquist. (U.S. Agriculture dept. mis. circ. 54) 43p pa '25

Milk

Methods of testing and determining relative values of milk. H. C. Troy. (N.Y. State college of agriculture Cornell extension bul. 116) 35p pa '25 New York State college of agriculture, Ithaca

Milk as a daily food. M. F. Henry and Lucile Brewer. (N.Y. (state) College of home economics Cornell bul. for homemakers 105) 35p pa '25 New York State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N.Y.

Millinery

Home millinery. M. E. Robinson. (Missouri College of agriculture. circ. 171) 24p pa '25 University of Missouri college of agriculture, Columbia

Minimum wageBibliography

List of references on minimum wage for women in the United States and Canada. E. L. Stone. (U.S. Women's bur. Bul. 42) 42p pa '25

Minnesota

A guidebook to Minnesota trunk highway no. 1. G. M. Schwartz. (Minnesota. Geological survey. Bul. 20) 128p pa '25

Mortgages

Farm mortgage financing in Texas. V. P. Lee. (Texas agricultural experiment station. Bul. 330) 67p pa '25 Texas agricultural experiment station, College station. Brazos County, Texas

Narcotics

The prevalence and trend of drug addiction in the United States and factors influencing it. Lawrence Kolb and A. G. Du Mez. (U.S. Public health service. Reprint 924) 26p pa '24

Nature study

Cycles of garden life and plant life: a series of projects in nature study for elementary schools. F. C. Fox. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1925, no. 15) 98p pa '25

Nature studies (animals). L. D. Wooster. (Kansas state teachers college of Hays. Bul. v 15, no 4) 75p pa '25 State teachers college, Hays, Kansas

Oil

Oil concessions in foreign countries: message transmitting in response to Senate resolution no. 149 of Feb. 13, 1924, a report of the secretary of state relative to the diplomatic correspondence in connection with securing oil concessions for American citizens between this government and the governments of certain foreign countries regarding oil concessions in these countries. (U.S. 68th Congress, 1st sess., S. doc. no. 97) 122p pa '24

Orchards

Orchard spraying. L. M. Peairs and E. C. Sherwood. (West Virginia. Agriculture experiment station Circ. 36) 20p pa '24 West Virginia university, Morgantown

Oysters

Oysters: an important health food, with 98 recipes. Lewis Radcliffe. (U.S. Fisheries bur. Econ. circ. 58) 15p pa '25

Pageants

A pageant of agriculture. H. H. Hudson and M. E. Duthie. (N.Y. State college of agriculture. Cornell extension bul. 123) 23p pa '25 New York State college of agriculture, Ithaca

Pecan

The pecan in Texas: the state tree; the pecan; its history, importance, economic value. J. H. Burkett. (Texas. Agricultural dept. Bul. 81) 218p pa '25

Pine

Longleaf pine. W. R. Mattoon. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Dept. bul. 1061) 67p pa '25

Plant diseases

Some common New Mexico plant diseases. R. F. Crawford. (New Mexico. Agricultural experiment station Bul. 148) 25p pa '25 New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, State College

Plants

Growing early plants for home and commercial gardeners. A. E. Wilkinson. (Connecticut. Agricultural college extension service. Bul. 91) 19p pa '25 Connecticut agricultural college, Storrs

Plumbing

Simple plumbing repairs in the home. G. M. Warren. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1460) 14p pa '25

Potatoes

Potatoes from the housekeepers' standpoint. N. E. Goldthwaite. (Colorado. Agricultural experiment station Bul. 297) 32p pa '25 Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins

Poultry

Culling the farm flock. H. L. Shrader. (Missouri college of agriculture. circ. 170) 16p pa '25 University of Missouri college of agriculture, Columbia

Farm poultry houses. D. H. Hall. (Clemson Agricultural college. Bul. 69) 21p pa '25 Clemson Agricultural College, Clemson College, S.C.

New chick feeding facts. E. B. Hart and others. (Wisconsin. Agricultural experiment station. Bul. 371) 23p pa '24 Agricultural Experiment Station, Madison, Wis.

Poultry breeding records. W. A. Lippincott. (California. Agricultural experiment station Circ. 299) 31p pa '25 University of California, Berkeley

Poultry houses. J. P. Goodearl. (Montana. Agricultural experiment station Circ. 129) 8p pa '25 University of Montana, Bozeman

Poultry management; suggestions for each month. O. A. Barton and J. R. Redditt. (North Dakota. Agricultural College. Agricultural extension division circ. 65) 55p pa '24 North Dakota Agricultural College, Agricultural College, N.D.

Poultry management at the University of New Hampshire. A. W. Richardson and F. E. Mather. (New Hampshire. Univ. Extension service. Ext. bul. 28) 32p pa '25 University of New Hampshire, Durham

Diseases

Tuberculosis of fowls. Cecil Elder and A. M. Lee. (Wyoming. Agricultural experiment station Bul. 142) 16p pa '25 Director of Experiment Station, Laramie, Wyo.

PricesStatistics

Retail prices, 1913 to December 1923. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 366) 186p pa '25

Pruning

Prune the bearing apple tree. R. H. Roberts. Wisconsin. Agricultural experiment station Bul. 378) 36p pa '25 University of Wisconsin, Madison

Public health

Correspondence and reading courses in public health. (U.S. Public health service. Reprint 948) 8p pa '24

Bibliography

Some publications suitable for general distribution. (U.S. Public health service. Reprint 927) 10p pa '24

Railroads

Railways of Central America and the West Indies. W. R. Long. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade promotion ser. 5) 376p pa '25

Real estateTaxation

The trend of real estate taxation in Kansas from 1910 to 1923. (Kansas. Agricultural experiment station Bul. 235) 97p pa '25 State Agricultural college, Manhattan, Kansas

Refrigerators

The home refrigerator. E. H. Parfitt. (Indiana. Agricultural experiment station Circ. 124) 12p pa '25 Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind.

Roads

Rural highway mileage, income and expenditures 1921 and 1922. A. P. Anderson. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Department bul. 1279) 88p pa '25

Roses

Rose culture. Alex Laurie. (Michigan. Agricultural experiment station Circ. bul. 84) 7p pa '25 Michigan State College of Agriculture and Applied Science, East Lansing

Rubber

Possibilities for Para rubber production in the Philippine Islands. C. F. Vance and others. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade promotion ser. 17) 101p pa '25

Salesmen

The education of a retail sales force; a problem in retail store management. A. L. Bush. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 303) 13p pa '25

School nurses

Helps for the rural school nurse. Harriet Wedgwood and Hazel Wedgwood. (U.S. Education bur. Health education no. 17) 54p pa '24

Schoolhouses

American school buildings. F. B. Dresslar. (U.S. Education bur. Bul. 1924, no. 17) 100p 45 pl pa '25

Sex instruction

The parents' part. Kansas. Board of health. 14p pa '25 State Board of Health, Topeka, Kansas

Shakespeare, William

A study of Shakespeare; a program for women's clubs. Russell Potter. (North Carolina. University. University extension division, v.5, no. 9) 61p pa '26 University Extension Division, Chapel Hill, N.C. 50c

ShippingSubsidies

Government aid to merchant shipping, study of subsidies, subventions, and other forms of state aid in principal countries of the world. G. M. Jones. rev. ed., Aug. 1, 1923. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Special agents ser. 119) 470p '25

Social insurance

General problems of social insurance. (International labor office. Studies and reports. Series M., no. 1) 136p pa '25 60c World Peace Foundation, 40 Mt. Vernon st., Boston, Mass.

South America

Travel routes and costs in South America. R. S. Smith. (U.S. Bur. of foreign and domestic commerce. Trade information bul. 381) 21p pa '26

Standard of living

The workers' standard of life in countries with depreciated currency. (International labor office. Studies and reports, ser. D., no. 15) 182p pa '25 80c World Peace Foundation, 40 Mt. Vernon st., Boston, Mass.

Strawberries

Strawberry diseases. N. E. Stevens. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1458) 10p pa '25

Strawberry growing in Kansas. R. J. Barnett. (Kansas. Agricultural experiment station Circ. 116) 16p pa '25 Kansas State Agricultural College, Manhattan

Sugar

Growing sugar cane for sirup. P. A. Yoder. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1034) 30p pa '25

Swine

Fitting, showing, and judging hogs. E. Z. Russell. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1455) 22p pa '25

Swine feeding. V. A. Freeman. (Michigan Agricultural college ext. bul. 26) 12p pa '25 Michigan Agricultural College

Taxation

Taxation of securities in Europe. M. B. Carroll. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 326) 25p pa '25

Tourist camps

Tourist camps. C. P. Halligan. (Michigan agricultural experiment station. Special bul. 139) 18p pa '25 Michigan agricultural college, East Lansing, Michigan

Trees

Tree distribution under the Kinkaid act of 1911. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Misc. Circ. 16) 14p pa '25

United StatesCommerce

Commerce yearbook, 1924. U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. 719p '25

United States trade with Latin America in 1924. J. R. McKey and H. S. Giusta. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 345) 48p pa '25

United States. Children's bureau

Publications, May 15, 1925. U.S. Children's bur. 13p pa '25

Vegetables

Vegetables as food. M. C. Doermann. (New Jersey State college of agriculture. Extension bul. 48) 8p pa '25 New Jersey State college of agriculture, New Brunswick, N.J. Vegetables; their food value and preparation. (Ontario. Agriculture dept. Women's institutes branch. Bul. 312) 13p pa '25 Department of Agriculture, Toronto, Ont.

Virginia

Virginia yearbook 1925. (Virginia. Agriculture and immigration dept. Bul. 207) 128p pa '25 Department of Agriculture and Immigration, Richmond, Va.

Vocational guidance

List of references on vocational guidance. (U.S. Education bur. Library leaflet 32) 11p pa '25

WarBibliography

List of references on the outlawry of war. U.S. Lib. of Congress. 6p pa '25 (Mim.)

Water supply

Farmstead water supply. G. M. Warren. (U.S. Agriculture dept. Farmers' bul. 1448) 38p pa '25

Weeds

Some new weeds of Iowa. L. H. Pammel and C. M. King. (Iowa. Agricultural experiment station Circ. 98) 16p pa '25 Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, Ames, Iowa

Weed seed identification. E. P. Harling. (Kansas. Agric. bd. Bul. v. 1, no. 1, Suppl.) 12p pa '24 Kansas State Board of Agriculture, Topeka

Wisconsin

Wisconsin agricultural statistics for 1922 and 1923; biennial crop and livestock review. P. O. Nyhus (Wisconsin. Agriculture dept. Bul. 65) 72p pa '24 State Department of Agriculture, Madison, Wis.

Wolves

The habits and economic importance of wolves in Canada. Norman Criddle. (Canada Agriculture dept. Bul. n.s. 13) 24p pa '25 Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, Ont

Women in industry

Home environment and employment opportunities of women in coal-mine workers' families. (U.S. Women's bur. Bul. 45) 61p pa '25

Wool trade

International trade in wool. L. A. Wheeler. (U.S. Foreign and domestic commerce bur. Trade information bul. 301) 70p pa '25

Workmen's compensation

Comparison of workmen's compensation laws of the United States as of January 1, 1925. L. D. Clark. (U.S. Labor statistics bur. Bul. 379) 13p folded charts, pa '25

The Senate and House documents and reports are issued in limited editions, and unless otherwise indicated may be obtained only through members of Congress. Librarians should make application to their own representative in Washington.

The Department of Agriculture's supply of the Current number of Farmers' Bulletins is ordinarily sufficient to make it possible to send them free to all applicants. They are also for sale at 5 cents per copy [by the Superintendent of Documents].

The Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., is authorized to sell at cost of paper and printing any United States public document in his charge, the distribution of which is not otherwise provided for. Publications cannot be supplied free to individuals nor forwarded in advance of payment.

Subject, Title and Pseudonym Index

To Author Entries, March, 1925—February, 1926

- A B C of relativity. Russell, B. A. W: (Ja '26)
- A B C of stocks and shares. Parkinson, H. (S '25)
- A. E., pseud. See Russell, G. W: (S '25)
- Aaron Burr. Wandell, S: H:, and Minnigerode, M. (F '26)
- Abolition of war. Eddy, S., and Page, K. (Ap '25)
- Abridged compendium of American genealogy. Virkus, F: A., ed. (My '25)
- Abyssinia
- Description and travel
- Forbes, J. R. From Red Sea to Blue Nile. (Ja '26)
- Powell, E: A. Beyond the utmost purple rim. (My '25)
- Academy papers. American academy of 'arts and letters. (F '26)
- According to Saint John. Charnwood, G. R. B. (F '26)
- Accounting
- Morland, D: F., and McKee, R. W. Accounting for the petroleum industry. (S '25)
- Accounting for the petroleum industry. Morland, D: F., and McKee, R. W. (S '25)
- Acid-resisting metals. Tungay, S. J. (N '25)
- Acquiring a home. Blake, C. H. (My '25)
- Across Europe with Satanella. Sheridan, C. C. (S '25)
- Across the moon. Macleod, H., pseud. (O '25)
- Acting
- Andrews, H. L., and Weirick, B. Acting and play production. (Je '25)
- Bernhardt, S. Art of the theatre. (Je '25)
- Young, S. Glamour. (Ag '25)
- Acting and play production. Andrews, H. L., and Weirick, B. (Je '25)
- Actors and actresses
- Bancroft, S. B. Empty chairs. (N '25)
- Cohan, G: M. Twenty years on Broadway. (My '25)
- Forbes-Robertson, J. Player under three reigns. (Je '25)
- Isman, F. Weber and Fields. (Mr '25)
- Adams, John
- Adams, J., and Jefferson, T: Correspondence, 1812-1826. (Ja '26)
- Adaptation (biology)
- Thorpe, M. R., ed. Organic adaptation to environment. (Je '25)
- Adolescence
- Pechstein, L: A., and McGregor, A. L. Psychology of the junior high school pupil. (My '25)
- Richmond, W. Adolescent girl. (Ja '26)
- Adolescent girl. Richmond, W. (Ja '26)
- Adventure of Wrangel island. Stefánsson, V., and Knight, J: I. (Je '25)
- Adventures in Peru. Prodgers, C. H. (Ap '25)
- Adventures in understanding. Baker, R. S. (N '25)
- Adventures of a scholar tramp. Mullin, G. H. (My '25)
- Adventures of an illustrator. Pennell, J. (Ja '26)
- Adventures with rod and harpoon along the Florida Keys. Endicott, W. (Mr '25)
- Advertising
- Associated advertising clubs of the world. Advertising year book for 1924. (Je '25)
- Higham, C: F: Advertising, its use and abuse. (N '25)
- Larned, W. L. Illustration in advertising. (S '25)
- Opdycke, J: B. Language of advertising. (N '25)
- Pratt, V. E. Selling by mail. (Ap '25)
- Sheldon, G: H. Advertising. (N '25)
- Sparrow, W. S. Advertising and British art. (My '25)
- Advertising. Sheldon, G: H. (N '25)
- Advertising and British art. Sparrow, W. S. (My '25)
- Advertising, its use and abuse. Higham, C: F: (N '25)
- Advertising yearbook for 1924. Associated advertising clubs of the world. (Je '25)
- Aeronautics
- History
- Hodgson, J. E. History of aeronautics in Great Britain. (S '25)
- Aeronautics, Commercial
- Kennedy, T: H. Introduction to the economics of air transportation. (My '25)
- Aeronautics, Military
- Mitchell, W: Winged defense. (N '25)
- Spaight, J. M. Air power and war rights. (My '25)
- Aeschylean tragedy. Smyth, H. W. (My '25)
- Aeschylus
- Smyth, H. W. Aeschylean tragedy. (My '25)
- An affair of honour. McKenna, S. (Je '25)
- Afghanistan
- Thomas, L. J. Beyond Khyber Pass. (Ja '26)
- Africa
- Description and travel
- Carpenter, F. G: Uganda to the Cape. (Ap '25)
- Africa, Central
- Description and travel
- Powell, E: A. Map that is half unrolled. (Ja '26)
- Africa, East
- Description and travel
- Powell, E: A. Beyond the utmost purple rim. (My '25)
- Africa, French West
- Mills, D. R. M. Road to Timbuktu. (Ag '25)
- Africa, North
- Trowbridge, W: R. H. In the sun with a passport. (D '25)
- Afterwards. Lowndes, M. A. (Ag '25)
- Agitating, stirring and kneading machinery. Seymour, H. (Ag '25)
- Agricultural engineering
- Smith, R. H: Agricultural mechanics. (S '25)
- Agricultural mechanics. Smith, R. H: (S '25)
- Agricultural situation. Warren, G: F:, and Pearson, F. A. (Ag '25)
- Agriculture
- Kelsey, D: S. Kelsey's rural guide. (Je '25)
- Whitney, M. Soil and civilization. (O '25)
- Economic aspects
- App, F. Farm economics. (S '25)
- Gray, L: C. Introduction to agricultural economics. (My '25)
- Wallace, H: C. Our debt and duty to the farmer. (My '25)
- Warren, G: F:, and Pearson, F. A. Agricultural situation. (Ag '25)
- History
- Gras, N. S. B. History of agriculture in Europe and America. (N '25)
- Denmark
- Branson, E. C. Farm life abroad. (Mr '25)

Agriculture—ContinuedEngland

Moffit, L. W. England on the eve of the industrial revolution. (N '25)

Europe

Gras, N. S. B. History of agriculture in Europe and America. (N '25)

France

Branson, E. C. Farm life abroad. (Mr '25)

Germany

Branson, E. C. Farm life abroad. (Mr '25)

Pennsylvania

Watts, R. L. Rural Pennsylvania. (Ag '25)

United States

Bidwell, P. W., and Falconer, J. I. History of agriculture in the northern United States, 1620-1860. (F '26)

Gras, N. S. B. History of agriculture in Europe and America. (N '25)

Wallace, H. C. Our debt and duty to the farmer. (My '25)

Aid to rhyme. Redfield, B. G. (O '25)

Air brake inspector's handbook. Glenn, C. (Ag '25)

Air brakes

Glenn, C. Air brake inspector's handbook. (Ag '25)

Air power and war rights. Spaight, J. M. (My '25)

Airships

Lewitt, E. H. Rigid airship. (Ja '26)

Ajanta, India

Mukul Chandra Dey. My pilgrimages to Ajanta and Bagh. (D '25)

Alan. Benson, E. F. (My '25)

Alaska

Greely, A. W. Handbook of Alaska. (Ag '25)

Woollen, W. W. Inside passage to Alaska, 1792-1920. (Je '25)

Description and travel

Mason, M. H. Arctic forests. (O '25)

Algeria

Sloane, W. M. Greater France in Africa. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Population

Pearl, R. Biology of population growth. (F '26)

Alias Ben Alibi. Cobb, I. S. (Mr '25)

Alice in Orchestra. La Prade, E. (Ja '26)

Almost human. Yerkes, R. (N '25)

Along the Paraná and the Amazon. Carpenter, F. G. (S '25)

Along the Pyrenees. Wilstach, P. (Ap '25)

Along the road. Huxley, A. L. (N '25)

Alston, Mrs Theodosia (Burr)

Minnigerode, M. Lives and times. (My '25)

Alternating current rectification. Jolley, L. B. W. (S '25)

Aluminium

Anderson, R. J. Metallurgy of aluminium and aluminium alloys. (O '25)

Aluminium alloys

Anderson, R. J. Metallurgy of aluminium and aluminium alloys. (O '25)

Amaryllis (yacht)

Muhlhauser, G. H. P. Cruise of the Amaryllis. (Je '25)

Amateur photographer's handbook. Collins, A. F. (S '25)

Amateur theatricals

Andrews, H. L., and Weirick, B. Acting and play production. (Je '25)

Grimball, E. B., and Wells, R. Costuming a play. (My '25)

Mitchell, R. School theatre. (F '26)

AmericaBibliography

Waldman, M. Americana. (F '26)

Discovery and exploration

Colum, P. Voyagers. (Ja '26)

America (yacht)

Thompson, W. M., and others. Yacht America. (N '25)

America and world peace. Clarke, J. H. (N '25)

American and British literature since 1890. Van Doren, C. C. and M. (N '25)

American arts college. Kelly, F. J. (N '25)

American ballads and songs

Cox, J. H., ed. Folk-songs of the South. (Je '25)

American city government. Anderson, W. (F '26)

American colonies in the eighteenth century. Osgood, H. L. (N '25)

American drama

Dickinson, T. H. Playwrights of the American theater. (Ag '25)

Collections

Clements, C. C., ed. Sea plays. (S '25)

Law, F. H., ed. Modern plays. (N '25)

Moses, M. J., ed. Representative American dramas. (S '25)

One act plays for stage and study. (O '25)

American economic history. Faulkner, H. U. (F '26)

American fiction

Knight, G. C. Superlatives. (Ag '25)

American husbands. Black, A. (D '25)

American literature

Rosenfeld, P. Men seen. (Ag '25)

Bibliography

Rusk, R. L. Literature of the middle western frontier. (N '25)

Collections

Foerster, N., ed. American poetry and prose. (Ja '26)

Prescott, F. C., and Nelson, J. H., eds. Prose and poetry of the revolution. (Ja '26)

Williams, B. C., and others, eds. Copy—1925. (Ag '25)

History and criticism

Gaines, F. P. Southern plantation. (My '25)

Rusk, R. L. Literature of the middle western frontier. (N '25)

Van Doren, C. C. and M. American and British literature since 1890. (N '25)

American mystical verse. Hunter, I. L., comp. (D '25)

American peace policy. Page, K. (F '26)

American petroleum supply and demand. American petroleum institute. (D '25)

American poetryCollections

American poetry, 1925. (Ja '26)

Benét, W. R., comp. Poems for youth. (Ag '25)

Hunter, I. L., comp. American mystical verse. (D '25)

Mearns, H., ed. Creative youth. (O '25)

Moult, T., ed. Best poems of 1924. (Je '25)

Schauffler, R. H., comp. Poetry cure. (F '26)

Schnittkind, H. T., ed. Poets of the future. (Ap '25)

Stevenson, B. E., comp. Home book of modern verse. (N '25)

History and criticism

Jones, L. First impressions. (D '25)

Wood, C. Poets of America. (Je '25)

American poetry, 1925. (Ja '26)

American poetry and prose. Foerster, N., ed. (Ja '26)

American state government. Mathews, J. M. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

American states during and after the Revolution. Nevins, A. (Ap '25)

American task in Persia. Millsbaugh, A. C. (F '26)

American telephone and telegraph company

Stehman, J. W. Financial history of the American telephone and telegraph company. (D '25)

- American tragedy. Dreiser, T. (F '26)
 American type design in the twentieth century. McMurtrie, D. C. (My '25)
 Americana. Waldman, M. (F '26)
 Americana, 1925. Mencken, H. L.; ed. (F '26)
Americanisms
 Krapp, G. P. English language in America. (Ja '26)
Americanitis. Sadler, W. S. (N '25)
Americanization
 Soltes, M. Yiddish press. (D '25)
Americans in Europe
 Beach, J. W. Meek Americans. (My '25)
America's greatest garden. Wilson, E. H. (S '25)
America's need for education. Coolidge, C. (N '25)
Among the Brahmins and Pariahs. Sauter, J. A. (My '25)
Amusements
 Adams, F. P., and others, comps. Book of diversion. (Ag '25)
Anatole France himself. Brousson, J. J. (Ag '25)
Anatomy and physiology of the honeybee. Snodgrass, R. W. (S '25)
Ancient and modern Rome. Lanciani, R. A. (D '25)
Ancient highway. Curwood, J. O. (S '25)
Ancient rhetoric and poetic. Baldwin, C. S. (N '25)
And they lived happily ever after. Nicholson, M. (N '25)
Andrea Thorne. Bates, S. C. (My '25)
Andrew Bride of Paris. Harrison, H. S. (N '25)
Angeline of the Hill country. Greer-Petrie, C. (Je '25)
Anglican revival. Brilloth, Y. T. (Ag '25)
Anglo-Saxon literature
 Thomas, P. G. English literature before Chaucer. (Ap '25)
Anhedonia
 Myerson, A. When life loses its zest. (Ap '25)
Aniline
 Groggins, P. H. Aniline and its derivatives. (S '25)
Aniline and its derivatives. Groggins, P. H. (S '25)
Animal as a converter of matter and energy. Armsby, H. P., and Moulton, C. R. (F '26)
Animal food
 Armsby, H. P., and Moulton, C. R. Animal as a converter of matter and energy. (F '26)
Animal heroes of the great war. Baynes, E. H. (F '26)
Animal intelligence
 Kohler, W. Mentality of apes. (My '25)
Animals
 Hornaday, W. T. Wild-animal round-up. (F '26)
 Rusticus, pseud. Bucolic beatitudes. (My '25)
Habits and behavior
 Shepheard-Walwyn, H. W. Spirit of the wild. (Je '25)
Stories and legends
 Sass, H. R. Way of the wild. (D '25)
 Wells, C. Jungle man and his animals. (Ja '26)
 Williamson, H. Sun brothers. (Ag '25)
Animals, Mythical
 Firestone, C. B. Coasts of illusion. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
Animals, War use of
 Baynes, E. H. Animal heroes of the great war. (F '26)
Annals of an active life. Macready, N. (Ag '25)
Annam jewel. Wentworth, P. (N '25)
Annapolis, its colonial and naval story. Norris, W. B. (N '25)
Annapolis, Maryland
 Norris, W. B. Annapolis, its colonial and naval story. (N '25)
Anna's. Boyle, C. A. (My '25)
Annette and Sylvie. Rolland, R. (Mr '25)
Annexation society. Fletcher, J. S. (Ag '25)
Antarctic regions
 Hurley, F. Argonauts of the south. (D '25)
 Villiers, A. J. Whaling in the frozen South. (Ja '26)
Anthology of pure poetry. Moore, G.; ed. (My '25)
Anthony and Anna. Ervine, St J. G. (N '25)
Anthropogeography
 Febvre, L. P. V., and Bataillon, L. Geographical introduction to history. (D '25)
 Huntington, E. Character of races. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Thomas, F. Environmental basis of society. (S '25)
Anthropology
 Kroeber, A. L. Anthropology. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
Antimony
 Christiansen, W. G. Organic derivations of antimony. (D '25)
Antiques
 Hodgson, Mrs J. W. Quest of the antique. (D '25)
 Lucas, A. Antiques. (Ap '25)
Anything but the truth. Wells, C. (Ap '25)
Ao Naga tribe of Assam. Smith, W. C. (D '25)
Aos
 Smith, W. C. Ao Naga tribe of Assam. (D '25)
Apes
 Kohler, W. Mentality of apes. (My '25)
 Yerkes, R. Almost human. (N '25)
Applied chemistry. Garard, I. D. (F '26)
Appraisal of real estate. Babcock, F. M. (Ap '25)
Appreciation of art. Neuhaus, E. (Je '25)
Approaches to world problems. Birkenhead, F. E. S., and others. (Ap '25)
Arab at home. Harrison, P. W. (Mr '25)
Arabia
Antiquities
 Erskine, B. Vanished cities of Arabia. (N '25)
Description and travel
 Herbert, A. N. H. M. Ben Kendim. (S '25)
Social life and customs
 Harrison, P. W. Arab at home. (Mr '25)
Arbitration, International
 Miller, D. H. Geneva protocol. (O '25)
Archeological specimens
Collection and preservation
 Lucas, A. Antiques. (Ap '25)
Archeology
 MacCurdy, G. G. Human origins. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Morgan, J. J. M. de. Prehistoric man. (Ap '25)
 Schmucker, S. C. Man's life on earth. (S '25)
Architectural drawing
 Pond, De W. C. Drafting-room mathematics. (Ag '25)
Architectural law
 Blake, C. H. Acquiring a home. (My '25)
Architecture
Designs and plans
 Stratton, A. J. Elements of form and design in classic architecture. (Ja '26)
History
 Jackson, T. G. Architecture. (F '26)
England
 Chatterton, F. English architecture at a glance. (D '25)
 Gotch, J. A. Old English houses. (Ja '26)
 Marriott, C. Modern English architecture. (Ap '25)
France
 Bodington, O. E. Romance churches of France. (O '25)
Spain
 King, G. G. Pre-romanesque churches of Spain. (Ap '25)

- Architecture, Jackson, T. G. (F '26)
- Architecture, Domestic
 Gotch, J. A. Old English houses. (Ja '26)
- Designs and plans
 Brimmer, F. E. Camps, log cabins, lodges and clubhouses. (S '25)
 Crane, C. Everyman's house. (Ag '25)
- Architecture, Romanesque
 Bodington, O. E. Romance churches of France. (O '25)
- Architecture, Spanish
 Newcomb, R. Old mission churches and historic houses of California. (F '26)
- Arctic forests. Mason, M. H. (O '25)
- Arctic regions
 Amundsen, R. E. G., and Ellsworth, L. Our polar flight. (F '26)
 Mason, M. H. Arctic forests. (O '25)
 Mittelholzer, W., and others. By airplane towards the North Pole. (F '26)
 Nansen, F. Hunting and adventure in the Arctic. (Ap '25)
 Stefánsson, V. Northward ho! (Ja '26)
 Stefánsson, V., and Knight, J. I. Adventure of Wrangel island. (Je '25)
- Arethusa (barque)
 Clements, R. Gipsy of the Horn. (S '25)
- Argonauts
 Bacon, J. R. Voyage of the Argonauts. (My '25)
- Argonauts of the south. Hurley, F. (D '25)
- Aristocratic West. Gerould, K. (Ja '26)
- Aristophanes
 Lord, L. E. Aristophanes. (D '25)
- Aristotle
 Stocks, J. L. Aristotelianism. (Ja '26)
- Aristotelianism. Stocks, J. L. (Ja '26)
- Arithmetic
 Weeks, R. Boys' own arithmetic. (Ap '25)
- Armenia
 Baldwin, O. Six prisons and two revolutions. (D '25)
- Army life
 Magnus, M. Memoirs of the Foreign legion. (Mr, My '25)
- Arnold Bennett. Bennett, M. (F '26)
- Around the world. Frothingham, R. (F '26)
- Arrowsmith. Lewis, S. (Mr, My '25)
- Art
 Anstruther-Thomson, C. Art & man. (Mr '25)
 Blake, V. Relation in art. (Ja '26)
 Collingwood, R. G. Outlines of a philosophy of art. (D '25)
 Hicks, A. M. Everyday art. (Ap '25)
 Magonigle, H. Van B. Nature, practice and history of art. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Neuhaus, E. Appreciation of art. (Je '25)
 Phillips, C. Emotion in art. (D '25)
 Sinclair, U. B. Mammonart. (My '25)
 Tolstol, L. N. Tolstoy on art. (My '25)
- Art, Buddhist
 Mukul Chandra Dey. My pilgrimages to Ajanta and Bagh. (D '25)
- Art, Chinese
 Reichwein, A. China and Europe. (S '25)
- Art, Commercial
 Larned, W. L. Illustration in advertising. (S '25)
- Art, Russian
 Conway, M. Art treasures in soviet Russia. (N '25)
- Art & man. Anstruther-Thomson, C. (Mr '25)
- Art of etching. Lumsden, E. S. (N '25)
- Art of make-up. Chalmers, H. (Ja '26)
- Art of the theatre. Bernhardt, S. (Je '25)
- Art of town planning. Lanchester, H. V. (S '25)
- Art student's vade-mecum. Davenport, C. J. H. (O '25)
- Art treasures in soviet Russia. Conway, M. (N '25)
- Artificial flower making. Baskin, J. (N '25)
- Artificial flowers
 Baskin, J. Artificial flower making. (N '25)
- Artists, British
 Burdett, O. Beardsley period. (Ag '25)
- As a woman thinks. Harris, C. M. (Ja '26)
- Asia
 Rice, S. P. Challenge of Asia. (Je '25)
- Civilization
 Nicholson, J. H. Re-making of the nations. (F '26)
- Description and travel
 Hedin, S. A. My life as an explorer. (D '25)
- Religion
 Nicholson, J. H. Re-making of the nations. (F '26)
- Asia, Central
 Ward, F. K. From China to Hkamti Long. (Mr '25)
- Assam
 Smith, W. C. Ao Naga tribe of Assam. (D '25)
- Astronomy
 Fabre, J. H. C. The heavens. (Ag '25)
 Proctor, M. Young folk's book of the heavens. (O '25)
- Astrophysics
 Dingle, H. Modern astrophysics. (S '25)
- At the sign of the Goat and Compasses. Armstrong, M. D. (O '25)
- At the sign of the Silver ship. Cauffman, S. H. (Ag '25)
- Atlantis
 Spence, L. Atlantis in America. (D '25)
- Atlantis in America. Spence, L. (D '25)
- Atoms
 Bragg, W. H. Concerning the nature of things. (My '25)
 Lodge, O. J. Atoms and rays. (Je '25)
- Atoms and rays. Lodge, O. J. (Je '25)
- Auction bridge
 Ehlermann, C. Cornerstones of auction bridge. (Ja '26)
 Foster, R. F. Modern bridge tactics. (Ag '25)
- Austin, William
 Austin, W. William Austin. (S '25)
- Australia
 Peirce, A. B. Knocking about. (Ap '25)
- Description and travel
 Huntington, E. West of the Pacific. (D '25)
- Politics and government
 Reeves, W. P. State experiments in Australia and New Zealand. (O '25)
- Austria-Hungary
Foreign relations
 Burián von Rajecz, S. Austria in dissolution. (Ag '25)
 Austria in dissolution. Burián von Rajecz, S. (Ag '25)
 Authentic literature of Israel. Bible. Old Testament—Selections. (My '25)
- Authors
 Gillis, J. M. False prophets. (My '25)
 Marble, A. Nobel prize winners in literature. (F '26)
 Rosenfeld, P. Men seen. (Ag '25)
- Authors, British
 Burdett, O. Beardsley period. (Ag '25)
 Lacon, pseud. Lectures to living authors. (S '25)
 Le Gallienne, R. Romantic '90s. (Ja '26)
 Marks, J. A. Genius and disaster. (D '25)
 Quiller-Couch, A. T. Charles Dickens and other Victorians. (S '25)
- Authorship
 Harrington, H. F. Chats on feature writing. (S '25)
- Autobiography
 Collins, J. Doctor looks at biography. (Ja '26)
- Autobiography of a mind. Dawson, W. J. (My '25)
- Autobiography of an attitude. Nathan, G. J. (F '26)
- Autolycus, pseud. See Bacon, L. (Ap '25)

Automatic writing

Klenner, K. E. von. Greater revelation. (Ag '25)

Automobile identification. Brennan, J. F., comp. (S '25)

Automobile touring

Ferguson, M. F. Motor camping on western trails. (My '25)

Automobiles

Blanchard, H. F. My automobile. (Ag '25)

Brennan, J. F., comp. Automobile identification. (S '25)

Accidents

Safety first league. Safety for twenty million automobile drivers. (S '25)

Electric equipment

Consoliver, E. L. Automotive electricity. (S '25)

Repairing

Blanchard, H. F. My Ford. (S '25)

Touring

Flagg, J. M. Boulevards all the way—maybe. (Ja '26)

Automotive electricity. Consoliver, E. L. (S '25)

Autumn. Reymont, W. S. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Autumn trail. Peck, S. M. (O '25)

Aviation

Amundsen, R. E. G., and Ellsworth, L. Our polar flight. (F '26)

Mittelholzer, W., and others. By airplane towards the North Pole. (F '26)

Thomas, L. J. First world flight. (F '26)

Awakening. Marquis, D. (S '25)

Axe is laid. Mackworth, J. D. (My '25)

Azrael. Welsh, R. G. (Je '25)

Bach, Johann SebastianFiction

Meynell, E. H. Little chronicle of Magdalena Bach. (D '25)

Backfurrow. Eaton, G. D. (Mr, My '25)

Background of Gray's Elegy. Reed, A. L. (Ap '25)

Bacteria in relation to man. Broadhurst, J. (S '25)

Bacteriology

Broadhurst, J. Bacteria in relation to man. (S '25)

Thomas, S. J. Bacteriology. (F '26)

Bagh, India

Mukul Chandra Dey. My pilgrimages to Ajanta and Bagh. (D '25)

Bakhtiari

Cooper, M. C. Grass. (Je '25)

Balcony stories. King, G. E. (Ja '26)

Baldwin, Faith. See Cuthrell, F. (Ag '25)

Balearic islands

Goldring, D. Gone abroad. (S '25)

Balkan peninsula

Herbert, A. N. H. M. Ben Kendim. (S '25)

Description and travel

Gordon, J. and C. Two vagabonds in the Balkans. (Ap '25)

Social life and customs

Gordon, J. and C. Two vagabonds in the Balkans. (Ap '25)

Baltic states

Graham, S. Dividing line of Europe. (N '25)

Banks and banking, International

Edwards, G. W. International trade finance. (Ag '25)

Barbara's marriage and the bishop. Neill, E. W. (Ap '25)

Barbarian. Camp, C. (Ag '25)

Baring-Gould, Sabine

Baring-Gould, S. Early reminiscences, 1834-1864. (My '25)

Baring-Gould, S. Further reminiscences, 1864-1894. (S '25)

Barnard, Anne (Lindsay), lady

Fairbridge, D. Lady Anne Barnard at the Cape of Good Hope. (My '25)

Barnburners. Donovan, H. D. A. (F '26)

Barren ground. Glasgow, E. A. G. (My '25)

Barrie, Sir James Matthew

Braybrooke, P. J. M. Barrie. (Je '25)

Baseball

Harris, S. Baseball. (S '25)

Harris, S. Playing the game. (Je '25)

Bases full! Barbour, R. H. (N '25)

Basis of racial adjustment. Woofter, T. J. (Ag '25)

Basket making

Lang, Mrs E. Basketry weaving and design. (Ap '25)

Basketry weaving and design. Lang, Mrs E. (Ap '25)

Battles by sea. Chatterton, E. K. (F '26)

Baxter, Richard

Powicke, F. J. Life of the Reverend Richard Baxter, 1615-1691. (Ag '25)

Bayne, Samuel Gamble

Bayne, S. G. Dericks of destiny. (N '25)

Beacon Hill, Boston

Chamberlain, A. Beacon Hill. (D '25)

Beacon Hill. Chamberlain, A. (D '25)

Beaconsfield, Benjamin Disraeli, 1st earl of

Raymond, E. T. Disraeli: alien patriot. (F '26)

Speare, M. E. Political novel. (Ap '25)

Beardsley, Aubrey Vincent

Burdett, O. Beardsley period. (Ag '25)

Beardsley period. Burdett, O. (Ag '25)

Beau Brummell. Benjamin, L. S. (D '25)

Beautiful Canada. Quinn, V. (F '26)

Beauty prize. Weston, G. (Ag '25)

Bees

Sharp, D. L. Spirit of the hive. (Je '25)

Snodgrass, R. W. Anatomy and physiology of the honeybee. (S '25)

Before the dawn. Kagawa, T. (Ag '25)

Beginning the child's education. Lynch, E. F. (Je '25)

Behind the ranges. Monroe, A. S. (Ag '25)

BelgiumDescription and travel

Holland, C. Flanders & Hainault. (Ja '26)

Belief

Bowie, W. R. Some open ways to God. (Mr '25)

Bell, Moberly Charles Frederic

Kitchin, F. H. London "Times" under the management of Moberly Bell. (My '25)

Bellamy case. Hay, J. (Mr '25)

Ben Kendim. Herbert, A. N. H. M. (S '25)

Benavente y Martinez, Jacinto

Starkie, W. Jacinto Benavente. (Je '25)

BengalHistory

Monahan, F. J. Early history of Bengal. (O '25)

Bennett, Arnold

Bennett, M. Arnold Bennett. (F '26)

Benoni. Hamsun, K. (O '25)

Benson, Mary (Sidgwick) (Mrs Edward White Benson)

Benson, E. F. Mother. (D '25)

Benson family

Benson, E. F. Mother. (D '25)

Berlin, Irving

Woodcott, A. Story of Irving Berlin. (My '25)

Bernard Shaw. Shanks, E. B. (Ag '25)

Best British short stories of 1924. O'Brien, E. J. H., and Cournos, J. (My '25)

Best news stories of 1924. (O '25)

Best poems of 1924. Moulton, T., ed. (Je '25)

Best poems of 1924. Strong, L. A. G., ed. (Mr '25)

- Best sermons, 1925. Newton, J. F., ed. (F '26)
- Best short stories of 1924 and the Yearbook of the American short story. O'Brien, E. J. H., ed. (My '25)
- Best stories. Jewett, S. O. (Je '25)
- Bestiaries
- Reynard the Fox. Epic of the beast. (Ap '25)
- Bewick, Thomas
- Bewick, T. Memoir. (F '26)
- Beyond hatred. Guérard, A. L. (Ja '26)
- Beyond Khyber Pass. Thomas, L. J. (Ja '26)
- Beyond the utmost purple rim. Powell, E. A. (My '25)
- Bible. Whole
- Biography
- Allen, E. F. Who's who in the Bible. (Ag '25)
- Criticism, interpretation, etc.
- Ballantine, W. G. Understanding the Bible. (N '25)
- King, B. Bible and common sense. (Ag '25)
- Dictionaries
- Allen, E. F. Who's who in the Bible. (Ag '25)
- Selections
- Poetry from the Bible. (O '25)
- Thomas, J. M., and Espenshade, A. H., eds. Bible readings for schools and colleges. (Je '25)
- Stories
- Brown, C. R. Ten short stories from the Bible. (S '25)
- Bible. Old Testament
- Moffatt, J., tr. Old Testament; a new translation. (S '25)
- Selections
- Czarnomska, E., ed. Authentic literature of Israel. (My '25)
- Stories
- Pier, G. C. Hidden valley. (S '25)
- Bible. New Testament
- Phelps, W. L. Human nature and the gospel. (Ag '25)
- Robertson, J. A. Hidden romance of the New Testament. (F '26)
- Criticism, interpretation, etc.
- Purinton, H. R. and C. E. Literature of the New Testament. (N '25)
- Gospels
- Streeter, B. H. Four Gospels. (S '25)
- History, Literary
- Goodspeed, E. J. Making of the English New Testament. (Je '25)
- Single books
- St Mark*
- Bacon, B. W. Gospel of Mark. (O '25)
- St John*
- Charnwood, G. R. B. According to Saint John. (F '26)
- Ely, M. R. Knowledge of God in Johannine thought. (S '25)
- Robinson, B. W. Gospel of John. (O '25)
- Bible and common sense. King, B. (Ag '25)
- Bible readings for schools and colleges. Thomas, J. M., and Espenshade, A. H., eds. (Je '25)
- Bibliography
- Best books
- Sawyer, H. P., ed. Library and its contents. (F '26)
- The bigamist. Chichester, J. J. (O '25)
- Bigelow, Poultney
- Bigelow, P. Seventy summers. (F '26)
- Bigger and blacker. Cohen, O. R. (Ag '25)
- Bill the conqueror. Wodehouse, P. G. (Ap '25)
- Bill the minder. Robinson, W. H. (Ap '25)
- Billiards
- Hoppe, W. Thirty years of billiards. (Ap '25)
- Bindon Parva. Hannay, J. O. (O '25)
- Biography
- Bernstein, H. Celebrities of our time. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Boston, H. Book of gallant vagabonds. (Ja '26)
- Collins, J. Doctor looks at biography. (Ja '26)
- MacLaurin, C. Mere mortals. (Je '25)
- Biology
- Geddes, P., and Thomson, J. A. Biology. (Ja '26)
- Pearl, R. Biology of population growth. (F '26)
- Scott, G. G. Science of biology. (S '25)
- Smallwood, W. M., and others. New biology. (F '26)
- Biology of population growth. Pearl, R. (F '26)
- Bird islands of Peru. Murphy, R. C. (Ap '25)
- Birds
- Hawksworth, H. Year in the wonderland of birds. (F '26)
- Miner, J. Jack Miner and the birds. (F '26)
- Murphy, R. C. Bird islands of Peru. (Ap '25)
- Great Britain
- Thorburn, A. British birds. (Ag '25)
- Birmingham, George A., pseud. See Hannay, J. (O, N '25)
- Bishop's granddaughter. Grant, R. (Ap '25)
- Bitter brew. Rice, C. Y. (My '25)
- Bitter country. Pettibone, A. (Mr '25)
- Bituminous materials
- Spielmann, P. E. Bituminous substances. (Je '25)
- Bituminous substances. Spielmann, P. E. (Je '25)
- Black cameos. Kennedy, R. E. (Je '25)
- Black cargo. Marquand, J. P. (Ap '25)
- Black joker. Ostrander, I. E. (F '26)
- Black magician. Scott, R. T. M. (O '25)
- Black soul. O'Flaherty, L. (Mr '25)
- Black turret. Wynnnton, P. (S '25)
- Blackshirt. Graeme, B. (S '25)
- Blake, William
- Bruce H. L. William Blake in this world. (Je '25)
- Blanc, Mont
- Tissot, R. Mont Blanc. (Mr '25)
- Blind man's buff. Hémon, L. (Mr '25)
- Blood
- Pressure
- Sadler, W. S. Americanitis. (N '25)
- Blue norther. Lindsey, T. (D '25)
- Blue talisman. Hume, F. (S '25)
- Boarder up at Em's. Terhune, A. M. (Ag '25)
- Bob Graham at sea. Riesenbergs, F. (D '25)
- Bobbed hair. (My '25)
- Bok, Edward William
- Bok, E. W. Twice thirty. (Mr '25)
- Bolitho, W., pseud. Cancer of empire. (Je '25)
- Bolshevik myth (diary 1920-1922). Berkman, A. (My '25)
- Bolshevism
- Graham, S. Dividing line of Europe. (N '25)
- Russia
- Berkman, A. Bolshevik myth (diary 1920-1922). (My '25)
- Goldman, E. My further disillusionment in Russia. (Ap '25)
- Sorokin, P. A. Leaves from a Russian diary. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Book about little brother. Geijerstam, G. (F '26)
- Book collecting
- Newton, A. E. Greatest book in the world. (N '25)
- Book of American Negro spirituals. Johnson, J. W., ed. (N '25)
- Book of American trade-marks and devices. Sinel, J., comp. (Ap '25)
- Book of crowns and cottages. Coffin, R. P. T. (F '26)
- Book of diversion. Adams, F. P., and others, comps. (Ag '25)
- Book of earth. Noyes, A. (S '25)

Book of fishes. National geographic society. (F '26)
Book of gallant vagabonds. Beston, H: (Ja '26)
Book of the ancient Greeks. Mills, D. (D '25)
Book of the popes. Bayer, F. J. (Ja '26)
Book of wild flowers. National geographic society. (S '25)

Book of winter sports. White, W: D. (Ap '25)

Books and reading

Lyman, R. La V. Mind at work in studying, thinking, and reading. (My '25)
Milne, J. London book window. (My '25)
Boost of the Golden Snail. Eng title of Golden Snail. MacClure, V: (Ja '26)
Booth and the spirit of Lincoln. Babcock, B. (F '26)
Booth, John Wilkes

Fiction

Babcock, B. Booth and the spirit of Lincoln. (F '26)

Borneo

Cook, O. Borneo: the stealer of hearts. (Mr '25)

Borneo: the stealer of hearts. Cook, O. (Mr '25)

Boston

Description

Chamberlain, A. Beacon Hill. (D '25)

Boswell, James

Boswell, J. Letters. (Ap '25)

Botany

Physiology

Fabre, J. H. C. Wonder book of plant life. (Je '25)

Asia

Ward, F. K. From China to Hkamti Long. (Mr '25)

Botany, Economic

Bower, F: O. Plants and man. (S, N '25)
Both one. Small, S. H. (Ja '26)
Boulevards all the way—maybe. Flagg, J. M. (Ja '26)

Box

Lewis, A. A. Boxwood gardens. (My '25)
Boxer and Beauty. Ollivant, A. (S '25)

Boxing

Corbett, J. J: Roar of the crowd. (Ap '25)
Boxwood gardens. Lewis, A. A. (My '25)
Boy and his future. Ricciardi, N: (My '25)
Boy and his vocation. Sowers, J: I. (D '25)
Boy at Gettysburg. Singmaster, E. (D '25)
Boy scientist. Collins, A. F: (Ja '26)

Boys

Hamilton, A. E: Real boy and the new school. (F '26)
Ricciardi, N: Boy and his future. (My '25)
Sowers, J: I. Boy and his vocation. (D '25)
Boys' book of ships. Cartwright, C: E. (D '25)
Boys' book of the earth. Small, S. A. (D '25)
Boys' life of General Grant. Stevens, W: O. (Ja '26)
Boys' life of Grover Cleveland. Davis, R. J. (D '25)

Boys' own arithmetic. Weeks, R. (Ap '25)

Brains of the family. Rath, E. J., pseud. (O '25)

Brannan, Samuel

Scherer, J. A. B. First forty-niner. (Ja '26)

Brashear, John Alfred

Brashear, J: A. John A. Brashear. (My '25)

Brave earth. Sheppard, A. T. (Ag '25)

Bravo mystery. Hall, J: R. (Ag '25)

Brazil

James, H. G. Brazil after a century of independence. (Ja '26)

Description and travel

Carpenter, F. G: Along the Paraná and the Amazon. (S '25)

Brazil after a century of independence. James, H. G. (Ja '26)

Bread & circuses. Woodward, W: E. (F '26)

Bread and jam. Bartley, N. I. (D '25)

Bread givers. Yezierska, A. (O '25)

Bred in the bone. Singmaster, E. (F '26)

Bridges

Bryant, L. Children's book of celebrated bridges. (Ja '26)

Brigham Young. Werner, M. R. (Ag '25)

Bright island. Bennett, A. (Ap '25)

Bright islands. Colum, P. (F '26)

Bring! bring! Aiken, C. P. (Je '25)

Bristol, Frederick Augustus Hervey, 4th earl of Childe-Pemberton, W: S. The Earl bishop. (D '25)

Bristol, George Digby, 2d earl

Townshend, D. George Digby, second Earl of Bristol. (O '25)

British birds. Thorburn, A. (Ag '25)

British commonwealth and its problems. Mac-

Innes, C: M. (N '25)

British drama. Nicoll, A. (D '25)

British Guiana

Description and travel

Beebe, W: Jungle days. (N '25)

British labor movement. Tawney, R: H: (S '25)

British preachers. Marchant, J., ed. (N '25)

Broadcast. Mackworth, J: D. (F '26)

Broadcasting, its new day. Rothafel, S: L., and Yates, R. F. (Ag '25)

Brock, Lynn, pseud. See McAllister, A. (Ag '25)

Broken net. Eng title of Prairie gold. Bind-

loss, H. (Ja '26)

Broken waters. Packard, F. L. (Ja '26)

Brokers

Lefevre, E. Making of a stockbroker. (S '25)

Bronstein, Lev Davidovich. See Trotzky, L., pseud. (Je, Ag, N '25)

Broomsticks. De la Mare, W. J: (Ja '26)

Brummell, George Bryan

Benjamin, L: S. Beau Brummell. (D '25)

Bryan, William Jennings

Bryan, W: J. and M. E. Memoirs of William Jennings Bryan. (F '26)

Bucolic beatitudes. Rusticus, pseud. (My '25)

Buffalo days. Wheeler, H. W. (Je '26)

Building

Blake, C. H. Acquiring a home (My '25)

Building and loan associations

Clark, H. F., and Chase, F. A. Elements of the modern building and loan associations. (Ja '26)

Building materials

Leighou, R. B: Chemistry of engineering materials. (O '25)

Bunyan, Paul

Shephard, E. Paul Bunyan. (Je '25)

Stevens, J. Paul Bunyan. (My '25)

Burma

Description and travel

Carpenter, F. G: From Bangkok to Bombay. (Mr '25)

Edmonds, P. Peacocks and pagodas. (O '25)

Burned evidence. Woodrow, N. M. (Ag '25)

Burns, Robert

Drama

Drinkwater, J: Robert Burns. (Ja '26)

Burr, Aaron

Wandell, S: H., and Minnigerode, M. Aaron Burr. (F '26)

Burroughs, John

Barrus, C. Life and letters of John Burroughs. (F '26)

Burroughs, J., and Peck, L. L. John Burroughs and Ludella Peck. (N '25)

Burton the anatomist. Burton, R. (S '25)

Bush that burned. McClure, M. B. (N '25)

Bushongo

Torday, E. On the trail of the Bushongo. (Ag '25)

Business

Jackson, W: M. What men do. (Ja '26)

Snow, A. J. Psychology in business relations. (S '25)

Business cycles

Adams, A. B. Economics of business cycles. (Ag '25)

- Hexter, M. B. Social consequences of business cycles. (Je '25)
- Business education
 Wilkes, F. A.; York, G. M.; and Terrill, C. J. Elementary training for business. (Ag '25)
 Business of being a club woman. Winter, A. (D '25)
 Business of life. Sanford, H. W. (My '25)
 Busy woman's cook book. Claire, M. (D '25)
- Butler, Henry Montagu
 Butler, J. R. M. Henry Montagu Butler. (D '25)
- By airplane towards the North Pole. Mittelholzer, W., and others. (F '26)
- Byron, George Gordon Noel Byron, 6th baron
 Drinkwater, J.: Pilgrim of eternity. (F '26)
 Gingerich, S. F. Essays in the romantic poets. (Je '25)
 Raymond, D. Political career of Lord Byron. (F '26 and 1924 Annual) Symon, J. D.: Byron in perspective. (Ja '26)
- Fiction
 Beck, L. A. Glorious Apollo. (S '25)
 Byron in perspective. Symon, J. D.: (Ja '26)
- Cabell, James Branch
 Van Doren, C. C. James Branch Cabell. (My '25)
- Cabriba. Hanaranda, M. (F '26)
 Cactus. Chadwick, C.: (My '25)
- California
Description and travel
 Rider, F., ed. Rider's California. (D '25)
Historic houses, etc.
 Newcomb, R. Old mission churches and historic houses of California. (F '26)
History
 Scherer, J. A. B. First forty-niner. (Ja '26)
Missions
 Newcomb, R. Old mission churches and historic houses of California. (F '26)
- Callinicus. Haldane, J. B. S. (My '25)
 Calvin Coolidge. White, W. A. (Ja '26)
 Cambridge and Charles Lamb. Wherry, G. E.; ed. (N '25)
- Camping
 Brooks, E. A. Handbook of the outdoors. (Ag '25)
 Miller, W. H. Camping out. (S '25)
 Camping out. Miller, W. H. (S '25)
- Camps
 Brimmer, F. E. Camps, log cabins, lodges and clubhouses. (S '25)
 Camps, log cabins, lodges and clubhouses. Brimmer, F. E. (S '25)
 Can business prevent unemployment? Lewi-son, S. A., and others. (F '26)
- Canada
Description and travel
 Quinn, V. Beautiful Canada. (F '26)
 Reed, C. B. Four way lodge. (Je '25)
- Cancer
 Childe, C. P. Cancer and the public. (S '25)
 Masters, D. New cancer facts. (N '25)
 Wright, H.: W. C. Conquest of cancer. (S '25)
 Cancer and the public. Childe, C. P. (S '25)
 Cancer of empire. Bolitho, W.; pseud. (Je '25)
- Candler, Edmund
 Candler, E. Youth and the East. (D '25)
- Canning, George
 Temperley, H. W. V. Foreign policy of Canning. (Ja '26)
- Canyon gold. Hankins, A. P. (O '25)
- Cape of Good Hope
 Fairbridge, D. Lady Anne Barnard at the Cape of Good Hope. (My '25)
- Capital
 Emmett, W. H.: Marxian economic handbook and glossary. (Ja '26)
- Capital punishment
 Beman, L. T., comp. Capital punishment. (S '25)
 Capital punishment. Beman, L. T., comp. (S '25)
 Captain Cook's voyages. Kippis, A. (My '25)
 Captain Salvation. Wallace, F. W.: (D '25)
 Captains and kings. Maurois, A. (Ag '25)
 Car inspector's handbook. Hartough, E. W. (S '25)
- Car painting
 Miller, B. E. Painting of railway equipment. (S '25)
- Caravan. Bynner, W. (F '26)
 Caravan. Galsworthy, J.: (S '25)
 The Caraways. Looms, G.: (Je '25)
- Carbonari
Fiction
 Strachey, J.: St L. Madonna of the barricades. (D '25)
 Card castle. Waugh, A. (Je '25)
 Cardinal Newman. Newman, B. (D '25)
- Caricatures and cartoons
 Lutz, E. G.: Practical graphic figures. (Je '25)
 Carillon of Scarpa. Klieckmann, F. (Ag '25)
- Carlyle, Thomas
 Wilson, D.: A. Carlyle on Cromwell and others (1837-48). (Ja '26)
 Carlyle on Cromwell and others (1837-48). Wilson, D.: A. (Ja '26)
- Carnival colors. Warren, M. L. (My '25)
 Carolinian. Sabatini, R. (Ap '25)
- Cars
 Hartough, E. W. Car inspector's handbook. (S '25)
Repair
 Hartough, E. W. Handbook of wooden car repairs. (S '25)
- Cars, Steel
Repair
 Hartough, E. W. Handbook of steel car repairs. (S '25)
- Cary, Henry Francis
 King, R. W. Parson Primrose. (D '25)
- Casanova de Seingalt, Giovanni Jacopo
 Casanova de Seingalt, G. J. Casanova in England. (My '25)
 Casanova in England. Casanova de Seingalt, G. J. (My '25)
- Case against evolution. O'Toole, G. B. (S '25)
 Case of bituminous coal. Hamilton, W. H., and Wright, H. R. (Ja '26)
- Cases in retail salesmanship. Kneeland, N. (Ag '25)
- Caskoden, Edwin, pseud. See Major, C.: (S '25)
- Cataloging
 Bishop, W.: W. Practical handbook of modern library cataloging. (My '25)
- Catharine II, czarina of Russia
 Anthony, K. S. Catherine the Great. (Ja '26)
 Sergeant, P. W. Courtships of Catherine the Great. (F '26)
 Catherine the Great. Anthony, K. S. (Ja '26)
 Catholic reaction in France. Gwynn, D. R. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Caucasian folk-tales. Dirr, A., comp. and tr. (D '25)
 Causes of industrial unrest. Fitch, J.: A. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Cavalier of Navarre. Stilson, C. B. (D '25)
 Cavalier spirit. Hartmann, C. H. (F '26)
- Cave temples
 Mukul Chandra Dey. My pilgrimages to Ajanta and Bagh. (D '25)
- Cavour, Camillo Benso, comte di
 Whyte, A. J. B. Early life and letters of Cavour, 1810-1848. (N '25)
- Celebrities of our time. Bernstein, H. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Cellini, Benvenuto
Drama
 Mayer, E. J. The firebrand. (My '25)
 Cellini plaque. MacGrath, H. (F '26)
- Cellulose
 Hall, A. J. Cotton cellulose. (Je '25)

Central AmericaElliott, L. E. Central America. (Ap '25)Cézanne, Paul

Klingsor, T. L., pseud. Cézanne. (N '25)

Chain of life. Osborn, L. T. (F '26)

Chains. Barbusse, H. (F '26)

Challenge of Asia. Rice, S. P. (Je '25)

Challenge of childhood. Wile, I. S. (Je '25)

Challenge of life. Jacks, L. P. (My '25)

Challenged. Martin, H. (Mr '25)

Changing Ireland. O'Connor, N. J. (Ap '25)

Channing comes through. Seltzer, C. A. (D '25)

ChantiesColcord, J. C., comp. Roll and go. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Chaos and creed. Priceman, J., pseud. (My '25)

CharacterPierce, E. Philosophy of character. (My '25)

Character building in a democracy. Athearn, W. S. (Mr '25)

Character of races. Huntington, E. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Charles Dickens. Gissing, G. R. (Ag '25)

Charles Dickens and other Victorians. Quiller-

Couch, A. T. (S '25)

Charles Lamb. Brown, A. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Charles M. Sheldon. Sheldon, C. M. (D '25)

Charleston stage in the XVIII century. Willis, E. (F '26)

Charmeuse. Thurston, E. T. (S '25)

Charrière, Madame de Saint-Hyacinthe de

(Isabelle Agnès Van Tuyl)

Scott, G. Portrait of Zélide. (Je '25)

Chartreuse of Parma. Beyle, M. H. (O '25)

The chase. Panter-Downes, M. (Je '25)

Chats on feature writing. Harrington, H. F. (S '25)

Chats on Wedgwood ware. Barnard, H. (Mr '25)

Chaucer's nuns. Madeira, M. (Ag '25)

Chauvinism and jingoismPlayne, C. E. Neuroses of the nations. (Ja '26)

Cheerful fraud. Browne, K. R. G. (O '25)

Chekhov, Anton PavlovichChekhov, A. P. Letters to Olga Leonardovna Knipper. (Ja '26)Chekhov, A. P. Life and letters. (N '25)Chemical warfareHaldane, J. B. S. Callinicus. (My '25)Vedder, E. B. Medical aspects of chemical warfare. (S '25)ChemicalsJacobson, C. A. Pronouncing chemical formula speller and contest guide. (S '25)ChemistryArrhenius, S. A. Chemistry in modern life. (D '25)Garard, I. D. Applied chemistry. (F '26)Newell, L. C. College chemistry. (F '26)HistoryHolmyard, E. J. Chemistry to the time of Dalton. (Ja '26)NomenclatureJacobson, C. A. Pronouncing chemical formula speller and contest guide. (S '25)Chemistry, InorganicCartledge, G. H. Inorganic physical chemistry. (F '26)Chemistry, Medical and pharmaceuticalFournau, E. Organic medicaments. (Ja '26)Chemistry, OrganicLowy, A., and Harrow, B. Introduction to organic chemistry. (Ag '25)Schotz, S. P. Synthetic organic compounds. (Ag '25)Chemistry, Physical and theoreticalCartledge, G. H. Inorganic physical chemistry. (F '26)Guye, C. E. Physico-chemical evolution. (S '25)Chemistry, TechnicalFindlay, A. Chemistry in the service of man. (Ag '25)Garard, I. D. Applied chemistry. (F '26)Leighou, R. B. Chemistry of engineering materials. (O '25)Schotz, S. P. Synthetic organic compounds. (Ag '25)

Chemistry in modern life. Arrhenius, S. A. (D '25)

Chemistry in the service of man. Findlay, A. (Ag '25)

Chemistry of engineering materials. Leighou, R. B. (O '25)

Chemistry of wheat flour. Bailey, C. H. (Ja '26)

Chemistry to the time of Dalton. Holmyard, E. J. (Ja '26)

Chesterton, Gilbert KeithLunn, A. H. Roman converts. (F '26)ChicagoChatfield-Taylor, H. C. Cities of many men. (D '25)Chicago universityGoodspeed, T. W. Story of the University of Chicago, 1890-1925. (Ag '25)

Chicken-wagon family. Benefield, B. (O '25)

Chief British dramatists. Matthews, B., and

Lieder, P. R., eds. (My '25)

Child health library. (Ap '25)

Child hygiene. Baker, S. J. (Je '25)

Child laborJohnsen, J. E., comp. Selected articles on child labor. (Je '25)

Child marriages. Richmond, M. E., and Hall, F. S. (Ag '25)

Child studyBaldwin, B. T., and Stecher, L. I. Psychology of the preschool child. (Ap '25)Gesell, A. L. Mental growth of the pre-school child. (Je '25)Johnson, B. J. Mental growth of children. (S '25)Kamm, M. E. Pre-school age. (F '26)Koffka, K. Growth of the mind. (Ag '25)Weeks, A. D. Psychology for child training. (S '25)Wile, I. S. Challenge of childhood. (Je '25)

Child, the clinic and the court. (D '25)

ChildrenPatri, A. School and home. (O '25)Care and hygieneBaker, S. J. Child hygiene. (Je '25)

Child health library. (Ap '25)

Smith, R. M. From infancy to childhood. (S '25)Walsh, J. J., and Foote, J. A. Safeguarding children's nerves. (D '25)Charities, protection, etc.Richmond, M. E., and Hall, F. S. Child marriages. (Ag '25)Management and trainingCleveland, E. Training the toddler. (N '25)

Children, Abnormal and backward

Sayles, M. E. Problem child in school. (Ja '26)Wallin, J. E. W. Education of handicapped children. (My '25)Wile, I. S. Challenge of childhood. (Je '25)

Children, Defective

Wallin, J. E. W. Education of handicapped children. (My '25)

Children of Dickens. Crothers, S. M. (Ja '26)

Children's book of celebrated bridges. Bryant, L. (Ja '26)

Children's catalog; catalog of 4100 books. Sears, M. E., comp. (S '25)

Children's catalog; catalog of 1200 books. Sears, M. E., comp. (N '25)

Children's funny sayings. Knox, D. B., comp. (D '25)

Children's literatureBaker, M. Little girl who curtsied. (Ja '26)Baker, M. Pedlar's ware. (Ag '25)Banks, H. W. Story of Holland. (D '25)Barbour, R. H. Bases full! (N '25)Bassett, S. W. Christopher and the clock-makers. (O '25)

- Beltramelli, A. Piccolo Pomi. (N '25)
 Bianco, M. Little wooden doll. (D '25)
 Bianco, M. Poor Cecco. (N '25)
 Bill, A. H. Clutch of the Corsican. (My '25)
 Blake, G. Mysterious tutor. (Ag '25)
 Brentano, C. Fairy tales from Brentano. (F '26)
 Bridges, T. C. Young folk's book of discovery. (O '25)
 Bryant, L. Children's book of celebrated bridges. (Ja '26)
 Caldwell, O. W., and Meier, W: H. D. Open doors to science. (D '25)
 Campbell, H. Little Great Lady. (Ja '26)
 Chaffee, A. Tony and the big top. (D '25)
 Chrisman, A. B. Shen of the sea. (D '25)
 Coffman, R. Child's story of the human race. (D '25)
 Collins, A. F. Boy scientist. (Ja '26)
 Colum, P. Forge in the forest. (D '25)
 Colum, P. Voyagers. (Ja '26)
 Colville, K. Mr Marionette. (Ja '26)
 Crothers, S: M. Children of Dickens. (Ja '26)
 Dodd, L. W. Pegeen and the potomus. (O '25)
 Dunton, E. K. Holiday book. (F '26)
 Eliot, E. A. Fireweed. (Ja '26)
 Farjeon, E. Mighty men. (Ja '26)
 Fisher, D. F. Made-to-order stories. (D '25)
 Flying carpet. (Ja '26)
 Goldsmith, S. L. Wonder clock plays. (Ja '26)
 Gollomb, J. Tuning in at Lincoln high. (Ja '26)
 Hawksworth, H. Year in the wonderland of birds. (F '26)
 Hawthorne, H. Makeshift farm. (F '26)
 Helton, R. A. Early adventures of Peacham Grew. (Ag '25)
 Heming, A. H: H. Living forest. (D '25)
 Heyer, G. Simon the coldheart. (O '25)
 Irwin, V. M. Shaman's revenge. (F '26)
 Keller, G. Fat of the cat. (D '25)
 Lamprey, L. Days of the leaders. (Ja '26)
 La Prade, E. Alice in Orchestra. (Ja '26)
 Lofting, H. J: Doctor Dolittle's zoo. (Ja '26)
 Lucas, E: V. Playtime & company. (Ja '26)
 Lynde, F. Cruise of the Cuttlefish. (F '26)
 Mabinogion, Island of the mighty. (Ag '25)
 McFee, I. N. Young people's cook book. (F '26)
 Mackenzie, C. Santa Claus in summer. (D '25)
 McNeil, E. Tonty of the iron hand. (N '25)
 Marshall, B. Redcoat and minuteman. (D '25)
 Marshall, E. Ocean gold. (F '26)
 Meigs, C. L. Rain on the roof. (Ja '26)
 Milne, A. A. Gallery of children. (N '25)
 Moon, G. P. Chi-wee. (N '25)
 Moore, A. C. Three owls. (F '26)
 Pierson, C. D. Plucky Allens. (D '25)
 Pulsford, H: A. Old Brig's cargo. (Je '25)
 Purdy, N. S. Wide-Open-Eye. (O '25)
 Putnam, D: B. David goes voyaging. (N '25)
 Reid, A. Goblins of Haubeck. (Ja '26)
 Retner, B. A. That's that! (S '25)
 Riesenber, F. Bob Graham at sea. (D '25)
 Robinson, W: H. Bill the minder. (Ap '25)
 Rolt-Wheeler, F. W: Hunters of ocean depths. (S '25)
 St Nicholas. Salt-water stories, retold from St Nicholas. (F '26)
 Schulkers, R. F. Stormie the dog stealer. (Je '25)
 Sherman, E. B. Mistress Madcap. (F '26)
 Singmaster, E. Boy at Gettysburg. (D '25)
 Smith, R. D. Indian canoe. (S '25)
 Stefánsson, V. Northward ho! (Ja '26)
 Stefánsson, V., and Irwin, V. M. Kak. (Ap '25)
 Stevens, W: O. Boys' life of General Grant. (Ja '26)
 Sublette, C. M. Scarlet Cockerel. (My '25)
 Swearingen, E. M. Pickaninny. (S '25)
 Thatcher, A., and Hogarth, C. J. Happy dragon. (F '26)
 Tomlinson, E. T. Scouting on the Mohawk. (O '25)
 Ulrich, A. Johanna Spyri's childhood. (D '25)
 Wells, C. Jungle man and his animals. (Ja '26)
 White, E. O. Tony. (D '25)
- Bibliography
- Bonner, M. G. Parent's guide to children's reading. (F '26)
 Sears, M. E., comp. Children's catalog; catalog of 4100 books. (S '25)
 Sears, M. E., comp. Children's catalog; catalog of 1200 books. (N '25)
- Children's plays
- Goldsmith, S. L. Wonder clock plays. (Ja '26)
 Hallock, G. T. Dramatizing child health. (F '26)
 Jagendorf, M. A., ed. One-act plays for young folks. (Ap '25)
 Jasspon, E. R., and Becker, B. Ritual and dramatized folkways. (S '25)
 Krohn, J. Old King Cole. (D '25)
 Price, O. M. Short plays from American history and literature. (Ag '25)
 Young, S. Sweet times and The blue policeman. (Ja '26)
- Children's poetry
- Lucas, E: V. Playtime & company. (Ja '26)
- Children's sayings
- Grey of Fallodon, P., viscountess. Sayings of the children. (Je '25)
 Knox, D. B., comp. Children's funny sayings. (D '25)
 Child's story of the human race. Coffman, R. (D '25)
- China
- King-Hall, S. Western civilization and the Far East. (Ap '25)
- Civilization
- Reichwein, A. China and Europe. (S '25)
- Commerce
- Greenbie, S. and M. Gold of Ophir. (Ja '26)
- Description and travel
- Buxton, L. H. D. Eastern road. (Mr, My '25)
 Carpenter, F. G: China. (N '25)
 Franck, H. A. Roving through southern China. (D '25)
 Huntington, E. West of the Pacific. (D '25)
- Foreign relations
- Weale, P. pseud. Why China sees red. (F '26)
- History
- Carter, H: F. Invention of printing in China. (O '25)
 Linebarger, P. M. W. Sun Yat Sen and the Chinese republic. (Ap, Je '25)
- Politics and government
- Dutcher, G: M. Political awakening of the East. (S '25)
 Linebarger, P. M. W. Sun Yat Sen and the Chinese republic. (Ap, Je '25)
 Weale, P., pseud. Why China sees red. (F '26)
- Social life and customs
- Carpenter, F. G: China. (N '25)
 Steep, T: Chinese fantasies. (D '25)
 China. Carpenter, F. G: (N '25)
 China and Europe. Reichwein, A. (S '25)
 Chinese fantasies. Steep, T: (D '25)
 Chipperfield, Robert Orr, pseud. See Ostrander, I. E. (Ag '25, F '26)
- Chiropractic
- Fishbein, M. Medical follies. (N '25)
 Chi-wee. Moon, G. P. (N '25)
 Choice. Guernon, C: (My '25)
 Choice receipts. Aldrich, L. (Ja '26)
 Choosing the right career. Toland, E: D. (S '25)
 Chopin, Frédéric François
- Fiction
- Strachey, M. The nightingale. (Je '25)

Christ church, Philadelphia

Washburn, L. C., comp. Christ church, Philadelphia. (F '26)

Christian antiquities

Lanciani, R. A. Wanderings through ancient Roman churches. (Mr '25)

Thynne, R. Churches of Rome. (Je '25)

Christian ethics

Smith, G. B. Principles of Christian living. (My '25)

Christian life

Fym, T. W. More psychology and the Christian life. (Ag '25)

Christian monasticism. Hannah, I. C. (O '25)

Christianity

Bowie, W. R. Some open ways to God. (Mr '25)

Chesterton, G. K. Everlasting man. (D '25)

Crane, F. Why I am a Christian. (S '25)

Kautsky, K. Foundations of Christianity. (Ag '25)

Lake, K. Religion of yesterday and to-morrow. (D '25)

Mathews, S. Faith of modernism. (My '25)

Nickerson, C. S. Christianity, which way? (Ap '25)

Orchard, W. E. Christianity and world-problems. (O '25)

Peabody, F. G. Church of the spirit. (S '25)

Priceman, J., pseud. Chaos and creed. (My '25)

Christianity and world-problems. Orchard, W. E. (O '25)

Christianity, which way? Nickerson, C. S. (Ap '25)

Christina Alberta's father. Wells, H. G. (N '25)

Christmas poetry

Wilkinson, M. O. Yule fire. (Ja '26)

Christopher and the clockmakers. Bassett, S. W. (O '25)

Chronicles of the garden. King, L. (Ag '25)

Chrysalis of romance. Howard, I. G. (N '25)

Chucunague Indians

Brown, L. M. A. Unknown tribes. (Mr '25)

Church

Peabody, F. G. Church of the spirit. (S '25)

Church and woman. Royden, A. M. (Ag '25)

Church architecture

Bodington, O. E. Romance churches of France. (O '25)

King, G. G. Pre-romanesque churches of Spain. (Ap '25)

Church history

Joseph, O. L. Historical development of Christianity. (O '25)

Nickerson, C. S. Christianity, which way? (Ap '25)

Primitive and early church

Kautsky, K. Foundations of Christianity. (Ag '25)

Church of the spirit. Peabody, F. G. (S '25)

Church of the transfiguration, New York city. MacAdam, G. Little church around the corner. (My '25)

Churches of Rome. Thynne, R. (Je '25)

Church's debt to heretics. Jones, R. M. (Ja '26)

Circle of the stars. Sutherland, J. (Ap '25)

Circus

Robinson, G. Old wagon show days. (Ap '25)

Citadel of freedom. Leigh, R. (My '25)

Cities and townsWest

Aikman, D., ed. Taming of the frontier. (N '25)

Cities of many men. Chatfield-Taylor, H. C. (D '25)

City planning

Kern, R. R. Supercity. (Ag '25)

Lanchester, H. V. Art of town planning. (S '25)

Civic sociology. Ross, E. A. (D '25)

Civil engineering

Mann, E. E. Introduction to the practice of civil engineering. (S '25)

Civilization

Coblentz, S. A. Decline of man. (My '25)

Fournier d'Albe, E. E. Quo vadimus? (S '25)

Hayward, W. R., and Johnson, G. W. Story of man's work. (N '25)

Jacks, L. P. Responsibility and culture. (Je '25)

Marshall, L. C. Story of human progress. (O '25)

Schiller, F. C. S. Tantalus. (My '25)

Tozzer, A. M. Social origins and social continuities. (Ag '25)

Civilization, Greek

Osborn, E. B. Heritage of Greece and the legacy of Rome. (S '25)

Civilization, Medieval

Firebaugh, W. C. Inns of the middle ages. (Ag '25)

Civilization, Oriental

Chirol, V. Occident and the Orient. (My '25)

Dutcher, G. M. Political awakening of the East. (S '25)

Rice, S. P. Challenge of Asia. (Je '25)

Civilization, Roman

Osborn, E. B. Heritage of Greece and the legacy of Rome. (S '25)

Clarke, Joseph Ignatius Constantine

Clarke, J. I. C. My life and memories. (Ja '26)

Claude Monet. Maclair, C.

(O '25)

Clemens, Samuel Langhorne (Mark Twain, pseud.)

Lawton, M. Lifetime with Mark Twain. (Ja '26)

Cleveland, Grover

Davis, R. J. Boys' life of Grover Cleveland. (D '25)

Climates of the United States. Ward, R. De C. (F '26)

The Clio. Myers, L. H. (Ja '26)

The clock. Remizov, A. (My '25)

Closed all night. Morand, P. (D '25)

Clothes make the pirate. Day, H. F. (Ap '25)

Clothing and dress

Burbank, E. Smartly dressed woman. (O '25)

Duer, C. K. How to tell the fashions from the follies. (My '25)

Hicks, A. M. Everyday art. (Ap '25)

Kneeland, N. Waists. (Ag '25)

Clothing industry

Levine, L. Women's garment workers. (Mr '25)

Clowns

Disher, M. W. Clowns and pantomimes. (F '26)

Clowns and pantomimes. Dishier, M. W. (F '26)

Clutch of the Corsican. Bill, A. H. (My '25)

Coal

American engineering council. Industrial coal. (S '25)

Fischer, F. Conversion of coal into oils. (F '26)

Jeffrey, E. C. Coal and civilization. (My '25)

Coal, Pulverized

Harvey, L. C. Pulverized fuel. (S '25)

Coal. Devine, E. T. (F '26)

Coal and civilization. Jeffrey, E. C. (My '25)

Coal industry

Devine, E. T. Coal. (F '26)

Hamilton, W. H., and Wright, H. R. Case of bituminous coal. (Ja '26)

Hunt, E. E., and others, eds. What the Coal commission found. (Ja '26)

Coal miners

Lewis, J. L. Miners' fight for American standards. (D '25)

Coal mines and mining

Hamilton, W. H., and Wright, H. R. Case of bituminous coal. (Ja '26)

- Coal tar
 Spielmann, P. E. Constituents of coal tar. (D '25)
- Coal-tar products
 Fischer, F. Conversion of coal into oils. (F '26)
- Coal trade
 American engineering council. Industrial coal. (S '25)
- Germany
- Stockder, A. H. German trade associations. (Je '25)
- Coasts of illusion. Firestone, C. B. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Cobb, Elijah
 Cobb, E. Elijah Cobb, 1768-1848. (Ja '26)
- Cobbett, William
 Cole, G. D. H. Life of William Cobbett. (My '25)
- The cobweb. Tuttle, M. (My '25)
 Cobweb palace. Nugent, R. (Ap '25)
- Coffee
 Ukers, W. H. Coffee merchandising. (S '25)
 Coffee merchandising. Ukers, W. H. (S '25)
- Cohan, George Michael
 Cohan, G. M. Twenty years on Broadway. (My '25)
- Cold (disease)
 Cecil, R. L. Colds. (Ag '25)
 Cold Harbour. Young, F. B. (Ja '26)
 Colds. Cecil, R. L. (Ag '25)
- Coleridge, Samuel Taylor
 Gingerich, S. F. Essays in the romantic poets. (Je '25)
 Watson, L. E. Coleridge at Highgate. (Ja '26)
 Coleridge at Highgate. Watson, L. E. (Ja '26)
- Colgate university, Hamilton, New York
 Rosenberger, J. L. Rochester and Colgate. (S '25)
- Collin H. Benson, E. F. (N '25)
 Collected essays and papers, 1875-1923. Saintsbury, G. (Ap '25)
 Collected poems. Aldington, H. (Ag '25)
 Collected poems. Rhoades, J. (D '25)
 Collection of decisions presenting principles of wage settlement. Feis, H., ed. (N '25)
- College. Gavit, J. P. (Ag '25)
College and school drama
 Mitchell, R. School theatre. (F '26)
 College chemistry. Newell, L. C. (F '26)
- College students
 Harris, C. Religion of undergraduates. (Ja '26)
- Colleges and universities
 Briggs, Le B. R. Men, women, and colleges. (F '26)
 Gavit, J. P. College. (Ag '25)
 Kelly, F. J. American arts college. (N '25)
- Colloids
 Freundlich, H. Elements of colloidal chemistry. (Ag '25)
 Hatschek, E., ed. Foundations of colloid chemistry. (Ja '26)
 Loeb, J. Proteins and the theory of colloidal behavior. (F '26)
 Michaelis, L. Effects of ions in colloidal systems. (D '25)
- Colombia
 Description and travel
 McFee, W. Sunlight in New Granada. (D '25)
- Social life and customs
 McFee, W. Sunlight in New Granada. (D '25)
 Colonial background of the American revolution. Andrews, C. M. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Color. Cullen, C. (D '25)
- Color blindness
 Collins, M. Colour blindness. (F '26)
 Colour blindness. Collins, M. (F '26)
- Colorado fuel and iron company
 Selekman, B. M. Employees' representation in steel works. (Je '25)
- Selekman, B. M., and Van Kleeck, M. Employees' representation in coal mines. (Ag '25)
- Colors
 Blake, V. Way to sketch. (D '25)
- Combustion
 Harvey, L. C. Pulverized fuel. (S '25)
 Come-back. Crawford, M. De C. (Ap '25)
- Comedy
 Perry, H. T. E. Comic spirit in restoration drama. (F '26)
 Comedy and conscience after the restoration. Krutch, J. W. (Ag '25)
 Comic spirit in restoration drama. Perry, H. T. E. (F '26)
 Commanding an American army. Liggett, H. (Ag '25)
- Commercial correspondence
 Mason, W. L. Practical business English. (F '26)
 Tregoe, J. H., and Whyte, J. Effective collection letters. (S '25)
- Commercial law
 Cole, C. B. Elements of commercial law. (Ja '26)
- Commercial policy
 Culbertson, W. S. International economic policies. (S '25)
 Common reader. Woolf, V. (Ag '25)
 Common stocks as long term investments. Smith, E. L. (My '25)
 Common wealth. Campbell, C. G. (N '25)
- Communication and traffic
 Rankin, E. S. Dominion of sea and air. (Mr '25)
- Community centers
 Playground and recreation association of America. Normal course in play. (F '26)
 Community health. Armstrong, D. B. (S '25)
 Complete limerick book. Reed, L. (Je '25)
 Concerning evolution. Thomson, J. A. (S '25)
 Concerning him. (F '26)
 Concerning the nature of things. Bragg, W. H. (My '25)
- Concord, Battle of, 1775
 French, A. Day of Concord and Lexington. (My '25)
 Murdock, H. Nineteenth of April, 1775. (My '25)
- Conduct of life
 Croce, B. Conduct of life. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Jacks, L. P. Challenge of life. (My '25)
 Jacks, L. P. Faith of a worker. (F '26)
 Maxwell, W. B. Life. (F '26)
 Revell, N. Fightin' through. (S '25)
 Royden, A. M. Life's little pitfalls. (O '25)
 Conduct of life. Croce, B. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Confederate states of America
 Owsley, F. L. State rights in the Confederacy. (F '26)
- Conferences, committees, conventions, and how to run them. Hunt, E. E. (D '25)
 Confessions of a reformer. Howe, F. C. (Ja '26)
 Confidence man. Erskine, L. Y. (Ap '25)
 Confident morning. Pier, A. S. (S '25)
 Conflict between liberty and equality. Hadley, A. T. (Ap '25)
 Conflicts with oblivion. Abbott, W. C. (F '26 and 1924 Annual) Congress, the Constitution, and the Supreme court. Warren, C. (F '26)
- Congresses and conventions
 Hunt, E. E. Conferences, committees, conventions, and how to run them. (D '25)
- Conjuring
 Mulholland, J., and Smith, M. M. Magic in the making. (My '25)
- Connecticut
 History
 Middlebrook, L. F. Maritime Connecticut during the American revolution, 1775-1783. (D '25)
 Connecting and testing direct-current machines. Annett, F. A., and Roe, A. C. (F '26)

- Conquest of cancer. Wright, H. W. C. (S '25)
 Conscience of the newspaper. Flint, L. N. (S '25)
 Considerations on Edmund Gosse. Braybrooke, P. (D '25)
 Consolidation of railroads. Splawn, W. M. W. (My '25)
 Constant nymph. Kennedy, M. (Mr '25)
 Constantinople
 Goodrich-Freer, A. M. Things seen in Constantinople. (Ja '26)
 Constantinople woman's college
 Jenkins, H. D. Educational ambassador to the Near East. (D '25)
 Constituents of coal tar. Spielmann, P. E. (D '25)
 Constitution, administration and laws of the Empire. Keith, A. B. (My '25)
 Constitution of the United States. Beck, J. M. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual) Constructive merchandising. Ramsay, R. E. (My '25)
 Consumption (economics)
 Berridge, W. A., and others. Purchasing power of the consumer. (D '25)
 Contemporary French literature. Lalou, R. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual) Contemporary plays. Dickinson, T. H., and Crawford, J. R., eds. (S '25)
 Contemporary political thought in England. Rockow, L. (N '25)
 Contemporary Spanish literature. Bell, A. F. G. (D '25)
 Content and methods of the industrial arts. Vaughn, S. J., and Mays, A. B. (O '25)
 Contracting circle. Grant Watson, E. L. (O '25)
 Contributions of science to religion. Mathews, S., and others. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual) Conversation
 Harrington, W. L., and Fulton, M. G. Talking well. (Ap '25)
 Conversations on contemporary drama. Hamilton, C. M. (Mr, Je '25)
 Conversion
 Underwood, A. C. Conversion. (Ag '25)
 Conversion of coal into oils. Fischer, F. (F '26)
 Cook, James
 Kippis, A. Captain Cook's voyages. (My '25)
 Cookery
 Aldrich, L. Choice receipts. (Ja '26)
 Boulestin, X. M. Second helping. (S '25)
 Claire, M. Busy woman's cook book. (D '25)
 McFee, I. N. Young people's cook book. (F '26)
 Richards, L., and Treat, N. Tea-room recipes. (Ag '25)
 Scotson-Clark, G. F. Half hours in the kitchenette. (F '26)
 Stratton, F., comp. Favorite recipes of famous women. (D '25)
 Tipton, E. Reducing menus for the hostess of to-day. (N '25)
 Cooking, French
 Pratz, C. de. French home cooking. (S '25)
 Coolidge, Calvin
 White, W. A. Calvin Coolidge. (Ja '26)
 Coombe St Mary's. Diver, M. (Ja '26)
 Coppelstone, B., pseud. See Klichin, F. H. (My '25)
 Copy—1925. Williams, B. C., and others, eds. (Ag '25)
 Copy shop. Hungerford, E. (My '25)
 Coral. Mackenzie, C. (O '25)
 Cornerstones of auction bridge. Ehlermann, C. (Ja '26)
 Corpulence
 Tipton, E. Reducing menus for the hostess of to-day. (N '25)
 Correspondence, 1812-1826. Adams, J., and Jefferson, T. (Ja '26)
 Correspondence of William Hickling Prescott. Prescott, W. H. (F '26)
 Corruption (In politics)
 Bowden, R. D. Evolution of the politician. (My '25)
 Corvo, Frederick Baron, pseud. See Rolfe, F. W. (Ag '25)
 Cost and standard of living
 Berridge, W. A., and others. Purchasing power of the consumer. (D '25)
 Costume
 Burbank, E. Smartly dressed woman. (O '25)
 Grimbail, E. B., and Wells, R. Costuming a play. (My '25)
 Norris, H. Costume and fashion. (Ap '25)
 Wilson, L. M. Roman toga. (Ag '25)
 Costume and fashion. Norris, H. (Ap '25)
 Costuming a play. Grimbail, E. B., and Wells, R. (My '25)
 Cotton
 Crawford, M. De C. Heritage of cotton. (Ag '25)
 Cotton cellulose. Hall, A. J. (Je '25)
 Cottonwood Gulch. Mulford, C. E. (Mr '25)
 Count Lucanor. Juan Manuel. (Ap '25)
 The counterplot. Mirrlees, H. (Je '25)
 Country church
 Galpin, C. J. Empty churches. (S '25)
 Wilson, W. H. Farmer's church. (S '25)
 Country life
 Rusticus, pseud. Bucolic beatitudes. (My '25)
 Williams, J. M. Our rural heritage. (Je '25)
 Country that I love. Marie, queen of Rumania. (O '25)
 County library service. Long, H. C. (N '25)
 Court rules
 Cobb, W. B., ed. Inferior criminal courts act of the city of New York. (D '25)
 Courts
 New York (city)
 Cobb, W. B., ed. Inferior criminal courts act of the city of New York. (D '25)
 United States
 Irvine, L. H. Follies of the courts. (Ja '26)
 Courtships of Catherine the Great. Sergeant, P. W. (F '26)
 Cousin Jane. Wilson, H. L. (D '25)
 Cow jerry. Ogden, G. W. (Je '25)
 Cowboys
 James, W. Drifting cowboy. (D '25)
 Crackerbox philosophers in American humor and satire. Tandy, J. R. (S '25)
 Craig Kennedy on the farm. Reeve, A. B. (D '25)
 Crazy fool. Stewart, D. O. (S '25)
 Creative spirit. Brown, R. W. (My '25)
 Creative youth. Mearns, H., ed. (O '25)
 Credit
 Olson, E. E., and Hallman, J. W. Credit management. (F '26)
 Credit management. Olson, E. E., and Hallman, J. W. (F '26)
 Credo. White, S. E. (Ag '25)
 Crime and criminals
 Hall, J. R. Bravo mystery. (Ag '25)
 Kingston, C. Gallery of rogues. (N '25)
 Sutherland, E. H. Criminology. (My '25)
 Train, A. C. On the trail of the bad men. (S '25)
 Criminal law
 Glueck, S. S. Mental disorder and the criminal law. (D '25)
 Criminal procedure
 Cobb, W. B., ed. Inferior criminal courts act of the city of New York. (D '25)
 Irvine, L. H. Follies of the courts. (Ja '26)
 Criminology. Sutherland, E. R. (My '25)
 Crisis of European democracy. Bonn, M. J. (D '25)
 Cross trails. Bindloss, H. (Ag '25)
 Cruel fellowship. Hume, C. (Ag '25)
 Cruise of the Cuttlefish. Lynde, F. (F '26)
 Cruise of the Nona. Belloc, H. (Ag '25)
 Crystal cup. Atherton, G. (O '25)
 Crystallography
 Bragg, W. H. Concerning the nature of things. (My '25)
 Rinne, F. W. B. Crystals and the fine-structure of matter. (Je '25)

- Crystals and the fine-structure of matter.
Rinne, F. W. B. (Je '25)
- Cuckoo in the nest. Travers, B. (Je '25)
- Culture of perennials. Cloud, D. M.-P. (Je '25)
- Cup of silence. Rees, A. J. (Mr '25)
- Current problems in citizenship. Munro, W. B. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Curriculum of religious education. Bower, W. C. (Ag '25)
- Cutty Sark (ship)
Smith, C. F. Return of the Cutty Sark. (Ap '25)
- Cyclopedia of perfumery. Parry, E. J. (F '26)
- Cynic's cyclopaedia. (D '25)
- Czechoslovak republic
Gruber, J., ed. Czechoslovakia. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Description and travel
Robson, E. I. Wayfarer in Czecho-Slovakia. (N '25)
- Danae. Gauss, M. (Ja '26)
- The dance. H'Doubler, M. N. (Je '25)
- Dancers in the wind. Updegraff, A. E. (D '25)
- Dancing
H'Doubler, M. N. The dance. (Je '25)
- Dark hours. Marquis, D. (Mr '25)
- Dark laughter. Anderson, S. (O '25)
- Darkening sea. Low, B. R. C. (My '25)
- Darusmont. Frances (Wright) Mme Phiquepal-Darusmont
Waterman, W. R. Frances Wright. (Mr '25)
- Daudet, Léon A.
Daudet, L. A. Memoirs of Daudet. (F '26)
- Daughter of the house. Wells, C. (Ja '26)
- Daughter of the Samurai. Sugimoto, E. I. (F '26)
- David Copperfield's library
Langstaff, J. B. David Copperfield's library. (My '25)
- David goes voyaging. Putnam, D. B. (N '25)
- David Wilmot, free-soller. Going, C. B. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Davis, Richard Harding
- Bibliography
Quinby, H. C. Richard Harding Davis. (Ag '25)
- Dawes plan in the making. Dawes, R. C. (S '25)
- 'Dawgs!' Gray, C. W., ed. (Ja '26)
- Dawson, William James
Dawson, W. J. Autobiography of a mind. (My '25)
- Day of atonement. Golding, L. (Ag '25)
- Day of Concord and Lexington. French, A. (My '25)
- Days I knew. Langtry, L. (N '25)
- Days of the leaders. Lamprey, L. (Ja '26)
- Dead right. Lee, J. B. (My '25)
- Death in Venice. Mann, T. (Ap '25)
- Death of a millionaire. Cole, G. D. H. and M. I. (N '25)
- Death of Christopher Marlowe. Hotson, J. L. (Ag '25)
- Debating
Phelps, E. M., ed. University debaters' annual, 1923-1924. (Je '25)
- Phelps, E. M., ed. University debaters' annual, 1924-1925. (N '25)
- Debt of honour. Eng title of Cross trails. Bindloss, H. (Ag '25)
- Debts, Public
Moulton, H. G., and Lewis, C. French debt problem. (D '25)
- December the fourteenth. Merejkowski, D. S. (D '25)
- Decline of man. Coblentz, S. A. (My '25)
- Decroly, Ovide
Hamalide, A. Decroly class. (Ap, Je '25)
- Decroly class. Hamalide, A. (Ap, Je '25)
- Deductions of Colonel Gore. McAllister, A. (Ag '25)
- Degeneration (pathology)
Barker, L. F., and Sprunt, T. P. Degenerative diseases. (Ap '25)
- Degenerative diseases. Barker, L. F., and Sprunt, T. P. (Ap '25)
- Delafield, E. M., pseud. See De La Pasture, E. E. M. (Ap '25)
- Delta, pseud. See Wentworth, P. (Ap, N '25)
- Democracy
Abbott, W. C. New barbarians. (Mr '25)
- Bonn, M. J. Crisis of European democracy. (D '25)
- Guérard, A. L. Beyond hatred. (Ja '26)
- Sisson, E. O. Educating for freedom. (Je '25)
- Wright, H. W. Moral standards of democracy. (O '25)
- Democratic party
Belmont, P. National isolation an illusion. (S '25)
- Lanni, C. G. Traveling on the Democratic donkey. (N '25)
- Depths of prosperity. Bottome, P., and Thompson, D. (N '25)
- Derricks of destiny. Bayne, S. G. (N '25)
- Desert brew. Bower, B. M., pseud. (Ap '25)
- Design
Pearson, R. M. How to see modern pictures. (Je '25)
- Desire under the elms. O'Neill, E. G. (Je '25)
- De Stendhal, pseud. See Beyle, M. H. (Je, O '25)
- Destiny. Hughes, R. (Ag '25)
- Detailing and fabricating structural steel. Dencker, F. W. (Ag '25)
- Devil's saint. Deamer, D. (Ja '26)
- Devonshire cream. Phillpotts, E. (D '25)
- Dexter, Timothy
Marquand, J. P. Lord Timothy Dexter. (N '25)
- Diabetes
Boyd, G. L., and Stalsmith, M. D. Manual for diabetics. (Je '25)
- McHenry, A. D., and Cooper, M. M. Diabetic diet. (O '25)
- Diabetic diet. McHenry, A. D., and Cooper, M. M. (O '25)
- The diaboliques. Barbey d'Aureville, J. D. (My '25)
- Dialogues in limbo. Santayana, G. (N '25)
- Diaries of George Washington, 1748-1799. Washington, G. (Ja '26)
- Diary. Moore, T. (N '25)
- Diary and letters. Peabody, J. P. (Ja '26)
- Diary of Lord Bertie of Thame, 1914-1918. Bertie of Thame, F. L. B. (Mr '25)
- Dickens, Charles
Crothers, S. M. Children of Dickens. (Ja '26)
- Gissing, G. R. Charles Dickens. (Ag '25)
- Langstaff, J. B. David Copperfield's library. (My '25)
- Priestley, J. B. English comic characters. (D '25)
- Quiller-Couch, A. T. Charles Dickens and other Victorians. (S '25)
- Diet
Plimmer, R. H. A. and V. G. Food and health. (D '25)
- Walsh, J. J. Eating and health. (D '25)
- Diet in disease
McHenry, A. D., and Cooper, M. M. Diabetic diet. (O '25)
- Diminutive dramas. Baring, M. (My '25)
- Dionysus in doubt. Robinson, E. A. (My '25)
- Diplomat looks at Europe. Child, R. W. (D '25)
- Dipper Hill. Greene, A. (N '25)
- Disarmament
Miller, D. H. Geneva protocol. (O '25)
- Discourse upon usury (1572). Wilson, T. (My '25)
- Discoveries (in geography)
Bridges, T. C. Young folk's book of discovery. (O '25)
- The discovery. Sheridan, F. (Ap '25)
- Discussions on travel, art and life. Sitwell, O. (O '25)

Dismal Swamp

Stansbury, C. F. Lake of the Great Dismal. (My '25)

Disraeli: alien patriot. Raymond, E. T. (F '26)

Distillation

Elliott, C. Distillation in practice. (F '26)

Elliott, C. Distillation principles. (S '25)

Distillation in practice. Elliott, C. (F '26)

Distillation principles. Elliott, C. (S '25)

Dividing line of Europe. Graham, S. (N '25)

Divorce

Gwynne, W. Divorce in America under state and church. (Ag '25)

Johnsen, J. E., comp. Selected articles on marriage and divorce. (O '25)

Divorce in America under state and church.

Gwynne, W. (Ag '25)

Doctor Dolittle's zoo. Lofting, H. J. (Ja '26)

Doctor looks at biography. Collins, J. (Ja '26)

Doctor Ricardo. Garrett, W. A. (S '25)

Doctor S. O. S. Thayer, L. (Ag '25)

Dogma of evolution. More, L. T. (D '25)

DogsLegends and stories

Cronstedt, N. F. Grip and I. (N '25)

Gray, C. W., ed. "Dawgs!" (Ja '26)

Schulker, R. F. Stormie the dog stealer. (Je '25)

Terhune, A. P. Wolf. (S '25)

Training

Richardson, E. H. Watch-dogs. (O '25)

Dogs of want. Harrison, M. St L. (My '25)

Dollar diplomacy. Nearing, S., and Freeman, J. (F '26)

Domestic economy

Ives, F. W. Home conveniences. (Ap '25)

Domestic engineering

Ives, F. W. Home conveniences. (Ap '25)

Dominie's Hope. McLaren, A. (Ap '25)

Dominion. Presland, J., pseud. (My '25)

Dominion of sea and air. Rankin, E. S. (Mr '25)

Don José de San Martín, 1778-1850. Schoellkopf, A. (My '25)

Donne, John

Fausset, H. P. A. John Donne. (Ap '25)

Simpson, E. M. Study of the prose works of John Donne. (Ap '25)

Doodab. Loeb, H. A. (O '25)

Doom window. Drake, M. (My '25)

Doorways in Drumorty. Moon, L. (F '26)

Dora Wordsworth, her book. Morley, F. V. (My '25)

Doria, Clara. See Rogers, C. K. (D '25)

Douglas, George, pseud. See Brown, G. D. (Ap '25)

Drafting-room mathematics. Pond, De W. C. (Ag '25)

Drag. Pelley, W. D. (Mr '25)

Dragons

Stokes, H. F. S. Perseus. (O '25)

Drama

Clark, B. H. Study of the modern drama. (Ap '25)

Hamilton, C. M. Conversations on contemporary drama. (Mr, Je '25)

Montague, C. E. Dramatic values. (Ag '25)

Nicoll, A. Introduction to dramatic theory. (O '25)

Starkie, W. Jacinto Benavente. (Je '25)

Bibliography

Drury, F. K. W. Viewpoints in modern drama. (Je '25)

Technique

Hillebrand, H. N. Writing the one-act play. (D '25)

Drama in education

Jasspon, E. R., and Becker, B. Ritual and dramatized folkways. (S '25)

Dramas

Baring, M. Diminutive dramas. (My '25)

Bennett, A. Bright island. (Ap '25)

Brandane, J. The glen is mine, and The lifting. (Ja '26)

Brodney, S. Rebel Smith. (S '25)

Brown, A. Charles Lamb. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Burnet, D. It is a strange house. (My '25)

Capek, K. Makropoulos secret. (S '25)

Conrad, J. Laughing Anne; One day more. (Je '25)

Coward, N. The vortex. (O '25)

Drinkwater, J. Robert Burns. (Ja '26)

Ervine, St J. G. Anthony and Anna. (N '25)

Ferber, E., and Kaufman, G. F. Minick [Old man Minick]. (Ap '25)

Gale, Z. Mister Pitt. (Je '25)

Galsworthy, J. Old English. (Ap '25)

Galsworthy, J. The show. (N '25)

Hughes, H. Ruin. (Ja '26)

Jones, H. A. Representative plays. (Ap '25)

Kaiser, G. Gas. (My '25)

Kelly, G. E. Flattering word. (Je '25)

Lawson, J. H. Processional. (My '25)

Masefield, J. Trial of Jesus. (D '25)

Mayer, E. J. The firebrand. (My '25)

Molnar, F. The guardsman. (Mr '25)

Nicholson, K. Garden varieties. (Ag '25)

O'Casey, S. Two plays. (Ap '25)

O'Neill, E. G. Desire under the elms. (Je '25)

Phillipotts, E. Devonshire cream. (D '25)

Quick, H. There came two women. (My '25)

Rostand, E. E. A. The far princess. (Ag '25)

Sheridan, F. The discovery. (Ap '25)

Steele, W. D. Terrible woman. (Je '25)

Totheroh, D. Wild birds. (Je '25)

Young, S. The saint. (O '25)

Zangwill, I. Too much money. (My '25)

Collections

Clements, C. C., ed. Sea plays. (S '25)

Dickinson, T. H., and Crawford, J. R., eds. Contemporary plays. (S '25)

Ladies' home journal one-act plays. (N '25)

Law, F. H., ed. Modern plays, short and long. (My '25)

Matthews, B., and Lieder, P. R., eds. Chief British dramatists. (My '25)

Moses, M. J., ed. Representative American dramas. (S '25)

One-act plays for stage and study. (F '26)

Shay, F., ed. Twenty-five short plays. (Ap '25)

Dramatic values. Montague, C. E. (Ag '25)

Dramatists

Hamilton, C. M. Conversations on contemporary drama. (Mr, Je '25)

Dramatists, American

Dickinson, T. H. Playwrights of the new American theatre. (Ag '25)

Dramatizing child health. Hallock, G. T. (F '26)

DrawingInstruction

Lutz, E. G. Practical graphic figures. (Je '25)

Drawings

Pennell, J. Adventures of an illustrator. (Ja '26)

Dream detective. Rohmer, S., pseud. (Ag '25)

Dreaming spires. Patrick, D., pseud. (My '25)

Dreiser, Theodore

Rascoe, B. Theodore Dreiser. (S '25)

Drifting cowboy. James, W. (D '25)

Drums. Boyd, J. (My '25)

DublinSocial life and customs

Orpen, W. Stories of old Ireland & myself. (Ag '25)

Ducdame. Powys, J. C. (Mr '25)

Dulcarnon. Rideout, H. M. (O '25)

Duse, Eleonora

Bordeux, J. Eleonora Duse. (Je '25)

Dutch East Indies

Couperus, L. M. A. Eastward. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Dutchess bleachery, Wappingers Falls, New York

Selekman, B. M. Sharing management with the workers. (My '25)

Eagle Solomon, pseud. See Squire, J: C. (Ap '25)
Eames-Erskine case. Fielding, A (My '25)
The Earl bishop. Childe-Pemberton, W: S. (D '25)
Early adventures of Peacham Grew. Helton, R. A. (Ag '25)
Early French poets. Cary, H: F. (N '25)
Early history of Bengal. Monahan, F: J. (O '25)
Early life and letters of Cavour, 1810-1848. Whyte, A. J. B. (N '25)
Early reminiscences, 1834-1864. Baring-Gould, S. (My '25)
Earth
 Small, S. A. Boys' book of the earth. (D '25)
Earth moods. Allen, H. (S '25)
Earth speaks to Bryan. Osborn, H: F. (Ag '25)
East
 Candler, E. Youth and the East. (D '25)
East (Far East)

Description and travel

Frothingham, R. Around the world. (F '26)
 Huckel, O. Secret of the East. (Ap '25)

Religion

Huckel, O. Secret of the East. (Ap '25)
East of Eden. Montross, L. (N '25)
Easter island
 Brown, J: M. Riddle of the Pacific. (N '25)
Eastern question
 Chirol, V. Occident and the Orient. (My '25)
 Reawakening of the orient. (O '25)
Eastern question (Far East)
 King-Hall, S. Western civilization and the Far East. (Ap '25)
Eastern road. Buxton, L. H. D. (Mr, My '25)
Eastward. Couperus, L: M. A. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
Eating and health. Walsh, J. J. (D '25)

Eaton, William
 Minnigerode, M. Lives and times. (My '25)
Eclipse. Mais, S. P. B. (N '25)
Economic aspects of southern sectionalism, 1840-1861. Russel, R. R. (Je '25)

Economic conditions

Adams, A. B. Economics of business cycles. (Ag '25)
 Hexter, M. B. Social consequences of business cycles. (Je '25)
Economic conditions in India. Pillai, P. P. (O '25)
Economic development of the British overseas empire. Knowles, L. C. A. (N '25)

Economic policy

Culbertson, W: S. International economic policies. (S '25)

Economics

Brown, H. G. Economics of taxation. (D '25)
 Burns, C. D. Industry and civilization. (Ag '25)
 Campbell, C. G. Common wealth. (N '25)
 Carver, T: N. Economy of human energy. (Ap '25)
 Emmett, W: H. Marxian economic handbook and glossary. (Ja '26)
 Hayward, W: R., and Johnson, G. W. Story of man's work. (N '25)
 Jones, G: M. Who should have wealth. (Ag '25)
 Sanford, H. W. Business of life. (My '25)
Economics of business cycles. Adams, A. B. (Ag '25)
Economics of our patent system. Vaughan, F. L. (F '26)
Economics of public utilities. Nash, L. R. (F '26)
Economics of taxation. Brown, H. G. (D '25)
Economy of human energy. Carver, T: N. (Ap '25)
Edgar Saltus, the man. Saltus, M. (D '25)

Edinburgh

Grierson, E. W. Things seen in Edinburgh. (Ja '26)
 Steuart, M. D. Romance of the Edinburgh streets. (D '25)
 Edith Wharton. Lovett, R. M. (Ag '25)

Editorials

Spencer, M. L. Editorial writing. (S '25)
 Edmund Spenser. Renwick, W. L. (Ag '25)
 Educating for freedom. Sisson, E: O. (Je '25)

Education

Chapman, J. C., and Counts, G: S. Principles of education. (D '25)
 Coe, G: A. What ails our youth? (Ap '25)
 Coolidge, C. America's need for education. (N '25)
 Cubberley, E. P. Introduction to the study of education and to teaching. (Ja '26)
 Hamilton, A. E. Real boy and the new school. (F '26)
 Hazard, C. From college gates. (Ap '25)
 Sisson, E: O. Educating for freedom. (Je '25)
Addresses, essays, lectures
 Briggs, Le B. R. Men, women, and colleges. (F '26)

Finance

Pittenger, B: F. Introduction to public school finance. (F '26)

Statistics

Odell, C: W. Educational statistics. (Ja '26)
 Rugg, H. O. Primer of graphics and statistics for teachers. (D '25)
 Williams, J. H. Graphic methods in education. (N '25)

Europe

Walters, R. Educational jottings abroad. (Ag '25)

Education, Elementary

Heinmiller, L: E. First book in education. (S '25)

Education, Secondary

Uhl, W. L., comp. Principles of secondary education. (N '25)

Education of children

Baldwin, B. T., and Stecher, L. I. Psychology of the preschool child. (Ap '25)
 De Lima, A. Our enemy the child. (F '26)
 Hamaide, A. Decroly class. (Ap, Je '25)
 Kamm, M. E. Pre-school age. (F '26)
 Lynch, E. F. Beginning the child's education. (Je '25)
 Moore, A. E. Primary school. (D '25)
 Patri, A. School and home. (O '25)
 Pratt, C., ed. Experimental practice in the City and country school. (Ap '25)
 Spain, C: L. Platoon school. (N '25)
 Education of handicapped children. Wallin, J: E: W. (My '25)

Education of women

Hazard, C. From college gates. (Ap '25)

Education of workers

Hodgen, M. T. Workers' education in England and the United States. (S '25)
 Educational ambassador to the Near East. Jenkins, H. D. (D '25)
 Educational frontiers. Nearing, S. (N '25)
 Educational jottings abroad. Walters, R. (Ag '25)

Educational measurements

Gilliland, A. R., and Jordan, R. H. Educational measurements and the classroom teacher. (N '25)
 Rugg, H. O. Primer of graphics and statistics for teachers. (D '25)
 Educational measurements and the classroom teacher. Gilliland, A. R., and Jordan, R. H. (N '25)
 Educational statistics. Odell, C: W. (Ja '26)
Educational surveys
 Sears, J. B. School survey. (F '26)
Edward Albert, prince of Wales
 Parkhurst, G. King in the making. (Ag '25)
Edward Everett. Frothingham, P. R. (Je '25)
Edward VII, king of Great Britain
 Lee, S. King Edward VII. (Ap, Je '25)
 Effective collection letters. Tregoe, J. H., and Whyte, J: (S '25)
 Effective regulation of public utilities. Bauer, J: (N '25)
 Effects of ions in colloidal systems. Michaelis, L. (D '25)

Egbert. Darlington, W: A. C. (My '25)

Egypt

History, Ancient

Budge, E. A. T. W. Egypt. (S '25)

Weigall, A. E: P. B. History of the Pharaohs. (Ja '26)

Politics and government

Dutcher, G: M. Political awakening of the East. (S '25)

Egypt. Budge, E. A. T. W. (S '25)

The eight forty-five. Gay, R. M. (Je '25)

Einstein theory

Guggenheimer, S: H. Einstein theory explained and analyzed. (Ag '25)

Einstein theory explained and analyzed. Guggenheimer, S: H. (Ag '25)

Elder sister. Swinnerton, F. A. (D '25)

Elderly Spinster, pseud. See Wilson, Margaret. (O '25)

Electric current rectifiers

De Bruyne, N. A. Electrolytic rectifier. (S '25)

Jolley, L. B: W. Alternating current rectification. (S '25)

Electric currents, Alternating

Jolley, L. B: W. Alternating current rectification. (S '25)

Electric engineering

Cook, A. L. Elements of electrical engineering. (S '25)

Hazeltine, L: A. Electrical engineering. (Ag '25)

Still, A. Elements of electrical design. (Ap '25)

Electric lines

Taylor, W: T., and Neale, R. E. Electrical design of overhead power transmission lines. (S '25)

Electric machinery

Annett, F. A., and Roe, A. C. Connecting and testing direct-current machines. (F '26)

Croft, T. W. Electrical-machinery erection. (F '26)

Still, A. Elements of electrical design. (Ap '25)

Timbie, W: H. Industrial electricity. (Ap '25)

Electric power-plants

Beman, L. T., comp. Superpower. (Je '25)

Electric railroads

Norris, H: H. ed. Electric railway practices in 1923. (S '25)

Electric railway practices in 1923. Norris, H: H. ed. (S '25)

Electric wiring

Schuhler, A. A. Electric wiring. (Ap '25)

Electrical design of overhead power transmission lines. Taylor, W: T., and Neale, R. E. (S '25)

Electrical-machinery erection. Croft, T. W. (F '26)

Electricity

Southern, L. Electricity and the structure of matter. (D '25)

Electricity and the structure of matter. Southern, L. (D '25)

Electrolytic rectifier. De Bruyne, N. A. (S '25)

Elementary training for business. Wilkes, F: A.; York, G: M.; and Terrill, C. J. (Ag '25)

Elements of colloidal chemistry. Freundlich, H. (Ag '25)

Elements of commercial law. Cole, C: B. (Ja '26)

Elements of electrical design. Still, A. (Ap '25)

Elements of electrical engineering. Cook, A. L. (S '25)

Elements of form and design in classic architecture. Stratton, A. J. (Ja '26)

Elements of machine design. Berard, S: J., and Waters, E. O. (Ap '25)

Elements of petroleum geology. Van Tuyl, F. M. (S '25)

Elements of statistics. Kent, F: C. (Ag '25)

Elements of the modern building and loan associations. Clark, H. F., and Chase, F. A. (Ja '26)

Eleonora Duse. Bordeaux, J. (Je '25)

Elijah Cobb, 1768-1848. Cobb, E. (Ja '26)

Elizabethan lyrics. Ault, N., comp. and ed. (Ja '26)

Ellen Adair. Niven, F: J. (O '25)

The emigrants. Bojer, J. (N '25)

Emotion in art. Phillips, C. (D '25)

Emotions

MacCurdy, J: T. Psychology of emotion. (S '25)

Employees' representation in management

Selekman, B. M. Employees' representation in steel works. (Je '25)

Selekman, B. M. Sharing management with the workers. (My '25)

Selekman, B. M., and Van Kleek, M. Employees' representation in coal mines. (Ag '25)

Employers' liability

Michelbacher, G. F., and Nial, T: M. Workmen's compensation insurance. (S '25)

Employees' representation in coal mines. Selekman, B. M., and Van Kleek, M. (Ag '25)

Employees' representation in steel works. Selekman, B. M. (Je '25)

Employment agencies

Harrison, S. M., and others. Public employment offices. (Je '25)

Employment management

Gardiner, G. L. Practical foremanship. (S '25)

Kenagy, H. G., and Yoakum, C. S. Selection and training of salesmen. (F '26)

Bibliography

Ross, W: H. and D. I. Personnel administration. (Je '25)

Empty chairs. Bancroft, S. B. (N '25)

Empty churches. Galpin, C: J. (S '25)

Enchanters of men. Mayne, E. C. (N '25)

Encyclopedia of the violin. Bachmann, A. A. (O '25)

Endocrinology

Berman, L: Personal equation. (S '25)

Enemies of liberty. Haynes, E. S. P. (My '25)

England

Description and travel

Capek, K. Letters from England. (F '26)

Coffin, R. P: T. Book of crowns and cottages. (F '26)

MacDonald, J. R. Wanderings and excursions. (S '25)

Parkes, J. Travel in England in the seventeenth century. (O '25)

Economic conditions

Fisher, L. Then and now. (N '25)

Moffit, L: W. England on the eve of the industrial revolution. (N '25)

Social life and customs

Capek, K. Letters from England. (F '26)

Meller, W. C. Old times. (F '26)

Wilson, V. A. Society women of Shakespeare's time. (Ag '25)

England on the eve of the industrial revolution. Moffit, L: W. (N '25)

English architecture at a glance. Chatterton, F: (D '25)

English comic characters. Priestley, J: B. (D '25)

English conquest of Normandy, 1416-1424. Newhall, R: A. (Je '25)

English drama

Nicoll, A. British drama. (D '25)

Collections

Dickinson, T: H., and Crawford, J. R., eds. Contemporary plays. (S '25)

Law, F: H., ed. Modern plays. (N '25)

Matthews, B., and Lieder, P. R., eds. Chief British dramatists. (My '25)

One act plays for stage and study. (O '25)

Restoration

Krutch, J. W. Comedy and conscience after the restoration. (Ag '25)

Perry, H: T. E. Comic spirit in restoration drama. (F '26)

English essays

Priestley, J: B., ed. Essayists, past and present. (Ja '26)

English fiction

Knight, G. C. Superlatives. (Ag '25)
 Speare, M. E. Political novel. (Ap '25)

History and criticism

Chevalley, A. Modern English novel. (D '25)
 Gould, G. English novel of today. (N '25)

English furniture at a glance. Hayward, C: H. (S '25)

English language

American academy of arts and letters. Academy papers. (F '26)
 Krapp, G: P. English language in America. (Ja '26)
 Whitten, W. Is it good English? (N '25)

Business English

Mason, W: L. Practical business English. (F '26)

Dictionaries*French*

Kettridge, J. O. French-English and English-French dictionary of technical terms. (Ag '25)

Etymology

Smith, L. P. Words and idioms. (O '25)

Idioms

Smith, L. P. Words and idioms. (O '25)

Pronunciation

DeWitt, M. E. EuphonEnglish in America. (S '25)

Rime

Redfield, B. G. Aid to rhyme. (O '25)

Slang*Dictionaries*

Fraser, E., and Gibbons, J., comps. Soldier and sailor words and phrases. (O '25)

English language in America. Krapp, G: P. (Ja '26)

English literatureHistory and criticism

Burdett, O. Beardsley period. (Ag '25)
 Lacon, pseud. Lectures to living authors. (S '25)
 Madeleva, M. Chaucer's nuns. (Ag '25)
 Van Doren, C. C. and M. American and British literature since 1890. (N '25)
 Woolf, V. Common reader. (Ag '25)

Irish authors

O'Connor, N. J. Changing Ireland. (Ap '25)

Middle English

Thomas, P. G. English literature before Chaucer. (Ap '25)

English literature before Chaucer. Thomas, P. G. (Ap '25)

English novel of today. Gould, G. (N '25)

English poetry

Collins, H. P. Modern poetry. (Ja '26)
 Gingerich, S. F. Essays in the romantic poets. (Je '25)
 Reed, A. L. Background of Gray's Elegy. (Ap '25)

Collections

Ault, N., comp. and ed. Elizabethan lyrics. (Ja '26)
 Best poems of 1924. (Mr '25)
 Coblenz, S. A., comp. Modern British lyrics. (Ja '26)
 Moore, G., ed. Anthology of pure poetry. (My '25)
 Moulton, T., ed. Best poems of 1924. (Je '25)
 Oxford poetry, 1924. (My '25)
 Schauflier, R. H., comp. Poetry cure. (F '26)
 Stevenson, B. E., comp. Home book of modern verse. (N '25)

History and criticism

Jones, L. First impressions. (D '25)

Irish authors

Robinson, L., ed. Golden treasury of Irish verse. (Je '25)

Environment

Jennings, H. S. Prometheus. (D '25)
Environmental basis of society. Thomas, F. (S '25)

Epigrams

Martial. Twelve books of Epigrams. (My '25)
Episode in the struggle for religious freedom. Evans, A. P. (Ag '25)

Equality

Hadley, A. T. Conflict between liberty and equality. (Ap '25)
 Ernestine Sophie. Cleugh, S. (D '25)

Eskimos

Stefánsson, V. Northward ho! (Ja '26)
Essayists, past and present. Priestley, J: B., ed. (Ja '26)

Essays

Baker, R. S. Adventures in understanding. (N '25)
 Black, A. American husbands. (D '25)
 Boyd, E. A. Portraits: real and imaginary. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Brooks, C: S. Like summer's cloud. (My '25)
 Christie, O. F., ed. Johnson the essayist. (My '25)
 Douglas, N. Experiments. (F '26)
 The Freeman. Freeman book. (Ap '25)
 Gaston, C: R., ed. Forum papers. (S '25)
 Goodspeed, E. J. Things seen and heard. (Ja '26)
 Grandgent, C: H. Getting a laugh. (My '25)
 Hardy, T. Life and art. (My '25)
 Hazlitt, W. New writings. (D '25)
 Hearn, L. Occidental gleanings. (N '25)
 Heydrick, B: A., ed. Forum papers. (Ap '25)
 Holliday, R. C. Literary lanes and other byways. (D '25)
 Huxley, A. L. Along the road. (N '25)
 Jones, F: W. Unscientific essays. (My '25)
 Jusserand, J. A. A. J. School for ambassadors. (S '25)
 Lynd, R. Peal of bells. (Ap '25)
 McDowall, A. S. Ruminations. (D '25)
 McFee, W. Swallowing the anchor. (Ag '25)
 Mencken, H: L. Prejudices: fourth series. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Nathan, G: J. Autobiography of an attitude. (F '26)
 Newton, A. E. Greatest book in the world. (N '25)
 Pattee, F. L. Tradition and jazz. (My '25)
 Schauflier, R. H. Peter Pantheism. (F '26)
 Sinclair, U. B. Mammonart. (My '25)
 Unamuno y Jugo, M. de. Essays and soliloquies. (Je '25)
 Walkley, A. B. Still more prejudice. (S '25)
 Wells, G. What is truth? (Ap '25)
 Essays and soliloquies. Unamuno y Jugo, M. de. (Je '25)
 Essays in the romantic poets. Gingerich, S. F. (Je '25)
 Essential American tradition. Bennett, J. L., comp. (Ag '25)
 Essentials of healthful living. Sadler, W: S: (D '25)
 Essentials of sewing. Cook, R. C. (My '25)
Esthetics
 Blake, V. Relation in art. (Ja '26)
 Brownell, W: C. Genius of style. (Mr, My '25)
 Neuhaus, E. Appreciation or art. (Je '25)
Etchers
 Lumsden, E. S. Art of etching. (N '25)
Etching
 Lumsden, E. S. Art of etching. (N '25)
 Ethan Quest. Hervey, H. (Je '25)
Ether (of space)
 Lodge, O. J. Ether and reality. (N '25)
 Ether and reality. Lodge, O. J. (N '25)
 Ethical basis of the state. Wilde, N. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Ethics

Croce, B. Conduct of life. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Dresser, H. W. Ethics in theory and application. (S '25)

Oakeley, H. D. Greek ethical thought. (O '25)

Otto, M. C. Things and ideals. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Pound, R. Law and morals. (F '26)

Russell, B. A. W. What I believe. (Je, O '25)

History

Kropotkin, P. A. Ethics. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Ethics. Kropotkin, P. A. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Ethics, Evolutionary

Patten, C. J. Passing of the phantoms. (My '25)

Ethics and some modern world problems. McDougall, W. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Ethics in theory and application. Dresser, H. W. (S '25)

Ethnology

Crookshank, F. G. Mongol in our midst. (Ap '25)

Haddon, A. C. Races of man and their distribution. (Ag '25)

Huntington, E. Character of races. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Africa

Orde-Browne, G. St J: Vanishing tribes of Kenya. (O '25)

Europe

Stoddard, L. Racial realities in Europe. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Etiquet

Richardson, A. S. Standard etiquette. (S '25)

Eugene Field's creative years. Dennis, C. H. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Eugenics

Schiller, F. C. S. Tantalus. (My '25)

Wiggam, A. E. Fruit of the family tree. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

EuphonEnglish in America. DeWitt, M. E. (S '25)

EuropeCivilization

Reichwein, A. China and Europe. (S '25)

Description and travel

Beach, J. W. Meek Americans. (My '25)

Hamilton, C. Wanderings. (Ja '26)

Sheridan, C. C. Across Europe with Satanella. (S '25)

Economic conditions

Aubert, L: Reconstruction of Europe. (D '25)

Branson, E. C. Farm life abroad. (Mr '25)

High, S. Europe turns the corner. (N '25)

Stoddard, L. Social classes in post-war Europe. (N '25)

Whelpley, J. D. Reconstruction. (Je '25)

History

1517-1648

Klarwill, V., ed. Fugger news-letters. (N '25)

1815-1848

Temperley, H. W: V. Foreign policy of Caning. (Ja '26)

Webster, C. K. Foreign policy of Castlereagh, 1815-1822. (Ja '26)

Politics

Aubert, L: Reconstruction of Europe. (D '25)

Bonn, M. J. Crisis of European democracy. (D '25)

Child, R. W. Diplomat looks at Europe. (D '25)

High, S. Europe turns the corner. (N '25)

MacDonald, J. R. Wanderings and excursions. (S '25)

Race question

Stoddard, L. Racial realities in Europe. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Social conditions

Stoddard, L. Social classes in post-war Europe. (N '25)

Europe turns the corner. High, S. (N '25)

European war, 1914-1918

Baynes, E. H. Animal heroes of the great war. (F '26)

Bertie of Thame, F. L. B. Diary of Lord Bertie of Thame, 1914-1918. (Mr '25)

Buchan, J. Two ordeals of democracy. (Je '25)

Addresses, sermons, etc.

Root, E. Men and policies. (My '25)

Campaigns

Liggett, H. Commanding an American army. (Ag '25)

Mussolini, B. My diary, 1915-17. (Je '25)

Eastern

Hoffmann, M. War of lost opportunities. (Ja '26)

Causes

Ewart, J. S. Roots and causes of the wars (1914-1919). (Ag '25)

Playne, C. E. Neuroses of the nations. (Ja '26)

Diplomatic history

Grey of Fallodon, E. G. Twenty-five years. (N '25)

Economic aspects

Reawakening of the Orient. (O '25)

Language

Fraser, E., and Gibbons, J., comps. Soldier and sailor words and phrases. (O '25)

Naval operations

Frothingham, T. G. Naval history of the World war. (Ag '25)

Hayes, B. F. Hull down. (Ag '25)

Peace

Gibbs, P. H. Ten years after. (My '25)

Kellor, F. A., and Hatvany, A. Security against war. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Lochner, L: P. Henry Ford—America's Don Quixote. (N '25)

Personal narratives

Bullard, R. L. Personalities and reminiscences of the war. (Ja '26)

Harbord, J. G. Leaves from a war diary. (N '25)

Liggett, H. Commanding an American army. (Ag '25)

Magnus, M. Memoirs of the Foreign legion. (Mr, My '25)

Mussolini, B. My diary, 1915-17. (Je '25)

Reparations

Dawes, R. C. Dawes plan in the making. (S '25)

Wells, G. What is truth? (Ap '25)

Results

Gibbs, P. H. Ten years after. (My '25)

Austria-Hungary

Burian von Rajecz, S. Austria in dissolution. (Ag '25)

Germany

Hoffmann, M. War of lost opportunities. (Ja '26)

United States

Hendrick, B. J. Life and letters of Walter H. Page. (D '25)

Evenings with the stars. Proctor, M. (D '25)

Everest, Mount

Norton, E. F., and others. Fight for Everest: 1924. (F '26)

Everett, Edward

Frothingham, P. R. Edward Everett. (Je '25)

- Everlasting man. Chesterton, G. K. (D '25)
 Everyday art. Hicks, A. M. (Ap '25)
 Everyday doings of insects. Cheesman, L. E. (S '25)
 Everyday life in Roman Britain. Quennell, M., and C. H. B. (N '25)
 Everyman's genius. Austin, M. (Ag '25)
 Everyman's house. Crane, C. (Ag '25)
 Everyman's life of Jesus. Moffatt, J. (My '25)
Evolution
 Darrow, F. L. Through science to God. (Ja '26)
 Dorsey, G. A. Why we behave like human beings. (F '26)
 Goodrich, E. S. Living organisms. (S '25)
 Langdon-Davies, J. New age of faith. (D '25)
 Lull, R. S. Ways of life. (S '25)
 More, L. T. Dogma of evolution. (D '25)
 Osborn, H. F. Earth speaks to Bryan. (Ag '25)
 Osborn, L. T. Chain of life. (F '26)
 O'Toole, G. B. Case against evolution. (S '25)
 Sanford, H. W. Business of life. (My '25)
 Schmucker, S. C. Man's life on earth. (S '25)
 Thomson, J. A. Concerning evolution. (S '25)
 Ward, H. Evolution for John Doe. (O '25)
 Evolution of American political parties. Robinson, E. E. (Ap, My '25)
 Evolution of the politician. Bowden, R. D. (My '25)
Exercise
 Meanes, L. L., and Hathaway, E. V. Exercises for health. (S '25)
 Exercises for health. Means, L. L., and Hathaway, E. V. (S '25)
 Exercises on the apparatus. Wittich, W. J., and Reuter, H. C. (D '25)
 Exile. Aldington, R. (Je '25)
 Expansionists of 1812. Pratt, J. W. (Ag '25)
 Expectant mother. De Normandie, R. L. (S '25)
Experience
 Dewey, J. Experience and nature. (Je '25)
 Experience and nature. Dewey, J. (Je '25)
 Experimental practice in the City and country school. Pratt, C., ed. (Ap '25)
 Experiments. Douglas, N. (F '26)
Eye
 Diseases and defects
 Clark, J. H. Lighting in relation to public health. (S '25)
 Faber. Wassermann, J. (D '25)
 Face cards. Wells, C. (Je '25)
 Factors in American history. Pollard, A. F. (N '25)
Factory management
 Dutton, H. P. Factory management. (Ap '25)
 Faculty of communion. Lyttelton, E. S. (S '25)
 Fair winds and foul. Perry, F. (O '25)
Fairs
 Burt, E. R. Make your bazar pay. (S '25)
Fairy tales
 Baker, M. Pedlar's ware. (Ag '25)
 Brentano, C. Fairy tales from Brentano. (F '26)
 De la Mare, W. J. Broomsticks. (Ja '26)
 Mackenzie, C. Santa Claus in summer. (D '25)
 Thatcher, A., and Hogarth, C. J. Happy dragon. (F '26)
 Fairy tales from Brentano. Brentano, C. (F '26)
Faith
 King, B. Faith and success. (D '25)
 Priceman, J., pseud. Chaos and creed. (My '25)
 Faith and success. King, B. (D '25)
 Faith of a liberal. Butler, N. M. (Mr, My '25)
 Faith of a worker. Jacks, L. P. (F '26)
 Faith of modernism. Mathews, S. (My '25)
 Faith of our fathers. Carman, D. (Je '25)
Falkland islands
 Boyson, V. F. Falkland islands. (My '25)
 False prophets. Gillis, J. M. (My '25)
 Falstaff and other Shakespearean topics. Tolman, A. H. (Ja '26)
Family allowances
 Douglas, P. H. Wages and the family. (S '25)
 Family welfare work in a metropolitan community. Breckinridge, S. P. (Je '25)
 Far away up the Nile. Millais, J. G. (Ag '25)
 The far princess. Rostand, E. E. A. (Ag '25)
Faraday, Michael
 Randell, W. L. Michael Faraday (1791-1867) (O '25)
 Farigoule, Louis. See Romain, J., pseud. (My '25)
Farington, Joseph
 Farington, J. Farington diary; September 20, 1806 to January 7, 1808. (Ap '25)
 Farington diary; September 20, 1806 to January 7, 1808. Farington, J. (Ap '25)
 Farm economics. App, F. (S '25)
Farm life
 Crevecoeur, M. G. S-J. de. Sketches of eighteenth century America. (D '25)
 Greene, A. Dipper Hill. (N '25)
 Kelsey, D. S. Kelsey's rural guide. (Je '25)
 National country life conference. Rural home (Je '25)
 Watts, R. L. Rural Pennsylvania. (Ag '25)
 Farm life abroad. Branson, E. C. (Mr '25)
Farm management
 Kelsey, D. S. Kelsey's rural guide. (Ja '25)
 Farm woodlands. Berry, J. B. (Ag '25)
 Farmers and workers in American politics. Rice, S. A. (Ag '25)
 Farmer's church. Wilson, W. H. (S '25)
Fashion
 Duer, C. K. How to tell the fashions from the follies. (My '25)
 Fat of the cat. Keller, G. (D '25)
 Father Abraham. Bacheller, I. A. (Mr '25)
 Father's first two years. Downey, F. (O '25)
 Favorite recipes of famous women. Stratton, F., comp. (D '25)
Fawcett, Millicent (Garrett) (Mrs Henry Fawcett)
 Fawcett, M. What I remember. (My '25)
Federal reserve banks
 Harding, W. P. G. Formative period of the federal reserve system. (D '25)
 Fellowship of anglers. Hutchinson, H. G. (S '25)
 Fellow-travellers. Vachell, H. A. (Ag '25)
Feminism
 Ludovici, A. M. Lysistrata. (S '25)
 Russell, D. W. Hypatia. (S '25)
Ferguson, Ian, pseud. See Watson, F. (S '25)
Fiction (books about)
 Wharton, E. N. Writing of fiction. (N '25)
Fiction (classified according to subject)
 Adolescence
 Gilman, M. E. Fig leaves. (Ja '26)
 Harrison, A. Lifting mist. (My '25)
 Adventure
 Ames, J. B. Loudon from Laramie. (Ap '25)
 Beck, L. A. Way of stars. (Ag '25)
 Bennett, A. G. Forest of fear. (Ag '25)
 Bindloss, H. Cross trails. (Ag '25)
 Bindloss, H. Prairie gold. (Ja '26)
 Buchan, J. John Macnab. (N '25)
 Collins, G. Starkenden quest. (My '25)
 Cronyn, G. W. '49. (O '25)
 Fedden, K. W. Peacock's tail. (F '26)
 Ferguson, J. A. Secret road. (S '25)
 Friel, A. O. Mountains of mystery. (Je '25)
 Garstin, C. High noon. (Je '25)
 Gibbs, G. F. Love of Monsieur. (Mr '25)
 Gompertz, M. L. A. Snow rubies. (D '25)
 Hamilton, C. Paradise. (Mr '25)
 Kendall, O. Stormy petrel. (Ja '26)
 Knibbs, H. H. Temescal. (Je '25)
 Knipe, E. and A. A. Shadow captain. (Ap '25)
 MacGregor, M. E. Gentleman adventurer. (Ap '25)
 Mackworth, J. D. Broadcast. (F '26)

Fiction—Adventure—Continued

- MacOrlan, P. On board the Morning Star. (Ap '25)
 Marquand, J. P. Black cargo. (Ap '25)
 Marshall, E. Ocean gold. (F '26)
 Osborn, S. R. Red hair and blue sea. (Ag '25)
 Savignon, A. Sunken gold. (S '25)
 Sharon, J. J. Grey gander. (D '25)
 Sieveking, L. de G. Ultimate island. (N '25)
 Small, A. J. Pearls of desire. (Ag '25)
 Sublette, C. M. Scarlet Cockerel. (My '25)
 Terhune, A. P. Najib. (My '25)
 Whitman, H. E. O. Pirate of Pittsburgh. (Ap '25)
 Wynnton, P. Black turret. (S '25)

Animal stories

- Lawrence, D. H. St Mawr. (Ag '25)
 Ollivant, A. Boxer and Beauty. (S '25)
 Schulkers, R. F. Stormie the dog stealer. (Je '25)
 Terhune, A. P. Wolf. (S '25)
 Wells, C. Jungle man and his animals. (Ja '26)

Biblical stories

- Graves, R. My head! my head! (N '25)
 Nathan, R. Jonah. (Mr '25)
 Train, A. C. Lost gospel. (D '25)

Business

- Cardinal, J., pseud. Swift adventure. (Ja '26)
 Riesenbergs, F. P. A. L. (D '25)
 Vachell, H. A. Watling's. (My '25)

Character studies

- Bromfield, L. Possession. (N '25)
 Burt, K. Quest. (D '25)
 Camp, W. Barbarian. (Ag '25)
 Cobb, I. S. Alias Ben Alibi. (Mr '25)
 Forgiore, L. Reamer Lou. (Ap '25)
 Glasgow, E. A. G. Barren ground. (My '25)
 Gray, J. Penciled frown. (O '25)
 Holt, I. Low road. (My '25)
 Hudson, S. Myrtle. (My '25)
 Hummel, G. F. A good man. (S '25)
 Huston, M. Hulings' quest. (N '25)
 Hutchinson, A. S. M. One increasing purpose. (N '25)
 Hutchinson, V. Naked man. (N '25)
 Irwin, I. Gertrude Haviland's divorce. (Ja '26)
 Jeffery, J. E., pseud. An octave. (S '25)
 Lane, R. He was a man. (My '25)
 Lewis, E. The harp. (S '25)
 Lewis, S. Arrowsmith. (Mr, My '25)
 Lincoln, J. C. Queer Judson. (N '25)
 Loeb, H. A. Doodab. (O '25)
 Macleod, H., pseud. Across the moon. (O '25)
 Niven, F. J. Ellen Adair. (O '25)
 O'Brien, H. V. What a man wants. (Ja '26)
 O'Flaherty, L. The informer. (D '25)
 O'Shaughnessy, E. L. Viennese medley. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Riesenbergs, F. P. A. L. (D '25)
 Rolland, R. Annette and Sylvie. (Mr '25)
 Royde-Smith, N. C. Tortoiseshell cat. (D '25)
 Sackville-West, V. M. Seducers in Ecuador. (Ag '25)
 Santmyer, H. H. Herbs and apples. (O '25)
 Schnitzler, A. Fräulein Else. (Ja '26)
 Sedgwick, A. D. Franklin Winslow Kane. (Je '25)
 Shively, G. Initiation. (Ap '25)
 Suckow, R. Odyssey of a nice girl. (Ja '26)
 Swinnerton, F. A. Elder sister. (D '25)
 Wells, H. G. Christina Alberta's father. (N '25)
 Whitham, J. M. Windlestraw. (My '25)
 Wilson, G. Man of strife. (Ja '26)
 Wilson, H. L. Cousin Jane. (D '25)
 Woodbury, H. Misty flats. (N '25)

Cheerful stories

- Browne, K. R. G. Cheerful fraud. (O '25)
 Davis, E. H. Friends of Mr Sweeney. (Ja '26)
 Gibbs, A. Peter Vacuum. (O '25)
 Gowing, S. F. Sea lavender. (N '25)
 Kilbourne, F. Mrs William Horton speaking. (Mr '25)

- Lea, F. H. With this ring. (Ap '25)
 MacClure, V. Golden Snail. (Ja '26)
 McCutcheon, G. B. Romeo in Moon Village. (D '25)
 McIntyre, J. T. Young man's fancy. (Je '25)
 Mackail, D. G. Greenery street. (S '25)
 Miller, A. Reluctant duchess. (N '25)
 Rath, E. J., pseud. Brains of the family. (O '25)
 Ruck, B. Lucky in love. (Ap '25)
 Schaeffer, E. Fortune's yellow. (My '25)
 Straus, R. Married alive. (Ag '25)
 Twenty miles out. (D '25)
 Venner, N. Imperfect impostor. (D '25)
 Weston, G. Beauty prize. (Ag '25)
 Wodehouse, P. G. Bill the conqueror. (Ap '25)
 Wodehouse, P. G. Sam in the suburbs. (Ja '26)

Children, Stories about

- Baker, O. Peter in process. (F '26)
 Poole, E. Hunter's moon. (N '25)

Church problems

- Carman, D. Faith of our fathers. (Je '25)

Crime and criminals

- Erskine, L. Y. Confidence man. (Ap '25)

Dairying

- Eastman, E. R. Trouble maker. (F '26)

Desert life

- Hull, E. M. Sons of the sheik. (S '25)

Divorce

- Grant, R. Bishop's granddaughter. (Ap '25)
 Irwin, I. Gertrude Haviland's divorce. (Ja '26)
 Wilson, M. The Kenworthys. (O '25)

Dual personality

- Béraud, H. Lazarus. (My '25)

European war, 1914-1918

- Boyd, T. A. Points of honor. (My '25)
 Kellermann, B. Ninth of November. (Mr '25)
 Mottram, H. R. Sixty-four, ninety-four. (Je '25)

Family life

- Anstruther, E. H. A. Five in family. (Mr '25)
 Blaker, R. Oh, the brave music! (D '25)
 Emanuel, V. R. The Selmans. (Ja '26)
 Franken, R. L. Pattern. (Je '25)
 Hull, H. R. Surry family. (F '26)
 Norris, K. Little ships. (O '25)
 Pelley, W. D. Drag. (Mr '25)
 Pier, A. S. Confident morning. (S '25)
 Richmond, G. L. Red of the Redfields. (Ap '25)
 Stern, G. B. The matriarch. (Mr '25)
 Wilson, H. L. Cousin Jane. (D '25)
 Young, E. H. William. (O '25)

Fantasies

- Bullett, G. W. Mr Godly beside himself. (Ap '25)
 Darlington, W. A. C. Egbert. (My '25)
 Morley, C. D. Thunder on the left. (Ja '26)
 Phillpotts, E. Treasures of Typhon. (Ap '25)
 Sackville-West, V. M. Seducers in Ecuador. (Ag '25)
 Smith, P. J. Nomad. (Je '25)
 Washburn, C. C. Green arch. (F '26)
 Wylie, E. Venetian glass nephew. (O '25)

Farm life

- Boyd, T. A. Samuel Drummond. (O '25)
 Eaton, G. D. Backfurrow. (Mr, My '25)
 Frederick, J. T. Green Bush. (D '25)
 Glasgow, E. A. G. Barren ground. (My '25)
 Montross, L. East of Eden. (N '25)
 Mullenburg, W. J. Prairie. (O '25)
 Oskison, J. M. Wild harvest. (N '25)
 Ostenso, M. Wild geese. (D '25)

Feminism

- Van Slyke, L. Nora pays. (My '25)

Forestry

Hull, J. H. Trail and pack-horse. (S '25)

Frontier and pioneer life

Dunham, B. M. Trail of the Conestoga. (Ap '25)

Ghost stories

James, M. R. Warning to the curious. (F '26)

Historical novels

Barbusse, H. Chains. (F '26)

Acadia

Chapman, H. J. Lords of Acadia. (Ag '25)

Canada

Parker, G. Power and the glory. (N '25)

England

Oman, C. Princess Amelia. (Mr '25)

Sheppard, A. T. Brave earth. (Ag '25)

France

Aminoff, L. Victory. (Ag '25)

Bill, A. H. Clutch of the Corsican. (My '25)

Conrad, J. Suspense. (O '25)

La Fayette, M. M. Princess of Cleves. (Je '25)

Prescott, H. F. M. Unhurrying chase. (O '25)

Stillson, C. B. Cavalier of Navarre. (D '25)

Strachey, J. St L. Madonna of the barricades. (D '25)

Williams, V. Red mass. (Mr '25)

Italy

Sabatini, R. Strolling saint. (N '25)

North Carolina

Boyd, J. Drums. (My '25)

Oregon

Morrow, H. We must march. (N '25)

Russia

Merejkowski, D. S. December the fourteenth. (D '25)

South Africa

Presland, J., pseud. Dominion. (My '25)

United States

Bacheller, I. A. Father Abraham. (Mr '25)

Sabatini, R. Carolinian. (Ap '25)

Sabin, E. L. White Indian. (Je '25)

Humor and satire

Allen, C. K. Judgment of Paris. (Mr '25)

Belloc, H. Mr Petre. (O '25)

Brckett, C. Week-end. (S '25)

Chesterton, G. K. Tales of the long bow. (N '25)

Davis, E. H. Friends of Mr Sweeney. (Ja '26)

Gerhardi, W. A. The polyglots. (Ag '25)

Glass, M. M. Y'understand. (D '25)

Greer-Petrie, C. Angeline of the Hill country. (Je '25)

Hauptmann, G. J. R. Island of the great mother. (Ja '26)

Herbert, A. P. Old flame. (Ap '25)

Housman, L. Trimblerrig. (My '25)

Huxley, A. L. Those barren leaves. (Mr '25)

Klickmann, F. Carillon of Scarpa. (Ag '25)

Lady of quality, pseud. Serena Blandish. (Ag '25)

Liscomb, H. F. Prince of Washington square. (Ap '25)

Loos, A. "Gentlemen prefer blondes." (Ja '26)

Macaulay, R. Orphan island. (Mr '25)

McKenna, S. An affair of honour. (Je '25)

Moszkowski, A. Isles of wisdom. (O '25)

Stewart, D. O. Crazy fool. (S '25)

Strauss, R. Volcano. (N '25)

Travers, B. Cuckoo in the nest. (Je '25)

Travers, B. Mischief. (O '25)

Travers, B. Rookery Nook. (O '25)

Van Loon, H. W. Story of Wilbur the hat. (My '25)

Woodward, W. E. Bread & circuses. (F '26)

Immigrants in America

Bojer, J. The emigrants. (N '25)

Cautela, G. Moon harvest. (Ag '25)

Korolenko, V. G. In a strange land. (Ag '25)

Jewish life

Emanuel, V. R. The Selmans. (Ja '26)

Golding, L. Day of atonement. (Ag '25)

Stern, G. B. The matriarch. (Mr '25)

Tobenkin, E. God of might. (Ap '25)

Yezierska, A. Bread givers. (O '25)

Journalism

Hungerford, E. Copy shop. (My '25)

Labor and laboring classes

Fletcher, J. S. Mill of many windows. (Ag '25)

Forgione, L. Reamer Lou. (Ap '25)

Letters (stories in letter form)

Sherman, S. P. Letters to a lady in the country. (Ja '26)

Locality, Novels of

Alaska

Marshall, E. Sleeper of the moonlit ranges. (Ag '25)

Willoughby, B. Rocking Moon. (O '25)

Arizona

Lawson, W. P. Fire woman. (S '25)

Australia

Grant Watson, E. L. Contracting circle. (O '25)

Berlin

Kellermann, B. Ninth of November. (Mr '25)

California

Cronyn, G. W. '49. (O '25)

Gregory, J. Maid of the mountain. (O '25)

Williamson, T. Run sheep run. (Ja '26)

Cambridge

Lehman, B. H. Wild marriage. (Mr '25)

Canada

Cullum, R. Riddle of Three-way Creek. (Ag '25)

Curwood, J. O. Ancient highway. (S '25)

Hendryx, J. B. Oak and iron. (Ag '25)

Hough, E. Ship of souls. (Ap '25)

MacGregor, M. E. Gentleman adventurer. (Ap '25)

Smith, A. Kindred. (O '25)

White, S. E. Skookum Chuck. (D '25)

Cape Cod

Buck, C. N. Portuguese silver. (Ap '25)

Lincoln, J. C. Queer Judson. (N '25)

Chicago

Fairbank, J. The Smiths. (Ag '25)

China

Maugham, W. S. Painted veil. (My '25)

Miln, L. Ruben and Ivy Sen. (N '25)

Miln, L. Soul of China. (Mr '25)

Springer, T. G. Red cord. (D '25)

Egypt

Haggard, H. R. Queen of the dawn. (Ap '25)

England

Begbie, H. Great world. (Ja '26)

Burr, A. R. St Hellos. (N '25)

Hawkins, A. H. Little Tiger. (F '26)

England (provincial and rural)

Armstrong, M. D. At the sign of the Goat and Compasses. (O '25)

Benson, A. C. House of Menerdue. (Je '25)

Bone, G. H. This old man. (Ag '25)

De La Pasture, E. E. M. Mrs Harter. (Ap '25)

Diver, M. Coombe St Mary's. (Ja '26)

Fiction—Locality, Novels of—Continued

Garnett, D. Sallor's return. (N '25)
 Kennedy, M. Ladies of Lyndon. (O '25)
 Larminie, M. R. Soames Green. (O '25)
 Mannin, E. E. Hunger of the sea. (Mr '25)
 Marsh, C. F. Shelter. (Ja '26)
 Powys, J. C. Duddame. (Mr '25)
 Powys, T. F. Mr Tasker's gods. (Je '25)
 Powys, T. F. Mockery Gap. (Ja '26)
 Rees, A. J. Cup of silence. (Mr '25)
 Scott, C. A. D. Turn of a day. (Je '25)
 Weyman, S. J. Queen's Folly. (N '25)

Florence

Washburn, C. C. Prince and the princess.
 (My '25)

Georgia

Flisch, J. A. Old Hurricane. (Je '25)

Germany

Neilson, I. Madonna and the student. (Ag '25)

Illinois

Montross, L. East of Eden. (N '25)

India

Eyton, J. S. Jungle born. (My '25)
 Ferguson, J. A. Secret road. (S '25)
 Mundy, T. Om. (Ap '25)
 Rideout, H. M. Dulcarnon. (O '25)

Indiana

Davis, E. H. Keys of the city. (Mr, My '25)

Indo China

Chivas-Baron, C. Three women of Annam.
 (Ja '26)

Ireland

Byrne, D. O'Malley of Shanganagh. (Ap, Je '25)
 Lysaght, S. R. My tower in Desmond. (D '25)
 O'Flaherty, L. Black soul. (Mr '25)
 O'Flaherty, L. The informer. (D '25)
 Sutton, G. Fish and actors. (My '25)

Italy

Andrews, M. R. Pontifex Maximus. (Ag '25)
 Hubbard, W. Orvieto dust. (Ja '26)
 Pirandello, L. The outcast. (D '25)
 Stern, G. B. Thunderstorm. (S '25)

Japan

Kagawa, T. Before the dawn. (Ag '25)

Kentucky

Furman, L. Glass window. (D '25)
 Kelly, E. Mansion house. (Je '25)

Labrador

Major, C. Rosalie. (S '25)

London

Boileau, E. Hippy Buchan. (Mr '25)
 Hémon, L. Blind man's buff. (Mr '25)
 Royde-Smith, N. C. Tortoiseshell cat. (D '25)

Maine

Williams, B. A. Rational hind. (Ag '25)

Mexico

Comfort, W. L. Somewhere south in Sonora.
 (N '25)
 Scoggins, C. E. Proud old name. (O '25)

Mississippi

Pendexter, H. Wife-ship woman. (Ap '25)

New England

Hopkins, W. J. Tumbleberry and Chick.
 (Ap '25)
 Terhune, A. M. Boarder up at Em's. (Ag '25)

New Orleans

King, G. E. Balcony stories. (Ja '26)
 MacDonald, E. L. Lady of New Orleans.
 (O '25)
 Sparling, E. E. Under the levee. (Ap '25)

New York (city)

Asch, N. The office. (D '25)
 Barretto, A. To Babylon. (Mr '25)
 Black, A. Stacey. (Mr '25)
 Chamberlain, G. A. Great Van Suttart mystery. (O '25)
 Dos Passos, J. R. Manhattan transfer. (Ja '26)
 Powell, D. Whither. (My '25)
 Scott, L. Heart of Katie O'Doone. (F '26)
 Van Vechten, C. Firecrackers. (S '25)

New York (city) (East side)

Bercovici, K. Marriage guest. (O '25)

New York (state)

Eastman, E. R. Trouble maker. (F '26)
 Friel, A. O. Hard Wood. (D '25)

North Carolina

Kahler, H. M., and Herring, D. G. MacIvor's folly. (My '25)

Ohio

Boyd, T. A. Samuel Drummond. (O '25)

Oregon

Monroe, A. S. Behind the ranges. (Ag '25)

Paris

Harrison, H. S. Andrew Bride of Paris. (N '25)

Pennsylvania

Martin, H. Challenged. (Mr '25)
 Singmaster, E. Bred in the bone. (F '26)

Poland

Reymont, W. S. Autumn. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Reymont, W. S. Spring. (Je '25)
 Reymont, W. S. Summer. (S '25)
 Reymont, W. S. Winter. (Mr '25)

Rome

Clarke, I. C. It happened in Rome. (Ja '26)

Russia

Andreieff, L. M. Sashka Jigouloff. (Ja '26)
 Oppenheim, E. P. Gabriel Samara, peace-maker. (D '25)
 Poole, E. Little dark man. (Je '25)

Scotland

Brown, G. D. House with the green shutters. (Ap '25)
 Mackenzie, A. M. Half-loaf. (O '25)
 McLaren, A. Dominie's Hope. (Ap '25)
 Moon, L. Doorways in Drumorty. (F '26)

Sicily

Verga, G. Little novels of Sicily. (My '25)

South Africa

Millin, S. G. God's stepchildren. (Mr '25)
 Presland, J. pseud. Dominion. (My '25)
 Smith, P. The Little Karoo. (My '25)

South Carolina

Sabatini, R. Carolinian. (Ap '25)

South Sea islands

Keable, R. Numerous Treasure. (My '25)
 Osborn, S. R. Red hair and blue sea. (Ag '25)
 Stacpoole, H. de V. S. Gates of morning.
 (Mr '25)

South seas

Collins, D. The haven. (N '25)
 Young, G. R. Seibert of the island. (S '25)

Spain

Pryde, A., pseud. Spanish sunlight. (My '25)

Syria

Terhune, A. P. Najib. (My '25)

Texas

Evarts, H. G. Spanish acres. (O '25)
 Wind. (D '25)

Fiction—Locality, of Novels of—ContinuedUnited States (middlewestern)

Hull, H. R. Surry family. (F '26)
 Hunt, F. Sycamore Bend. (N '25)
 Looms, G. The Caraways. (Je '25)
 Muilenburg, W. J. Prairie. (O '25)

United States (northwestern)

Beers, L. D. Prairie fires. (Ag '25)
 Ostenso, M. Wild geese. (D '25)

United States (southern)

Parrish, A. Perennial bachelor. (O '25)
 Veterans all. (O '25)

United States (southwestern)

Coolidge, D. Lorenzo the magnificent. (S '25)
 Hall, M. R. Valley of strife. (S '25)
 Ogden, G. W. Cow jerry. (Je '25)
 Seltzer, C. A. Last Hope ranch. (O '25)

United States (western)

Armfield, C. Unholy experiment. (My '25)
 Baxter, G. O. Shadow of Silver Tip. (N '25)
 Bower, B. M., pseud. Desert brew. (Ap '25)
 Bower, B. M., pseud. Meadowlark Basin. (N '25)
 Erskine, L. Y. Valor of the range. (Ja '26)
 Hankins, A. P. Canyon gold. (O '25)
 Irwin, W. Youth rides west. (Mr '25)
 Mulford, C. E. Cottonwood Gulch. (Mr '25)
 Oskison, J. M. Wild harvest. (N '25)
 Raine, W. M. Troubled waters. (O '25)
 Roe, V. E. Splendid road. (Ag '25)
 Seltzer, C. A. Channing comes through. (D '25)
 Spearman, F. H. Selwood of Sleepy Cat. (My '25)
 Williamson, A. M. Secret gold. (Ap '25)

Vermont

Pelley, W. D. Drag. (Mr '25)

Vienna

Bottoms, P. Old wine. (Je '25)
 O'Shaughnessy, E. L. Viennese medley. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Virginia

Glasgow, E. A. G. Barren ground. (My '25)

West Indies

Lathrop, L. A. Princess of Paradise island. (S '25)

Love stories

Arnim, M. A. Love. (My '25)
 Ayres, R. M. Littl'st lover. (S '25)
 Benefield, B. Chicken-wagon family. (O '25)
 Benson, E. F. Alan. (My '25)
 Black, D. Romance, the loveliest thing. (N '25)
 Cannan, J. Wild berry wine. (Je '25)
 Christie, M. Gilded rose. (Ja '26)
 Dawson, C. W. Old youth. (O '25)
 De Sélincourt, H. Young mischief and the perfect pair. (Ap '25)
 Dixon, T. Love complex. (S '25)
 Eiker, M. Mrs Mason's daughters. (My '25)
 Folsom, E. Free. (O '25)
 Gauss, M. Danae. (Ja '26)
 Guernon, C. Choice. (My '25)
 Hamilton, C. Paradise. (Mr '25)
 Harré, T. E. One hour and forever. (Ap '25)
 Kelland, C. B. Miracle. (Mr '25)
 Locke, W. J. Great Pandolfo. (O '25)
 Lutz, G. Not under the law. (S '25)
 MacDonald, E. L. Lady of New Orleans. (O '25)
 Mackenzie, C. Coral. (O '25)
 Mals, S. P. B. Perissa. (Ag '25)
 Major, C. Rosalie. (S '25)
 Nugent, R. Cobweb palace. (Ap '25)
 O'Brien, H. V. What a man wants. (Ja '26)
 Oemler, M. His wife-in-law. (My '25)
 Orczy, E. Pimpernel and Rosemary. (Mr '25)
 Palmer, F. Invisible wounds. (Je '25)
 Patrick, D., pseud. Dreaming spires. (My '25)

Pedler, M. Red ashes. (S '25)
 Raine, W. M. Roads of doubt. (Je '25)
 Roberts, C. E. M. Love rack. (D '25)
 Ruck, B. Lucky in love. (Ap '25)
 Small, S. H. Both one. (Ja '26)
 Thurston, E. T. Charmeuse. (S '25)
 Wadsley, O. You and I. (Je '25)

Lumber industry

Crawford, M. De C. Come-back. (Ap '25)

Marriage

Bartley, N. I. Bread and jam. (D '25)
 Burr, J., pseud. Married men. (S '25)
 Coalfleet, P. Hare and tortoise. (Ja '26)
 Comstock, H. T. Joline. (F '26)
 Cox, C. Stand by. (O '25)
 Cuthrell, F. Those difficult years. (S '25)
 Cuthrell, F. Thresholds. (D '25)
 Delano, E. Way of all earth. (Ag '25)
 Emanuel, V. R. Middle years. (My '25)
 Geijerstam, G. Book about little brother. (F '26)
 Gibbs, A. H. Soundings. (Mr, Je '25)
 Gibbs, G. F. Mad marriage. (O '25)
 Grant, R. Bishop's granddaughter. (Ap '25)
 Hackett, F. That nice young couple. (Je '25)
 Kaye-Smith, S. The George and the Crown. (Je '25)
 Kilbourne, F. Mrs William Horton speaking. (Mr '25)
 King, B. High forfeit. (N '25)
 Mackail, D. G. Greenery street. (S '25)
 Mackenzie, A. M. Half-loaf. (O '25)
 Maschwitz, E. Taste of honey. (My '25)
 Neill, E. W. Barbara's marriage and the bishop. (Ap '25)
 Nicholson, M. And they lived happily ever after. (N '25)
 O'Shaughnessy, E. L. Married life. (Ja '26)
 Oursler, F. Sandalwood. (My '25)
 Pelley, W. D. Drag. (Mr '25)
 Richardson, A. Ransom. (N '25)
 Seymour, B. K. Unveiled. (Je '25)
 Sinclair, M. Rector of Wyck. (Ap '25)
 Solano, S. Happy failure. (O '25)
 Terrell, D. & B. Last year's nest. (Je '25)
 Tilden, F. Virtuous husband. (N '25)

Mining

Mulford, C. E. Cottonwood Gulch. (Mr '25)

Miscegenation

Millin, S. G. God's stepchildren. (Mr '25)

Mountaineers

Dargan, O. Highland annals. (N '25)

Moving pictures

Marion, F. Minnie Flynn. (Ag '25)
 St Johns, A. R. Skyrocket. (Je '25)

Musicians

Sackville-West, E. Piano quartet. (F '26)

Mystery stories

Adams, H. Secret of Bogey House. (S '25)
 Ames, J. B. Loudon from Laramie. (Ap '25)
 Atkey, B. Pyramid of lead. (O '25)
 Balmer, E. That Royle girl. (O '25)
 Beeding, F. Seven sleepers. (Ap '25)
 Biggers, E. D. House without a key. (Je '25)
 Bobbed hair. (My '25)
 Boyle, C. A. Anna's. (My '25)
 Brown, A. Mysteries of Ann. (My '25)
 Bryant, M. Mrs Fuller. (Ag '25)
 Buck, C. N. Portuguese silver. (Ap '25)
 Chadwick, C. Cactus. (My '25)
 Chamberlain, G. A. Great Van Suttart mystery. (O '25)
 Chichester, J. J. The bigamist. (O '25)
 Christie, A. Mystery of Chimneys. (O '25)
 Christie, A. Poirot investigates. (Ag '25)
 Cohen, O. R. Iron chalice. (Ja '26)
 Cole, G. D. H. and M. I. Death of a millionaire. (N '25)
 Collins, G. Valley of eyes unseen. (Ap '25)
 Crofts, F. W. Groote Park murder. (Ag '25)
 Douglas, D. Grand inquisitor. (Mr '25)
 Dutton, C. J. Second bullet. (My '25)
 Emery, J. I. Tiger of Baragunga. (Je '25)
 Evans, H. Murder club. (Ap '25)

Fiction—Mystery stories—Continued

- Farjeon, J. J. Uninvited guests. (Ag '25)
 Farnol, J. Loring mystery. (Ap, Je '25)
 Fielding, A. Eames-Erskine case. (My '25)
 Fletcher, J. S. Annexation society. (Ag '25)
 Fletcher, J. S. Secret of the Barbican. (D '25)
 Fletcher, J. S. Wolves and the lamb. (Mr '25)
 Footner, H. Under dogs. (F '26)
 Freeman, R. A. Mystery of Angelina Frood. (Mr '25)
 Freeman, R. A. Shadow of the wolf. (D '25)
 French, J. L., ed. Great detective stories from Dickens to Gaboriau. (Ap '25)
 Fuller, V., pseud. Long green gaze. (Ap '25)
 Garrett, W. A. Doctor Ricardo. (S '25)
 Gaunt, M. E. B. Mummy moves. (Ap '25)
 Gerould, G. H. Midsummer mystery. (Je '25)
 Gluck, S. Green blot. (D '25)
 Gluck, S. Thieves' honor. (Mr '25)
 Graeme, B. Blackshirt. (S '25)
 Hay, J. Bellamy case. (Mr '25)
 Hext, H., pseud. The monster. (Je '25)
 Hume, F. Blue talisman. (S '25)
 Jepson, S. Rogues and diamonds. (S '25)
 Jordan, E. G. Red Riding Hood. (Ag '25)
 Knevels, G. Octagon house. (N '25)
 Le Blanc, M. Memoirs of Arsene Lupin. (Ag '25)
 Lee, J. B. Dead right. (My '25)
 Lincoln, N. S. Missing initial. (Ag '25)
 Lowndes, M. A. Afterwards. (Ag '25)
 McAllister, A. Deductions of Colonel Gore. (Ag '25)
 Macdonald, P. The rasp. (D '25)
 MacGowan, A., and Newberry, P. Shaken down. (My '25)
 Machard, A. Wolf man. (S '25)
 Mackworth, J. D. Axe is laid. (My '25)
 Marshall, A. Mystery of Redmarsh farm. (Je '25)
 Moffett, C. L. Seine mystery. (S '25)
 Muir, A. Third warning. (F '26)
 Mundy, T. Om. (Ap '25)
 Oppenheim, E. P. Stolen idols. (Je '25)
 Ostrander, I. E. Black joker. (F '26)
 Ostrander, I. E. Neglected clue. (Ag '25)
 Packard, F. L. Broken waters. (Ja '26)
 Philipotts, E. Voice from the dark. (My '25)
 Rees, A. J. Cup of silence. (Mr '25)
 Reeve, A. B. Craig Kennedy on the farm. (D '25)
 Reeve, A. B. Fourteen points. (Ag '25)
 Reynolds, G. M. Spell of Sarnia. (F '26)
 Rideout, H. M. Dulcarnon. (O '25)
 Rinehart, M. Red lamp. (S '25)
 Roche, A. S. Pleasure buyers. (Ag '25)
 Rohmer, S., pseud. Dream detective. (Ag '25)
 Scott, R. T. M. Black magician. (O '25)
 Snaith, J. C. Thus far. (S '25)
 Stinson, H. Fingerprints. (Ag '25)
 Stowell, W. A. Mystery of the singing walls. (Je '25)
 Sullivan, A. Jade god. (Mr '25)
 Terhune, A. P. Runaway bag. (Ja '26)
 Thayer, L. Doctor S. O. S. (Ag '25)
 Wallace, E. Hairy arm. (S '25)
 Wells, C. Anything but the truth. (Ap '25)
 Wells, C. Daughter of the house. (Ja '26)
 Wells, C. Face cards. (Je '25)
 Wentworth, P. Annam Jewel. (N '25)
 Wentworth, P. Red lacquer case. (Ap '25)
 Williams, S. C. Mystery in red. (Je '25)
 Williamson, A. M. Secret gold. (Ap '25)
 Woodrow, N. M. Burned evidence. (Ag '25)
 Wynne, A. Sign of evil. (Je '25)
 Young, F. B. Cold Harbour. (Ja '26)

Negro stories

- Cohen, O. R. Bigger and blacker. (Ag '25)
 Heyward, Du B. Porgy. (N '25)

Pirates

- Day, H. F. Clothes make the pirate. (Ap '25)
 French, J. L., comp. Great pirate stories. (Ja '26)

Psychological novels

- Anderson, S. Dark laughter. (O '25)
 Atherton, G. Crystal cup. (O '25)

- Benson, E. F. Colin II. (N '25)
 Beresford, J. D. Monkey puzzle. (S '25)
 Bottomore, P., and Thompson, D. Depths of prosperity. (N '25)
 Carco, F. Hounded man. (Ap '25)
 Cather, W. S. Professor's house. (O '25)
 Dell, F. This mad ideal. (Ap '25)
 Douglas, D. Grand inquisitor. (Mr '25)
 Dreiser, T. American tragedy. (F '26)
 Gorman, H. S. Gold by gold. (Mr '25)
 Harrison, M. St. L. Dogs of want. (My '25)
 Hervey, H. Ethan Quest. (Je '25)
 Hume, C. Cruel fellowship. (Ag '25)
 Kennedy, M. Constant nymph. (Mr '25)
 Lubbock, P. Region cloud. (F '26)
 Mirrlees, H. The counterplot. (Je '25)
 Morgan, C. My name is legion. (My '25)
 Price, E. B. My lady Lee. (O '25)
 Reid, L. Rector of Maliseet. (S '25)
 Richardson, D. M. The trap. (O '25)
 Scott, E. Golden door. (Je '25)
 Waldron, W. Shanklin. (D '25)
 Wharton, E. N. Mother's recompense. (Je '25)
 Woolf, V. Mrs Dalloway. (Ag '25)

Railroad stories

- Lynde, F. Fight on the Standing Stone. (My '25)
 Raine, W. M. Roads of doubt. (Je '25)
 Stringer, A. J. A. Power. (Je '25)

Reincarnation

- Beck, L. A. Way of stars. (Ag '25)
 Hanaranda, M. Cabriba. (F '26)

Religion

- Borden, L. Gentleman Riches. (D '25)

Religious psychology

- Burt, K. Quest. (D '25)
 Hannay, J. O. Bindon Parva. (O '25)
 Sinclair, M. Rector of Wyck. (Ap '25)
 Vance, L. J. Road to En-dor. (Ag '25)

Roman Catholic faith

- Clarke, I. C. It happened in Rome. (Ja '26)

Romance

- Bailey, H. C. Knight at arms. (S '25)
 Cauffman, S. H. At the sign of the Silver ship. (Ag '25)
 Farnol, J. Loring mystery. (Ap, Je '25)
 Frederick, J. Bronze collar. (Ap '25)
 Garstin, C. High noon. (Je '25)
 Gibbs, G. F. Love of Monsieur. (Mr '25)
 Heyer, G. Simon the coldheart. (O '25)
 Oman, C. Princess Amelia. (Mr '25)
 Sabatini, R. Carolinian. (Ap '25)
 Sublette, C. M. Scarlet Cockerel. (My '25)
 Williams, V. Red mass. (Mr '25)

School and college life

- Banks, E. School for John and Mary. (S '25)
 Crane, C. Western shore. (Je '25)
 Gollomb, J. Tuning in at Lincoln high. (Ja '26)
 Harrison, A. Lifting mist. (My '25)
 Johnson, S. Professor. (My '25)
 Selver, P. Schooling. (Je '25)

Scientists

- Lewis, S. Arrowsmith. (Mr, My '25)

Sea stories

- Connolly, J. B. Steel decks. (Ja '26)
 French, J. L. comp. Great sea stories. (N '25)
 Kendall, O. Stormy petrel. (Ja '26)
 Lynde, F. Cruise of the Cuttlefish. (F '26)
 Mannin, E. E. Hunger of the sea. (Mr '25)
 Noble, E. Mandarin's bell. (Ag '25)
 Paine, R. D. In Zanzibar. (Ag '25)
 Pulsford, H. A. Old Brig's cargo. (Je '25)
 Riesenbergh, F. Bob Graham at sea. (D '25)
 St Nicholas. Salt-water stories, retold from St Nicholas. (F '26)
 Wallace, F. W. Captain Salvation. (D '25)
 Young, F. B. Sea horses. (Je '25)

Sex problems

- Smits, L. J. Spring flight. (My '25)
 Steele, W. D. Taboo. (O '25)
 Waugh, A. Kept. (S '25)

Short stories

- Abdullah, A. Swinging caravan. (D '25)
 Aiken, C. P. Bring! bring! (Je '25)
 Allen, J. L. The landmark. (F '26)
 Arlen, M., pseud. May Fair. (Ag '25)
 Aumonier, S. Overheard. (Mr '25)
 Austin, F. B. Thirteen. (Ja '26)
 Baring, M. Half a minute's silence. (D '25)
 Beach, R. E. Goose woman. (S '25)
 Blackwood, A. Tongues of fire. (Ap '25)
 Blasco Ibáñez, V. Old woman of the movies. (S '25)
 Boyd, T. A. Points of honor. (My '25)
 Bramah, E. Specimen case. (Je '25)
 Chesterton, G. K. Tales of the long bow. (N '25)
 Christie, A. Poirot investigates. (Ag '25)
 Cohen, O. R. Bigger and blacker. (Ag '25)
 Collins, C. W. Sins of Saint Anthony. (N '25)
 Connell, R. Variety. (My '25)
 Conrad, J. Il conte. (Ag '25)
 Conrad, J. Tales of hearsay. (Mr, My '25)
 Coppard, A. E. Fishmonger's fiddle. (Ag '25)
 Dell, E. M. Passer-by. (Ag '25)
 Fletcher, J. S. Secret of the Barbican. (D '25)
 Flying Oosp. (Ap '25)
 French, J. L., ed. Great detective stories from Dickens to Gaboriau. (Ap '25)
 French, J. L., comp. Great pirate stories. (Ja '26)
 French, J. L., comp. Great sea stories. (N '25)
 Galsworthy, J. Caravan. (S '25)
 Georgian stories, 1925. (Ag '25)
 Glass, M. M. Y'understand. (D '25)
 Gorky, M., pseud. Story of a novel. (N '25)
 Gray, C. W., comp. Sporting spirit. (S '25)
 Gray, C. W., ed. "Dawgs!" (Ja '26)
 Harper prize short stories. (Ja '26)
 Hemingway, E. In our time. (D '25)
 Herrick, H. Wanderings. (O '25)
 Huxley, A. L. Young Archimedes. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Jacqueline. (Ag '25)
 James, M. R. Warning to the curious. (F '26)
 Jewett, S. O. Best stories. (Je '25)
 King, G. E. Balcony stories. (Ja '26)
 Komroff, M. Grace of lambs. (N '25)
 Kuprin, A. I. Gambrinus. (F '26)
 La Motte, E. N. Snuffs and butters. (Je '25)
 Lynd, S. Mulberry bush. (Je '25)
 McKenna, S. Tales of intrigue and revenge. (O '25)
 McNeile, H. C. Out of the blue. (S '25)
 Mayne, E. C. Inner circle. (Ag '25)
 Meynell, V. Young Mrs Cruse. (My '25)
 Miln, L. Soul of China. (Mr '25)
 Moon, L. Doorways in Drumorty. (F '26)
 Morand, P. Closed all night. (D '25)
 New Decameron. (Ag '25)
 New York guild for the Jewish blind, comp. More aces. (F '26)
 O. Henry memorial award. Prize stories for 1924. (Mr '25)
 O'Brien, E. J. H., ed. Best short stories of 1924 and the Yearbook of the American short story. (My '25)
 O'Brien, E. J. H., and Cournos, J., eds. Best British short stories of 1924. (My '25)
 O'Shaughnessy, E. L. Married life. (Ja '26)
 Poole, E. Little dark man. (Je '25)
 Rice, A. C. and C. Y. Winners and losers. (N '25)
 Rolfe, F. In His own image. (Ag '25)
 Singmaster, E. Bred in the bone. (F '26)
 Sitwell, O. Triple fugue. (Mr '25)
 Smith, P. The Little Karoo. (My '25)
 Sparling, E. E. Under the levee. (Ap '25)
 Squire, J. C. Grub Street nights entertainments. (Ap '25)
 Street, J. L. Mr Bisbee's princess. (S '25)

- Verga, G. Little novels of Sicily. (My '25)
 Zweig, S. Passion and pain. (D '25)

Social conditions and problems

- Bates, S. C. Andrea Thorne. (My '25)
 Gibbs, P. H. Reckless lady. (Mr, My '25)
 Marks, P. Martha. (Ap '25)
 Martin, H. Challenged. (Mr '25)
 Sadleir, M. Obedience. (Je '25)

Society life

- Dekobra, M. Wings of desire. (D '25)
 Fitzgerald, F. S. K. Great Gatsby. (My, Je '25)
 Hutten zum Stolzenberg, B. Julia. (Je '25)
 Mais, S. P. B. Eclipse. (N '25)
 Meynell, L. W. Mockbeggar. (Mr '25)
 Myers, L. H. The Clio. (Ja '26)
 Post, E. Parade. (O '25)

Steel industry

- Poling, D. A. The furnace. (S '25)

Supernatural phenomena

- Dennis, G. Harvest in Poland. (My '25)

Tales of horror

- Walpole, H. Portrait of a man with red hair. (D '25)

Temperance stories

- McClure, M. B. Bush that burned. (N '25)

Theater and stage life

- Collins, C. W. Sins of Saint Anthony. (N '25)
 Merwin, S. Moment of beauty. (My '25)
 Sutton, G. Fish and actors. (My '25)

Translated stories

- Morley, C. D., tr. Two fables. (S '25)

Czechoslovakian

- Capek, K. Krakatit. (Ja '26)

French

- Barbey d'Aurevilly, J. D. The diaboliques. (My '25)
 Barbusse, H. Chains. (F '26)
 Béraud, H. Lazarus. (My '25)
 Beyle, M. H. Chartreuse of Parma. (O '25)
 Brentano, C. Fairy tales from Brentano. (F '26)
 Carco, F. Hounded man. (Ap '25)
 Chivas-Baron, C. Three women of Annam. (Ja '26)
 Cocteau, J. Grand écart. (Ja '26)
 Cocteau, J. Thomas the imposter. (Mr, Je '25)
 Dekobra, M. Wings of desire. (D '25)
 Hémon, L. Blind man's buff. (Mr '25)
 Hémon, L. Monsieur Ripois and Nemesis. (Je '25)
 Jacqueline. (Ag '25)
 La Fayette, M. M. Princess of Cleves. (Je '25)
 MacOrlan, P. On board the Morning Star. (Ap '25)
 Mille, P. The monarch. (S '25)
 Morand, P. Closed all night. (D '25)
 Morand, P. Lewis and Irene. (O '25)
 Prévost, A. F. History of Manon Lescaut and the Chevalier des Grieux. (S '25)
 Proust, M. Guermentes way. (S '25)
 Rolland, R. Annette and Sylvie. (Mr '25)
 Rolland, R. Summer. (N '25)
 Romain, J., pseud. Lucienne. (My '25)
 Savignon, A. Sunken gold. (S '25)

German

- Brentano, C. Fairy tales from Brentano. (F '26)
 Hauptmann, G. J. R. Island of the great mother. (Ja '26)
 Kellermann, E. Ninth of November. (Mr '25)
 Klabund, pseud. Peter the Czar. (Ja '26)
 Mann, T. Death in Venice. (Ap '25)
 Moszkowski, A. Isles of wisdom. (O '25)
 Schnitzler, A. Fräulein Else. (Ja '26)
 Wassermann, J. Faber. (D '25)
 Zweig, S. Passion and pain. (D '25)

Fiction—Translated stories—Continued

Hungarian

Molnar, F. Prisoners. (Ap '25)

Italian

Pirandello, L. The outcast. (D '25)
 Verga, G. Little novels of Sicily. (My '25)
 Verona, G. da. Life begins to-morrow. (O '25)

Japanese

Kagawa, T. Before the dawn. (Ag '25)
 Murasaki Shikibu. Tale of Genji. (O '25)

Norwegian

Bojer, J. The emigrants. (N '25)
 Hamsun, K. Benoni. (O '25)
 Hamsun, K. Segelfoss town. (Mr '25)
 Undset, S. Mistress of Husaby. (Ag '25)

Polish

Reymont, W. S. Autumn. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Reymont, W. S. Spring. (Je '25)
 Reymont, W. S. Summer. (S '25)
 Reymont, W. S. Winter. (Mr '25)

Portuguese

Eça de Queiroz, J. M. Relic. (O '25)

Russian

Andreieff, L. N. Sashka Jigouloff. (Ja '26)
 Flying Osip. (Ap '25)
 Gorky, M., pseud. Story of a novel. (N '25)
 Korolenko, V. G. In a strange land. (Ag '25)
 Kuprin, A. I. Gambrinus. (F '26)
 Merejkowski, D. S. December the fourteenth. (D '25)
 Pilniak, B., pseud. Tales of the wilderness. (Ap '25)
 Remizov, A. The clock. (My '25)
 Zamiatin, E. I. We. (Mr '25)

Swedish

Geijerstam, G. Book about little brother. (F '26)
 Heidenstam, V. von. Tree of the Folkungs. (My '25)
 Heller, F., pseud. Mr Collin is ruined. (Je '25)
 Heller, F., pseud. Thousand and second night. (N '25)
 Lagerlöf, S. O. L. Treasure. (My '25)

Utopian romances

Hauptmann, G. J. R. Island of the great mother. (Ja '26)
 Winship, G. B. Volonor. (D '25)
 Zamiatin, E. I. We. (Mr '25)

Witchcraft

Deamer, D. Devil's saint. (Ja '26)
 Reynolds, G. M. Spell of Sarnia. (F '26)
 Watson, F. Mr Kello. (S '25)

Women

Tarkington, B. Women. (F '26)

Young people

Hamilton, P. Monday morning. (N '25)

Field, Eugene

Dennis, C. H. Eugene Field's creative years. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Fielding, Henry

Digeon, A. Novels of Fielding. (Ag '25)

Fields, Lewis Maurice

Isman, F. Weber and Fields. (Mr '25)
 Fifty years of sport. Miller, E. D. (D '25)
 Fig leaves. Gilman, M. E. (Ja '26)
 Fight for Everest: 1924. Norton, E. F., and others. (F '26)

Fight on the Standing Stone. Lynde, F. (My '25)

Fightin' through. Revell, N. (S '25)

Fighting the world. Karolyi, M. (Je '25)

Figures of the passion of our Lord. Miró Ferrer, G. (Ap '25)

Filing and indexing with business procedure.
 Warren, I., and others. (Ag '25)
 Filing methods. Wallace, E. (Ag '25)

Files and filing (documents)

Wallace, E. Filing methods. (Ag '25)
 Warren, I., and others. Filing and indexing with business procedure. (Ag '25)

Finance

Kent, F. C. Mathematical principles of finance. (Ag '25)
 Lutz, H. L. Public finance. (Ap '25)

France

Moulton, H. G., and Lewis, C. French debt problem. (D '25)

Persia

Millsbaugh, A. C. American task in Persia. (F '26)

United States

McGrane, R. C. Panic of 1837. (S '25)

Financial history of the American telephone and telegraph company. Stehman, J. W. (D '25)

Fingerprints. Stinson, H. (Ag '25)

FinlandDescription and travel

McBride, R. M. Finland and its people. (S '25)
 Finland and its people. McBride, R. M. (S '25)
 Fire woman. Lawson, W. P. (S '25)
 The firebrand. Mayer, E. J. (My '25)
 Firecrackers. Van Vechten, C. (S '25)
 Fireweed. Elliot, E. A. (Ja '26)
 First book in education. Heinmiller, L. E. (S '25)

First days of history. Kummer, F. A. (O '25)
 First forty-niner. Scherer, J. A. B. (Ja '26)
 First impressions. Jones, L. (D '25)

First poems. Muir, E. (Je '25)

First steps to climbing. Abraham, G. D. (S '25)

First world flight. Thomas, L. J. (F '26)

Fish and actors. Sutton, G. (My '25)

Fishes

National geographic society. Book of fishes. (F '26)

Fishing

Endicott, W. Adventures with rod and harpoon along the Florida Keys. (Mr '25)

Grey, Z. Tales of fishing virgin seas. (F '26)

Hutchinson, H. G. Fellowship of anglers. (S '25)

Robinson, B. C. Muskellunge fishing. (Je '25)

Fishmonger's fiddle. Coppard, A. E. (Ag '25)

Five in family. Anstruther, E. H. A. (Mr '25)

Flame of happiness. Ward, F. J. (Ap '25)

Flanders & Hainault. Holland, C. (Ja '26)

Flattering word. Kelly, G. E. (Je '25)

Flecker, James Elroy

Hodgson, G. Life of James Elroy Flecker. (Je '25)

Fleetfin. Venable, C. (D '25)

Flour

Bailey, C. H. Chemistry of wheat flour. (Ja '26)

Flour mills

Dedrick, B. W. Practical milling. (S '25)

Flowering trees and shrubs. Macself, A. J. (Je '25)

Flowers

National geographic society. Book of wild flowers. (S '25)

Flying carpet. (Ja '26)

Flying Osip. (Ap '25)

Folklore

Caucasus

Dirr, A., comp. and tr. Caucasian folk-tales. (D '25)

Hawaiian Islands

Colum, P. Bright islands. (F '26)

San Christoval, Solomon islands

Fox, C. E. Threshold of the Pacific. (Je '25)

Folk-songsSouthern states

Cox, J. H., ed. Folk-songs of the South. (Je '25)

- Folk songs, Canadian
Barbeau, C. M., and Sapir, E., eds. Folk songs of French Canada. (Ag '25)
- Folk songs, French
Barbeau, C. M., and Sapir, E., eds. Folk songs of French Canada. (Ag '25)
- Folk songs of French Canada. Barbeau, C. M., and Sapir, E., eds. (Ag '25)
- Folk-songs of the South. Cox, J. H., ed. (Je '25)
- Follies of the courts. Irvine, L. H. (Ja '26)
- Following Ann. Eng title of Cheerful fraud. Browne, K. R. G. (O '25)
- Food and health. Plimmer, R. H.: A. and V. G. (D '25)
- Food preservation
Rector, T.: M. Scientific preservation of food. (S '25)
- Fool i' the forest. Aldington, R.: (Ag '25)
- Foolish fiction. Ward, C. L. (D '25)
- For the morning. McCarthy, J. R.: (My '25)
- Forbes-Robertson, Sir Johnston
Forbes-Robertson, J. Player under three reigns. (Je '25)
- Ford, Henry
Lochner, L.: P. Henry Ford—America's Don Quixote. (N '25)
- Ford automobile
Blanchard, H. F.: My Ford. (S '25)
- Foreign exchange
Edwards, G.: W. International trade finance. (Ag '25)
- Foreign policy of Canning. Temperley, H. W.: V. (Ja '26)
- Foreign policy of Castlereagh, 1815-1822. Webster, C. K. (Ja '26)
- Foreign public opinion
Adams, E. D.: Great Britain and the American Civil war. (S '25)
- Foreign service of the United States. Lay, T. H. (N '25)
- Foreign student in America. Commission on survey of foreign students in the United States of America. (Ja '26)
- Foreign students in the United States
Commission on survey of foreign students in the United States of America. Foreign student in America. (Ja '26)
- Foreign trade
Butterbaugh, W. E. Principles of importing. (Mr '25)
- Edwards, G.: W. International trade finance. (Ag '25)
- Foremen
Gardiner, G. L. Practical foremanship. (S '25)
- Forest of fear. Bennett, A. G. (Ag '25)
- Forests and forestry
Berry, J. B. Farm woodlands. (Ag '25)
- Record, S.: J., and Mell, C. D. Timbers of tropical America. (F '26)
- Forge in the forest. Colum, P. (D '25)
- Formative factors in character. Martin, H. (F '26)
- Formative period of the federal reserve system. Harding, W.: P. G. (D '25)
- Fortune's yellow. Schaeffer, E. (My '25)
- '49. Cronyn, G.: W. (O '25)
- XLI poems. Cummings, E.: E. (S '25)
- Forty-two fables. La Fontaine, J. de. (Ja '26)
- Forty years in newspaperdom. McRae, M. A. (Ap '25)
- Forum papers. Gaston, C.: R., ed. (S '25)
- Forum papers. Heydrick, G.: A., ed. (Ap '25)
- Fossil man in Spain. Obermaier, H. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Foundations of Christianity. Kautsky, K. (Ag '25)
- Foundations of colloid chemistry. Hatschek, E., ed. (Ja '26)
- Foundations of the universe. Luckiesh, M. (S '25)
- Four Gospels. Streeter, B. H. (S '25)
- Four way lodge. Reed, C.: B. (Je '25)
- Fourteen points. Reeve, A. B.: (Ag '25)
- Fox, David, pseud. See Ostrander, I. E. (Ag '25, F '26)
- Foxhounds
Yoi-over, pseud. Hold hard! hounds, please! (Ag '25)
- France
Playne, C. E. Neuroses of the nations. (Ja '26)
- Army
Foreign legion
Magnus, M. Memoirs of the Foreign legion. (Mr, My '25)
- Description and travel
Gordon, J. and C. J. Two vagabonds in a French village. (F '26)
- Lee, V., pseud. Golden keys. (S '25)
- Monahan, M. Road to Paris. (Je '25)
- Rimington, F. C. Motor rambles through France. (N '25)
- Wilstach, P. Along the Pyrenees. (Ap '25)
- Economic conditions
Huddleston, S. France and the French. (F '26)
- Moulton, H. G., and Lewis, C. French debt problem. (D '25)
- History
Bourbons, 1589-1789
Orleans, E. C. Letters of Madame. (My '25)
- 1789-1815
Barrès, J. B. A. Memoirs of a Napoleonic officer. (Ag '25)
- Social conditions
Huddleston, S. France and the French. (F '26)
- Social life and customs
Clarke, M. Regarding the French. (Ag '25)
- Evans, J. Life in mediaeval France. (D '25)
- Gordon, J. and C. J. Two vagabonds in a French village. (F '26)
- France, Anatole
Brousson, J. J. Anatole France himself. (Ag '25)
- France and the French. Huddleston, S. (F '26)
- Frances Wright. Waterman, W.: R. (Mr '25)
- Franklin Winslow Kane. Sedgwick, A. D. (Je '25)
- Fraülein Else Schnitzler, A. (Ja '26)
- Fredericks, Arnold, pseud. See Kummer, F.: A. (O '25)
- Free. Folsom, E. (O '25)
- Freeman book. The Freeman. (Ap '25)
- Freemasons
Webster, N. H. Secret societies and subversive movements. (Ap '25)
- French debt problem. Moulton, H. G., and Lewis, C. (D '25)
- French-English and English-French dictionary of technical and general terms. Kettridge, J. O. (Ag '25)
- French home cooking. Pratz, C. de. (S '25)
- French in Africa
Sloane, W.: M. Greater France in Africa. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- French language
Dictionaries
English
Kettridge, J. O. French-English and English-French dictionary of technical and general terms. (Ag '25)
- French literature
Saintsbury, G. Collected essays and papers, 1875-1923. (Ap '25)
- History and criticism
Lalou, R. Contemporary French literature. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- French poetry
Cary, H.: F. Early French poets. (N '25)
- Fresh tracks in the Belgian Congo. Norden, H. (O '25)
- Freud, Sigmund
Wittels, F. Sigmund Freud. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Friends, Society of

- Best, M. A. Rebel saints. (F '26)
 Friends of Mr Sweeney. Davis, E. H. (Ja '26)
 From a pitman's notebook. Dataller, R. (Ag '25)
 From Bangkok to Bombay. Carpenter, F. G. (Mr '25)
 From China to Hkamti Long. Ward, F. K. (Mr '25)
 From college gates. Hazard, C. (Ap '25)
 From infancy to childhood. Smith, R. M. (S '25)
 From Melbourne to Moscow. Dixon, G. C. (S, N '25)
 From president to prison. Ossendowski, F. A., and Palen, L. S. (S '25)
 From Red Sea to Blue Nile. Forbes, J. R. (Ja '26)

Frontier and pioneer life

- Aikman, D., ed. Taming of the frontier. (N '25)
 Wheeler, H. W. Buffalo days. (Ja '26)
 White, O. P. Them was the days. (N '25)

Fruit culture

- Gourley, J. H. Orchard management. (Je '25)
 Fruit of the family tree. Wiggam, A. E. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Fuchs, Emil

- Fuchs, E. With pencil, brush and chisel. (Ap '25)

Fuel

- Harvey, L. C. Pulverized fuel. (S '25)

Fuel, Colloidal

- Harvey, L. C. Pulverized fuel. (S '25)

Fugger family

- Klarwill, V., ed. Fugger news-letters. (N '25)

- Fugger news-letters. Klarwill, V., ed. (N '25)
 Fundamentals of statistics. Thurston, L. L. (D '25)

Fur-bearing animals

- Patton, H. Raising fur-bearing animals. (Ja '26)

- The furnace. Poling, D. A. (S '25)

Furniture

- Gloag, J. E. Time, taste and furniture. (Ja '26)

- Hayward, C. H. English furniture at a glance. (S '25)

- Further reminiscences, 1864-1894. Baring-Gould, S. (S '25)

- The future. Low, A. M. (N '25)

Future life

- Marchant, J., ed. Survival. (Ja '26)

- Gabriel Samara, peacemaker. Oppenheim, E. P. (D '25)

- Gallery of children. Milne, A. A. (N '25)

- Gallery of rogues. Kingston, C. (N '25)

- Gambier, Kenyon, pseud. See Lathrop, L. A. (S '25)

- Gambrinus, Kuprin, A. I. (F '26)

Game protection

- Grinnell, G. B., and Sheldon, C., eds. Hunting and conservation. (S '25)

- Game trails in British Columbia. Williams, A. B. (Ja '26)

Games

- Geister, S. What shall we play? (D '25)

- Staley, S. C. Games, contests and relays. (Ap '25)

- Games, contests and relays. Staley, S. C. (Ap '25)

- Ganpat, pseud. See Gompertz, M. L. A. (D '25)

- Garden varieties. Nicholson, K. (Ag '25)

Gardening

- Brewster, K. L. Little garden for little money. (Ap '25)

- Cloud, D. M.-P. Culture of perennials. (Je '25)

- Macself, A. J. Flowering trees and shrubs. (Je '25)

- Martineau, P. Gardening in sunny lands. (Ap '25)

- Weathers, J. My garden book. (Je '25)

- Gardening in sunny lands. Martineau, P. (Ap '25)

Gardens

- Forestier, J. C. N. Gardens. (Ap '25)

- King, L. Chronicles of the garden. (Ag '25)

- Lewis, A. A. Boxwood gardens, old and new. (My '25)

- Nichols, R. S. Spanish & Portuguese gardens. (Mr '25)

Garfield, James Abram

- Smith, T. C. Life and letters of James Abram Garfield. (D '25)

Gary, Elbert Henry

- Tarbell, I. M. Life of Elbert H. Gary. (Ja '26)

Gas, Asphyxiating and poisonousWar use

- Haldane, J. B. S. Callinicus. (My '25)

Gas, Natural

- Burrell, G. A. Recovery of gasoline from natural gas. (S '25)

- Van Tuyl, F. M. Elements of petroleum geology. (S '25)

- Gas. Kaiser, G. (My '25)

Gases

- Bragg, W. H. Concerning the nature of things. (My '25)

- Newman, F. H. Production and measurement of low pressures. (Ja '26)

Gasoline

- Boyd, T. A. Gasoline. (Ag '25)

- Burrell, G. A. Recovery of gasoline from natural gas. (S '25)

- Gates of morning. Stacpoole, H. de V. S. (Mr '25)

- Gebhart, John C., ed. See Child health library. (Ap '25)

Genealogy

- Virkus, F. A., ed. Abridged compendium of American genealogy. (My '25)

- General history of the world. Duruy, V. (F '26)

- General textbook of entomology. Imms, A. D. (Ja '26)

Genêt, Edmond Charles Edouard

- Minnigerode, M. Lives and times. (My '25)

- Geneva protocol. Miller, D. H. (O '25)

Genius

- Austin, M. Everyman's genius. (Ag '25)

- Marks, J. A. Genius and disaster. (D '25)

- Genius and disaster. Marks, J. A. (D '25)

- Genius of style. Brownell, W. C. (Mr, My '25)

- Gentleman adventurer. MacGregor, M. E. (Ap '25)

- Gentleman Riches. Borden, L. (D '25)

- Gentleman with a duster, pseud. See Begbie, H. (Ja '26)

- "Gentlemen prefer blondes." Loos, A. (Ja '26)

- Geographical introduction to history. Febvre L. P. V., and Bataillon, L. (D '25)

Geographical myths

- Colum, P. Voyagers. (Ja '26)

- Firestone, C. B. Coasts of illusion. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Geography

- Johnston, H. H., and Guest, L. H., eds. World of today. (Ap '25)

Geography, Commercial

- Huntington, E., and Cushing, S. W. Modern business geography. (S '25)

- Geologic literature on North America, 1785-1918. Nickles, J. M. (S '25)

Geology

- Henderson, J. Geology in its relation to landscape. (N '25)

- Miller, W. J. Introduction to physical geology. (Ap '25)

- Small, S. A. Boys' book of the earth. (D '25)

Maps

- Dake, C. L., and Brown, J. S. Interpretation of topographic and geologic maps. (F '26)

North America

Bibliography

Nickles, J. M. Geologic literature on North America, 1785-1918. (S '25)

United States

Dake, C. L., and Brown, J. S. Interpretation of topographic and geologic maps. (F '26)

Geology in its relation to landscape. Henderson, J. (N '25)

Geophysics

Wegener, A. L. Origin of continents and oceans. (My '25)

The George and the Crown. Kaye-Smith, S. (Je '25)

George Digby, second Earl of Bristol. Townshend, D. (O '25)

George Washington, country gentleman. Hawthorth, P. L. (Ag '25)

Georgian stories, 1925. (Ag '25)

Gerasa

Erskine, B. Vanished cities of Arabia. (N '25)

German trade associations. Stockder, A. H. (Je '25)

Germany

Playne, C. E. Neuroses of the nations. (Ja '26)

Economic conditions

Dawes, R. C. Dawes plan in the making. (S '25)

Foreign relations

Kraus, H. Germany in transition. (Je '25)

History

Gooch, G. P. Germany. (Je '25)

Politics and government

Kraus, H. Germany in transition. (Je '25)

Germany. Gooch, G. P. (Je '25)

Germany in transition. Kraus, H. (Je '25)

Gertrude Haviland's divorce. Irwin, I. (Ja '26)

Getting a laugh. Grandgent, C. H. (My '25)

Getting the news. Mausby, W. S. (Mr '25)

Ghosts

Harper, C. G. Haunted houses. (Je '25)

Gilded rose. Christie, M. (Ja '26)

Gipsy of the Horn. Clements, R. (S '25)

Girl who cast out fear. Speare, D. (Ja '26)

Girls

Davenport, F. I. Salvaging of American girlhood. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Richmond, W. Adolescent girl. (Ja '26)

Glamour. Young, S. (Ag '25)

Glands, Ductless

Berman, L. Personal equation. (S '25)

Williams, E. H., and Hoag, E. B. Rest and grow strong. (S '25)

Glasgow

Bolitho, W., pseud. Cancer of empire. (Je '25)

Glass

Hodkin, F. W., and Cousen, A. Textbook of glass technology. (F '26)

Glass window. Furman, L. (D '25)

Glassware

Moore, N. H. Old glass, European and American. (My '25)

The glen is mine, and The lifting. Brandane, J. (Ja '26)

Glorious Apollo. Beck, L. A. (S '25)

Goat and Compasses. Eng title of At the sign of the Goat and Compasses. Armstrong, M. D. (O '25)

Goblins of Haubeck. Reid, A. (Ja '26)

God

Dougall, L. God's way with man. (S '25)

Ely, M. R. Knowledge of God in Johannine thought. (S '25)

God head. Cline, L. L. (D '25)

God of might. Tobenkin, E. (Ap '25)

God's stepchildren. Millin, S. G. (Mr '25)

God's way with man. Dougall, L. (S '25)

Gold by gold. Gorman, H. S. (Mr '25)

Gold of Ophir. Greenbie, S. and M. (Ja '26)

Golden door. Scott, E. (Je '25)

Golden keys. Lee, V., pseud. (S '25)

Golden Snail. MacClure, V. (Ja '26)

Golden treasury of Irish verse. Robinson, L., ed. (Je '25)

Gold's gloom. Pañchatantra. (Ja '26)

Golf

Barnes, J. M. Guide to good golf. (N '25)

Gompers, Samuel

Gompers, S. Seventy years of life and labor. (Mr, My '25)

Gone abroad. Goldring, D. (S '25)

A good man. Hummel, G. F. (S '25)

Goose woman. Beach, R. E. (S '25)

Gordon, Charles William. See Connor, R., pseud. (Ja '26)

Gordon, George Angier

Gordon, G. A. My education and religion. (O '25)

Gorgas, William Crawford

Gorgas, M. D., and Hendrick, B. J. William Crawford Gorgas. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Gospel and the modern mind. Matthews, W. R. (O '25)

Gospel of John. Robinson, B. W. (O '25)

Gospel of Mark. Bacon, B. W. (O '25)

Gosse, Sir Edmund William

Braybrooke, P. Considerations on Edmund Gosse. (D '25)

Government of the United States. Munro, W. B. (O '25)

Government ownership

Thompson, C. D. Public ownership. (Je '25)

Grace of lambs. Komroff, M. (N '25)

Grammar of politics. Laski, H. J. (N '25)

Grand écart. Cocteau, J. (Ja '26)

Grand inquisitor. Douglas, D. (Mr '25)

Grandmother Tyler's book. Tyler, M. P. (Je '25)

Grant, Douglas, pseud. See Ostrander, I. E. (Ag '25, F '26)

Grant, Ulysses Simpson

Grant, J. R., and Granger, H. F. In the days of my father, General Grant. (D '25)

Stevens, W. O. Boys' life of General Grant. (Ja '26)

Graphic analysis for executives. Savage, W. A. (Ag '25)

Graphic methods

Rugg, H. O. Primer of graphics and statistics for teachers. (D '25)

Savage, W. A. Graphic analysis for executives. (Ag '25)

Williams, J. H. Graphic methods in education. (N '25)

Graphic methods in education. Williams, J. H. (N '25)

Grass. Cooper, M. C. (Je '25)

Gray, Thomas

Reed, A. L. Background of Gray's Elegy. (Ap '25)

Grayson, David, pseud. See Baker, R. S. (N '25)

Great Britain

Antiquities, Roman

Quennell, M. and C. H. B. Everyday life in Roman Britain. (N '25)

Biography

Abbott, W. C. Conflicts with oblivion. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Civilization

Quennell, M. and C. H. B. Every day life in Roman Britain. (N '25)

Colonies

Andrews, C. M. Colonial background of the American revolution. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Bodelsen, C. A. Studies in mid-Victorian imperialism. (O '25)

Keith, A. B. Constitution, administration and laws of the Empire. (My '25)

Knowles, L. C. A. Economic development of the British overseas empire. (N '25)

Great Britain—Colonies—Continued

- Lewin, P. E. Resources of the Empire and their development. (My '25)
 MacInnes, C. M. British commonwealth and its unsolved problems. (N '25)

North America

- Osgood, H. L. American colonies in the eighteenth century. (N '25)

Commerce

- Lewin, P. E. Resources of the Empire and their development. (My '25)

Constitution

- Keith, A. B. Constitution, administration and laws of the Empire. (My '25)

Court and courtiers

- Wilson, V. A. Society women of Shakespeare's time. (Ag '25)

Economic conditions

- Bowden, W. Industrial society in England towards the end of the eighteenth century. (Ag '25)
 Hulme, E. M. History of the British people. (My '25)
 Knowles, L. C. A. Economic development of the British overseas empire. (N '25)
 Siegfried, A. Post-war Britain. (F '26)

Foreign relations

- Grey of Fallodon, E. G. Twenty-five years. (N '25)
 Temperley, H. W. V. Foreign policy of Canning. (Ja '26)
 Webster, C. K. Foreign policy of Castlereagh, 1815-1822. (Ja '26)

United States

- Adams, E. D. Great Britain and the American Civil war. (S '25)

History

- Belloc, H. History of England. (D '25)
 Hulme, E. M. History of the British people. (My '25)

Lancaster and York, 1399-1485

- Newhall, R. A. English conquest of Normandy, 1416-1424. (Je '25)

Tudors, 1485-1603

- London. University. Board of studies in history. Tudor studies. (My '25)

Civil war, 1642-1649

- Hartmann, C. H. Cavalier spirit. (F '26)

1714-1837

- Wortley, E. S., ed. Prime minister and his son. (S '25)

History, Military

- Macready, N. Annals of an active life. (Ag '25)
 Smith-Dorrien, H. L. Memories of forty-eight years' service. (S '25)

History, Naval

- Callender, G. A. R. Naval side of British history. (Mr '25)

Industries and resources

- Lewin, P. E. Resources of the Empire and their development. (My '25)

Politics and government

- Keith, A. B. Constitution, administration and laws of the Empire. (My '25)
 Rockow, L. Contemporary political thought in England (N '25)
 Siegfried, A. Post-war Britain. (F '26)
 Spender, J. A. Public life. (Ag '25)
 Trotzky, L., pseud. Whither England? (N '25)
 Ullswater, J. W. L. Speaker's commentaries. (F '26)
 Wilkinson, W. J. Tory democracy. (D '25)
 Great Britain. Ministry of health
 Newsholme, A. Ministry of health. (F '26)

Great Britain and the American Civil war.

- Adams, E. D. (S '25)
 Great detective stories from Dickens to Gaboriau. French, J. L., ed. (Ap '25)
 Great Gatsby. Fitzgerald, F. S. K. (My, Je '26)
 Great Pacific war. Bywater, H. C. (O '25)
 Great Pandolfo. Locke, W. J. (O '25)
 Great peoples of the ancient world. Vaughan, D. M. (O '25)
 Great pirate stories. French, J. L., comp. (Ja '26)
 Great sea stories. French, J. L., comp. (N '25)
 Great Van Suttart mystery. Chamberlain, G. A. (O '25)
 Great world. Begbie, H. (Ja '26)
 Greater France in Africa. Sloane, W. M. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Greater revelation. Klenner, K. E. von. (Ag '25)
 Greatest book in the world. Newton, A. E. (N '25)

GreeceCivilization

- Mills, D. Book of the ancient Greeks. (D '25)

History

- Mills, D. Book of the ancient Greeks. (D '25)

Religion

- Nilsson, M. P. History of Greek religion. (O '25)

Social life and customs

- Wright, F. A. Greek social life. (O '25)
 Greek ethical thought. Oakeley, H. D. (O '25)
 Greek literature

Collections

- Oakeley, H. D. Greek ethical thought. (O '25)
 Wright, F. A. Greek social life. (O '25)
 Greek social life. Wright, F. A. (O '25)
 Green arch. Washburn, C. C. (F '26)
 Green blot. Gluck, S. (D '25)
 Green Bush. Frederick, J. T. (D '25)
 Green islands in glittering seas. Puxley, W. L. (O '25)
 Greenery street. Mackail, D. G. (S '25)
 Grey gander. Sharon, J. J. (D '25)
 Grey of Fallodon, Edward Grey, 1st viscount
 Grey of Fallodon, E. G. Twenty-five years. (N '25)
 Grip and I. Cronstedt, N. F. (N '25)
 Groote Park murder. Crofts, F. W. (Ag '25)
 Growth of American trade unions, 1880-1923. Wolman, L. (My '25)
 Growth of the mind. Koffka, A. (Ag '25)
 Growth of the United States. Harlow, R. V. (N '25)
 Grub Street nights entertainments. Squire, J. C. (Ap '25)
 The guardsman. Molnar, F. (Mr '25)
 Guermantes way. Proust, M. (S '25)
 Guide to good golf. Barnes, J. M. (N '25)
 Guide to the trees. Curtis, C. C. (O '25)
 Gymnastics
 Wittich, W. J., and Reuter, H. C. Exercises on the apparatus. (D '25)

H. D., pseud. See Aldington, H. (Ag '25)

- H. G. Wells. Brown, I. J. C. (Ag '25)
 H. L. Mencken. Boyd, E. A. (N '25)
 H. W. M. Massingham, H. W. (O '25)

Hague. Permanent court of arbitration

- Scott, J. B. Sovereign states and suits before arbitral tribunals and courts of justice. (D '25)

Hague. Permanent court of international justice

- Bustamente y Sirvén, A. S. de. World court. (F '26)
 Hudson, M. O. Permanent court of international peace and the question of American participation. (S '25)
 Scott, J. B. Sovereign states and suits before arbitral tribunals and courts of justice. (D '25)

- Hairy arm. Wallace, E. (S '25)
 Half a minute's silence. Baring, M. (D '25)
 Half hours in the kitchenette. Scotson-Clark, G. F. (F '26)
 Half-loaf. Mackenzie, A. M. (O '25)
 Haliburton, Thomas Chandler (Sam Slick, pseud.)
 Chittick, V. L. O. Thomas Chandler Haliburton. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Hamilton, Alexander
 Bowers, C. G. Jefferson and Hamilton. (Ja '26)
 Hamilton, Vereker Monteith
 Hamilton, V. M. Things that happened. (S '25)
 Handbook of Alaska. Greely, A. W. (Ag '25)
 Handbook of steel car repairs. Hartough, E. W. (S '25)
 Handbook of the outdoors. Brooks, E. A. (Ag '25)
 Handbook of wooden car repairs. Hartough, E. W. (S '25)
 Handicraft
 Fraser, C. C. Practical book of home repairs. (N '25)
 Happy dragon. Thatcher, A., and Hogarth, C. J. (F '26)
 Happy failure. Solano, S. (O '25)
 Harbors
 MacElwee, R. S. Port development. (Ja '26)
 Hard Wood. Friel, A. O. (D '25)
 Hardy, Thomas
 Brennecke, E. Life of Thomas Hardy. (Ag '25)
 Hare and tortoise. Coalfleet, P. (Ja '26)
 The harp. Lewis, E. (S '25)
 Harper prize short stories. (Ja '26)
 Harriis, Corra May
 Harris, C. M. As a woman thinks. (Ja '26)
 Harvard university. Arnold Arboretum
 Wilson, E. H. America's greatest garden. (S '25)
 Harvest in Poland. Dennis, G. (My '25)
 Haunted houses. Harper, C. G. (Je '25)
 The haven. Collins, D. (N '25)
 Hawaii, the rainbow land. Pope, K. (Je '25)
 Hawaiian Islands
 Pope, K. Hawaii, the rainbow land. (Je '25)
 Description and travel
 Carpenter, F. G. Through the Philippines and Hawaii. (S '25)
 Hay, Ian, pseud. See Beith, J. H. (Je '25)
 Hayes, Sir Bertram Fox
 Hayes, B. F. Hull down. (Ag '25)
 He was a man. Lane, R. (My '25)
 Healing gods of ancient civilizations. Jayne, W. A. (F '26)
 Health and environment. Hill, L. E., and Campbell, A. (O '25)
 Health of the worker. Frankel, L. K., and Bunzel, B. (S '25)
 Heart of Katie O'Doone. Scott, L. (F '26)
 Heart of London. Morton, H. V. (N '25)
 Heart of Salome. Raymond, A. (O '25)
 The heavens. Fabre, J. H. C. (Ag '25)
 Hebrew literature
 Brown, B., ed. Wisdom of the Hebrews. (Ag '25)
 Hein, Otto Louis
 Hein, O. L. Memories of long ago. (O '25)
 Helen. White, E. L. (Ag '25)
 Helen of Troy
 Fiction
 Erskine, J. Private life of Helen of Troy. (Ja '26)
 White, E. L. Helen. (Ag '25)
 Henley's 222 radio circuit designs. Anderson, J. E., and others. (F '26)
 Henry Cabot Lodge. Lawrence, W. (Ag '25)
 Henry Ford—America's Don Quixote. Lochner, L. P. (N '25)
 Henry Montagu Butler. Butler, J. R. M. (D '25)
 Henry Thoreau. Bazalgette, L. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Henschke, Alfred. See Klabund, pseud. (Ja '26)
 Hephaestus. Fournier d'Albe, E. E. (F '26)
 Herbs and apples. Santmyer, H. H. (O '25)
 "Here comes the bride—". Cobb, I. S. (Ag '25)
 Heredity
 Goodrich, E. S. Living organisms. (S '25)
 Jennings, H. S. Prometheus. (D '25)
 Langdon-Davies, J. New age of faith. (D '25)
 Wiggam, A. E. Fruit of the family tree. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Here's Ireland. Speakman, H. (Ja '26)
 Heresy
 Jones, R. M. Church's debt to heretics. (Ja '26)
 Heritage of cotton. Crawford, M. De C. (Ag '25)
 Heritage of Greece and the legacy of Rome. Osborn, E. B. (S '25)
 Hesketh Prichard. Parker, E. (S '25)
 Hesperides. Torrence, R. (Ag, S '25)
 Hidden romance of the New Testament. Robertson, J. A. (F '26)
 Hidden valley. Pier, G. C. (S '25)
 Hidden years. Oxenham, J. (F '26)
 High forfeit. King, B. (N '25)
 High noon. Garstin, C. (Je '25)
 High schools
 Millis, W. A. and H. Teaching of high school subjects. (Ag '25)
 Highland annals. Dargan, O. (N '25)
 Hill fragments. Mason-Manheim, M. (O '25)
 Hippy Buchan. Boileau, E. (Mr '25)
 His wife-in-law. Oemler, M. (My '25)
 Historical development of Christianity. Joseph, O. L. (O '25)
 Historical foundations of the law relating to trademarks. Schecter, F. I. (S '25)
 History
 Barnes, H. E. New history and the social studies. (S '25)
 Historiography
 Barnes, H. E. New history and the social studies. (S '25)
 Philosophy
 Leavenworth, C. S. Lessons of history. (Mr '25)
 History, Ancient
 Kummer, F. A. First days of history. (O '25)
 Vaughan, D. M. Great peoples of the ancient world. (O '25)
 History, Universal
 Coffman, R. Child's story of the human race. (D '25)
 Duruy, V. General history of the world. (F '26)
 History of aeronautics in Great Britain. Hodgson, J. E. (S '25)
 History of agriculture in Europe and America. Gras, N. S. B. (N '25)
 History of agriculture in the northern United States, 1620-1860. Bidwell, P. W., and Falconer, J. I. (F '26)
 History of American idealism. Myers, G. (My '25)
 History of American privateers. Maclay, E. S. (Mr '25)
 History of England. Belloc, H. (D '25)
 History of Greek religion. Nilsson, M. P. (O '25)
 History of Manon Lescaut and the Chevalier des Grieux. Prevost, A. F. (S '25)
 History of orchestration. Carse, A. (N '25)
 History of political theories. Merriam, C. E., and Barnes, H. E., eds. (My '25)
 History of religion in the United States. Rowe, H. K. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 History of sculpture. Chase, G. H., and Post, C. R. (Ap '25)
 History of the American frontier, 1763-1893. Paxson, F. L. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 History of the British people. Hulme, E. M. (My '25)
 History of the foreign policy of the United States. Adams, R. G. (My '25)
 History of the Irish state to 1014. Green, A. S. A. (Ag '25)
 History of the Pharaohs. Weigall, A. E. P. B. (Ja '26)

- History of the public land policies. Hibbard, B. H. (Ap '25)
- History of the telephone in the United Kingdom. Baldwin, F. G. C. (F '26)
- History of the United States. Channing, E. (N '25)
- History of the United States post office to the year 1829. Rich, W. E. (Ap '25)
- History of the University of Oxford. Mallet, C. E. (Mr '25)
- Hold hard! hounds, please! Yoi-over. pseud. (Ag '25)
- Holiday book. Dunton, E. K. (F '26)
- Holiday round. Milne, A. A. (Ja '26)
- Holy alliance
Webster, C. K. Foreign policy of Castlereagh, 1815-1822. (Ja '26)
- Home book of modern verse. Stevenson, B. E., comp. (N '25)
- Home care of the sick. Noyes, C. D. (S '25)
- Home conveniences. Ives, F. W. (Ap '25)
- Home economics
Crane, C. Everyman's house. (Ag '25)
Lutes, D. Home of your own. (Je '25)
- Home of your own. Lutes, D. (Je '25)
- Home sewage disposal. Hardenbergh, W. A. (S '25)
- Homeopathy
Fishbein, M. Medical follies. (N '25)
- Homer
Allen, T. W. Homer. (My '25)
Scott, J. A. Homer and his influence. (F '26)
- Homer and his influence. Scott, J. A. (F '26)
- Honey out of the rock. Deutsch, B. (D '25)
- Hooked rugs and how to make them. Phillips, A. M. L. (Ja '26)
- Hope, Anthony, pseud. See Hawkins, A. H. (F '26)
- Hopi Indians
Crane, L. Indians of the enchanted desert. (N '25)
- Horace (Quintus Horatius Flaccus)
Haight, E. H. Horace and his art of enjoyment. (Ag '25)
- Horace and his art of enjoyment. Haight, E. H. (Ag '25)
- Hosiery
Kneeland, N. Hosiery, knit underwear, and gloves. (Ag '25)
- Hosiery, knit underwear, and gloves. Kneeland, N. (Ag '25)
- Hotels, taverns, etc.
Firebaugh, W. C. Inns of the middle ages. (Ag '25)
- Northend, M. H. We visit old inns. (S '25)
- Houghton, George Clarke
MacAdam, G. Little church around the corner. (My '25)
- Houghton, George Hendric
MacAdam, G. Little church around the corner. (My '25)
- Hounded man. Carco, F. (Ap '25)
- House decoration
Hicks, A. M. Everyday art. (Ap '25)
Lutes, D. Home of your own. (Je '25)
Taylor, L. D. Your home beautiful. (Ja '26)
Vanderwalker, F. N. Interior wall decoration. (S '25)
- House of Menerdue. Benson, A. C. (Je '25)
- House with the green shutters. Brown, G. D. (Ap '25)
- House without a key. Biggers, E. D. (Je '25)
- Household refrigeration. Hull, H. B. (O '25)
- Housing
Bolitho, W., pseud. Cancer of empire. (Je '25)
- How to know textiles. Small, C. P. (Ja '26)
- How to see modern pictures. Pearson, R. M. (Je '25)
- How to stay married. Gibbs, G. F. (Je '25)
- How to tell the fashions from the follies. Duer, C. K. (My '25)
- Howard, John Raymond
Howard, J. R. Remembrance of things past. (Ag '25)
- Howard Pyle. Abbott, C. D. (F '26)
- Howe, Frederic Clemson
Howe, F. C. Confessions of a reformer. (Ja '26)
- Howells, William Dean
Firkins, O. W. William Dean Howells. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Huling's quest. Huston, M. (N '25)
- Hull down. Hayes, B. F. (Ag '25)
- Human nature and the gospel. Phelps, W. L. (Ag '25)
- Human origins. MacCurdy, G. G. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Human shows. Hardy, T. (F '26)
- Human touch. Powell, L. P. (Je '25)
- Hume, David
Hendel, C. W. Studies in the philosophy of David Hume. (S '25)
- Humor
Allen, C. K. Oh. Mr Leacock! (Ag '25)
Benchley, R. C. Pluck and luck. (F '26)
Butler, E. P. Many happy returns of the day! (Je '25)
Cobb, I. S. "Here comes the bride—". (Ag '25)
Cynic's cyclopaedia. (D '25)
Downey, F. Father's first two years. (O '25)
Gay, R. M. The eight forty-five. (Je '25)
Lardner, R. W. What of it? (My '25)
Milne, A. A. Holiday round. (Ja '26)
Priestley, J. B. English comic characters. (D '25)
Tandy, J. R. Crackerbox philosophers in American humor and satire. (S '25)
- Humorists, American
Tandy, J. R. Crackerbox philosophers in American humor and satire. (S '25)
- Huneker, James Gibbons
De Casseres, B. James Gibbons Huneker. (S '25)
- Hungary
Description and travel
Hannay, J. O. Wayfarer in Hungary. (N '25)
- Hunger of the sea. Mannin, E. E. (Mr '25)
- Hunter's moon. Poole, E. (N '25)
- Hunters of ocean depths. Rolt-Wheeler, F. W. (S '25)
- Hunting
Hornaday, W. T. Wild-animal round-up. (F '26)
Robinson, B. W. With shotgun and rifle in North American game fields. (My '25)
- Africa
Curtis, C. P., jr. and R. C. Hunting in Africa east and west. (D '25)
Millaire, J. G. Far away up the Nile. (Ag '25)
- Arctic regions
Nansen, F. Hunting and adventure in the Arctic. (Ap '25)
- British Columbia
Williams, A. B. Game trails in British Columbia. (Ja '26)
- United States
Grinnell, G. B., and Sheldon, C., eds. Hunting and conservation. (S '25)
- Hunting and adventure in the Arctic. Nansen, F. (Ap '25)
- Hunting and conservation. Grinnell, G. B., and Sheldon, C., eds. (S '25)
- Hunting in Africa east and west. Curtis, C. P., jr. and R. C. (D '25)
- Hydroelectric plants
Tripp, G. E. Super-power as an aid to progress. (Ap '25)
- Hygiene
Goldman, R. L. Stay young. (N '25)
Hallock, G. T. Dramatizing child health. (F '26)
Hill, L. E., and Campbell, A. Health and environment. (O '25)
McLaughlin, A. J., and Toby, J. A. Personal hygiene. (S '25)
Sadler, W. S. Essentials of healthful living. (D '25)

- Sadler, W: S: Personality and health. (My '25)
- Tobey, J. A. Quest for health. (S '25)
- Williams, E. H., and Hoag, E. B. Rest and grow strong. (S '25)
- Hygiene, Industrial
- Frankel, L. K., and Bunzel, B. Health of the worker. (S '25)
- Hypatia. Russell, D. W. (S '25)
- I meet my contemporaries. Harden, M. (F '26)
- Ibsen, Henrik
- Weigand, H. J. Modern Ibsen. (N '25)
- Iconoclast, pseud. See Hamilton, M. A. (S '25)
- Idealism
- Brown, R. W. Creative spirit. (My '25)
- Myers, G. History of American idealism. (My '25)
- Otto, F. C. Things and ideals. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Idiot man. Richet, C: R. (F '26)
- Il conte. Conrad, J. (Ag '25)
- Illinois
- History
- Pease, T. C. Story of Illinois. (Ja '26)
- Illuminating engineering. Cady, F. E., and Dates, H: B., eds. (S '25)
- Illustration in advertising. Larned, W. L. (S '25)
- Illustration of books
- Pennell, J. Adventures of an illustrator. (Ja '26)
- Imaginary wars and battles
- Bywater, H. C. Great Pacific war. (O '25)
- Imbecility
- Crookshank, F. G. Mongol in our midst. (Ap '25)
- Immanuel Kant. (Ja '26)
- Immanuel Kant. Wilm, E. C., ed. (N '25)
- Immigrants in the United States
- Bercovici, K. On new shores. (N '25)
- Speranza, C. G: Race or nation. (D '25)
- Immigration
- Abbott, E., comp. Immigration. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- MacLean, A. M. Modern immigration. (Ja '26)
- Safford, M. V: Immigration problems. (Ag '25)
- Immigration problems. Safford, M. V: (Ag '25)
- Immortal girl. Ruck, B. (N '25)
- Immortality
- Tsanoff, R. A. Problem of immortality. (S '25)
- Imperfect impostor. Venner, N. (D '25)
- Imperial federation
- MacInnes, C: M. British commonwealth and its unsolved problems. (N '25)
- Imperialism
- Bodelsen, C. A. Studies in mid-Victorian imperialism. (O '25)
- Nearing, S., and Freeman, J. Dollar diplomacy. (F '26)
- Impressions of an average jurymen. Sutcliffe, R. S. (Je '25)
- In a strange land. Korolenko, V. G. (Ag '25)
- In an unknown land. Gann, T: W: F. (Mr '25)
- In His own image. Rolfe, F: (Ag '25)
- In Mexican waters. Banning, G: H. (S '25)
- In my tower. Paget, W. E. H. (F '26)
- In our time. Hemingway, E. (D '25)
- In pulpit and parish. Burton, N. J. (Ag '25)
- In the days of my father. General Grant. Grant, J. R., and Granger, H: F. (D '25)
- In the sun with a passport. Trowbridge, W: R. H. (D '25)
- In tidewater Virginia. Jett, D. C. (S '25)
- In Zanzibar. Paine, R. D. (Ag '25)
- Incas
- Hanstein, O. von. World of the Incas. (O '25)
- Income
- Berridge, W: A., and others. Purchasing power of the consumer. (D '25)
- Indestructible union. McDougall, W: (My '25)
- Index to dramatic readings. Silk, A. K., and Fanning, C. E., comps. (Mr '25)
- Indexing
- Warren, I., and others. Filing and indexing with business procedure. (Ag '25)
- India
- Description and travel
- Carpenter, F. G: From Bangkok to Bombay. (Mr '25)
- Fay, E. Original letters from India (1779-1815). (S '25)
- Seton, G. Yes, Lady Saheb. (D '25)
- Economic conditions
- Pillai, P. P. Economic conditions in India. (O '25)
- History
- Dodwell, H: Sketch of the history of India from 1858 to 1918. (S '25)
- Reawakening of the Orient. (O '25)
- Politics and government
- Banerjee, S. Nation in making. (N '25)
- Carthill, A. Lost dominion. (Je '25)
- Dodwell, H: Sketch of the history of India from 1858 to 1918. (S '25)
- Dutcher, G: M. Political awakening of the East. (S '25)
- MacInnes, C: M. British commonwealth and its unsolved problems. (N '25)
- Macnicol, N. Making of modern India. (My '25)
- Religion
- Macnicol, N. Making of modern India. (My '25)
- Social conditions
- Macnicol, N. Making of modern India. (My '25)
- Social life and customs
- Sauter, J. A. Among the Brahmins and Pariahs. (My '25)
- Seton, G. Yes, Lady Saheb. (D '25)
- Indian canoe. Smith, R. D. (S '25)
- Indians of Central America
- Brown, L. M. A. Unknown tribes. (Mr '25)
- Indians of North America
- Government relations
- Crane, L. Indians of the enchanted desert. (N '25)
- Legends
- Alexander, H. B. Manito masks. (N '25)
- Pottery
- Guthe, C. E. Pueblo pottery making. (Ag '25)
- Wars
- Wheeler, H. W. Buffalo days. (Ja '26)
- Poetry
- Neihardt, J: G. Song of the Indian wars. (N '25)
- Canada
- Reed, C: B. Four way lodge. (Je '25)
- Indians of the enchanted desert. Crane, L. (N '25)
- Industrial arts
- Study and teaching
- Vaughn, S: J., and Mays, A. B. Content and methods of the industrial arts. (O '25)
- Industrial coal. American engineering council. (S '25)
- Industrial electricity. Timble, W: H. (Ap '25)
- Industrial management
- Harrison, H. D. Industrial psychology and the production of wealth. (My '25)
- Industrial ownership. Brookings, R. S. (My '25)
- Industrial poisons in the United States. Hamilton, A. (D '25)
- Industrial psychology and the production of wealth. Harrison, H. D. (My '25)

Industrial relations

- Fitch, J: A. Causes of industrial unrest. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Hoopingarner, D. L. Labor relations in industry. (F '26)

Industrial research

- Farnham, D. T., and others. Profitable science in industry. (Je '25)

Industrial revolution

- Bowden, W. Industrial society in England towards the end of the eighteenth century. (Ag '25)

Industrial society in England towards the end of the eighteenth century.

- Bowden, W. (Ag '25)

Industry

- Brookings, R. S. Industrial ownership. (My '25)
 Burns, C. D. Industry and civilization. (Ag '25)

History

- Hayward, W: R., and Johnson, G. W. Story of man's work. (N '25)

Industry and civilization.

- Burns, C. D. (Ag '25)

Inefficiency, Intellectual

- Richet, C: R. Idiot man. (F '26)

InfantsCare and hygiene

- Baker, S. J. Child hygiene. (Je '25)

Inferior criminal courts act of the city of New York.

- Cobb, W: B., ed. (D '25)

The informer.

- O'Flaherty, L. (D '25)

Inheritance tax

- Rignano, E. Social significance of the inheritance tax. (D '25)

Initiation.

- Shively, G. (Ap '25)

Inner circle.

- Mayne, E. C. (Ag '25)

Inns of the middle ages.

- Firebaugh, W. C. (Ag '25)

Inorganic physical chemistry.

- Cartledge, G. H. (F '26)

InsanityJurisprudence

- Glueck, S. S. Mental disorder and the criminal law. (D '25)

Insects

- Cheesman, L. E. Everyday doings of insects. (S '25)

- Imms, A. D. General textbook of entomology. (Ja '26)

Insects, Injurious and beneficial

- Felt, E. P. Manual of tree and shrub insects. (Ag '25)

Inside passage to Alaska, 1792-1920.

- Woollen, W: W. (Je '25)

Inside the Moscow art theatre.

- Sayler, O. M. (F '26)

Instinct

- Bernard, L. L. Instinct. (Ap '25)

Instinct, intelligence and character.

- Thomson, G. H. (S '25)

Instrumentation and orchestration

- Carse, A. History of orchestration. (N '25)

Insurance, Employers' liability

- Michelbacher, G. F., and Nial, T: M. Workmen's compensation insurance. (S '25)

Insurance, Unemployment

- Lewisohn, S. A., and others. Can business prevent unemployment? (F '26)

- Morley, F. Unemployment relief in Great Britain. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Intellect

- Lee, V., pseud. Proteus. (O '25)

Interest and usury

- Ryan, F. W. Usury and usury laws. (F '26)

- Wilson, T: Discourse upon usury (1572). (My '25)

Interior wall decoration.

- Vanderwalker, F. N. (S '25)

International cooperation

- Page, K. American peace policy. (F '26)

International economic policies.

- Culbertson, W: S. (S '25)

International labor office

- Johnston, G: A. International social progress. (Ag '25)

International ladies' garment workers' union

- Levine, L: Women's garment workers. (Mr '25)

International law and relations

- Birkenhead, F: E. S., and others. Approaches to world problems. (Ap '25)

- Culbertson, W: S. International economic policies. (S '25)

- Kellor, F. A., and Hatvany, A. Security against war. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

- McDougall, W: Ethics and some modern world problems. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

- Miller, H. A. Races, nations and classes. (Je '25)

- Moon, P. T: Syllabus on international relations. (O '25)

- Rankin, E. S. Dominion of sea and air. (Mr '25)

- Root, E. Men and policies. (My '25)

- Toynbee, A. J. Survey of international affairs, 1920-1923. (D '25)

- Toynbee, A. J. World after the Peace conference. (D '25)

International social progress.

- Johnston, G: A. (Ag '25)

International trade finance.

- Edwards, G: W. (Ag '25)

Internationalism

- Lobinger, J: L. Projects in world-friendship. (N '25)

Interpretation of topographic and geologic maps.

- Dake, C: L., and Brown, J: S. (F '26)

Introducing London.

- Lucas, E: V. (N '25)

Introduction to agricultural economics.

- Gray, L: C. (My '25)

Introduction to dramatic theory.

- Nicoll, A. (O '25)

Introduction to modern political theory.

- Joad, C. E. M. (Ap '25)

Introduction to organic chemistry.

- Lowy, A., and Harrow, B: (Ag '25)

Introduction to philosophy.

- Brightman, E. S. (Ag '25)

Introduction to philosophy.

- Ryan, J. H. (Je '25)

Introduction to physical geology.

- Miller, W: J. (Ap '25)

Introduction to public school finance.

- Pittenger, B: F. (F '26)

Introduction to sociology and social problems.

- Beach, W. G. (Ja '26)

Introduction to Spanish literature.

- Northup, G: T. (F '26)

Introduction to the economics of air transportation.

- Kennedy, T: H. (My '25)

Introduction to the practice of civil engineering.

- Mann, E. E. (S '25)

Introduction to the study of education and to teaching.

- Cubberley, E. P. (Ja '26)

Invention of printing in China.

- Carter, T: F. (O '25)

Investments

- Smith, E. L. Common stocks as long term investments. (My '25)

Invisible wounds.

- Palmer, F: (Je '25)

Ions

- Michaelis, L. Effects of ions in colloidal systems. (D '25)

IrelandBiography

- Orpen, W: Stories of old Ireland & myself. (Ag '25)

Description and travel

- Nutting, W. Ireland beautiful. (F '26)

- Speakman, H. Here's Ireland. (Ja '26)

History

- Green, A. S. A. History of the Irish state to 1014. (Ag '25)

- Gwynn, S. Ireland. (Je '25)

- Ireland, Gwynn, S. (Je '25)

- Ireland beautiful. Nutting, W. (F '26)

Irish literature

History and criticism

O'Connor, N. J. Changing Ireland. (Ap '25)

Irish poetry

Collections

Robinson, L., ed. Golden treasury of Irish verse. (Je '25)

Iron, Ralph, pseud. See Schreiner, O. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Iron chalice. Cohen, O. R. (Ja '26)

Irving, Washington

Hellman, G. S. Washington Irving, esquire. (Je '25)

Is it good English? Whitten, W. (N '25)

Is unemployment inevitable? (My '25)

Island of the great mother. Hauptmann, G. J. R. (Ja '26)

Island of the mighty. Mabinogion. (Ag '25)

Isles of fear. Mayo, K. (My '25)

Isles of wisdom. Moszkowski, A. (O '25)

Israel. Lewisohn, L. (Ja '26)

It happened in Rome. Clarke, I. C. (Ja '26)

It is a strange house. Burnet, D. (My '25)

Italian town and country life. Coote, C. R. (D '25)

Italy

Description and travel

Broadbent, E. L. Under the Italian Alps. (D '25)

Goldring, D. Gone abroad. (S '25)

Huxley, A. L. Along the road. (N '25)

Laughlin, C. E. So you're going to Italy. (Ag '25)

Lee, V., pseud. Golden keys. (S '25)

Monahan, M. Road to Paris. (Je '25)

Sitwell, O. Discursions on travel, art and life. (O '25)

Politics and government

Child, R. W. Diplomat looks at Europe. (D '25)

Social life and customs

Coote, C. R. Italian town and country life. (D '25)

J. M. Barrie. Braybrooke, P. (Je '25)

J. Ramsay MacDonald. Hamilton, M. A. (S '25)

Jacinto Benavente. Starkie, W. (Je '25)

Jack Miner and the birds. Miner, J. (F '26)

Jacobi, Mary (Putnam) (Mrs Abraham Jacobi)

Jacobi, M. Life and letters. (Je '25)

Jacqueline. (Ag '25)

Jade god. Sullivan, A. (Mr '25)

James, Henry

Brooks, Van W. Pilgrimage of Henry James. (My '25)

James Branch Cabell. Van Doren, C. C. (My '25)

James Gibbons Huneker. De Casseres, B. (S '25)

Japan

King-Hall, S. Western civilization and the Far East. (Ap '25)

Army

Kennedy, M. D. Military side of Japanese life. (N '25)

Description and travel

Buxton, L. H. D. Eastern road. (Mr, My '25)

Carpenter, F. G. Japan and Korea. (D '25)

Hall, T. Japan in silhouette. (F '26)

Huntington, E. West of the Pacific. (D '25)

Politics and government

Dutcher, G. M. Political awakening of the East. (S '25)

Reawakening of the Orient. (O '25)

Social life and customs

Sugimoto, E. I. Daughter of the Samurai. (F '26)

Japan and Korea. Carpenter, F. G. (D '25)

Japan in silhouette. Hall, T. (F '26)

Japanese literature

Collections

Seitz, D. C. Monogatari. (Ap '25)

Jeanne d'Arc, Saint

Paine, A. B. Joan of Arc, maid of France. (Ja '26)

Jefferson, Thomas

Adams, J., and Jefferson, T. Correspondence, 1812-1826. (Ja '26)

Bowers, C. G. Jefferson and Hamilton. (Ja '26)

Wilstach, P. Jefferson and Monticello. (My '25)

Jefferson and Hamilton. Bowers, C. G. (Ja '26)

Jefferson and Monticello. Wilstach, P. (My '25)

Jerusalem

Tharaud, J. and J. Next year in Jerusalem. (S '25)

Jesus Christ

Austin, M. A. small town man. (My '25)

Barton, B. Man nobody knows. (Ag '25)

Jacobs, J. Jesus as others saw him. (Ag '25)

Klausner, J. Jesus of Nazareth. (Ja '26)

Moffatt, J. Everyman's life of Jesus. (My '25)

Phelps, W. L. Human nature and the gospel. (Ag '25)

Drama

Marquis, D. Dark hours. (Mr '25)

Masefield, J. Trial of Jesus. (D '25)

Fiction

Hidden years. Oxenham, J. (F '26)

Passion

Miró Ferrer, G. Figures of the passion of our Lord. (Ap '25)

Teaching

MacLeod, A. B. Mental hygiene as taught by Jesus. (Ag '25)

Jesus as others saw him. Jacobs, J. (Ag '25)

Jesus of Nazareth. Klausner, J. (Ja '26)

Jews

Friedman, E. M. Survival or extinction. (My '25)

Lewisohn, L. Israel. (Ja '26)

Newman, H., ed. The real Jew. (D '25)

Roth, S. Now and forever. (S '25)

Civilization

Brown, B., ed. Wisdom of the Hebrews. (Ag '25)

History

Browne, L. Stranger than fiction. (Je '25)

Joan of Arc, maid of France. Paine, A. B. (Ja '26)

Johanna Spyri's childhood. Ulrich, A. (D '25)

John A. Brashear. Brashear, J. A. (My '25)

John Burroughs and Ludella Peck. Burroughs, J., and Peck, L. L. (N '25)

John Donne. Fausset, H. I. A. (Ap '25)

John Keats. Lowell, A. (Mr, My '25)

John L. Sullivan. Dibble, R. F. (My '25)

John Macnab. Buchan, J. (N '25)

John S. Sargent. Downes, W. H. (Ja '26)

John, Viscount Morley. Morgan, J. H. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Johnson, Samuel

Christie, O. F., ed. Johnson the essayist. (My '25)

Johnson the essayist. Christie, O. F., ed. (My '25)

Joline. Comstock, H. T. (F '26)

Jonah, the prophet

Fiction

Nathan, R. Jonah. (Mr '25)

Jonah. Nathan, R. (Mr '25)

Jopling-Rowe, Louise (Goode) (Mrs George W. Rowe)

Jopling-Rowe, L. Twenty years of my life, 1867-1887. (Ja '26)

Joséphine, empress consort of Napoléon I

Forester, C. S. Josephine, Napoleon's empress. (N '25)

Geer, W. Napoleon and Josephine. (N '25)

- Josephine, Napoleon's empress. Forester, C. S. (N '25)
- Journal of a Jewish traveller. Cohen, I. (S '25)
- Journal of Louis Hémon. Hémon, L.: (Mr '25)
- Journal of Nicholas Cresswell, 1774-1777. Cresswell, N.: (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Journalism
 Best news stories of 1924. (O '25)
 Flint, L. N. Conscience of the newspaper. (S '25)
 Harrington, H. F. Chats on feature writing. (S '25)
 McKee, M. A. Forty years in newspaperdom. (Ap '25)
 Mulsby, W. S. Getting the news. (Mr '25)
 Spencer, M. L. Editorial writing. (S '25)
- Judgment of Paris. Allen, C. K. (Mr '25)
- Julia. Hutten zum Stolzenberg, B. (Je '25)
- Jumel, Stephen
 Minnigerode, M. Lives and times. (My '25)
- Jungle born. Eyton, J. S. (My '25)
- Jungle days. Beebe, W.: (N '25)
- Jungle man and his animals. Wells, C. (Ja '26)
- Junior high schools
 Pechstein, L. A., and McGregor, A. L. Psychology of the junior high school pupil. (My '25)
- Junior sub, pseud. See Beith, J.: H. (Je '25)
- Jury
 Sutcliffe, R. S. Impressions of an average jurymen. (Je '25)
- Justice, Administration of
 Train, A. C. On the trail of the bad men. (S '25)
- Juvenile courts
 Child, the clinic and the court. (D '25)
 Van Waters, M. Youth in conflict. (Ag '25)
- Juvenile delinquency
 Burt, C. L. Young delinquent. (F '26)
 Child the clinic and the court. (D '25)
 Lindsey, B. B., and Evans, W. Revolt of modern youth. (F '26)
 Van Waters, M. Youth in conflict. (Ag '25)
- Kak. Stefánsson, V., and Irwin, V. M. (Ap '25)
- Kant, Immanuel
 Immanuel Kant. (Ja '26)
 Wilm, E. C., ed. Immanuel Kant. (N '25)
- Károlyi, Michael, count
 Károlyi, M. Fighting the world. (Je '25)
- Kate Douglas Wiggin as her sister knew her. Smith, N. A. (D '25)
- Keats, John
 Lowell, A. John Keats. (Mr, My '25)
 Murry, J. M. Keats and Shakespeare. (F '26)
 Keats and Shakespeare. Murry, J. M. (F '26)
 Keeper of the bees. Porter, G. (O '25)
- Keith, Marian, pseud. See MacGregor, M. E. (Ap '25)
- Kelly, Samuel
 Kelly, S.: Samuel Kelly, an eighteenth century seaman. (D '25)
- Kelmscott press
 Sparling, H.: H. Kelmscott press and William Morris, master-craftsman. (Mr '25)
- Kelmscott press and William Morris, master-craftsman. Sparling, H.: H. (Mr '25)
- Kelsey's rural guide. Kelsey, D.: S. (Je '25)
- The Kenworthys. Wilson, M. (O '25)
- Kenya colony and protectorate
 Orde-Browne, G. St J: Vanishing tribes of Kenya. (O '25)
- Kept. Waugh, A. (S '25)
- Kerak
 Erskine, B. Vanished cities of Arabia. (N '25)
- Keys to the city. Davis, E. H. (Mr, My '25)
- Kindred. Smith, A. (O '25)
- King Edward VII. Lee, S. (Ap, Je '25)
- King in the making. Parkhurst, G. (Ag '25)
- Kipling, Rudyard
 Hopkins, R. T. Kipling country. (My '25)
 Kipling country. Hopkins, R. T. (My '25)
- Klabund, pseud. See Henschke, A. (Ja '26)
- Knight at arms. Bailey, H. C. (S '25)
- Knit goods
 Kneeland, N. Hosiery, knit underwear, and gloves. (Ag '25)
- Knocking about. Peirce, A. B. (Ap '25)
- Knowledge of God in Johannine thought. Ely, M. R. (S '25)
- Knox, Ronald Arbruthnott
 Lunn, A. H.: M. Roman converts. (F '26)
- Kohut, Mrs Rebekah (Bettelheim)
 Kohut, R. My portion. (Je '25)
- Kongo, Belgian
 Norden, H. Fresh tracks in the Belgian Congo. (O '25)
- Korea
 Description and travel
 Carpenter, F. G.: Japan and Korea. (D '25)
- Krakatit. Capek, K. (Ja '26)
- Kreymborg, Alfred
 Kreymborg, A. Troubadour. (My '25)
- Kunala. Ferenczy, A. (N '25)
- Kuyumjian, Dikran. See Arlen, M., pseud. (Ag '25)
- Labor and capital
 Baldwin, S. Peace and goodwill in industry. (S '25)
 Brookings, R. S. Industrial ownership. (My '25)
 Carver, T. N. Present economic revolution in the United States. (N '25)
- Labor and laboring classes
 Blum, S. Labor economics. (N '25)
 Furniss, E. S., and Guild, L. R. Labor problems. (Ja '26)
 Gulick, C. A. Labor policy of the United States steel corporation. (Ja '26)
 Hoopingarner, D. L. Labor relations in industry. (F '26)
- Great Britain
 Morley, F. Unemployment relief in Great Britain. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- London
 George, M. D. London life in the eighteenth century. (Ag '25)
- United States
 Atkins, W. E., and Laswell, H. D. Labor attitudes and problems. (My '25)
 Babson, R. W. Recent labor progress. (Ag '25)
 Fitch, J.: A. Causes of industrial unrest. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Labor attitudes and problems. Atkins, W. E., and Laswell, H. D. (My '25)
- Labor economics. Blum, S. (N '25)
- Labor laws and legislation
 Blum, S. Labor economics. (N '25)
 Johnston, G. A. International social progress. (Ag '25)
- Labor party
Great Britain
 Hamilton, M. A. J. Ramsay MacDonald. (S '25)
 Tawney, R. H.: British labor movement. (S '25)
 Trotzky, L., pseud. Whither England? (N '25)
- Labor policy of the United States steel corporation. Gulick, C. A. (Ja '26)
- Labor problems. Furniss, E. S., and Guild, L. R. (Ja '26)
- Labor relations in industry. Hoopingarner, D. L. (F '26)
- Laboratory manual of experiments in physics. Ingersoll, L. R. (S '25)
- Ladders through the blue. Hagedorn, H. (F '26)
- Ladies' home journal one-act plays. (N '25)
- Ladies of Lyndon. Kennedy, M. (O '25)

- Lady Anne Barnard at the Cape of Good Hope.
Fairbridge, D. (My '25)
- Lady Mary Wortley Montagu. Benjamin, L: S. (N '25)
- Lady of New Orleans. MacDonald, E. L. (O '25)
- Lake of the Great Dismal. Stansbury, C. F: (My '25)
- Lamb, Charles
Wherry, G. E.; ed. Cambridge and Charles Lamb. (N '25)
- Drama
- Brown, A. Charles Lamb. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Lancashire, England
Moffit, L: W. England on the eve of the industrial revolution. (N '25)
- The landmark. Allen, J. L. (F '26)
- Landscape
Henderson, J. Geology in its relation to landscape. (N '25)
- Landscape drawing
Blake, V. Way to sketch. (D '25)
- Landscape painting
Hind, C: L: Landscape painting from Giotto to the present day. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Landscape painting from Giotto to the present day. Hind, C: L: (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Langtry, Lillie (Lady de Bathe)
Langtry, L. Days I knew. (N '25)
- Language. Vendryes, J. (Je '25)
- Language and languages
Vendryes, J. Language. (Je '25)
- Language of advertising. Opdycke, J: B. (N '25)
- La Salle, Robert Cavellier, sieur de
- Fiction
- Parker, G. Power and the glory. (N '25)
- Last cruise of the Shanghai. Wells, F: De W. (My '25)
- Last fifty years in New York. Brown, H: C. (Ja '26)
- Last Hope ranch. Seltzer, C: A. (O '25)
- Last of a race. Mercy-Argenteau, R. F. A. C. E. M. (Je '25)
- Last year's nest. Terrell, D. & B. (Je '25)
- Last years of Rodin. Tirel, M. (D '25)
- Later correspondence of Lord John Russell, 1840-1878. Russell, J: R. (Ja '26)
- Laughing Anne; One day more. Conrad, J. (Je '25)
- Laurie, David
Laurie, D: Reminiscences of a fiddle dealer. (My '25)
- Lava lane. Crane, N. C. R. (D '25)
- Law
Pound, R. Law and morals. (F '26)
- Addresses, essays, lectures
- Root, E. Men and policies. (My '25)
- Law and morals. Pound, R. (F '26)
- Lawn tennis. Lenglen, S. (D '25)
- Laxdaela saga. (Je '25)
- Lazarus. Béraud, H. (My '25)
- Leadership
Maurols, A. Captains and kings. (Ag '25)
- League of nations
Aubert, L: Reconstruction of Europe. (D '25)
- Clarke, J: H. America and world peace. (N '25)
- High, S. Europe turns the corner. (N '25)
- Kellor, F. A., and Hatvany, A. Security against war. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Lodge, H: C. Senate and the League of nations. (D '25)
- Miller, D: H. Geneva protocol. (O '25)
- Newfang, O. Road to world peace. (My '25)
- Leaves from a Russian diary. Sorokin, P. A. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Leaves from a war diary. Harbord, J. G. (N '25)
- Least known America. Barlett, A. E. (N '25)
- Lectures to living authors. Lacon, pseud. (S '25)
- Lee, Robert Edward
Maurice, F: B. Robert E. Lee. (Je '25)
- Legends
Firestone, C. B. Coasts of illusion. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Legends, American
Shephard, E. Paul Bunyan. (Je '25)
- Stevens, J. Paul Bunyan. (My '25)
- Lenin, Nikolai, pseud. (Vladimir Ilich Ulyanov)
Eastman, M. F. Since Lenin died. (Ag '25)
- Trotsky, L., pseud. Lenin. (Ag '25)
- Leon, Luis Ponce de
Bell, A. F. G. Luis de Leon. (S '25)
- Leon Trotsky. Eastman, M. F. (Ja '26)
- Lessons of history. Leavenworth, C: S: (Mr '25)
- Letter-writing
Opdycke, J: B., ed. Literature of letters. (N '25)
- Letters
Opdycke, J: B., ed. Literature of letters. (N '25)
- Letters. Boswell, J. (Ap '25)
- Letters. Mitford, M. R. (O '25)
- Letters from America, 1776-1779. Pettengill, R. W., tr. (Ag '25)
- Letters from England. Capek, K. (F '26)
- Letters of Madame. Orleans E. C. (My '25)
- Letters of Olive Schreiner. Schreiner, O. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Letters on the American Revolution, 1774-1776. Willard, M., ed. (Je '25)
- Letters till now unpublished. Poe, E. A. (N '25)
- Letters to a lady in the country. Sherman, S. P. (Ja '26)
- Letters to Karl and Luise Kautsky from 1896 to 1918. Luxemburg, R. (S '25)
- Letters to Katie. Burne-Jones, E: C. (F '26)
- Letters to Olga Leonardovna Knipper. Chekhov, A. P. (Ja '26)
- Lewis, Mrs Rosa (Ovenden)
Lewis, R. Queen of cooks—and some kings. (S '25)
- Lewis and Irene. Morand, P. (O '25)
- Lewis Miller. Hendrick, E. (S '25)
- Lexington, Battle of, 1775
French, A. Day of Concord and Lexington. (My '25)
- Murdock, H. Nineteenth of April, 1775. (My '25)
- Liberty
Hadley, A. T. Conflict between liberty and equality. (Ap '25)
- Haynes, E. S. P. Enemies of liberty. (My '25)
- Libraries
- Directories
- Wilson, M., comp. Special libraries directory. (Ja '26)
- Libraries, Children's
Langstaff, J: B. David Copperfield's library. (My '25)
- Libraries, County
Long, H. C. County library service. (N '25)
- Libraries, Special
Wilson, M., comp. Special libraries directory. (Ja '26)
- Library and its contents. Sawyer, H. P., ed. (F '26)
- Library science
Sawyer, H. P., ed. Library and its contents. (F '26)
- Libyan desert
Hassanein, A. M. Lost oases. (Je '25)
- King, W. J. H. Mysteries of the Libyan desert. (Je '25)
- Life
Russell, B. A. W. What I believe. (Je, O '25)
- White, S. E. Credo. (Ag '25)
- Life. Maxwell, W: B. (F '26)
- Life and art. Hardy, T. (My '25)
- Life and Erica. Frankau, G. (Ap '25)
- Life and letters. Chekhov, A. P. (N '25)
- Life and letters. Jacobi, M. (Je '25)
- Life and letters of James Abram Garfield. Smith, T. C. (D '25)
- Life and letters of John Burroughs. Barrus, C. (F '26)

Life and letters of John Muir. Badè, W: F: (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Life and letters of W. T. Stead. Whyte, F: (F '26)

Life and letters of Walter H. Page. Hendrick, B. J. (D '25)

Life and memoirs. Molé, L. M. (D '25)

Life begins to-morrow. Verona, G. da. (O '25)

Life in mediaeval France. Evans, J. (D '25)

Life of Abraham Lincoln. Barton, W: E. (My '25)

Life of Elbert H. Gary. Turbell, I. M. (Ja '26)

Life of Henri Brulard. Beyle, M. H. (Je '25)

Life of James Elroy Flecker. Hodgson, G. (Je '25)

Life of Lord Wolseley. Maurice, F:, and Arthur, G: C. A. (Mr '25)

Life of Sir William Osler. Cushing, H. W. (Ag '25)

Life of the Reverend Richard Baxter, 1615-1691. Powicke, F: J. (Ag '25)

Life of Thomas Hardy. Brennecke, E. (Ag '25)

Life of William Cobbett. Cole, G: D. H. (My '25)

Life's little day. Stirling, A. M. W. (Ap '25)

Life's little pitfalls. Royden, A. M. (O '25)

Lifetime with Mark Twain. Lawton, M. (Ja '26)

Lifting mist. Harrison, A. (My '25)

Lighting
 Cady, F. E., and Dates, H: B., eds. Illuminating engineering. (S '25)

Clark, J. H. Lighting in relation to public health. (S '25)

Lighting in relation to public health. Clark, J. H. (S '25)

Like summer's cloud. Brooks, C: S. (My '25)

Limericks
 Reed, L., ed. Complete limerick book. (Je '25)

Lincoln, Abraham
 Barton, W: E. Life of Abraham Lincoln. (My '25)

Fiction

Bachelor, I. A. Father Abraham. (Mr '25)

Morrow, H. Lost speech of Abraham Lincoln. (Ag '25)

Lion tamer. Robb, C. E. (My '25)

Liquids
 Bragg, W: H: Concerning the nature of things. (My '25)

Liquor laws
 Beman, L. T., comp. Selected articles on prohibition. (Je '25)

List of music for plays and pageants. Holt, R. (Ag '25)

Lister, Sir Joseph
 Cheyne, W: W. Lister and his achievement. (O '25)

Lister and his achievement. Cheyne, W: W. (O '25)

Literary criticism
 Calverton, V. F. Newer spirit. (Je '25)

Richards, I. A. Principles of literary criticism. (My '25)

Literary lanes and other byways. Holliday, R. C. (D '25)

Literature
 Rosenfeld, P. Men seen. (Ag '25)

Sinclair, U. B. Mammonart. (My '25)

Sprau, G: Meaning of literature. (O '25)

Collections

Adams, F. P., and others, comps. Book of diversion. (Ag '25)

Mitchell, E. V., ed. Steamer book. (Ag '25)

History and criticism

Boyd, E. A: Studies from ten literatures. (My, Je '25)

Gosse, E. W: Silhouettes. (D '25)

Jusserand, J. A. A. J. School for ambassadors. (S '25)

Macy, J: Story of the world's literature. (D '25)

Murry, J: M. Pencillings. (Ja '26)

Woolf, V. Common reader. (Ag '25)

Literature, Modern

Addresses, essays, lectures

Pattee, F. L: Tradition and jazz. (My '25)

Literature and revolution. Trotzky, L., pseud. (Je '25)

Literature of letters. Opdycke, J: B., ed. (N '25)

Literature of the middle western frontier. Rusk, R. L. (N '25)

Literature of the New Testament. Purinton, H. R. and C. E. (N '25)

Little chronicle of Magdalena Bach. Meynell, E. H. (D '25)

Little church around the corner. MacAdam, G: (My '25)

Little dark man. Poole E. (Je '25)

Little garden for little money. Brewster, K. L. (Ap '25)

Little girl who curtsied. Baker, M. (Ja '26)

Little Great Lady. Campbell, H. (Ja '26)

The Little Karoo. Smith, P. (My '25)

Little Mexican. Eng title of Young Archimedes. Huxley, A. L. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Little novels of Sicily. Verga, G. (My '25)

Little ships. Norris, K. (O '25)

Little wooden doll. Bianco, M. (D '25)

Little world. Benson, S. (N '25)

Littlest lover. Ayres, R. M. (S '25)

Lives and times. Minnigerode, M. (My '25)

Living forest. Heming, A. H: H. (D '25)

Living organisms. Goodrich, E. S. (S '25)

Local government
 Mott, R. L. Materials illustrative of American government. (F '26)

Locating the iron trail. Gillette, E: (S '25)

Lodge, Henry Cabot
 Lawrence, W, Henry Cabot Lodge. (Ag '25)

Roosevelt, T., and Lodge, H: C. Selections from the correspondence of Theodore Roosevelt and Henry Cabot Lodge, 1884-1918. (My '25)

Log cabins
 Brimmer, F. E. Camps, log cabins, lodges and clubhouses. (S '25)

Lombardy
 Quigley, H. Lombardy, Tyrol and the Trentino. (N '25)

Lombardy, Tyrol and the Trentino. Quigley, H. (N '25)

London
 Chatfield-Taylor, H. C. Cities of many men. (D '25)

Morton, H. V. Heart of London. (N '25)

Amusements

Chancellor, E. B. Pleasure haunts of London during four centuries. (F '26)

Description

Bone, J. London perambulator. (Ja '26)

Chancellor, E. B. Pleasure haunts of London during four centuries. (F '26)

Harper, C: G: London, yesterday, today and tomorrow. (N '25)

Lucas, E: V. Introducing London. (N '25)

Stapleton, A. London alleys, byways and courts. (My '25)

Docks

Smith, C. F. Ship alley. (Ap '25)

Historic houses, etc.

Stapleton, A. London alleys, byways and courts. (My '25)

History

Pendrill, C: London life in the fourteenth century. (D '25)

Hotels, taverns, etc.

Wagner, L. London inns and taverns. (Ag '25)

Social conditions

George, M. D. London life in the eighteenth Century. (Ag '25)

Social life and customs

- Hawkes, C. P. London comedy. (N '25)
 Pendrill, C. London life in the fourteenth century. (D '25)
 Wagner, L. London inns and taverns. (Ag '25)
 London alleys, byways and courts. Stapleton, A. (My '25)
 London book window. Milne, J. (My '25)
 London comedy. Hawkes, C. P. (N '25)
 London inns and taverns. Wagner, L. (Ag '25)
 London life in the eighteenth century. George, M. D. (Ag '25)
 London life in the fourteenth century. Pendrill, C. (D '25)
 London perambulator. Bone, J. (Ja '26)
 London Times
 Kitchen, F. H. London "Times" under the management of Moberly Bell. (My '25)
 London "Times" under the management of Moberly Bell. Kitchen, F. H. (My '25)
 London, yesterday, today and tomorrow. Harper, C. G. (N '25)
 Londonderry, Robert Stewart, 2d marquis of Webster, C. K. Foreign policy of Castlereagh, 1815-1822. (Ja '26)
 Long green gaze. Fuller, V., pseud. (Ap '25)
 Lord Minto. Buchan, J. (My '25)
 Lord Timothy Dexter. Marquand, J. P. (N '25)
 Lords of Acadia. Chapman, H. J. (Ag '25)
 Lorenzo the magnificent. Coolidge, D. (S '25)
 Loring, Andrew, pseud. See Lathrop, L. A. (S '25)
 Loring mystery. Farnoll J. (Ap, Je '25)
 Lost dominion. Carthill, A. (Je '25)
 Lost gospel. Train, A. C. (D '25)
 Lost oases. Hassanein, A. M. (Je '25)
 Lost speech of Abraham Lincoln. Morrow, H. (Ag '25)
 Loudon from Laramie. Ames, J. B. (Ap '25)
 Love. Arnim, M. A. (My '25)
 Love complex. Dixon, T. (S '25)
 Love of Monsieur. Gibbs, G. F. (Mr '25)
 Love rack. Roberts, C. E. M. (D '25)
 Lovelace, Richard
 Hartmann, G. H. Cavalier spirit, and its influence on the life and work of Richard Lovelace. (F '26)
 Lover of the land. Niven, F. J. (S '25)
 Low, Seth
 Low, B. R. C. Seth Low. (Ag '25)
 Low road. Holt, I. (My '25)
 Lucienne. Romans, J., pseud. (My '25)
 Lucky in love. Ruck, B. (Ap '25)
 Luis de Leon. Bell, A. F. G. (S '25)
 Lumbermen
 Legends
 Shephard, E. Paul Bunyan. (Je '25)
 Stevens, J. Paul Bunyan. (My '25)
 Lundy (Island)
 Loyd, L. R. W., comp. Lundy. (S '25)
 Lundy. Loyd, L. R. W., comp. (S '25)
 Luxemburg, Rosa
 Luxemburg, R. Letters to Karl and Iulise Kautsky from 1896 to 1918. (S '25)
 Lysistrata. Ludovici, A. M. (S '25)

Legends

- Shephard, E. Paul Bunyan. (Je '25)
 Stevens, J. Paul Bunyan. (My '25)
 Lundy (Island)
 Loyd, L. R. W., comp. Lundy. (S '25)
 Lundy. Loyd, L. R. W., comp. (S '25)
 Luxemburg, Rosa
 Luxemburg, R. Letters to Karl and Iulise Kautsky from 1896 to 1918. (S '25)
 Lysistrata. Ludovici, A. M. (S '25)

Design

- Berard, S. J., and Waters, E. O. Elements of machine design. (Ap '25)
 MacIvor's folly. Kahler, H. M., and Herring, D. G. (My '25)
 Macneill, J. G. Swift
 MacNeill, J. G. S. What I have seen and heard. (O '25)
 McRae, Milton A.
 McRae, M. A. Forty years in newspaperdom. (Ap '25)

Macready, Sir Nevil, bart.

- Macready, N. Annals of an active life. (Ag '25)
 Mad marriage. Gibbs, G. F. (O '25)
 Madagascar
 Powell, E. A. Beyond the utmost purple rim. (My '25)
 Made-to-order stories. Fisher, D. F. (D '25)
 Madonna and the student. Neilson, I. (Ag '25)
 Madonna of the barricades. Strachey, J. St L. (D '25)
 Magic in the making. Mulholland, J., and Smith, M. M. (My '25)
 Maid of the mountain. Gregory, J. (O '25)
 Mail-order business
 Pratt, V. E. Selling by mail. (Ap '25)
 Make your bazar pay. Burt, E. R. (S '25)
 Makeshift farm. Hawthorne, H. (F '26)
 Make-up, Theatrical
 Chalmers, H. Art of make-up. (Ja '26)
 Making of a stockbroker. Lefevre, E. (S '25)
 Making of modern India. Macnicol, N. (My '25)
 Making of the English New Testament. Goodspeed, E. J. (Je '25)
 Making the little theater pay. Hinsdell, O. (F '26)
 Makropoulos secret. Capek, K. (S '25)
 Malay archipelago
 Tomlinson, H. M. Tide marks. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Malay peninsula
 Wells, C. Six years in the Malay jungle. (Je '25)
 Malet, Lucas, pseud. See Harrison, M. St L. (My '25)
 Mammonart. Sinclair, U. B. (My '25)
 Man
 Chesterton, G. K. Everlasting man. (D '25)
 Coblentz, S. A. Decline of man. (My '25)
 Schiller, F. C. S. Tantalus. (My '25)
 Influence of environment
 Febvre, L. P. V., and Bataillon, L. Geographical introduction to history. (D '25)
 Thomas, F. Environmental basis of society. (S '25)
 Origin
 MacCurdy, G. G. Human origins. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Man, Prehistoric
 MacCurdy, G. G. Human origins. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Morgan, J. J. M. de. Prehistoric man. (Ap '25)
 Obermaier, H. Fossil man in Spain. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Schmucker, S. C. Man's life on earth. (S '25)
 Vulliamy, C. E. Our prehistoric forerunners. (O '25)
 Man from an African jungle. Wilcox, W. C. (Ag '25)
 Man nobody knows. Barton, B. (Ag '25)
 Man of strife. Wilson, G. (Ja '26)
 Manchuria
 Adachi Kinnosuké. Manchuria. (S '25)
 Mandarin's bell. Noble, E. (Ag '25)
 Manet, Edouard
 Blanche, J. E. Manet. (D '25)
 Manhattan transfer. Dos Passos, J. R. (Ja '26)
 Manito masks. Alexander, H. B. (N '25)
 Manners and customs
 Howard, I. G. Chrysalis of romance. (N '25)
 Meller, W. C. Old times. (F '26)
 Tozzer, A. M. Social origins and social continuities. (Ag '25)
 Manning, Henry Edward, cardinal
 Lunn, A. H. M. Roman converts. (F '26)
 Manola, Adelaide, pseud. See Hughes, A. M. (Ag '25)
 Man's life on earth. Schmucker, S. C. (S '25)
 Mansion house. Kelly, E. (Je '25)
 Manual for diabetics. Boyd, G. L., and Stal-smith, M. D. (Je '25)
 Manual for school officers. Andersen, W. N. (O '25)
 Manual of tree and shrub insects. Felt, E. P. (Ag '25)

- Manual of vegetable-garden diseases. Chupp, C: (S '25)
- Manual training
Fraser, C. C. Practical book of home repairs. (N '25)
- Many happy returns of the day! Butler, E. P. (Je '25)
- Maoris
Smith, C. H. Rahwedda. (D '25)
- Map that is half unrolled. Powell, E: A. (Ja '26)
- Maps
Dake, C: L., and Brown, J: S. Interpretation of topographic and geologic maps. (F '26)
- Margery: the medium. Bird, J. M. (S '25)
- Marie Louise, empress consort of Napoléon I
Geer, W. Napoleon and Marie-Louise. (F '26)
- Maritime Connecticut during the American revolution, 1775-1783. Middlebrook, L: F. (D '25)
- Marketing of metals and minerals. Spurr, J. E., and Wormser, F. E., eds. (S '25, Ja '26)
- Marlowe, Christopher
Hotson, J. L. Death of Christopher Marlowe. (Ag '25)
- Marriage
Gibbs, G: F. How to stay married. (Je '25)
Johnsen, J. E., comp. Selected articles on marriage and divorce. (O '25)
Johnston, W: A. These women. (My '25)
Popenoe, P. B. Modern marriage. (Je '25)
Richmond, M. E., and Hall, F: S. Child marriages. (Ag '25)
- Marriage guest. Bercovici, K. (O '25)
- Married alive. Straus, R. (Ag '25)
- Married life. O'Shaughnessy, E. L. (Ja '26)
- Married men. Burr, J., pseud. (S '25)
- Marsh lights. Macnamara, R. S. (N '25)
- Marshall, Thomas Riley
Marshall, T: R. Recollections. (Ja '26)
- Martha. Marks, P. (Ap '25)
- Marx, Karl
Emmett, W: H. Marxian economic handbook and glossary. (Ja '26)
- Marxian economic handbook and glossary. Emmett, W: H. (Ja '26)
- Mary Stuart, queen of Scots
MacCunn, F. A. Mary Stuart. (Mr '25)
- Mary Stuart. MacCunn, F. A. (Mr '25)
- Masks (plays)
Alexander, H. B. Manito masks. (N '25)
- Mason, William
Draper, J: W. William Mason. (My '25)
- Massingham, Henry William
Massingham, H: W. H. W. M. (O '25)
- Master revenge. Cody, H. A. (My '25)
- Materials illustrative of American government. Mott, R. L. (F '26)
- Mathematical principles of finance. Kent, F: C. (Ag '25)
- Mathematics
Kent, F: C. Mathematical principles of finance. (Ag '25)
Pond, De W. C. Drafting-room mathematics. (Ag '25)
- The matriarch. Stern, G. B. (Mr '25)
- Matter
Rinne F. W. B. Crystals and the fine-structure of matter. (Je '25)
- Constitution
Lucklesh, M. Foundations of the universe. (S '25)
Southern, L. Electricity and the structure of matter. (D '25)
- May Fair. Arlen, M., pseud. (Ag '25)
- Mayas
Spence, L: Atlantis in America. (D '25)
- Meadowlark Basin. Bower, B. M., pseud. (N '25)
- Meaning of literature. Sprau, G: (O '25)
- Means of social control. Lumley, F: E. (F '26)
- Mechanical mixing machinery. Carpenter, L. (N '25)
- Mechanics of textile machinery. Hanton, W: A. (S '25)
- Medical aspects of chemical warfare. Vedder, E: B. (S '25)
- Medical education
Flexner, A. Medical education. (My '25)
- Medical follies. Fishbein, M. (N '25)
- Medicine
History
Seelig, M. G. Medicine. (N '25)
- Medicine, Ancient
Jayne, W. A. Healing gods of ancient civilizations. (F '26)
- Medicine, Primitive
Maddox, J: L. Medicine man. (F '26)
- Medicine. Seelig, M. G. (N '25)
- Medicine man. Maddox, J: L. (F '26)
- Medill, Robert, pseud. See McBride, R. M. (S '25)
- Meek Americans. Beach, J. W. (My '25)
- Melancholy
Burton, R. Burton the anatomist. (S '25)
Reed, A. L. Background of Gray's Elegy. (Ap '25)
- Mellowing money. Lynde, F. (O '25)
- Mellows. Kennedy, R. E. (F '26)
- Melville, Lewis, pseud. See Benjamin, L: S. (N '25)
- Memoir. Bewick, T: (F '26)
- Memoirs of a Napoleonic officer. Barrès, J. B. A. (Ag '25)
- Memoirs of Arsene Lupin. Le Blanc, M. (Ag '25)
- Memoirs of Daudet. Daudet, L. A. (F '26)
- Memoirs of the Foreign legion. Magnus, M. (Mr, My '25)
- Memoirs of William Jennings Bryan. Bryan, W: J. and M. E. (F '26)
- Memories of forty-eight years service. Smith-Dorrien, H. L. (S '25)
- Memories of long ago. Hein, O: L. (O '25)
- Men and issues. Pepper, G: W. (Ap '25)
- Men and policies. Root, E. (My '25)
- Men seen. Rosenfeld, P. (Ag '25)
- Men, women, and colleges. Briggs, Le B. R. (F '26)
- Mencken, Henry Louis
Boyd, E. A: H. L. Mencken. (N '25)
- Mental disorder and the criminal law. Glueck, S. S. (D '25)
- Mental growth of children. Johnson, B. J. (S '25)
- Mental growth of the pre-school child. Gesell, A. L. (Je '25)
- Mental hygiene
Campbell, C: M. Present-day conception of mental disorders. (F '26)
- MacLeod, A. B: Mental hygiene as taught by Jesus. (Ag '25)
- Myerson, A. When life loses its zest. (Ap '25)
- Walsh, J. J., and Foote, J: A. Safeguarding children's nerves. (D '25)
- Mental hygiene as taught by Jesus. MacLeod, A. B: (Ag '25)
- Mental tests
Baldwin, B. T., and Stecher, L. I. Psychology of the preschool child. (Ap '25)
- Johnson, B. J. Mental growth of children. (S '25)
- Mentality of apes. Kohler, W. (My '25)
- Menus
Tipton, E. Reducing menus for the hostess of to-day. (N '25)
- Merchant marine
Great Britain
Hayes, B. F. Hull down. (Ag '25)
- Mere mortals. MacLaurin, C: (Je '25)
- Mesa, cañon and pueblo. Lummis, C: F. (Ja '26)
- Mesopotamia
Description and travel
Guyer, S: My journey down the Tigris. (N '25)
- Metabolism
Armsby, H: P., and Moulton, C. R. Animal as a converter of matter and energy. (F '26)

Metal trade

Spurr, J. E., and Wormser, F. E., eds. Marketing of metals and minerals. (S '25, Ja '26)

Metallography

Greaves, R. H., and Wrighton, H. Practical microscopical metallography. (S '25)

Pulsifer, H. B. Structural metallography. (S '25)

Tammann, G. H. J. A. Text book of metallography. (S '25)

Metallurgy of aluminium and aluminium alloys.

Anderson, R. J. (O '25)

Metals

Jeffries, Z., and Archer, R. S. Science of metals. (Ag '25)

Tungay, S. J. Acid-resisting metals. (N '25)

Metaphysical foundations of physical science.

Burt, E. A. (D '25)

Metaphysics

Burt, E. A. Metaphysical foundations of physical science. (D '25)

Dewey, J. Experience and nature. (Je '25)

MexicoDescription and travel

Banning, G. H. In Mexican waters. (S '25)

Cameron, C. Mexico in revolution. (Je '25)

History

Cameron, C. Mexico in revolution. (Je '25)

Mexico in revolution. Cameron, C. (Je '25)

Meynell, Alice Christiana (Thompson) (Mrs Wilfrid Meynell)

Tuell, A. K. Mrs Meynell and her literary generation. (My '25)

Michael Faraday (1791-1867). Randell, W. L. (O '25)Micro-organisms

Broadhurst, J. Bacteria in relation to man. (S '25)

Russell, I. K. Romance of the holes in bread. (Ag '25)

Middle ages

Evans, J. Life in mediaeval France. (D '25)

Middle years. Emanuel, V. R. (My '25)Middleton, Arthur, pseud. See O'Brien, E. J. H. (My '25)*Midsummer mystery. Gerould, G. H. (Je '25)*Mighty men. Farjeon, E. (Ja '26)*Military art and science

Liddell Hart, B. H. Paris. (D '25)

Military side of Japanese life. Kennedy, M. D. (N '25)Mill of many windows. Fletcher, J. S. (Ag '25)*Miller, Edward Darley

Miller, E. D. Fifty years of sport. (D '25)

Miller, Lewis

Hendrick, E. Lewis Miller. (S '25)

Milton, John

Saurat, D. Milton, man and thinker. (Ag '25)

Milton, man and thinker. Saurat, D. (Ag '25)Mind at work in studying, thinking, and reading. Lyman, R. La V. (My '25)*Mineral Industries

Spurr, J. E., and Wormser, F. E., eds. Marketing of metals and minerals. (S '25, Ja '26)

Miners' fight for American standards. Lewis, J. L. (D '25)Mines and mineral resources

Ladoo, R. B. Non-metallic minerals. (S '25)

Minick; a play based on the short story Old man Minick. Ferber, E., and Kaufman, G. F. (Ap '25)Ministry of health. Newsholme, A. (F '26)*Minnie Flynn. Marion, F. (Ag '25)*Minto, Gilbert John Murry Kynynmond Elliot, 4th earl of

Buchan, J. Lord Minto. (My '25)

Miracle. Kelland, C. B. (Mr '25)Mirrors. Ritter, M. T. (Ag '25)*Mirrors of New York. De Casseres, B. (Je '25)*Mischief. Travers, B. (O '25)*Missing initial. Lincoln, N. S. (Ag '25)*Missions*Africa

Wilcox, W. C. Man from an African jungle (Ag '25)

Arabia

Harrison, P. W. Arab at home. (Mr '25)

Asia

Huckel, O. Secret of the East. (Ap '25)

Philippine Islands

Laubach, F. C. People of the Philippines. (Mr '25)

Mr Bisbee's princess. Street, J. L. (S '25)

Mr Collin is ruined. Heller, F., pseud. (Je '25)

Mr Godly beside himself. Bullett, G. W. (Ar '25)

Mr Kello. Watson F. (S '25)

Mr Marionette. Colville, K. (Ja '26)

Mr Pepys. Tanner, J. R. (My '25)

Mr Petre. Belloc, H. (O '25)

Mister Pitt. Gale, Z. (Je '25)

Mr Tasker's gods. Powys, T. F. (Je '25)

Mrs Dalloway. Woolf, V. (Ag '25)

Mrs Fuller. Bryant, M. (Ag '25)

Mrs Harter. De La Pasture, E. E. M. (Ap '25)

Mistress Madcap. Sherman, E. B. (F '26)

Mrs Mason's daughters. Eiker, M. (My '25)

Mrs Meynell and her literary generation. Tuell, A. K. (My '25)

Mistress of Husaby. Undset, S. (Ag '25)

Mrs William Horton speaking. Kilbourne, F. (Mr '25)

Misty flats. Woodbury, H. (N '25)

Mitford, Mary Russell

Mitford, M. R. Letters. (O '25)

Mixers

Carpenter, L. Mechanical mixing machinery. (N '25)

Seymour, H. Agitating, stirring and kneading machinery. (Ag '25)

Moberly Bell and his Times. Eng title of London "Times" under the management of Moberly Bell. Kitchen, F. H. (My '25)

Mockbeggar. Meynell, L. W. (Mr '25)

Mockery Gap. Powys, T. F. (Ja '26)

Modern astrophysics. Dingle, H. (S '25)

Modern bridge tactics. Foster, R. F. (Ag '25)

Modern British lyrics. Coblenz, S. A., comp. (Ja '26)

Modern business geography. Huntington, E., and Cushing, S. W. (S '25)

Modern English architecture. Marriott, C. (Ap '25)

Modern English novel. Chevalley, A. (D '25)

Modern Ibsen. Weigand, H. J. (N '25)

Modern immigration. MacLean, A. M. (Ja '26)

Modern marriage. Popenoe, P. B. (Je '25)

Modern plays, short and long. Law, F. H., ed. (My '25)

Modern poetry. Collins, H. P. (Ja '26)

Modern Russian literature. Mirsky, D. S. (N '25)

Modern Turkey. Mears, E. G., and others. (Mr '25)

Modernism

Mathews, S. Faith of modernism. (My '25)

Molé, Louis Mathieu

Molé, L. M. Life and memoirs. (D '25)

Moment of beauty. Merwin, S. (My '25)

The monarch. Mille, P. (S '25)

Monasticism and religious orders

Hannah, I. C. Christian monasticism. (O '25)

Monday morning. Hamilton, P. (N '25)

Monet, Claude

Mauclair, C. Claude Monet. (O '25)

Mongol in our midst. Crookshank, F. G. (Ap '25)

Mongols

Crookshank, F. G. Mongol in our midst. (Ap '25)

Monkey puzzle. Beresford, J. D. (S '25)

Monkeys

Yerkes, R. Almost human. (N '25)

Monogatari. Seitz, D. C. (Ap '25)

Monroe doctrine

Alvarez, A. Monroe doctrine. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Monsieur Ripois and Nemesis. Hémon, L. (Je '25)

The monster. Hext, H., pseud. (Je '25)

Mont Blanc. Tissot, E. (Mr '25)

Montagu, Lady Mary (Pierrepont) Wortley
Benjamin, L. S. Lady Mary Wortley Montagu. (N '25)

Monte Carlo

Kingston, C. Romance of Monte Carlo. (S '25)

Montefiore, Sir Moses Haim, bart.

Goodman, P. Moses Montefiore. (N '25)

Montgilyon, De Mercy Argenteau, princesse de.
See Mercy-Argenteau, R. F. A. C. E. M. (Je '25)

Monticello, Virginia

Wilstach, P. Jefferson and Monticello. (My '25)

Moon harvest. Cautela, G. (Ag '25)

Moore, Thomas

Moore, T. Diary. (N '25)

Moral conditions

Kirchwey, F., ed. Our changing morality. (Ap, Je '25)

Moral education

Martin, H. Formative factors in character. (F '26)

Moral standards of democracy. Wright, H. W. (O '25)

More aces. New York guild for the Jewish blind, comp. (F '26)

More psychology and the Christian life. Pym, T. W. (Ag '25)

Morgan, Emanuel, pseud. See Bynner, W. (F '26)

Morley of Blackburn, John Morley, 1st viscount
Morgan, J. H. John, Viscount Morley. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Mormons and Mormonism

Werner, M. R. Brigham Young. (Ag '25)

Morocco

Sloane, W. M. Greater France in Africa. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Morris, William

Sparling, H. H. Kelmscott press and William Morris, master-craftsman. (Mr '25)

Moscow art theater

Saylor, O. M. Inside the Moscow art theatre. (F '26)

Moses Montefiore. Goodman, P. (N '25)

Mostly moonshine. Nightingale, M. (My '25)

Mother, Benson, E. F. (D '25)

Mother's recompense. Wharton, E. N. (Je '25)

Motor camping on western trails. Ferguson, M. F. (N '25)

Motor rambles through France. Rimington, F. C. (N '25)

Mount Rainier national park

Schmoe, F. W. Our greatest mountain. (O '25)

Mountaineering

Abraham, G. D. First steps to climbing. (S '25)

Norton, E. F., and others. Fight for Everest: 1924. (F '26)

O'Kane, W. C. Trails and summits of the White mountains. (Ag '25)

Mountains of mystery. Friel, A. O. (Je '25)

Moving pictures

Bloem, W. S. Soul of the moving picture. (My '25)

Griffith, L. When the movies were young. (D '25)

Talmadge, M. L. Talmadge sisters. (Ap '25)

Muir, John

Badè, W. F. Life and letters of John Muir. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Mulberry bush. Lynd, S. (Je '25)

Mummy moves. Gaunt, M. E. B. (Ap '25)

Municipal government

Anderson, W. American city government. (F '26)

Wright, J., comp. Selected readings in municipal problems. (S '25)

Municipal ownership

Thompson, C. D. Public ownership. (Je '25)

Mural painting and decoration

Mukul Chandra Dey. My pilgrimages to Ajanta and Bagh. (D '25)

Murder

Hall, J. R. Bravo mystery. (Ag '25)

Murder club. Evans, H. (Ap '25)

Murder, piracy and treason. Postgate, R. W. (Ja '26)

Muse in council. Drinkwater, J. (My '25)

Music

Van Vechten, C. Red. (Mr '25)

Analysis, interpretation, appreciation

Dickinson, E. Spirit of music. (F '26)

Glover, C. H. Term's music. (O '25)

Bibliography

Holt, R. List of music for plays and pageants. (Ag '25)

History and criticism

Dyson, G. New music. (N '25)

Gray, C. Survey of contemporary music. (Ag '25)

Newman, E. Musical critic's holiday. (Je '25)

Weissmann, A. Problems of modern music. (D '25)

Instruction and study

Dickinson, E. Spirit of music. (F '26)

Music, incidental

Holt, R. List of music for plays and pageants. (Ag '25)

Musical critic's holiday. Newman, E. (Je '25)

Musical instruments

La Prade, E. Alice in Orchestralia. (Ja '26)

Musicians

Glover, C. H. Term's music. (O '25)

Gray, C. Survey of contemporary music. (Ag '25)

Muskellunge

Robinson, B. C. Muskellunge fishing. (Je '25)

Muskellunge fishing. Robinson, B. C. (Je '25)

My African neighbors. Coudenrove, H. (N '25)

My automobile. Blanchard, H. F. (Ag '25)

My diary, 1915-17. Mussolini, B. (Je '25)

My education and religion. Gordon, G. A. (O '25)

My Ford. Blanchard, H. F. (S '25)

My further disillusionment in Russia. Goldman, E. (Ap '25)

My garden book. Weathers, J. (Je '25)

My head! my head! Graves, R. (N '25)

My journey down the Tigris. Guyer, S. (N '25)

My lady Lee. Price, E. B. (O '25)

My life and memories. Clarke, J. I. C. (Ja '26)

My life as an explorer. Hedin, S. A. (D '25)

My name is legion. Morgan, C. (My '25)

My pilgrimages to Ajanta and Bagh. Mukul
Chandra Dey. (D '25)

My portion. Kohut, R. (Je '25)

My tower in Desmond. Lysaght, S. R. (D '25)

Myron, Paul, pseud. See Linebarger, P. M. W. (Ap, Je '25)

Myrtle. Hudson, S. (My '25)

Mysteries and miracle plays, Tibetan

Ti-me-kun-dan, prince of Buddhist benevolence. (Ja '26)

Mysteries of Ann. Brown, A. (My '25)

Mysteries of the Libyan desert. King, W. J. H. (Je '25)

Mysteries of the sea. Lockhart, J. G. (O '25)

Mysterious tutor. Blake, G. (Ag '25)

Mystery in red. Williams, S. C. (Je '25)

Mystery of Angelina Frood. Freeman, R. A. (Mr '25)

Mystery of Chimneys. Christie, A. (O '25)

Mystery of Redmarsh farm. Marshall, A. (Je '25)

Mystery of the singing walls. Stowell, W. A. (Je '25)

Mysticism

- Hunter, I. L., comp. American mystical verse. (D '25)
 Leuba, J. H.: Psychology of religious mysticism. (S '25)
 Peers, E. A. Spanish mysticism. (D '25)

Mythology

- Jayne, W. A. Healing gods of ancient civilizations. (F '26)

- Najib. Terhune, A. P. (My '25)
 Naked man. Hutchinson, V. (N '25)
 Nantucket windows. Babcock, E. S. (Je '25)
 Naples

History

- Collison-Morley, L. Naples through the centuries. (N '25)
 Naples through the centuries. Collinson-Morley, L. (N '25)
 Napoleon I, emperor of the French
 Ballard, C. R. Napoleon. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Barrès, J. B. A. Memoirs of a Napoleonic officer. (Ag '25)
 Geer, W. Napoleon and Josephine. (N '25)
 Geer, W. Napoleon and Marie-Louise. (F '26)
 Napoleon. Ballard, C. R. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Napoleon and Josephine. Geer, W. (N '25)
 Napoleon and Marie-Louise. Geer, W. (F '26)
 Narcotic habit
 Marks, J. A. Genius and disaster. (D '25)
 Nation in making. Banerjee, S. (N '25)
 National characteristics, American
 Mencken, H. L., ed. Americana, 1925. (F '26)
 Myers, G. History of American idealism. (My '25)

- National characteristics, Chinese
 Steep, T.: Chinese fantasies. (D '25)
 National characteristics, French
 Clarke, M. Regarding the French. (Ag '25)
 Huddleston, S. France and the French. (F '26)
 National characteristics, Italian
 Coote, C. R. Italian town and country life. (D '25)
 National characteristics, Russian
 Ossendowski, F. A. Shadow of the gloomy East. (My '25)
 National isolation an illusion. Belmont, P. (S '25)

- Nationalism and nationality
 McDougall, W.: Indestructible union. (My '25)
 Miller, H. A. Races, nations and classes. (Je '25)

Natural history

- Northrop, A. Through field and woodland. (S '25)
 Porter, G. Tales you won't believe. (Je '25)

British Guiana

- Beebe, W.: Jungle days. (N '25)

England

- White, G. Natural history of Selborne. (S '25)

Peru

- Murphy, R. C. Bird islands of Peru. (Ap '25)
 Natural history of Selborne. White, G. (S '25)
 Natural resources
 Lewin, P. E. Resources of the Empire. (My '25)
 Nature, practice and history of art. Magonigle, H. Van B. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Nature study

- Brooks, E. A. Handbook of the outdoors. (Ag '25)
 Northrop, A. Through field and woodland. (S '25)

Navajo Indians

- Crane, L. Indians of the enchanted desert. (N '25)

Naval battles

- Chatterton, E.: K. Battles by sea. (F '26)
 Naval history of the World war. Frothingham, T.: G. (Ag '25)
 Naval side of British history. Callender, G. A. R. (Mr '25)

Navy

- Bywater, H. C. Great Pacific war. (O '25)
 Neglected clue. Ostrander, I. E. (Ag '25)
 Negro and his songs. Odum, H. W., and Johnson, G. B. (O '25)
 Negro around the world. Price, W. De M. (N '25)
 Negro in South Carolina during the reconstruction. Taylor, A. A. (My '25)

Negro literature

- Locke, A. Le R., ed. New Negro. (F '26)
 Negro orators and their orations. Woodson, C. G., ed. (F '26)

Negro songs

- Johnson, J. W., ed. Book of American Negro spirituals. (N '25)
 Kennedy, R. E. Black cameos. (Je '25)
 Kennedy, R. E. Mellows. (F '26)
 Odum, H. W., and Johnson, G. B. Negro and his songs. (O '25)
 Scarborough, D., and Gullledge, O. L. On the trail of Negro folk-songs. (D '25)

Negroes

- Kennedy, R. E. Black cameos. (Je '25)
 Locke, A. Le R., ed. New Negro. (F '26)
 Price, W. De M. Negro around the world. (N '25)
 Taylor, A. A. Negro in South Carolina during the reconstruction. (My '25)
 Woodson, C. G., ed. Negro orators and their orations. (F '26)
 Woofter, T.: J. Basis of racial adjustment. (Ag '25)

Nervous systemDiseases

- Sadler, W.: S. Americanitis. (N '25)
 Walsh, J. J., and Foote, J. A. Safeguarding children's nerves. (D '25)

NetherlandsHistory

- Banks, H. W. Story of Holland. (D '25)
 Neuroses of the nations. Playne, C. E. (Ja '26)
 New age of faith. Langdon-Davies, J.: (D '25)
 New aspects of politics. Merriam, C. E.: (Ja '26)
 New barbarians. Abbott, W. C. (Mr '25)
 New biology. Smallwood, W.: M., and others. (F '26)
 New cancer facts. Masters, D.: (N '25)
 New Decameron. (Ag '25)
 New history and the social studies. Barnes, H. E. (S '25)
 New music. Dyson, G.: (N '25)
 New Negro. Locke, A. Le R., ed. (F '26)
 New poems. Drinkwater, J.: (My '25)
 New writings. Hazlitt, W.: (D '25)
 New York (city)
 Chatfield-Taylor, H. C. Cities of many men. (D '25)

Churches

- MacAdam, G.: Little church around the corner. (My '25)

Description

- Dayton, H. S., and Barratt, L. B. New York in seven days. (D '25)
 De Casseres, B.: Mirrors of New York. (Je '25)

History

- Brown, H.: C. Last fifty years in New York. (Ja '26)

Hotels, taverns, etc.

- Chappell, G.: S. Restaurants of New York. (Ja '26)
 Hungerford, E.: Story of the Waldorf-Astoria. (S '25)

New York (city) Court of special sessions

- Cobb, W.: B., ed. Inferior criminal courts act of the city of New York. (D '25)

New York (city) Magistrates' courts

Cobb, W. B., ed. Inferior criminal courts act of the city of New York. (D '25)

New York (state)Politics and government

Donovan, H. D. A. Barnburners. (F '26)

New York in seven days. Dayton, H. S., and Barratt, L. B. (D '25)

New Zealand

Reeves, W. P. New Zealand. (S '25)

Smith, C. H. Rahweddia. (D '25)

Politics and government

Reeves, W. P. State experiments in Australia and New Zealand. (O '25)

Newer spirit. Calverton, V. F. (Je '25)

Newman, John Henry, cardinal

Lunn, A. H. M. Roman converts. (F '26)

Newman, B. Cardinal Newman. (D '25)

Reilly, J. J. Newman as a man of letters. (S '25)

Newman as a man of letters. Reilly, J. J. (S '25)

Next year in Jerusalem. Tharaud, J. and J. (S '25)

Niagara Falls

Mavor, J. Niagara in politics. (F '26)

Niagara in politics. Mavor, J. (F '26)

Nicoll, Sir William Robertson

Darlow, T. H. William Robertson Nicoll. (F '26)

Nicolson, Victoria Mary (Sackville-West) (Mrs Harold Nicolson). See Sackville-West, V. M. (Ag '25)

Nigeria

Cronstedt, N. F. Grip and I. (N '25)

The nightingale. Strachey, M. (Je '25)

Nineteenth of April, 1775. Murdock, H. (My '25)

Ninth of November. Kellermann, B. (Mr '25)

Nobel prizes

Marble, A. Nobel prize winners in literature. (F '26)

Nobel prize winners in literature. Marble, A. R. (F '26)

Noblest frailty. Eng title of Obedience. Sadleir, M. (Je '25)

Nomad. Smith, P. J.- (Je '25)

Non-metallic minerals. Ladoo, R. B. (S '25)

Noon. Norris, K. (Mr '25)

Noose of sin. Eng title of Hounded man. Carco, F. (Ap '25)

Nor youth nor age. Vinal, H. (S '25)

Nora pays. Van Slyke, L. (My '25)

Normal course in play. Playground and recreation association of America. (F '26)

NormandyHistory

Newhall, R. A. English conquest of Normandy, 1416-1424. (Je '25)

Norris, Kathleen (Thompson) (Mrs Charles Gilman Norris)

Norris, K. Noon. (Mr '25)

North America

Jones, L. R., and Bryan, P. W. North America. (Ap '25)

Description and travel

Bartlett, A. E. Least known America. (N '25)

Economic conditions

Smith, J. R. North America. (Ag '25)

North America. Smith, J. R. (Ag '25)

Northeast corner. McCreary, F. R. (N '25)

Northern muse. Buchan, J., comp. (My '25)

Northward ho! Stefánsson, V. (Ja '26)

NorwayHistory

Gathorne-Hardy, G. M. Norway. (Ja '26)

Norway. Gathorne-Hardy, G. M. (Ja '26)

Not under the law. Lutz, G. (S '25)

Notes and anecdotes of many years. Bishop, J. B. (N '25)

Nova Scotia

MacMechan, A. M. Old province tales. (Je '25)

Novels of Fielding. Digeon, A. (Ag '25)

Now and forever. Roth, S. (S '25)

Numerous Treasure. Keable, R. (My '25)

Nurses and nursing

Dakin, F. Simplified nursing. (D '25)

Noyes, C. D. Home care of the sick. (S '25)

Nutrition

Armsby, H. P., and Moulton, C. R. Animal as a converter of matter and energy. (F '26)

Nyasaland

Coudenhove, H. My African neighbors. (N '25)

Oak and iron. Hendryx, J. B. (Ag '25)

Obedience. Sadleir, M. (Je '25)

Observations. Moore, M. (My '25)

Occident and the Orient. Chirol, V. (My '25)

Occidental gleanings. Hearn, L. (N '25)

Occupation, Choice of

Sowers, J. I. Boy and his vocation. (D '25)

OccupationsDiseases and hygiene

Hamilton, A. Industrial poisons in the United States. (D '25)

Ocean

Rolt-Wheeler, F. W. Hunters of ocean depths. (S '25)

Ocean gold. Marshall, E. (F '26)

Octagon house. Knevels, G. (N '25)

An octave. Jeffery, J. E., pseud. (S '25)

Odyssey of a nice girl. Suckow, R. (Ja '26)

The office. Asch, N. (D '25)

Office management

Leffingwell, W. H. Office management. (Ag '25)

Warren, I., and others. Filing and indexing with business procedure. (Ag '25)

Oh, Mr Leacock! Allen, C. K. (Ag '25)

Oh, the brave music! Blaker, R. (D '25)

Oil refinery specifications. Nugey, A. L. (S '25)

Old Brig's cargo. Pulsford, H. A. (Je '25)

Old English. Galsworthy, J. (Ap '25)

Old English houses. Gotch, J. A. (Ja '26)

Old-fashioned senator. Dickson, H. (N '25)

Old flame. Herbert, A. P. (Ap '25)

Old glass. European and American. Moore, N. H. (My '25)

Old houses of Stratford-upon-Avon. Forrest, H. E. (N '25)

Old Hurricane. Flisch, J. A. (Je '25)

Old King Cole. Krohn, J. (D '25)

Old man Minick. Ferber, E. (Ap '25)

Old mission churches and historic houses of California. Newcomb, R. (F '26)

Old province tales. MacMechan, A. M. (Je '25)

Old Testament; a new translation. Moffatt, J. tr. (S '25)

Old time Paris. Edwards, G. F. (D '25)

Old times. Meller, W. C. (F '26)

Old wagon show days. Robinson, G. (Ap '25)

Old wine. Bottome, P. (Je '25)

Old woman of the movies. Blasco Ibáñez, V. (S '25)

Old youth. Dawson, C. W. (O '25)

O'London, John, pseud. See Whitten, W. (N '25)

Om. Mundy, T. (Ap '25)

O'Malley of Shanganagh. Byrne, D. (Ap, Je '25)

On board the Morning Star. MacOrlan, P. (Ap '25)

On new shores. Bercovici, K. (N '25)

On the road with Wellington. Schaumann, A. L. F. (Ap '25)

On the roof of the Rockies. Freeman, L. R. (Ja '26)

On the trail of Negro folk-songs. Scarborough, D., and Gullede, O. L. (D '25)

On the trail of the bad men. Train, A. C. (S '25)

On the trail of the Bushongo. Torday, E. (Ag '25)

- Once in a blue moon. Strobel, M. (Ag '25)
 One act plays for stage and study. (O '25)
 One hour and forever. Harré, T. E. (Ap '25)
 One increasing purpose. Hutchinson, A. S. M. (N '25)
 One man's life. Quick, H. (D '25)
 One-act plays for young folks. Jagendorf, M. A., ed. (Ap '25)
 Ontario. Hydro-electric power commission
 Mavor, J. Niagara in politics. (F '26)
 Opdycke, Oliver, pseud. See Opdycke, J. B. (N '25)
 Open confession. Corelli, M. (Ap '25)
 Open doors to science. Caldwell, O. W., and Meier, W. H. D. (D '25)
 Opera
 Wagnalls, M. Opera and its stars. (My '25)
 Opera and its stars. Wagnalls, M. (My '25)
 Opium
 Willoughby, W. W. Opium as an international problem. (Ja '26)
 Opium as an international problem. Willoughby, W. W. (Ja '26)
 Orations
 Woodson, C. G., ed. Negro orators and their orations. (F '26)
 Orchard management. Gourley, J. H. (Je '25)
 Orchestra and orchestral music
 La Prade, E. Alice in Orchestralia. (Ja '26)
 Organic adaptation to environment. Thorpe, M. R., ed. (Je '25)
 Organic derivations of antimony. Christiansen, W. G. (D '25)
 Organic medicaments. Fournau, E. (Ja '26)
 Origin and evolution of religion. Churchward, A. (Mr '25)
 Origin of continents and oceans. Wegener, A. L. (My '25)
 Original letters from India (1779-1815). Fay, E. (S '25)
 Orphan island. Macaulay, R. (Mr '25)
 Orvieto dust. Hubbard, W. (Ja '26)
 Osler, Sir William
 Cushing, H. W. Life of Sir William Osler. (Ag '25)
 Osteopathy
 Fishbein, M. Medical follies. (N '25)
 Other provinces. Van Doren, C. C. (Ja '26)
 Our changing morality. Kirchwey, F., ed. (Ap, Je '25)
 Our debt and duty to the farmer. Wallace, H. C. (My '25)
 Our enemy the child. De Lima, A. (F '26)
 Our federal republic. Judson, H. P. (D '25)
 Our governmental machine. Wallace, S. C. (Je '25)
 Our greatest mountain. Schmoë, F. W. (O '25)
 Our naval heritage. Green, F. (N '25)
 Our polar flight. Amundsen, R. E. G., and Ellsworth, L. (F '26)
 Our prehistoric forerunners. Vulliamy, C. E. (O '25)
 Our rural heritage. Williams, J. M. (Je '25)
 Our Sussex parish. Geering, T. (Ag '25)
 Out of the blue. McNeile, H. C. (S '25)
 Out of the flame. Sitwell, O. (Ag '25)
 Out of the past. Symonds, M. (Ag '25)
 The outcast. Pirandello, L. (D '25)
 Outdoor life
 Brooks, E. A. Handbook of the outdoors. (Ag '25)
 Outlines of a philosophy of art. Collingwood, R. G. (D '25)
 Outlines of introductory sociology. Case, C. M. (S '25)
 Outlines of Polish history. Dyboski, R. (N '25)
 Over the hills of Ruthenia. Baerlein, H. P. B. (Ap '25)
 Overheard. Aumonier, S. (Mr '25)
 Owen, Robert
 Cole, G. D. H. Robert Owen. (S '25)
 Oxford
 Description and travel
 Coffin, R. P. T. Book of crowns and cottages. (F '26)
 Oxford movement
 Brillioth, Y. T. Anglican revival. (Ag '25)
 Oxford poetry. 1924. (My '25)
 Oxford renowned. Rice-Oxley, L. (D '25)
 Oxford university
 Coffin, R. P. T. Book of crowns and cottages. (F '26)
 Mallet, C. E. History of the University of Oxford. (Mr '25)
 Rice-Oxley, L. Oxford renowned. (D '25)
 P. A. L. Riesenbergh, F. (D '25)
 Pacific states
 Woollen, W. W. Inside passage to Alaska, 1792-1920. (Je '25)
 Page, Walter Hines
 Hendrick, B. J. Life and letters of Walter H. Page. (D '25)
 Paget, Violet. See Lee, V., pseud. (S, O '25)
 Paget, Walburga Ehrengarde Helena (von Hohenthal) lady
 Paget, W. E. H. In my tower. (F '26)
 Paid in full. Beith, J. H. (Je '25)
 Painted Desert, Arizona
 Crane, L. Indians of the enchanted desert. (N '25)
 Painted veil. Maugham, W. S. (My '25)
 Painters, British
 Laver, J. Portraits in oil and vinegar. (D '25)
 Painting
 Davenport, C. J. H. Art student's vademecum. (O '25)
 Phillips, C. Emotion in art. (D '25)
 Painting, Industrial
 Kelly, A. A. Painting trade hand-book. (N '25)
 Miller, B. E. Painting of railway equipment. (S '25)
 Painting of railway equipment. Miller, B. E. (S '25)
 Painting trade hand-book. Kelly, A. A. (N '25)
 Panama
 Description and travel
 Brown, L. M. A. Unknown tribes. (Mr '25)
 Panchatantra. Gold's gloom. (Ja '26)
 Panchatantra; tr. by A. W. Ryder. (D '25)
 Panic of 1837. McGrane, R. C. (S '25)
 Panics
 Adams, A. B. Economics of business cycles. (Ap '25)
 McGrane, R. C. Panic of 1837. (S '25)
 Pantomime
 Disher, M. W. Clowns and pantomimes. (F '26)
 Parade. Post, E. (O '25)
 Paradise. Hamilton, C. (Mr '25)
 Paraguay
 Description and travel
 Carpenter, F. G. Along the Paraná and the Amazon. (S '25)
 Parent's guide to children's reading. Bonner, M. G. (F '26)
 Paris
 Chatfield-Taylor, H. C. Cities of many men. (D '25)
 Description
 Edwards, G. F. Old time Paris. (D '25)
 Nevill, R. H. Paris of today. (F '26)
 Wilson, R. F. Paris on parade. (Ja '26)
 Social life and customs
 Nevill, R. H. Paris of today. (F '26)
 Wilson, R. F. Paris on parade. (Ja '26)
 Paris. Liddell Hart, B. H. (D '25)
 Paris of today. Nevill, R. H. (F '26)
 Paris on parade. Wilson, R. F. (Ja '26)
 Parnell, Charles Stewart
 Ervine, St J. G. Parnell. (N '25)
 Parodies
 Ward, C. Foolish fiction. (D '25)

Parson Primrose. King, R. W. (D '25)

Parties

Wallis, C., and Gates, N. R. Parties for occasions. (Ag '25)

Parties for occasions. Wallis, C., and Gates, N. R. (Ag '25)

Passer-by. Dell, E. M. (Ag '25)

Passing of the phantoms. Patten, C. J. (My '25)

Passion and pain. Zweig, S. (D '25)

Pasteur, Louis

Russell, I. K. Romance of the holes in bread. (Ag '25)

Patents

Vaughan, F. L. Economics of our patent system. (F '26)

Pathology

Barker, L. F., and Sprunt, T. P. Degenerative diseases. (Ap '25)

Patrick, Mary Mills

Jenkins, H. D. Educational ambassador to the Near East. (D '25)

Patriotism

Holmes, J. H. Patriotism is not enough. (S '25)

Patriotism is not enough. Holmes, J. H. (S '25)

Patten, Simon Nelson

Nearing, S. Educational frontiers. (N '25)

Pattern. Franken, R. L. (Je '25)

Paul Bunyan. Shephard, E. (Je '25)

Paul Bunyan. Stevens, J. (My '25)

Paul of Tarsus. Glover, T. R. (D '25)

Paul, Saint

Glover, T. R. Paul of Tarsus. (D '25)

Peabody, Josephine Preston

Peabody, J. P. Diary and letters. (Ja '26)

Peace

Birkenhead, F. E. S., and others. Approaches to world problems. (Ap '25)

Kellor, F. A., and Hatvany, A. Security against war. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Newfang, O. Road to world peace. (My '25)

Page, K. American peace policy. (F '26)

Petre, M. D. M. Two cities. (O '25)

Peace and goodwill in industry. Baldwin, S. (S '25)

Peacocks and pagodas. Edmonds, P. (O '25)

Peacock's tail. Fedden, K. W. (F '26)

Peal of bells. Lynd, R. (Ap '25)

Pearls of desire. Small, A. J. (Ag '25)

Pecan

Stuckey, H. P., and Kyle, E. J. Pecan-growing. (S '25)

Pecan-growing. Stuckey, H. P., and Kyle, E. J. (S '25)

Peck, Ludella L.

Burroughs, J., and Peck, L. L. John Burroughs and Ludella Peck. (N '25)

Pedlar's ware. Baker, M. (Ag '25)

Pegeen and the potomus. Dodd, L. W. (O '25)

Pencilings. Gray, J. (O '25)

Pencilings. Murry, J. M. (Ja '26)

Peninsula war, 1807-1814

Schaumann, A. L. F. On the road with Wellington. (Ap '25)

Pennell, Joseph

Pennell, J. Adventures of an illustrator. (Ja '26)

Pennsylvania

Description and travel

Nutting, W. Pennsylvania beautiful (eastern). (Je '25)

Pennsylvania beautiful (eastern). Nutting, W. (Je '25)

People of the Philippines. Laubach, F. C. (Mr '25)

People of the steppes. Fox, R. (N '25)

Pepys, Samuel

Lucas-Dubretton, J. Samuel Pepys. (N '25)

Tanner, J. R. Mr Pepys. (My '25)

Perennial bachelor. Parrish, A. (O '25)

Perennials

Cloud, D. M.-P. Culture of perennials. (Je '25)

Perfumery

Parry, E. J. Cyclopaedia of perfumery. (F '26)

Peril of the sea. Lockhart, J. G. (O '25)

Perissa. Mais, S. P. B. (Ag '25)

Permanent court of international justice and the question of American participation. Hudson, M. O. (S '25)

Persecution

Van Loon, H. W. Tolerance. (D '25)

Perseus. Stokes, H. F. S. (O '25)

Persia

Cooper, M. C. Grass. (Je '25)

Persia. American financial mission

Millspaugh, A. C. American task in Persia. (F '26)

Personal equation. Berman, L. (S '25)

Personal hygiene. McLaughlin, A. J., and Toby, J. A. (S '25)

Personalities and reminiscences of the war. Bullard, R. L. (Ja '26)

Personality

Berman, L. Personal equation. (S '25)

Personality and health. Sadler, W. S. (My '25)

Personnel administration. Rossi, W. H. and D. I. (Je '25)

Personnel problems of the teaching staff. Lewis, E. E. (My '25)

Peru

Description and travel

Murphy, R. C. Bird islands of Peru. (Ap '25)

Prodgers, C. H. Adventures in Peru. (Mr '25)

History

Schoellkopf, A. Life of San Martin. (My '25)

Peter I, the Great, emperor of Russia

Fiction

Henschke, A. Peter the Czar. (Ja '26)

Peter in process. Baker, O. (F '26)

Peter Pantheism. Schaffner, R. H. (F '26)

Peter the Czar. Henschke, A. (Ja '26)

Peter Vacuum. Gibbs, A. (O '25)

Petra, Arabia

Ersine, B. Vanished cities of Arabia. (N '25)

Petroleum

American petroleum institute. American petroleum supply and demand. (D '25)

Nugey, A. L. Oil refinery specifications. (S, N '25)

Van Tuyl, F. M. Elements of petroleum geology. (S '25)

Petroleum industry and trade

American petroleum institute. American petroleum supply and demand. (D '25)

Morland, D. F., and McKee, R. W. Accounting for the petroleum industry. (S '25)

Ph. D. S. Bacon, L. (Ap '25)

Phantom public. Lippmann, W. (Ja '26)

Philadelphia

Churches

Washburn, L. C., comp. Christ church, Philadelphia. (F '26)

Philippine Islands

Description and travel

Carpenter, F. G. Through the Philippines and Hawaii. (S '25)

Politics and government

Dutcher, G. M. Political awakening of the East. (S '25)

Mayo, K. Isles of fear. (My '25)

Religion

Laubach, F. C. People of the Philippines. (Mr '25)

Philosophy

Avey, A. E., comp. Readings in philosophy. (My '25)

Brightman, E. S. Introduction to philosophy. (Ag '25)

Collingwood, R. G. Speculum mentis. (N '25)

Cunningham, G. W. Problems of philosophy. (S '25)

Keyserling, H. A. Travel diary of a philosopher. (Ag '25)

- Otto, M. C. Things and ideals. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Patrick, G. T. W. World and its meaning. (My '25)
- Pierce, E. Philosophy of character. (My '25)
- Ryan, J. H. Introduction to philosophy. (Je '25)
- Santayana, G. Dialogues in limbo. (N '25)
- Stokes, A. Thread of Ariadne. (Ag '25)
- White, S. E. Credo. (Ag '25)
- Philosophy, Greek
- Oakeley, H. D. Greek ethical thought. (O '25)
- Philosophy of character. Pierce, E. (My '25)
- Philosophy of religion. Edwards, D. M. (My '25)
- Philosophy of witchcraft. Watson, F. (S '25)
- Phonetics
- DeWitt, M. E. EuphonEnglish in America. (S '25)
- Photography
- Collins, A. F. Amateur photographer's handbook. (S '25)
- Photography, Aerial
- Mittelholzer, W., and others. By airplane towards the North Pole. (F '26)
- Physical geography
- Miller, W. J. Introduction to physical geology. (Ap '25)
- Physico-chemical evolution. Guyé, C. E. (S '25)
- Physics
- Planck, M. K. E. L. Survey of physics. (N '25)
- Laboratory manuals
- Ingersoll, L. R. Laboratory manual of experiments in physics. (S '25)
- Physiologus
- Reynard the Fox. Epic of the beast. (Ap '25)
- Physiology
- Dorsey, G. A. Why are behave like human beings. (F '26)
- Piano music. Hamilton, C. G. (S '25)
- Piano quintet. Sackville-West, E. (F '26)
- Pianoforte music
- Hamilton, C. G. Piano music. (S '25)
- Piccolo Pomi. Beltramelli, A. (N '25)
- Pickaninny. Swearingen, E. M. (S '25)
- Pictures
- Pearson, R. M. How to see modern pictures. (Je '25)
- Pilgrim in Spain. Bell, A. F. G. (Mr '25)
- Pilgrim of eternity. Drinkwater, J. (F '26)
- Pilgrimage of Henry James. Brooks, Van W. (My '25)
- Pimpernel and Rosemary. Orczy, E. (Mr '25)
- Pioneer of public health. Jordan, E. O., and others. (Ag '25)
- Pirate of Pittsburgh. Whitman, H. E. O. (Ap '25)
- Pirates
- Seitz, D. C. Under the black flag. (S '25)
- Pissarro, Camille Jacob
- Tabarant, A. Pissarro. (O '25)
- Plantation life
- Gaines, F. P. Southern plantation. (My '25)
- Plants
- Fabre, J. H. C. Wonder book of plant life. (Je '25)
- Plants and man. Bower, F. O. (O, N '25)
- Platinum
- Smith, E. A. Platinum metals. (S '25)
- Platinum metals. Smith, E. A. (S '25)
- Plato
- Taylor, A. E. Platonism and its influence. (F '26)
- Platonism and its influence. Taylor, A. E. (F '26)
- Platoon school. Spain, C. L. (N '25)
- Play
- Playground and recreation association of America. Normal course in play. (F '26)
- Player under three reigns. Forbes-Robertson, J. (Je '25)
- Playing the game. Harris, S. (Je '25)
- Playtime & company. Lucas, E. V. (Ja '26)
- Playwrights of the new American theater. Dickinson, T. H. (Ag '25)
- Pleasure buyers. Roche, A. S. (Ag '25)
- Pleasure haunts of London during four centuries. Chancellor, E. B. (F '26)
- Pluck and luck. Benchley, R. C. (F '26)
- Plucky Allens. Pierson, C. D. (D '25)
- Plumbing
- Cleverdon, W. S. L. Water supply of buildings and rural communities. (S '25)
- Poe, Edgar Allan
- Poe, E. A. Letters till now unpublished. (N '25)
- Poems. Hughes, A. M. (Ag '25)
- Poems. Lewis, C. M. (Mr '25)
- Poems. Venable, W. H. (Je '25)
- Poems for youth. Benét, W. R., comp. (Ag '25)
- Poetry
- Collins, H. P. Modern poetry. (Ja '26)
- Drinkwater, J. Muse in council. (Je '25)
- Mearns, H., ed. Creative youth. (O '25)
- Moore, G., ed. Anthology of pure poetry. (My '25)
- Trevelyan, R. C. Thamyris. (N '25)
- Wilkinson, M. O. Way of the makers. (Ag '25)
- Poetry (individual authors)
- Adams, L. Those not elect. (Ja '26)
- Aiken, C. P. Priapus and the pool. (Ja '26)
- Aldington, H. Collected poems. (Ag '25)
- Aldington, R. Exile. (Je '25)
- Aldington, R. Fool i' the forest. (Ag '25)
- Allen, H. Earth moods. (S '25)
- Anderson, M. You who have dreams. (Ja '26)
- Atwater, R. Rickety rimes of Riq. (N '25)
- Babcock, E. S. Nantucket windows. (Je '25)
- Bacon, L. Ph. D.s. (Ap '25)
- Barnes, W. Twenty poems in common English. (O '25)
- Benét, S. V. Tiger joy. (N '25)
- Bianchi, M. G. Wandering Eros. (Ap '25)
- Burt, M. S. When I grew up to middle age. (N '25)
- Bynner, W. Caravan. (F '26)
- Conkling, G. W. Ship's log. (Mr '25)
- Crane, N. C. R. Lava lane. (D '25)
- Cullen, C. Color. (D '25)
- Cummings, E. E. XLI poems. (S '25)
- Cuthrell, F. Sign posts. (Ag '25)
- Davies, W. H. Selected poems. (Ag '25)
- Deutsch, B. Honey out of the rock. (D '25)
- Divine, C. Road to town. (F '26)
- Dow, D. Will-o'-the-wisp. (Ag '25)
- Drinkwater, J. New poems. (My '25)
- Erskine, J. Sonata. (Ag '25)
- Flanner, H. Tree in bloom. (My '25)
- Gorell, R. G. B. Spirit of happiness. (Ja '26)
- Guiterman, A. Poet's proverbs. (Ap '25)
- Hagedorn, H. Ladders through the blue. (F '26)
- Hardy, T. Human shows. (F '26)
- Hawker, R. S. Twenty poems. (O '25)
- Hughes, A. M. Poems. (Ag '25)
- Isham, J. C. Winds and tides. (My '25)
- Jeffers, R. Roan stallion. (Ja '26)
- Kilmer, A. Poor king's daughter. (Je '25)
- Leonard, W. E. C. Tutankhamen, and after. (My '25)
- Leonard, W. E. C. Two lives. (Ja '26)
- Lewis, C. M. Poems. (Mr '25)
- Lindsey, T. Blue norther. (D '25)
- Low, B. R. C. Darkening sea. (My '25)
- Lowell, A. What's o'clock. (O '25)
- McCarthy, J. R. For the morning. (My '25)
- McCreary, F. R. Northeast corner. (N '25)
- Mackenzie, J. K. The venture. (Je '25)
- Mackinstry, E. Puck in pasture. (F '26)
- MacLeish, A. Pot of earth. (Ag '25)
- Marquis, D. Awakening. (S '25)
- Mary Angelita. Starshine and candlelight. (F '26)
- Mason-Manheim, M. Hill fragments. (O '25)
- Masters, E. L. Selected poems. (F '26)
- Montgomery, R. M. Ulysses returns. (Ag '25)
- Moore, M. Observations. (My '25)
- Muir, E. First poems. (Je '25)

Poetry (individual authors)—Continued

- Neihardt, J. G. Song of the Indian wars. (N '25)
 Nightingale, M. Mostly moonshine. (My '25)
 Niven, F. J. Lover of the land. (S '25)
 Noyes, A. Book of earth. (S '25)
 Peck, S. M. Autumn trail. (O '25)
 Rhoades, J. Collected poems. (D '25)
 Rice, C. Y. Bitter brew. (My '25)
 Ritter, M. T. Mirrors. (Ag '25)
 Robinson, E. A. Dionysus in doubt. (My '25)
 Russell, G. W. Voices of the stones. (S '25)
 Sarett, L. R. Slow smoke. (F '26)
 Sitwell, E. Troy park. (Ja '26)
 Sitwell, O. Out of the flame. (Ag '25)
 Sitwell, S. Thirteenth Caesar. (My '25)
 Smith, M. C. Sphinx of fight. (O '25)
 Stephens, J. Poetry recital. (S '25)
 Strobel, M. Once in a blue moon. (Ag '25)
 Tietjens, E. S. Profiles from home. (My '25)
 Torrence, R. Hesperides. (Ag, S '25)
 Towne, C. H. Selected poems. (N '25)
 Venable, W. H. Poems. (Je '25)
 Vinal, H. Nor youth nor age. (S '25)
 Welsh, R. G. Azrael. (Je '25)
 Whitman, W. Walt Whitman; a study. (Ap '25)
 Williams, C. Windows of night. (N '25)
 Wolfe, H. Unknown goddess. (N '25)
 Poetry cure. Schaffner, R. H., comp. (F '26)
 Poetry from the Bible. (O '25)
 Poetry recital. Stephens, J. (S '25)

Poets, American

- Wood, C. Poets of America. (Je '25)

Poets, English

- Drinkwater, J. Muse in council. (My '25)
 Poets of America. Wood, C. (Je '25)
 Poets of the future. Schnitzkind, H. T., ed. (Ap '25)
 Poet's proverbs. Guiterman, A. (Ap '25)
 Points of honor. Boyd, T. A. (My '25)
 Polrot investigates. Christie, A. (Ag '25)

Poisons

- Hamilton, A. Industrial poisons in the United States. (D '25)

PolandHistory

- Dyboski, R. Outlines of Polish history. (N '25)

Police, State

- Smith, B. State police. (Ja '26)
 Political and social history of the United States, 1492-1828. Hockett, H. C. (D '25)
 Political and social history of the United States, 1829-1925. Schlesinger, A. M. (D '25)
 Political awakening of the East. Dutcher, G. M. (S '25)
 Political career of Lord Byron. Raymond, D. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Political novel. Speare, M. E. (Ap '25)

Political novels

- Speare, M. E. Political novel. (Ap '25)

Political partiesUnited States

- Belmont, P. National isolation an illusion. (S '25)
 Robinson, E. E. Evolution of American political parties. (Ap, My '25)
 Political science
 Baker-Crothers, H., and Hudnut, R. A. Problems of citizenship. (My '25)
 Bonn, M. J. Crisis of European democracy. (D '25)
 Butler, N. M. Faith of a liberal. (Mr, My '25)
 Joad, C. E. M. Introduction to modern political theory. (Ap '25)
 Laski, H. J. Grammar of politics. (N '25)
 Lippmann, W. Phantom public. (Ja '26)
 McDougall, W. Indestructible union. (My '25)
 Merriam, C. E. New aspects of politics. (Ja '26)
 Merriam, C. E., and Barnes, H. E., eds. History of political theories. (My '25)
 Munro, W. B. Current problems in citizenship. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Rockow, L. Contemporary political thought in England. (N '25)

- Vaughan, D. E. Studies in the history of political philosophy. (Ag '25)

Politics, Practical

- Bowden, R. D. Evolution of the politician. (My '25)
 Lanni, C. G. Traveling on the Democratic donkey. (N '25)

- The polyglots. Gerhardt, W. A. (Ag '25)

Polynesians

- Brown, J. M. Riddle of the Pacific. (N '25)
 Pontifex Maximus. Andrews, M. R. (Ag '25)
 Poor Cecco. Bianco, M. (N '25)
 Poor king's daughter. Kilmer, A. (Je '25)

Popes

- Bayer, F. J. Book of the popes. (Ja '26)

Population

- Carr-Saunders, A. M. Population. (N '25)
 Pearl, R. Biology of population growth. (F '26)

- Porgy. Heyward, Du B. (N '25)
 Port development. MacElwee, R. S. (Ja '26)
 Portrait of a man with red hair. Walpole, H. (D '25)

- Portrait of Zélide. Scott, G. (Je '25)
 Portraits in oil and vinegar. Laver, J. (D '25)
 Portraits of a half century. Powers, S. L. (Ja '26)

- Portraits: real and imaginary. Boyd, E. A. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

PortugalDescription and travel

- Nichols, R. S. Spanish & Portuguese gardens. (Mr '25)

- Portuguese silver. Buck, C. N. (Ap '25)

- Possession. Bromfield, L. (N '25)

Postal serviceUnited States

- Rich, W. E. History of the United States post office to the year 1829. (Ap '25)

Posters

- Sparrow, W. S. Advertising and British art. (My '25)

- Post-war Britain. Siegfried, A. (F '26)

- Pot of earth. MacLeish, A. (Ag '25)

Pottery

- Barnard, H. Chats on Wedgwood ware. (Mr '25)

- Noke, C. J., and Plant, H. J. Pottery. (O '25)

Powell, Lyman Pierson

- Powell, L. P. Human touch. (Je '25)

- Powell, Richard Stillman, pseud. See Barbour, R. H. (N '25)

- Power. Stringer, A. J. A. (Je '25)

- Power and the glory. Parker, G. (N '25)

Powys, Llewelyn

- Powys, L. Skin for skin. (N '25)

- Practical book of home repairs. Fraser, C. C. (N '25)

- Practical business English. Mason, W. L. (F '26)

- Practical foremanship. Gardiner, G. L. (S '25)

- Practical graphic figures. Lutz, E. G. (Je '25)

- Practical handbook of modern library cataloging. Bishop, W. W. (My '25)

- Practical microscopical metallography. Greaves, R. H., and Wrighton, H. (S '25)

- Practical milling. Dedrick, B. W. (S '25)

- Practical psychology for men and women in the industries and professions. Farnsworth, B. B. (Ja '26)

- Practical radio including the testing of radio receiving sets. Moyer, J. A., and Wostrel, J. F. (F '26)

- Prairie. Muilenburg, W. J. (O '25)

- Prairie fires. Beers, L. D. (Ag '25)

- Prairie gold. Bindloss, H. (Ja '26)

Prayer

- Clark, G. Soul's sincere desire. (Ag '25)

Preaching

- Burton, N. J. In pulpit and parish. (Ag '25)

Pregnancy

- De Normandie, R. L. Expectant mother. (S '25)

- Prehistoric man. Morgan, J. J. M. de. (Ap '25)

- Prejudices: fourth series. Mencken, H. L. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Preparation of scientific and technical papers. Trelease, S. F., and Yule, E. S. (My '25)
- Pre-romanesque churches of Spain. King, G. G. (Ap '25)
- Pre-school age. Kamm, M. E. (F '26)
- Prescott, William Hickling
- Prescott, W. H. Correspondence of William Hickling Prescott. (F '26)
- Present economic revolution in the United States. Carver, T. N. (N '25)
- Present-day conception of mental disorders. Campbell, C. M. (F '26)
- Presidents
- United States
- Colman, E. M. Seventy-five years of White House gossip. (Mr '25)
- Priapus and the pool. Aiken, C. P. (Ja '26)
- Prices
- Warren, G. F., and Pearson, F. A. Agricultural situation. (Ag '25)
- Prichard, Hesketh Vernon Hesketh
- Parker, E. Hesketh Prichard. (S '25)
- Primary school. Moore, A. E. (D '25)
- Prime minister and his son. Wortley, E. S., ed. (S '25)
- Primer of graphic and statistics for teachers. Rugg, H. O. (D '25)
- Prince and the princess. Washburn, C. C. (My '25)
- Prince of Washington square. Liscomb, H. F. (Ap '25)
- Princess Amelia. Oman, C. (Mr '25)
- Princess of Cleves. La Fayette, M. M. (Je '25)
- Princess of Paradise island. Lathrop, L. A. (S '25)
- Principles of Christian living. Smith, G. B. (My '25)
- Principles of education. Chapman, J. C., and Counts, G. S. (D '25)
- Principles of importing. Butterbaugh, W. E. (Mr '25)
- Principles of literary criticism. Richards, I. A. (My '25)
- Principles of public health engineering. Phelps, E. B. (N '25)
- Principles of secondary education. Uhl, W. L., comp. (N '25)
- Principles of transmission in telephony. Weinbach, M. P. (S '25)
- Printing
- History
- Carter, T. F. Invention of printing in China. (O '25)
- Prisoners. Molnar, F. (Ap '25)
- Prisons
- Siberia
- Ossendowski, F. A., and Palen, L. S. From president to prison. (S '25)
- Private life of Helen of Troy. Erskine, J. (Ja '26)
- Privateering
- MacLay, E. S. History of American privateers. (Mr '25)
- Prize stories for 1924. O. Henry memorial award. (Mr '25)
- Problem child in school. Sayles, M. B. (Ja '26)
- Problem of immortality. Tsanoff, R. A. (S '25)
- Problems of citizenship. Baker-Crothers, H., and Hudnut, R. A. (My '25)
- Problems of modern music. Weissmann, A. (D '25)
- Problems of philosophy. Cunningham, G. W. (S '25)
- Problems of the teaching profession. Almack, J. C., and Lang, A. R. (D '25)
- Processional. Lawson, J. H. (My '25)
- Production and measurement of low pressures. Newman, F. H. (Ja '26)
- Profession, Choice of
- Ernst, C. H., ed. What shall I be? (Ap '25)
- Fryer, D. Vocational self-guidance. (Ag '25)
- Jackson, W. M. What men do. (Ja '26)
- Toland, E. D. Choosing the right career. (S '25)
- Professor. Johnson, S. (My '25)
- Professor's house. Cather, W. S. (O '25)
- Profiles from home. Tietjens, E. S. (My '25)
- Profit
- Foster, W. T., and Catchings, W. Profits. (D '25)
- Profitable science in industry. Farnham, D. T., and others. (Je '25)
- Profits. Foster, W. T., and Catchings, W. (D '25)
- Progress
- Fournier d'Albe, E. E. Quo vadimus? (S '25)
- Progress and the constitution. Baker, N. D. (D '25)
- Progressive methods of teaching. Stormzand, M. J. (Ag '25)
- Prohibition
- Beman, L. T., comp. Selected articles on prohibition. (Je '25)
- Projects in world-friendship. Lobingier, J. L. (N '25)
- Prometheus. Jennings, H. S. (D '25)
- Pronouncing chemical formula speller and contest guide. Jacobson, C. A. (S '25)
- Prophecies
- Low, A. M. The future. (N '25)
- Prophets
- Smith, J. M. P. Prophets and their times. (S '25)
- Prophets and their times. Smith, J. M. P. (S '25)
- Prose and poetry of the revolution. Prescott, F. C., and Nelson, J. H., eds. (Ja '26)
- Proteins and the theory of colloidal behavior. Loeb, J. (F '26)
- Proteus. Lee, V., pseud. (O '25)
- Proud old name. Scoggins, C. E. (O '25)
- Psychical research
- Lyttelton, E. S. Faculty of communion. (S '25)
- Marchant, J., ed. Survival. (Ja '26)
- Psychoanalysis
- Bousfield, E. G. P. Sex and civilization. (Je '25)
- Wittels, F. Sigmund Freud. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Psychology
- Adams, H. F. Ways of the mind. (Mr '25)
- Annett, E. A. Psychology for Bible teachers. (Ag '25)
- Dorsey, G. A. Why we behave like human beings. (F '26)
- Farnsworth, B. B. Practical psychology for men and women in the industries and professions. (Ja '26)
- Pierce, E. Philosophy of character. (My '25)
- Seabury, D. Unmasking our minds. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Psychology, Applied
- Harrison, H. D. Industrial psychology and the production of wealth. (My '25)
- Snow, A. J. Psychology in business relations. (S '25)
- Psychology, Comparative
- Patten, C. J. Passing of the phantoms. (My '25)
- Psychology, Educational
- Edwards, A. S. Psychology of elementary education. (F '26)
- Koffka, A. Growth of the mind. (Ag '25)
- Thomson, G. H. Instinct, intelligence and character. (S '25)
- Weeks, A. D. Psychology for child training. (S '25)
- Psychology, Pathological
- Burt, C. L. Young delinquent. (F '26)
- Campbell, C. M. Present-day conception of mental disorders. (F '26)
- Psychology, Physiological
- Gesell, A. L. Mental growth of the pre-school child. (Je '25)
- Johnson, B. J. Mental growth of children. (S '25)
- Psychology for Bible teachers. Annett, E. A. (Ag '25)
- Psychology for child training. Weeks, A. D. (S '25)

- Psychology in business relations. Snow, A. J. (S '25)
- Psychology of elementary education. Edwards, A. S. (F '26)
- Psychology of emotion. MacCurdy, J. T. (S '25)
- Psychology of human sociology. Ellwood, C. A. (F '26)
- Psychology of religion. Selbie, W. B. (Ap '25)
- Psychology of religious mysticism. Leuba, J. H. (S '25)
- Psychology of the junior high school pupil. Pechstein, L. A., and McGregor, A. L. (My '25)
- Psychology of the poet Shelley. Carpenter, E., and Barnefeld, G. (N '25)
- Psychology of the preschool child. Baldwin, B. T., and Stecher, L. I. (Ap '25)
- Public and its utilities. Raymond, W. G. (D '25)
- Public employment offices. Harrison, S. M., and others. (Je '25)
- Public finance. Lutz, H. L. (Ap '25)
- Public health
- Armstrong, D. B. Community health. (S '25)
- Newsholme, A. Ministry of health. (F '26)
- Phelps, E. B. Principles of public health engineering. (N '25)
- Welch, W. H. Public health in theory and practice. (N '25)
- Public health in theory and practice. Welch, W. H. (N '25)
- Public life. Spender, J. A. (Ag '25)
- Public opinion
- Lippmann, W. Phantom public. (Ja '26)
- Public ownership. Thompson, C. D. (Je '25)
- Public papers, college and state. Wilson, W. (Ag '25)
- Public schools
- Finance
- Pittenger, B. F. Introduction to public school finance. (F '26)
- Public speaking
- Wicks, S. F. Public speaking for business men. (N '25)
- Public speaking for business men. Wicks, S. F. (N '25)
- Public utilities
- Bauer, J. Effective regulation of public utilities. (N '25)
- Nash, L. R. Economics of public utilities. (F '26)
- Raymond, W. G. Public and its utilities. (D '25)
- Wherry, W. M., jr. Public utilities and the law. (Ja '26)
- Public utilities and the law. Wherry, W. M., jr. (Ja '26)
- Puck in pasture. Mackinstry, E. (F '26)
- Pueblo Indians
- Guthe, C. E. Pueblo pottery making. (Ag '25)
- Pueblo pottery making. Guthe, C. E. (Ag '25)
- Pulverised fuel. Harvey, L. C. (S '25)
- Purchasing power of the consumer. Berridge, W. A., and others. (D '25)
- Pure poetry, an anthology. Eng title of Anthology of pure poetry. Moore, G., ed. (My '25)
- Pyeshkoff, Alexei Maximovich. See Gorky, M., pseud. (N '25)
- Pyle, Howard
- Abbott, C. D. Howard Pyle. (F '26)
- Pyramid of lead. Atkey, B. (O '25)
- Pyrenees
- Wilstach, P. Along the Pyrenees. (Ap '25)
- Quacks and quackery
- Fishbein, M. Medical follies. (N '25)
- Quadruple alliance, 1815
- Webster, C. K. Foreign policy of Castlereagh, 1815-1822. (Ja '26)
- Quebec (province)
- Hémon, L. Journal of Louis Hémon. (Mr '25)
- Queen of cooks—and some kings. Lewis, R. (S '25)
- Queen of the dawn. Haggard, H. R. (Ap '25)
- Queen's Folly. Weyman, S. J. (N '25)
- Queer Judson. Lincoln, J. C. (N '25)
- Quest. Burt, K. (D '25)
- Quest for health. Tobey, J. A. (O '25)
- Quest of the antique. Hodgson, Mrs J. W. (D '25)
- Quick, Herbert
- Quick, H. One man's life. (D '25)
- Quillan, Dorothy (Wordsworth) (Mrs Edward Quillan)
- Morley, F. V. Dora Wordsworth, her book. (My '25)
- Quo vadimus? Fournier d'Albe, E. E. (S '25)
- Race
- Stoddard, L. Racial realities in Europe. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Race or nation. Speranza, G. C. (D '25)
- Race prejudice
- Guérard, A. L. Beyond hatred. (Ja '26)
- Race problems
- Miller, H. A. Races, nations and classes. (Je '25)
- Races, nations and classes. Miller, H. A. (Je '25)
- Races of man and their distribution. Haddon, A. C. (Ag '25)
- Racial realities in Europe. Stoddard, L. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Radiation
- Lodge, O. J. Atoms and rays. (Je '25)
- Radio broadcasting
- Rothafel, S. L., and Yates, R. F. Broadcasting, its new day. (Ag '25)
- Radio communication
- Lodge, O. J. Talks about radio. (Ja '26)
- Radio telephone
- Anderson, J. E., and others. Henley's 222 radio circuit designs. (F '26)
- Moyer, J. A., and Wostrel, J. F. Practical radio including the testing of radio receiving sets. (F '26)
- Rahwedia. Smith, C. H. (D '25)
- Railroad operation. Cordeal, E. (S '25)
- Railroads
- Consolidation
- Splawn, W. M. W. Consolidation of railroads. (My '25)
- Management
- Cordeal, E. Railroad operation. (S '25)
- United States
- Gillette, E. Locating the iron trail. (S '25)
- Splawn, W. M. W. Consolidation of railroads. (My '25)
- Thompson, S. Short history of American railways. (D '25)
- Rain on the roof. Meigs, C. L. (Ja '26)
- Raising fur-bearing animals. Patton, H. (Ja '26)
- Random letters from many countries. Coolidge, J. G. (Ap '25)
- Ranier, Mount
- Schmoe, F. W. Our greatest mountain. (O '25)
- Ransom. Richardson, A. (N '25)
- Rappahannock river
- Jett, D. C. In tidewater Virginia. (S '25)
- The rasp. Macdonald, P. (D '25)
- Rational hind. Williams, B. A. (Ag '25)
- Rats
- Hovell, T. M. Rats and how to destroy them. (D '25)
- Rats and how to destroy them. Hovell, T. M. (D '25)
- Readings in philosophy. Avey, A. E., comp. (My '25)
- Real boy and the new school. Hamilton, A. E. (F '26)
- Real estate business
- Hall, H., and others, eds. Real estate manual for brokers, owners, and operators. (S '25)
- Snyder, B., and Lippincott, W., eds. Real estate handbook. (Ja '26)

- Real estate handbook. Snyder, B., and Lippincott, W., eds. (Ja '26)
- Real estate manual for brokers, owners, and operators. Hall, H., and others, eds. (S '25)
- The real Jew. Newman, H., ed. (D '25)
- Real property
- Valuation
- Babcock, F. M. Appraisal of real estate. (Ap '25)
- Reamer Lou. Forgione, L. (Ap '25)
- Reawakening of the Orient. (O '25)
- Rebel saints. Best, M. A. (F '26)
- Rebel Smith. Brodney, S. (S '25)
- Recent American history. Shippee, L. B. (My '25)
- Recent foreign policy of the United States. Blakeslee, G. H. (Ja '26)
- Recent labor progress. Babson, R. W. (Ag '25)
- Recitations and readings
- Indexes
- Silk, A. K., and Fanning, C. E., comps. Index to dramatic readings. (Mr '25)
- Reckless lady. Gibbs, P. H. (Mr, My '25)
- Recollections
- Baring-Gould, S. Early reminiscences, 1834-1864. (My '25)
- Bigelow, P. Seventy summers. (F '26)
- Bishop, J. B. Notes and anecdotes of many years. (N '25)
- Chatfield-Taylor, H. C. Cities of many men. (D '25)
- Clarke, J. I. C. My life and memories. (Ja '26)
- Daudet, L. A. Memoirs of Daudet. (F '26)
- Hamilton, V. M. Things that happened. (S '25)
- Hein, O. L. Memories of long ago. (O '25)
- Howard, J. R. Remembrance of things past. (Ag '25)
- Lewis, R. Queen of cooks—and some kings. (S '25)
- MacNeill, J. G. S. What I have seen and heard. (O '25)
- McRae, M. A. Forty years in newspaperdom. (Ap '25)
- Marshall, T. R. Recollections. (Ja '26)
- Powell, L. P. Human touch. (Je '25)
- Powers, S. L. Portraits of a half century. (Ja '26)
- Rodd, J. R. Social and diplomatic memories (third series), 1902-1919. (F '26)
- Ross, J. Years of my pilgrimage. (Ap '25)
- Scudamore, F. Sheaf of memories. (S '25)
- Stirling, A. M. W. Life's little day. (Ap '25)
- Things I shouldn't tell. (Mr '25)
- Ullswater, J. W. L. Speaker's commentaries. (F '26)
- Vachell, H. A. Fellow-travellers. (Ag '25)
- Reconstruction
- Taylor, A. A. Negro in South Carolina during the reconstruction. (My '25)
- Reconstruction (European war)
- Aubert, L. Reconstruction of Europe. (D '25)
- High, S. Europe turns the corner. (N '25)
- Nicholson, J. H. Re-making of the nations. (F '26)
- Whelpley, J. D. Reconstruction. (Je '25)
- Reconstruction. Whelpley, J. D. (Je '25)
- Reconstruction of Europe. Aubert, L. (D '25)
- Recovery of gasoline from natural gas. Burrell, G. A. (S '25)
- Rector of Malliseet. Reid, L. (S '25)
- Rector of Wyck. Sinclair, M. (Ap '25)
- Red. Van Vechten, C. (Mr '25)
- Red ashes. Pedler, M. (S '25)
- Red carpet on the Sahara. Perkins, E. (F '26)
- Red cord. Springer, T. G. (D '25)
- Red hair and blue sea. Osborn, S. R. (Ag '25)
- Red lacquer case. Wentworth, P. (Ap '25)
- Red lamp. Rinehart, M. (S '25)
- Red mass. Williams, V. (Mr '25)
- Red of the Redfields. Richmond, G. L. (Ap '25)
- Red Riding Hood. Jordan, E. G. (Ag '25)
- Redcoat and minuteman. Marshall, B. (D '25)
- Reducing menus for the hostess of to-day. Tip-ton, E. (N '25)
- Referendum
- Leigh, R. Citadel of freedom. (My '25)
- Reforging of Russia. Hullinger, E. W. (Mr '25)
- Reformation
- Evans, A. P. Episode in the struggle for religious freedom. (Ag '25)
- Refrigeration and refrigerating machinery
- Hull, H. B. Household refrigeration. (O '25)
- Regarding the French. Clarke, M. (Ag '25)
- Region cloud. Lubbock, F. (F '26)
- Regularization of employment. Feldman, H. (N '25)
- Relation in art. Blake, V. (Ja '26)
- Relation of wealth to welfare. Robson, W. A. (Ap '25)
- Relativity (physics)
- Benedicks, C. A. F. Space and time. (My '25)
- Guggenheimer, S. H. Einstein theory explained and analyzed. (Ag '25)
- Nordmann, C. Tyranny of time. (O '25)
- Russell, B. A. W. A B C of relativity. (Ja '26)
- Released for publication. Davis, O. K. (D '25)
- Relic. Eça de Queiroz, J. M. (O '25)
- Relief-maps
- Robert, L. B. Topographic mapping. (Je '25)
- Religion
- Chesterton, G. K. Everlasting man. (D '25)
- Edwards, D. M. Philosophy of religion. (My '25)
- Harris, C. Religion of undergraduates. (Ja '26)
- Jacks, L. P. Faith of a worker. (F '26)
- Leighton, J. A. Religion and the mind of to-day. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Powys, J. C. Religion of a sceptic. (Je '25)
- History
- Churchward, A. Origin and evolution of religion. (Mr '25)
- Psychology
- Leuba, J. H. Psychology of religious mysticism. (S '25)
- Pym, T. W. More psychology and the Christian life. (Ag '25)
- Selbie, W. B. Psychology of religion. (Ap '25)
- Religion and science
- Darrow, F. L. Through science to God. (Ja '26)
- Mathews, S., and others. Contributions of science to religion. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Osborn, H. F. Earth speaks to Bryan. (Ag '25)
- Thomson, J. A. Science and religion. (Ag '25)
- Watson, J. M. Science as revelation. (F '26)
- Religion and the mind of to-day. Leighton, J. A. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Religion of a sceptic. Powys, J. C. (Je '25)
- Religion of undergraduates. Harris, C. (Ja '26)
- Religion of yesterday and to-morrow. Lake, K. (D '25)
- Religions
- Churchward, A. Origin and evolution of religion. (Mr '25)
- Hare, W. L., ed. Religions of the Empire. (N '25)
- Huckel, O. Secret of the East. (Ap '25)
- Religions of the Empire. Hare, W. L., ed. (N '25)
- Religious education
- Annett, E. A. Psychology for Bible teachers. (Ag '25)
- Athearn, W. S. Character building in a democracy. (Mr '25)
- Bower, W. C. Curriculum of religious education. (Ag '25)
- Lobingier, J. L. Projects in world-friendship. (N '25)
- Religious liberty
- Evans, A. P. Episode in the struggle for religious freedom. (Ag '25)
- Van Loon, H. W. Tolerance. (D '25)
- Reluctant duchess. Miller, A. (N '25)
- Re-making of the nations. Nicholson, J. H. (F '26)
- Remembrance of things past. Howard, J. R. (Ag '25)

- Reminiscences of a fiddle dealer. Laurie, D: (My '25)
- Renoir, Firmin Auguste
Fosca, F. Renoir. (Je '25)
- Report writing. Fitting, R. U. (S '25)
- Reporters and reporting
Maulsby, W: S. Getting the news. (Mr '25)
- Reports
Fitting, R. U. Report writing. (S '25)
- Representative American dramas. Moses, M. J., ed. (S '25)
- Representative plays. Jones, H: A. (Ap '25)
- Resources of the Empire and their development. Lewin, P. E. (My '25)
- Responsibility, Legal
Glueck, S. S. Mental disorder and the criminal law. (D '25)
- Responsibility and culture. Jacks, L. P. (Je '25)
- Rest
Williams, E. H., and Hoag, E. B. Rest and grow strong. (S '25)
- Rest and grow strong. Williams, E. H., and Hoag, E. B. (S '25)
- Restaurants, lunch rooms, etc.
Richards, L., and Treat, N. Tea-room recipes (Ag '25)
- Restaurants of New York. Chappell, G: S. (Ja '26)
- Retail handbook. Hayward, W. S. (Ap '25)
- Retail trade
Hayward, W. S. Retail handbook. (Ap '25)
- Return of the Cutty Sark. Smith, C. F. (Ap '25)
- Return of the kings. X, 7, pseud. (S '25)
- Revell, Nellie
Revell, N. Fightin' through. (S '25)
- Revolt of modern youth. Lindsey, B: B., and Evans, W. (F '26)
- Revolutions
Sorokin, P. A. Sociology of revolution. (Ap '25)
- Webster, N. H. Secret societies and subversive movements. (Ap '25)
- Reynard the Fox. Epic of the beast. (Ap '25)
- Rhetoric
Baldwin, C: S. Ancient rhetoric and poetic. (N '25)
- Rhodes, Cecil
- Fiction
- Presland, J:, pseud. Dominion. (My '25)
- Richard Harding Davis. Quinby, H: C. (Ag '25)
- Rickety rimes of Riq. Atwater, R: (N '25)
- Riddle of the Pacific. Brown, J: M. (N '25)
- Riddle of Three-way Creek. Cullum, R. (Ag '25)
- Rider's California. Rider, F., ed. (D '25)
- Rider airship. Lewitt, E. H: (Ja '26)
- Rime
Redfield, B. G. Aid to rhyme. (O '25)
- Ritual and dramatized folkways. Jasspon, E. R., and Becker, B. (S '25)
- The road. Belloc, H. (N '25)
- Road materials
Barton, W: H., and Doane, L: H. Sampling and testing of highway materials. (F '26)
- Road to En-dor. Vance, L: J. (Ap '25)
- Road to Paris. Monahan, M. (Je '25)
- Road to Timbuktu. Mills, D. R. M. (Ag '25)
- Road to town. Divine, C: (F '26)
- Road to world peace. Newfang, O. (My '25)
- Roads
Belloc, H. The road. (N '25)
- Roads of doubt. Raine, W: M. (Je '25)
- Roads to social peace. Ross, E: A. (Ap '25)
- Roan stallion. Jeffers, R. (Ja '26)
- Roar of the crowd. Corbett, J: J. (Ap '25)
- Robert Burns. Drinkwater, J: (Ja '26)
- Robert E. Lee. Maurice, F: B. (Je '25)
- Robert Owen. Cole, G: D. H. (S '25)
- Robert Schumann. Niecks, F: (N '25)
- Rochester, New York
- Politics and government
- Lanni, C. G. Traveling on the Democratic donkey. (N '25)
- Rochester, New York. University
Rosenberger, J. L. Rochester and Colgate. (S '25)
- Rochester and Colgate. Rosenberger, J. L. (S '25)
- Rocking Moon. Willoughby, B. (O '25)
- Rocky mountains (Canada)
Freeman, L: R. On the roof of the Rockies. (Ja '26)
- Rodin, Auguste
Tirel, M. Last years of Rodin. (D '25)
- Rogues and diamonds. Jepson, S. (S '25)
- Roll and go. Colcord, J. C., comp. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Rolling round the world—for fun. Hope, S. (F '26)
- Roman Catholic church
Lunn, A. H: M. Roman converts. (F '26)
- Roman Catholic church in France
Gwynn, D. R. Catholic reaction in France. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Roman converts. Lunn, A. H: M. (F '26)
- Roman toga. Wilson, L. M. (Ag '25)
- Romance churches of France. Bodington, O. E. (O '25)
- Romance of Monte Carlo. Kingston, C: (S '25)
- Romance of new Russia. Marx, M. (Mr '25)
- Romance of the Edinburgh streets. Steuart, M. D. (D '25)
- Romance of the holes in bread. Russell, I: K. (Ag '25)
- Romance, the loveliest thing. Black, D. (N '25)
- Romantic '90s. Le Gallienne, R: (Ja '26)
- Romantic Spain. Eng title of Spanish sunshine. Elsner, E. (Mr '25)
- Romantic tradition. Eng title of Unveiled. Seymour, B. K. (Je '25)
- Romanticism
Gingerich, S. F. Essays in the romantic poets. (Je '25)
- Rome
- Antiquities
- Hill, I. C. Rome of the kings. (Ja '26)
- Biography
- Ferrero, G. Women of the Caesars. (S '25)
- Rome (city)
Lanciani, R. A. Ancient and modern Rome. (D '25)
- Antiquities
- Lanciani, R. A. Wanderings through ancient Roman churches. (My '25)
- Churches
- Lanciani, R. A. Wanderings through ancient Roman churches. (Mr '25)
- Thynne, R. Churches of Rome. (Je '25)
- Social life and customs
- Haight, E. H. Horace and his art of enjoyment. (Ag '25)
- Rome of the kings. Hill, I. C. (Ja '26)
- Romeo in Moon village. McCutcheon, G: B. (D '25)
- Rookery Nook. Travers, B. (O '25)
- Roosevelt, Theodore
Davis, O. K. Released for publication. (D '25)
- Dennett, T. Roosevelt and the Russo-Japanese war. (Ap '25)
- Moore, J. H. Roosevelt and the Old guard. (F '26)
- Roosevelt, T., and Lodge, H: C. Selections from the correspondence of Theodore Roosevelt and Henry Cabot Lodge, 1884-1918. (My '25)
- Roosevelt and the Old guard. Moore, J. H. (F '26)
- Roosevelt and the Russo-Japanese war. Dennett, T. (Ap '25)
- Roots and causes of the wars (1914-1919). Ewart, J: S. (Ag '25)
- Rosalie. Major, C: (S '25)
- Ross, Sir John
Ross, J: Years of my pilgrimage. (Ap '25)
- Rousseau, Victor, pseud. See Emanuel, V: R. (My '25, Ja '26)

- Roving through southern China. Franck, H. A. (D '25)
- Royal road to romance. Halliburton, R. (Ja '26)
- Ruben and Ivy Sên. Miln, L. (N '25)
- Rugs
Phillips, A. M. L. Hooked rugs and how to make them. (Ja '26)
- Ruint. Hughes, H. (Ja '26)
- Rumania
Description and travel
Marie, queen of Rumania. Country that I love. (O '25)
Social life and customs
Marie, queen of Rumania. Country that I love. (O '25)
Ruminations. McDowall, A. S. (D '25)
Run sheep run. Williamson, T. (Ja '26)
Runaway. Dell, F. (N '25)
Runaway bag. Terhune, A. P. (Ja '26)
Rural home. National country life conference. (Je '25)
Rural Pennsylvania. Watts, R. L. (Ag '25)
- Russell, John Russell, 1st earl
Russell, J. R. Later correspondence of Lord John Russell, 1840-1878. (Ja '26)
- Russia
Civilization
Ossendowski, F. A. Shadow of the gloomy East. (My '25)
Description and travel
Sheridan, C. C. Across Europe with Sate-nella. (S '25)
Economic conditions
Fox, R. People of the steppes. (N '25)
History
Makeev, N., and O'Hara, V. Russia. (Ja '26)
Revolution, 1905
Ossendowski, F. A., and Palen, L. S. From president to prison. (S '25)
Revolution, 1917-
Shelley, G. Speckled domes. (Je '25)
Sorokin, P. A. Leaves from a Russian diary. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
Politics and government
Berkman, A. Bolshevik myth (diary 1920-1922). (My '25)
Dixon, G. C. From Melbourne to Moscow. (S, N '25)
Eastman, M. F. Since Lenin died. (Ag '25)
Goldman, E. My further disillusionment in Russia. (Ap '25)
Hullinger, E. W. Reforging of Russia. (Mr '25)
Makeev, N., and O'Hara, V. Russia. (Ja '26)
Social conditions
Hullinger, E. W. Reforging of Russia. (Mr '25)
Marx, M. Romance of new Russia. (Mr '25)
Ossendowski, F. A. Shadow of the gloomy East. (My '25)
Social life and customs
Fox, R. People of the steppes. (N '25)
Russia. Makeev, N., and O'Hara, V. (Ja '26)
Russia in division. Eng title of Dividing line of Europe. Graham, S. (N '25)
- Russian literature
Trotzky, L., pseud. Literature and revolution. (Je '25)
History and criticism
Mirsky, D. S. Modern Russian literature. (N '25)
Russo-Japanese war, 1904-1905
Dennett, T. Roosevelt and the Russo-Japanese war. (Ap '25)
Ossendowski, F. A., and Palen, L. S. From president to prison. (S '25)
- Ruthenia
Baerlein, H. P. B. Over the hills of Ruthenia. (Ap '25)
- Ryall, William B. See Bolitho, W., pseud. (Je '25)
- Safeguarding children's nerves. Walsh, J. J., and Foote, J. A. (D '25)
- Safety for twenty million automobile drivers. Safety first league. (S '25)
- Sahara
Description and travel
Perkins, E. Red carpet on the Sahara. (F '26)
- Sailor's return. Garnett, D. (N '25)
- The saint. Young, S. (O '25)
- St Helios. Burr, A. R. (N '25)
- St Mawr. Lawrence, D. H. (Ag '25)
- Sainte-Beuve, Charles Augustin
Mott, L. F. Sainte-Beuve. (My '25)
- Salem witch trials. Gemmill, W. N. (My '25)
- Sales management
Ramsay, R. E. Constructive merchandising. (My '25)
- Salesmen and salesmanship
Kenagy, H. G., and Yoakum, C. S. Selection and training of salesmen. (F '26)
Kneeland, N. Cases in retail salesmanship. (Ag '25)
Kneeland, N. Hosiery, knit underwear, and gloves. (Ag '25)
Kneeland, N. Walsts. (Ag '25)
- Saltus, Edgar Evertson
Saltus M. Edgar Saltus, the man. (D '25)
Salt-water stories, retold from St Nicholas. St Nicholas. (F '26)
- Salvaging of American girlhood. Davenport, F. I. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Sam in the suburbs. Wodehouse, P. G. (Ja '26)
- Sam the sudden. Eng title of Sam in the suburbs. (Ja '26)
- Sampling and testing of highway materials. Barton, W. H., and Doane, L. H. (F '26)
- Samuel Drummond. Boyd, T. A. (O '25)
- Samuel Kelly, an eighteenth century seaman. Kelly, S. (D '25)
- Samuel Pepys. Lucas-Dubreton, J. (N '25)
- San Christoval (island)
Fox, C. E. Threshold of the Pacific. (Je '25)
- San Martin, José de
Schoellkopf, A. Don José de San Martin, 1778-1850. (My '25)
- Sandalwood. Oursler, F. (My '25)
- Sanditon. Austen, J. (My '25)
- Sanitary engineering
Phelps, E. B. Principles of public health engineering. (N '25)
- Santa Claus in summer. Mackenzie, C. (D '25)
- Sapper, pseud. See McNeile, C. (S '25)
- Sappho
Robinson, D. M. Sappho and her influence. (Ag '25)
- Sappho and her influence. Robinson, D. M. (Ag '25)
- Sargent, John Singer
Downes, W. H. John S. Sargent. (Ja '26)
- Sashka Jigouloff. Andreieff, L. M. (Ja '26)
- Sayings of the children. Grey of Fallodon, P. viscountess. (Je '25)
- Scarlet Cockerel. Sublette, C. M. (My '25)
- School and home. Patri, A. (O '25)
- School for ambassadors. Jusserand, J. A. A. J. (S '25)
- School for John and Mary. Banks, E. (S '25)
- School management and organization
Andersen, W. N. Manual for school officers. (O '25)
Lewis, E. E. Personnel problems of the teaching staff. (My '25)
Sears, J. B. School survey. (F '26)
- Spain, C. L. Platoon school. (N '25)
- School survey. Sears, J. B. (F '26)
- School theatre. Mitchell, R. (F '26)
- Schooling. Selver, P. (Je '25)

Schools, Experimental

- Hamaide, A. Decroly class. (Ap, Je '25)
 Pratt, C., ed. Experimental practice in the City and country school. (Ap '25)

Schreiner, Olive (Mrs S. C. Cronwright-Schreiner) (Ralph Irons, pseud.)
 Schreiner, O. Letters of Olive Schreiner. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Schumann, Robert

- Niecks, F: Robert Schumann. (N '25)

Science

- Caldwell, O. W., and Meier, W: H. D. Open doors to science. (D '25)
 Collins, A. F: Boy scientist. (Ja '26)
 Mathews, S., and others. Contributions of science to religion. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Watson, J: M. Science as revelation. (F '26)

Philosophy

- Burt, E. A. Metaphysical foundations of physical science. (D '25)

Study and teaching

- Downing, E. R. Teaching science in the schools. (N '25)

Science and religion. Thomson, J: A. (Ag '25)
 Science as revelation. Watson, J: M. (F '26)
 Science of biology. Scott, G: G. (S '25)
 Science of metals. Jefferies, Z., and Archer, R. S. (Ag '25)

Scientific management

- Farnham, D. T., and others. Profitable science in industry. (Je '25)
 Hunt, E: E., ed. Scientific management since Taylor. (S '25)

Scientific management since Taylor. Hunt, E: E., ed. (S '25)

Scientific preservation of food. Rector, T: M. (S '25)

Scientific study of human society. Giddings, F: H. (Je '25)

ScotlandDescription and travel

- MacDonald, J. R. Wanderings and excursions. (S '25)

Scottish poetryCollections

Buchan, J., comp. Northern muse. (My '25)
 Scott-Stokes, Henry Folliott. See Stokes, H: F. S. (O '25)
 Scouting on the Mohawk. Tomlinson, E. T. (O '25)

Scudamore, Frank

- Scudamore, F. Sheaf of memories. (S '25)

Sculpture

Chase, G: H., and Post, C. R. History of sculpture. (Ap '25)
 Sea horses. Young, F. B. (Je '25)
 Sea lavender. Gowing, S. F. (N '25)
 Sea plays. Clements, C. C., ed. (S '25)

Sea songs

- Colcord, J. C., comp. Roll and go. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Sea storiesCollections

- French, J. L., comp. Great sea stories. (N '25)

Seafaring life

Kelly, S: Samuel Kelly, an eighteenth century seaman. (D '25)
 Perry, F: Fair winds and foul. (O '25)
 Smith, C. F. Ship alley. (Ap '25)

Seamen

Clements, R. Gipsy of the Horn. (S '25)
 Second bullet. Dutton, C: J. (My '25)
 Second helping. Boulestin, X. M. (S '25)
 Secret gold. Williamson, A. M. (Ap '25)
 Secret of Bogey House. Adams, H. (S '25)
 Secret of the Barbican. Fletcher, J. S. (D '25)
 Secret of the East. Huckel, O. (Ap '25)
 Secret road. Ferguson, J: A. (S '25)

Secret societies

- Webster, N. H. Secret societies and subversive movements. (Ap '25)

Secret societies and subversive movements. Webster, N. H. (Ap '25)

Securities

Badger, R. E. Valuation of industrial securities. (D '25)

Security against war. Kellor, F. A., and Hatvany, A. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Sedgwick, William Thompson

Jordan, E. O., and others. Pioneer of public health. (Ag '25)
 Seducers in Ecuador. Sackville-West, V. M. (Ag '25)

Segelfoss town. Hamsun, K. (Mr '25)

Seibert of the island. Young, G. R. (S '25)

Seine mystery. Moffett, C. L. (S '25)

Selborne, England

White, G. Natural history of Selborne. (S '25)

Selected articles on child labor. Johnsen, J. E., comp. (Je '25)

Selected articles on marriage and divorce. Johnsen, J. E., comp. (O '25)

Selected articles on prohibition. Beman, L. T., comp. (Je '25)

Selected poems. Davies, W: H. (Ag '25)

Selected poems. Masters, E. L. (F '26)

Selected poems. Towne, C: H. (N '25)

Selected readings in municipal problems.

Wright, J., comp. (S '25)

Selection and training of salesmen. Kenagy, H. G., and Yoakum, C. S. (F '26)

Selections from the correspondence of Theodore Roosevelt and Henry Cabot Lodge, 1884-1918. Roosevelt, T., and Lodge, H: C. (My '25)

Selling by mail. Pratt, V. E. (Ap '25)

The Selmans. Emanuel, V: R. (Ja '26)

Selwood of Sleepy Cat. Spearman, F. H. (My '25)

Senate and the League of nations. Lodge, H: C. (D '25)

Serena Blandish. Lady of quality, pseud. (Ag '25)

Sermons

Frenssen, G. Village sermons by a novelist. (Ap '25)

Marchant, J., ed. British preachers. (N '25)

Newton, J. F., ed. Best sermons, 1925. (F '26)

Royden, A. M. Life's little ironies. (O '25)

Slosson, E. E. Sermons of a chemist. (F '26)

Sermons of a chemist. Slosson, E. E. (F '26)

Serner, Gunnar. See Heller, F., pseud. (Je '25)

Seth Low. Low, B: R. C. (Ag '25)

Seven sleepers. Beeding, F. (Ap '25)

Seventy summers. Bigelow, P. (F '26)

Seventy years of life and labor. Gompers, S: (Mr, My '25)

Seventy-five years of White House gossip. Colman, E. M. (Mr '25)

Sewage disposal

Hardenbergh, W: A. Home sewage disposal. (S '25)

Sewing

Cook, R. C. Essentials of sewing. (My '25)

Sex

Bousfield, E: G. P. Sex and civilization. (Je '25)

Sex and civilization. Bousfield, E: G. P. (Je '25)

Sex instruction

Davenport, F. I. Salvaging of American girlhood. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Sexual ethics

Lindsey, B: B., and Evans, W. Revolt of modern youth. (F '26)

Shadow captain. Knipe, E. and A. A. (Ap '25)

Shadow of Silver Tip. Baxter, G: O. (N '25)

Shadow of the gloomy East. Ossendowski, F. A. (My '25)

Shadow of the wolf. Freeman, R: A. (D '25)

Shaken down. MacGowan, A., and Newberry, P. (My '25)

Shakespeare, William

Alden, R. M., ed. Shakespeare handbook. (Ja '26)

Murry, J: M. Keats and Shakespeare. (F '26)

- Tolman, A. H. Falstaff and other Shakespearean topics. (Ja '26)
- Authorship
- Booth, W: S. Subtle shining secrecies. (O '25)
- Characters
- Priestley, J. B. English comic characters. (D '25)
- Criticism and interpretation
- Haines, C. M. Shakespeare in France. (N '25)
- Sonnets
- Forbis, J: F. Shakespearean enigma. (Ap '25)
- Shakespeare handbook. Alden, R. M., ed. (Ja '26)
- Shakespeare in France. Haines, C. M. (N '25)
- Shakespearean enigma. Forbis, J: F. (Ap '25)
- Shamanism
- Maddox, J: L. Medicine man. (F '26)
- Shaman's revenge. Irwin, V. M. (F '26)
- Shanghai (sailboat)
- Wells, F: De W. Last cruise of the Shanghai. (My '25)
- Shanklin, Waldron, W. (D '25)
- Sharing management with the workers. Selekman, B. M. (My '25)
- Shaw, George Bernard
- Collis, J: S. Shaw. (F '26)
- Shanks, E: B. Bernard Shaw. (Ag '25)
- Sheaf of memories. Scudamore, F. (S '25)
- Sheldon, Charles Monroe
- Sheldon, C: M. Charles M. Sheldon. (D '25)
- Shelley, Percy Bysshe
- Carpenter, E., and Barnefield, G: Psychology of the poet Shelley. (N '25)
- Gingerich, S. F. Essays in the romantic poets. (Je '25)
- Shelter, Marsh, C: F. (Ja '26)
- Shen of the sea. Chrisman, A. B. (D '25)
- Ship alley. Smith, C. F. (Ap '25)
- Ship of souls. Hough, E. (Ap '25)
- Ships
- Cartwright, C: E. Boys' book of ships. (D '25)
- Daniel, H. Ships of the seven seas. (S '25)
- Ship's log. Conkling, G. W. (Mr '25)
- Ships of the seven seas. Daniel, H. (S '25)
- Shipwrecks
- Lockhart, J: G. Mysteries of the sea. (O '25)
- Lockhart, J: G. Peril of the sea. (O '25)
- Short history of American railways. Thompson, S. (D '25)
- Short plays from American history and literature. Price, O. M. (Ag '25)
- Short stories
- Collections
- Conrad, J. Il conte. (Ag '25)
- Flying Osip. (Ap '25)
- French, J. L., ed. Great detective stories from Dickens to Gaboriau. (Ap '25)
- Georgian stories, 1925. (Ag '25)
- Gray, C: W., comp. Sporting spirit. (S '25)
- Harper prize short stories. (Ja '26)
- Jacqueline. (Ag '25)
- New Decameron. (Ag '25)
- New York guild for the Jewish blind, comp. More aces. (F '26)
- Newman, F., comp. and tr. Short story's mutations. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- O. Henry memorial award. Prize stories for 1924. (Mr '25)
- O'Brien, E: J. H., ed. Best short stories of 1924 and the Yearbook of the American short story. (My '25)
- O'Brien, E: J. H., and Cournos, J., eds. Best British short stories of 1924. (My '25)
- Short story
- Newman, F., comp. and tr. Short story's mutations. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Short story's mutations. Newman, F., comp. and tr. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- The show. Galsworthy, J: . (N '25)
- Shrubs
- Macself, A. J. Flowering trees and shrubs. (Je '25)
- Wilson, E. H: America's greatest garden. (S '25)
- Siam
- Description and travel
- Carpenter, F. G: From Bangkok to Bombay. (Mr '25)
- Sigmund Freud. Wittels, F. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Sign of evil. Wynne, A. (Je '25)
- Sign posts. Cuthrell, F. (Ag '25)
- Silhouettes. Gosse, E. W: (D '25)
- Simmel, Georg
- Spykman, N: J. Social theory of Georg Simmel. (O '25)
- Simon the coldheart. Heyer, G. (O '25)
- Simplified nursing. Dakin, F. (D '25)
- Simpson, Bertram Lenox. See Weale, P., pseud. (F '26)
- Since Lenin died. Eastman, M. F. (Ag '25)
- Sinclair-Cowan, Mrs Bertha (Muzzy). See Bower, B. M., pseud. (Ap, N '25)
- Singers
- Wagnalls, M. Opera and its stars. (My '25)
- Singing and voice culture
- Rogers, C. K. Your voice and you. (D '25)
- Sins of Saint Anthony. Collins, C: W: (N '25)
- Six prisons and two revolutions. Baldwin, O. (D '25)
- Six years in the Malay jungle. Wells, C. (Je '25)
- Skelton, Mrs Gladys. See Presland, J., pseud. (My '25)
- Sketch of the history of India from 1858 to 1918. Dodwell, H: (S '25)
- Sketches of eighteenth century America. Crèvecoeur, M. G. S-J. de (D '25)
- Skin for skin. Powys, L. (N '25)
- Ski-running. Furse, D. K. (My '25)
- Skis and ski-running
- Furse, D. K. Ski-running. (My '25)
- Skookum Chuck. White, S. E: (D '25)
- Skyline promenades. Atkinson, J. B. (Je '25)
- Skyrocket. St Johns, A. R. (Je '25)
- Slavonic nations of yesterday and today. Stanoyevich, M. S., ed. (D '25)
- Slavs
- Stanoyevich, M. S., ed. Slavonic nations of yesterday and today. (D '25)
- Sleeper of the moonlit ranges. Marshall, E. (Ag '25)
- Slow smoke. Sarett, L. R. (F '26)
- A small town man. Austin, M. (My '25)
- Smallpox
- White, B: Smallpox and vaccination. (Je '25)
- Smallpox and vaccination. White, B: (Je '25)
- Smartly dressed woman. Burbank, E. (O '25)
- Smith, Joseph
- Werner, M. R. Brigham Young. (Ag '25)
- Smith, William Austin
- Slattery, C: L: William Austin Smith. (Ap '25)
- Smith-Dorrien, Horace Lockwood
- Smith-Dorrien, H. L. Memories of forty-eight years' service. (S '25)
- The Smiths. Fairbank, J. (Ag '25)
- Smoke rings and roundels. Partington, W., ed. (Ag '25)
- Snow rubies. Gompertz, M. L: A. (D '25)
- Snuffs and butters. La Motte, E. N. (Je '25)
- So you're going to Italy. Laughlin, C. E. (Ag '25)
- Soames Green. Larmine, M. R. (O '25)
- Social and diplomatic memories (third series), 1902-1919. Rodd, J. R. (F '26)
- Social classes in post-war Europe. Stoddard, L. (N '25)
- Social conditions
- Beer, M. Social struggles and Socialist fore-runners. (Ag '25)
- Social consequences of business cycles. Hexter, M. B. (Je '25)
- Social ethics
- Jacks, L. P. Responsibility and culture. (Je '25)
- McDougall, W: Ethics and some modern world problems. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

- Social organization. Rivers, W: H. R. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Social origins and social continuities. Tozzer, A. M. (Ag '25)
- Social pathology. Queen, S. A., and Mann, D. M. (D '25)
- Social problems
- Baker-Crothers, H., and Hudnut, R. A. Problems of citizenship. (My '25)
- Beach, W. G. Introduction to sociology and social problems. (Ja '26)
- Coe, G. A. What ails our youth? (Ap '25)
- Hunter, A. A. Youth's adventure. (Ja '26)
- Queen, S. A., and Mann, D. M. Social pathology. (D '25)
- Ross, E: A. Roads to social peace. (Ap '25)
- Wells, H. G. Year of prophesying. (Ap, My '25)
- Social psychology
- Bernard, L. L. Instinct. (Ap '25)
- Dunlap, K. Social psychology. (F '26)
- Ellwood, C: A. Psychology of human society. (F '26)
- Lumley, F: E. Means of social control. (F '26)
- Miller, H. A. Races, nations and classes. (Je '25)
- Rivers, W: H. R. Social organization. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Sorokin, P. A. Sociology of revolution. (Ap '25)
- Williams, J. M. Our rural heritage. (Je '25)
- Wright, H: W. Moral standards of democracy. (O '25)
- Social sciences
- Barnes, H. E. New history and the social studies. (S '25)
- Social service
- Breckinridge, S. P. Family welfare work in a metropolitan community. (Je '25)
- Queen, S. A., and Mann, D. M. Social pathology. (D '25)
- Social significance of the inheritance tax. Rignano, E. (D '25)
- Social struggles and socialist forerunners. Beer, M. (Ag '25)
- Social theory of Georg Simmel. Spykman, N: J. (O '25)
- Socialism
- Beer, M. Social struggles and socialist forerunners. (Ag '25)
- Society, Primitive
- Rivers, W: H. R. Social organization. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Tozzer, A. M. Social origins and social continuities. (Ag '25)
- Society women of Shakespeare's time. Wilson, V. A. (Ag '25)
- Sociology
- Beach, W. G. Introduction to sociology and social problems. (Ja '26)
- Case, C. M. Outlines of introductory sociology. (S '25)
- Febvre, L. P. V., and Bataillon, L. Geographical introduction to history. (D '25)
- Giddings, F. H. Scientific study of human society. (Je '25)
- Keller, A. G. Starting points in social science. (Ja '26)
- Rivers, W: H. R. Social organization. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Ross, E: A. Civic sociology. (D '25)
- Spykman, N: J. Social theory of Georg Simmel. (O '25)
- Sociology, Rural
- National country life conference. Rural home. (Je '25)
- Williams, J. M. Our rural heritage. (Je '25)
- Sociology of revolution. Sorokin, P. A. (Ap '25)
- Soil and civilization. Whitney, M. (O '25)
- Soils
- Whitney, M. Soil and civilization. (O '25)
- Soldier and sailor words and phrases. Fraser, E., and Gibbons, J., comps. (O '25)
- Solomon, King of Israel
- Seymour, St J: D., comp. Tales of King Solomon. (Ag '25)
- Solomon islands
- Fox, C: E. Threshold of the Pacific. (Je '25)
- Some open ways to God. Bowie, W. R. (Mr '25)
- Somewhere south in Sonora. Comfort, W. L. (N '25)
- Sonata. Erskine, J: (Ag '25)
- Song of the Indian wars. Neihardt, J: G. (N '25)
- Sons of the sheik. Hull, E. M. (S '25)
- Soul of China. Miln, L. (Mr '25)
- Soul of the moving picture. Bloem, W. S. (My '25)
- Soul's sincere desire. Clark, G. (Ag '25)
- Soundings. Gibbs, A. H. (Mr, Je '25)
- South
- Biography
- Odum, H. W., ed. Southern pioneers. (D '25)
- Economic conditions
- Russel, R. R. Economic aspects of southern sectionalism, 1840-1861. (Je '25)
- Politics and government
- Russel, R. R. Economic aspects of southern sectionalism, 1840-1861. (Je '25)
- Social conditions
- Gaines, F. P. Southern plantation. (My '25)
- South Africa
- Dawson, W: H. South Africa. (Ja '26)
- Description and travel
- Carpenter, F. G. Uganda to the Cape. (Ap '25)
- South America
- Description and travel
- Foster, H. L. Tropical tramp with the tourists. (F '26)
- South Sea Islands
- Puxley, W. L. Green islands in glittering seas. (O '25)
- Southern pioneers. Odum, H. W., ed. (D '25)
- Southern plantation. Gaines, F. P. (My '25)
- Southern woodland trees. Berry, J. B. (Ag '25)
- Southwest
- White, O. P. Them was the days. (N '25)
- Description and travel
- Lummis, C: F. Mesa, cañon and pueblo. (Ja '26)
- Sovereign states and suits before arbitral tribunals and courts of justice. Scott, J. B. (D '25)
- Sovereignty
- Scott, J. B. Sovereign states and suits before arbitral tribunals and courts of justice. (D '25)
- Space and time
- Benedicks, C. A. F. Space and time. (My '25)
- Spain
- Antiquities
- Obermaier, H. Fossil man in Spain. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Description and travel
- Bell, A. F. G. Pilgrim in Spain. (Mr '25)
- Elsner, E. Spanish sunshine. (Mr '25)
- Nichols, R. S. Spanish & Portuguese gardens (Mr '25)
- Wilstach, P. Along the Pyrenees. (Ap '25)
- Spanish acres. Everts, H. G. (O '25)
- Spanish and Portuguese gardens. Nichols, R. S. (Mr '25)
- Spanish literature
- History and criticism
- Bell, A. F. G. Contemporary Spanish literature. (D '25)
- Northup, G: T. Introduction to Spanish literature. (F '26)
- Spanish mysticism. Peers, E. A. (D '25)
- Spanish sunlight. Pryde, A., pseud. (My '25)
- Spanish sunshine. Elsner, E. (Mr '25)
- Spanish waters. Reynolds, H: (D '25)
- Speaker's commentaries. Ullswater, J. W: L. (F '26)

- Special libraries directory. Wilson, M., comp. (Ja '26)
- Specimen case. Bramah, E. (Je '25)
- Speckled domes. Shelley, G. (Je '25)
- Speculum mentis. Collingwood, R. G. (N '25)
- Spell of Sarnia. Reynolds, G. M. (F '26)
- Spenser, Edmund
Renwick, W. L. Edmund Spenser. (Ag '25)
- Sphinx of flight. Smith, M. C. (O '25)
- Spindrift. Titus, H. (Ag '25)
- Spirit of happiness. Gorell, R. G. B. (Ja '26)
- Spirit of music. Dickinson, E. (F '26)
- Spirit of the hive. Sharp, D. L. (Je '25)
- Spirit of the Revolution. Fitzpatrick, J. C. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Spirit of the wild. Shephard-Walwyn, H. W. (Je '25)
- Spiritism. Blackmore, S. A. (Mr '25)
- Spiritual life
Blau, J. Wonder of life. (S '25)
Condé, B. Way to peace, health, and power. (S '25)
Kuyper, A. To be near unto God. (S '25)
Masson, T. L. Why I am a spiritual vagabond. (Je '25)
- Spiritualism
Bird, J. M. Margery: the medium. (S '25)
Blackmore, S. A. Spiritism. (Mr '25)
Klenner, K. E. von. Greater revelation. (Ag '25)
- Spitzbergen
Mittelholzer, W., and others. By airplane towards the North Pole. (F '26)
- Splendid road. Roe, V. E. (Ag '25)
- Sporting spirit. Gray, C. W., comp. (S '25)
- Sports
Miller, E. D. Fifty years of sport. (D '25)
Staley, S. C. Games, contests and relays. (Ap '25)
- Spring. Reymont, W. S. (Je '25)
- Spring flight. Smits, L. J. (My '25)
- Spyri, Frau Joanna (Heusser)
Ulrich, A. Johanna Spyri's childhood. (D '25)
- Stacey, Black, A. (Mr '25)
- Stand by. Cox, C. (O '25)
- Standard etiquette. Richardson, A. S. (S '25)
- Starkenden quest. Collins, G. (My '25)
- Stars
Proctor, M. Evenings with the stars. (D '25)
- Starshine and candlelight. Mary Angelita. (F '26)
- Starting points in social science. Keller, A. G. (Ja '26)
- State, The
Sanford, H. W. Business of life. (My '25)
Wilde, N. Ethical basis of the state. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- State ethics
Petre, M. D. M. Two cities. (O '25)
- State experiments in Australia and New Zealand. Reeves, W. P. (O '25)
- State government
Mathews, J. M. American state government. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
Mott, R. L. Materials illustrative of American government. (F '26)
Nevins, A. American states during and after the Revolution. (Ap '25)
- State police. Smith, B. (Ja '26)
- State rights
Owsley, F. L. State rights in the Confederacy. (F '26)
State rights in the Confederacy. Owsley, F. L. (F '26)
- Statesmen
Harden, M. I meet my contemporaries. (F '26)
- Statesmen, British
Spender, J. A. Public life. (Ag '25)
- Statistical method. Jerome, H. (Ag '25)
- Statistical methods. Mills, F. C. (Ag '25)
- Statistics
Jerome, H. Statistical method. (Ag '25)
Kent, F. C. Elements of statistics. (Ag '25)
Mills, F. C. Statistical methods. (Ag '25)
Odell, C. W. Educational statistics. (Ja '26)
- Thurstone, L. L. Fundamentals of statistics. (D '25)
- Stay young. Goldman, R. L. (N '25)
- Stead, William Thomas
Whyte, F. Life and letters of W. T. Stead. (F '26)
- Steam navigation
Dayton, F. E. Steamboat days. (D '25)
- Steamboat days. Dayton, F. E. (D '25)
- Steamboats
Dayton, F. E. Steamboat days. (D '25)
- Steamer book. Mitchell, E. V., ed. (Ag '25)
- Steel, Structural
Dencer, F. W. Detailing and fabricating structural steel. (Ag '25)
- Steel decks. Connolly, J. B. (Ja '25)
- Stella defiant. Sheridan, C. C. (Ap '25)
- Stevenson, Robert Louis
Hellman, G. S. The true Stevenson. (D '25)
- Still more prejudice. Walkley, A. B. (S '25)
- Stirling, Arthur, pseud. See Sinclair, U. B. (My '25)
- Stocks
Parkinson, H. A B C of stocks and shares. (S '25)
Smith, E. L. Common stocks as long term investments. (My '25)
- Stoicism and its influence. Wenley, R. M. (Ag '25)
- Stoics
Wenley, R. M. Stoicism and its influence. (Ag '25)
- Stolen idols. Oppenheim, E. P. (Je '25)
- Stories of Ireland & myself. Orpen, W. (Ag '25)
- Stormie the dog stealer. Schulkers, R. F. (Je '25)
- Stormy petrel. Kendall, O. (Ja '26)
- Story of a novel. Gorky, M., pseud. (N '25)
- Story of cloth. Hickey-Freeman company. (Ja '26)
- Story of Holland. Banks, H. W. (D '25)
- Story of human progress. Marshall, L. C. (O '25)
- Story of Illinois. Pease, T. C. (Ja '26)
- Story of Irving Berlin. Woolcott, A. (My '25)
- Story of man's work. Hayward, W. R., and Johnson, G. W. (N '25)
- Story of the University of Chicago, 1890-1925. Goodspeed, T. W. (Ag '25)
- Story of the Waldorf-Astoria. Hungerford, E. (S '25)
- Story of the world's literature. Macy, J. (D '25)
- Story of Wilbur the hat. Van Loon, H. W. (My '25)
- Story of woman. George, W. L. (My '25)
- Stranger than fiction. Browne, L. (Je '25)
- Stratford-upon-Avon
Forrest, H. E. Old houses of Stratford-upon-Avon. (N '25)
- Street traffic control. McClintock, M. (F '26)
- Strength of materials
Poorman, A. P. Strength of materials. (F '26)
- Strolling saint. Sabatini, R. (N '25)
- Structural metallography. Pulsifer, H. B. (S '25)
- Studies from ten literatures. Boyd, E. A. (My, Je '25)
- Studies in mid-Victorian imperialism. Bodelsen, C. A. (O '25)
- Studies in the history of political philosophy. Vaughan, C. E. (Ag '25)
- Studies in the philosophy of David Hume. Hendel, C. W. (S '25)
- Study
Lyman, R. La V. Mind at work in studying, thinking, and reading. (My '25)
- Study of the modern drama. Clark, B. H. (Ap '25)
- Study of the prose works of John Donne. Simpson, E. M. (Ap '25)
- Study of war. Custance, R. N. (Ag '25)
- Sturly. Custot, P. (Mr '25)
- Style, Literary
Brownell, W. C. Genius of style. (Mr, My '25)
- Subtle shining secrecies. Booth, W. S. (O '25)
- Suburban life
Douglass, H. P. Suburban trend. (Ag '25)

- Suburban trend. Douglass, H. P. (Ag '25)
- Success
King, B. Faith and success. (D '25)
- Sudan
Dugmore, A. R. Vast Sudan. (Ja '26)
- Sudan, Egyptian
Millais, J. G. Far away up the Nile. (Ag '25)
- Sugimoto, Mrs Etsu Inagaki
Sugimoto, E. I. Daughter of the Samurai. (F '26)
- Sullivan, John Lawrence
Dibble, R. F. John L. Sullivan. (My '25)
- Summer. Reymont, W. S. (S '25)
- Summer. Rolland, R. (N '25)
- Sumner, William Graham
Starr, H. E. William Graham Sumner. (S '25)
- Sun brothers. Williamson, H. (Ag '25)
- Sun Yat Sen
Linebarger, P. M. W. Sun Yat Sen and the Chinese republic. (Ap, Je '25)
- Sun Yat Sen and the Chinese republic. Linebarger, P. M. W. (Ap, Je '25)
- Sunday schools
Athearn, W. S. Character building in a democracy. (Mr '25)
- Sunken gold. Savignon, A. (S '25)
- Sunlight in New Granada. McFee, W. (D '25)
- Supercity. Kern, R. R. (Ag '25)
- Super-power as an aid to progress. Tripp, G. E. (Ap '25)
- Superior, Lake
Reed, C. B. Four way lodge. (Je '25)
- Superlatives. Knight, G. C. (Ag '25)
- Superpower. Beman, L. T., comp. (Je '25)
- Superstition
Richet, C. R. Idiot man. (F '26)
- Surgery, Aseptic and antiseptic
Cheyne, W. W. Lister and his achievements. (O '25)
- Surry family. Hull, H. R. (F '26)
- Survey of contemporary music. Gray, C. (Ag '25)
- Survey of international affairs, 1920-1923. Toynbee, A. J. (D '25)
- Survey of physics. Planck, M. K. E. L. (N '25)
- Survival. Marchant, J., ed. (Ja '26)
- Survival or extinction. Friedman, E. M. (My '25)
- Suspense. Conrad, J. (O '25)
- Sussex, England
Geering, T. Our Sussex parish. (Ag '25)
- Hopkins, R. T. Kipling country. (My '25)
- Swallowing the anchor. McFee, W. (Ag '25)
- Sweet times and The blue policeman. Young, S. (Ja '26)
- Swift adventure. Cardinal, J., pseud. (Ja '26)
- Swinging caravan. Abdullah, A. (D '25)
- Switzerland
Description and travel
Domville-Elfe, C. W. Things seen in Switzerland in winter. (Ja '26)
- Sycamore Bend. Hunt, F. (N '25)
- Syllabus on international relations. Moon, P. T. (O '25)
- Symonds, John Addington
Symonds, M. Out of the past. (Ag '25)
- Synthetic organic compounds. Schotz, S. P. (Ag '25)
- Syria
Description and travel
Guyer, S. My journey down the Tigris. (N '25)
- Tales of King Solomon. Seymour, St J. D., comp. (Ag '25)
- Tales of the long bow. Chesterton, G. K. (N '25)
- Tales of the wilderness. Pilniak, B., pseud. (Ap '25)
- Tales you won't believe. Porter, G. (Je '25)
- Talking well. Harrington, W. L., and Fulton, M. G. (Ap '25)
- Talks about radio. Lodge, O. J. (Ja '26)
- Talmadge, Constance
Talmadge, M. L. Talmadge sisters. (Ap '25)
- Talmadge, Norma (Mrs Joseph M. Schenck)
Talmadge, M. L. Talmadge sisters. (Ap '25)
- Talmadge sisters. Talmadge, M. L. (Ap '25)
- Taming of the frontier. Aikman, D., ed. (N '25)
- Tantalus. Schiller, F. C. S. (My '25)
- Taste of honey. Maschwitz, E. (My '25)
- Taxation
Brown, H. G. Economics of taxation. (D '25)
- Peck, H. W. Taxation and welfare. (Je '25)
- Taxation and welfare. Peck, H. W. (Je '25)
- Teachers
Almack, J. C., and Lang, A. R. Problems of the teaching profession. (D '25)
- Lewis, E. E. Personnel problems of the teaching staff. (My '25)
- Teaching
Cubberley, E. P. Introduction to the study of education and to teaching. (Ja '26)
- Heinmiller, L. E. First book in education. (S '25)
- Millis, W. A. and H. Teaching of high school subjects. (Ag '25)
- Nearing, S. Educational frontiers. (N '25)
- Stormzand, M. J. Progressive methods of teaching. (Ag '25)
- Teaching of high school subjects. Millis, W. A. and H. (Ag '25)
- Teaching science in the schools. Downing, E. R. (N '25)
- Tea-room recipes. Richards, L., and Treat, N. (Ag '25)
- Technical writing
Trelease, S. F., and Yule, E. S. Preparation of scientific and technical papers. (My '25)
- Technique of water-colour painting. Richmond, L., and Littlejohns, J. (F '26)
- Technology
Dictionaries
Kettridge, J. O. French-English and English-French dictionary of technical and general terms. (Ag '25)
- Telephone
Baldwin, F. G. C. History of the telephone in the United Kingdom. (F '26)
- Weinbach, M. P. Principles of transmission in telephony. (S '25)
- Wright, C. A. Telephone communication. (S '25)
- Telephone communication. Wright, C. A. (S '25)
- Temescal. Knibbs, H. H. (Je '25)
- Ten short stories from the Bible. Brown, C. R. (S '25)
- Ten years after. Gibbs, P. H. (My '25)
- Tennis
Lenglen, S. Lawn tennis. (D '25)
- Tents of Israel. Eng title of The matriarch. Stern, G. B. (Mr '25)
- Term's music. Glover, C. H. (O '25)
- Terrible woman. Steele, W. D. (Je '25)
- Texas
White, O. P. Them was the days. (N '25)
- Text book of metallography. Tammann, G. H. J. A. (S '25)
- Textbook of glass technology. Hodkin, F. W., and Cousen, A. (F '26)
- Textile industry and fabrics
Hickey-Freeman company. Story of cloth. (Ja '26)
- Small, C. P. How to know textiles. (Ja '26)
- Textile machinery
Hanton, W. A. Mechanics of textile machinery. (S '25)
- Table talk of G. B. S. Shaw, G. B. (Je '25)
- Taboo. Steele, W. D. (O '25)
- Tale of Genji. Murasaki Shikibu. (O '25)
- Tales of fishing virgin seas. Grey, Z. (F '26)
- Tales of hearsay. Conrad, J. (Mr, My '25)
- Tales of intrigue and revenge. McKenna, S. (O '25)

Thackeray, William Makepeace

Quiller-Couch, A. T: Charles Dickens and other Victorians. (S '25)

Thamyris. Trevelyan, R. C. (N '25)

That nice young couple. Hackett, F. (Je '25)

That Royle girl. Balmer, E. (O '25)

That's that! Retner, B. A. (S '25)

Theater

Bernhardt, S. Art of the theatre. (Je '25)

Cohan, G: M. Twenty years on Broadway. (My '26)

Dobrée, B. Timotheus. (Ja '26)

Nicoll, A. British drama. (D '25)

Young, S. Glamour. (Ag '25)

Charleston, South Carolina

Willis, E. Charleston stage in the XVIII century. (F '26)

Little theater movement

Hinsdell, O. Making the little theater pay. (F '26)

TheatersStage-setting and scenery

Mitchell, R. School theatre. (F '26)

Them was the days. White, O. P. (N '25)

Then and now. Fisher, L. (N '25)

Theodore Dreiser. Rascoe, B. (S '25)

Theology

Matthews, W. R. Gospel and the modern mind. (O '25)

Theosophical movement, 1875-1925. (Je '25)

Theosophy

Theosophical movement, 1875-1925. (Je '25)

There came two women. Quick, H. (My '25)

These United States. Gruening, E. H., ed. (Ap '25)

These women. Johnston, W: A. (My '25)

They green stones. Eng title of Turn of a day.

Scott, C. A. D. (Je '25)

Thieves' honor. Gluck, S. (Mr '25)

Things and ideals. Otto, M. C. (F '26 and 1924

Annual)

Things I shouldn't tell. (Mr '25)

Things seen and heard. Goodspeed, E. J. (Ja

'26)

Things seen in Constantinople. Goodrich-Freer,

A. M. (Ja '26)

Things seen in Edinburgh. Grierson, E. W.

(Ja '26)

Things seen in Switzerland in winter. Dom-

ville-Rife, C: W. (Ja '26)

Things that happened. Hamilton, V. M. (S '25)

Third warning. Muir, A: (F '26)

Thirteen. Austin, F: B. (Ja '26)

Thirteenth Caesar. Sitwell, S. (My '25)

Thirty years of billiards. Hoppe, W. (Ap '25)

This mad ideal. Dell, F. (Ap '25)

This old man. Bone, G. H. (Ag '25)

This sorry scheme. Marshall, B. (My '25)

Thomas Chandler Haliburton. Chittick, V: L.

O. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Thomas the impostor. Cocteau, J. (Mr, Je

'25)

Thoreau, Henry David

Bazalgette, L. Henry Thoreau. (Ag '25, F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Those barren leaves. Huxley, A. L. (Mr '25)

Those difficult years. Cuthrell, F. (S '25)

Those not elect. Adams, L. (Ja '26)

Thousand and second night. Heller, F., pseud.

(N '25)

Thread of Ariadne. Stokes, A. (Ag '25)

Three owls. Moore, A. C. (F '26)

Three women of Annam. Chivas-Baron, C.

(Ja '26)

Threshold of the Pacific. Fox, C: E. (Je '25)

Thresholds. Cuthrell, F. (D '25)

Through field and woodland. Northrop, A. (S

'25)

Through science to God. Darrow, F. L. (Ja

'26)

Through the Philippines and Hawaii. Carpenter, F: G. (S '25)

Thunder on the left. Morley, C. D. (Ja '26)

Thunderstorm. Stern, G. B. (S '25)

Thursday's child. Wiltshire, M. (N '25)

Thus far. Snaith, J: C. (S '25)

Ti-me-kun-dan, prince of Buddhist benevolence.

(Ja '26)

TibetDescription and travel

Bell, C: A. Tibet, past and present. (Ag '25)

Hedin, S. A. My life as an explorer. (D '25)

History

Bell, C: A. Tibet, past and present. (Ag '25)

Tibet, past and present. Bell, C: A. (Ag '25)

Tide marks. Tomlinson, H. M. (Ag '25 and 1924

Annual)

Tiger joy. Benét, S. V. (N '25)

Tiger of Barunganga. Emery, J. I. (Je '25)

Tigris river

Guyot, S. My journey down the Tigris. (N '25)

Timber

Jones, W. S. Timbers. (Ag '25)

Record, S: J., and Mell, C. D. Timbers of tropical America. (F '26)

Timbers. Jones, W. S. (Ag '25)

Timbers of tropical America. Record, S: J., and Mell, C. D. (F '26)

Timbuktu

Mills, D. R. M. Road to Timbuktu. (Ag '25)

Time

Nordmann, C: Tyranny of time. (O '25)

Time, taste and furniture. Gloag, J: E. (Ja '26)

Timotheus. Dobrée, B. (Ja '26)

To Babylon. Barretto, A. (Mr '25)

To be near unto God. Kuypier, A. (S '25)

Tobacco

Partington, W., ed. Smoke rings and roundelays. (Ag '25)

Tolerance. Van Loon, H. W. (D '25)

Tolstoy on art. Tolstol, L. N. (My '25)

Tongues of fire. Blackwood, A. (Ap '25)

Tonty of the iron hand. McNeill, E. (N '25)

Tony. White, E. O. (D '25)

Tony and the big top. Chaffee, A. (D '25)

Too much money. Zangwill, I. (My '25)

Topographic mapping. Robert, L. B. (Je '25)

Tories, English

Wilkinson, W: J: Tory democracy. (D '25)

Tortoiseshell cat. Royde-Smith, N. C. (D '25)

Tory democracy. Wilkinson, W: J: (D '25)

Track and field. Jones, T: E. (My '25)

Track athletics

Jones, T: E. Track and field. (My '25)

Trade marks

Schecter, F: I: Historical foundations of the law relating to trademarks. (S '25)

Sinel, J., comp. Book of American trademarks and devices. (Ap '25)

Trade unions

Gompers, S: Seventy years of life and labor. (Mr, My '25)

Gulick, C: A. Labor policy of the United States steel corporation. (Ja '26)

Wolman, L. Growth of American trade unions, 1880-1923. (My '25)

Tradition and jazz. Pattee, F. L: (My '25)

Traffic regulations

McClintock, M. Street traffic control. (F '26)

Tragedy of waste. Chase, S. (D '25)

Tragic life of Vincent Van Gogh. Piérard, L: (O '25)

Trail and pack-horse. Hull, J. H. (S '25)

Trail of the Conestoga. Dunham, B. M. (Ap '25)

Trails and summits of the White mountains.

O'Kane, W. C. (Ag '25)

Training the toddler. Cleveland, E. (N '25)

Tramps

Mullin, G. H. Adventures of a scholar tramp. (My '25)

The trap Richardson, D. M. (O '25)

Traprock, Walter E., pseud. See Chappell, G: S. (Ja '26)

Travel

Parkes, J. Travel in England in the seventeenth century. (O '25)

Travel diary of a philosopher. Keyserling, H. A. (Ag '25)

- Travel in England in the seventeenth century. Parkes, J. (O '25)
- Traveling on the Democratic donkey. Lanni, C. G. (N '25)
- Treading the winepress. Connor, R., pseud. (Ja '26)
- Treasure. Lagerlöf, S. O. L. (My '25)
- Treasures of Typhon. Phillpotts, E. (Ap '25)
- Tree habits. Illick, J. S. (Ap '25)
- Tree in bloom. Flanner, H. (My '25)
- Tree of the Folkungs. Heidenstam, V. von. (My '25)
- Trees
- Berry, J. B. Southern woodland trees. (Ag '25)
- Illick, J. S. Tree habits. (Ap '25)
- Jones, W. S. Timbers. (Ag '25)
- Record, S. J., and Mell, C. D. Timbers of tropical America. (F '26)
- Wilson, E. H. America's greatest garden. (S '25)
- Diseases and pests
- Felt, E. P. Manual of tree and shrub insects. (Ag '25)
- North America
- Curtis, C. C. Guide to the trees. (O '25)
- Trial of Jesus. Masefield, J. (D '25)
- Trials
- Postgate, R. W. Murder, piracy and treason. (Ja '26)
- A triangle. Baring, M. (My '25)
- Trimberigg. Housman, L. (My '25)
- Triple fugue. Sitwell, O. (Mr '25)
- Tristan, Leclère. See Klingsor, T. L., pseud. (N '25)
- Tropical tramp with the tourists. Foster, H. L. (F '26)
- Trotzky, Leon, pseud. (Lev Davidovich Bronshteyn)
- Eastman M. F. Leon Trotsky. (Ja '26)
- Eastman, M. F. Since Lenin died. (Ag '25)
- Troubadour. Kreymborg, A. (My '25)
- Trouble maker. Eastman, E. R. (F '26)
- Troubled waters. Raine, W. M. (O '25)
- Troy park. Sitwell, E. (Ja '26)
- The true Stevenson. Hellman, G. S. (D '25)
- Trusts
- Stockder, A. H. German trade associations. (Je '25)
- Tuberculosis
- Williams, L. R. Tuberculosis. (S '25)
- Tudor studies. London. University. Board of studies in history. (My '25)
- Tumbleberry and Chick. Hopkins, W. J. (Ap '25)
- Tuning in at Lincoln high. Gollomb, J. (Ja '26)
- Turkey
- Description and travel
- Herbert, A. N. H. M. Ben Kendim. (S '25)
- Economic conditions
- Mears, E. G., and others. Modern Turkey. (Mr '25)
- Politics and government
- Mears, E. G., and others. Modern Turkey. (Mr '25)
- Turn of a day. Scott, C. A. D. (Je '25)
- Tutankhamen, and after. Leonard, W. E. C. (My '25)
- Twelve books of Epigrams. Martial. (My '25)
- Twenty miles out. (D '25)
- Twenty poems. Hawker, R. S. (O '25)
- Twenty poems in common English. Barnes, W. (O '25)
- Twenty years of my life, 1867-1887. Jopling-Rowe, L. (Ja '26)
- Twenty years on Broadway. Cohan, G. M. (My '25)
- Twenty-five short plays. Shay, F., ed. (Ap '25)
- Twenty-five years. Grey of Fallodon, E. G. (N '25)
- Twice thirty. Bok, E. W. (Mr '25)
- Two cities. Petre, M. D. M. (O '25)
- Two fables. Morley, C. D., tr. (S '25)
- Two lives. Leonard, W. E. (Ja '26)
- Two ordeals of democracy. Buchan, J. (Je '25)
- Two plays. O'Casey, S. (Ap '25)
- Two vagabonds in a French village. Gordon, J. and C. J. (F '26)
- Two vagabonds in the Balkans. Gordon, J. and C. (Ap '25)
- Tyler, Mary Hunt (Palmer) (Mrs Royall Tyler)
- Tyler, M. H. Grandmother Tyler's book. (Je '25)
- Tyler family
- Tyler, M. H. Grandmother Tyler's book. (Je '25)
- Type and type-founding
- McMurtrie, D. C. American type design in the twentieth century. (My '25)
- Tyranny of time. Nordmann, C. (O '25)
- Tyrol
- Broadbent, E. L. Under the Italian Alps. (D '25)
- Quigley, H. Lombardy, Tyrol and the Trentino. (N '25)
- Tyrrell, George
- Lunn, A. H. M. Roman converts. (F '26)
- Uganda to the Cape. Carpenter, F. G. (Ap '25)
- Ultimate island. Sieveking, L. de G. (N '25)
- Ulysses returns. Montgomery, R. M. (Ag '25)
- Uncle Sam needs a wife. Clarke, I. C. (Je '25)
- Uncommon Americans. Seitz, D. C. (N '25)
- Under dogs. Footner, H. (F '26)
- Under the black flag. Seitz, D. C. (S '25)
- Under the Italian Alps. Broadbent, E. L. (D '25)
- Under the levee. Sparling, E. E. (Ap '25)
- Understanding the Bible. Ballantine, W. G. (N '25)
- Unemployment
- Feldman, H. Regularization of employment. (N '25)
- Is unemployment inevitable? (My '25)
- Lewisohn, S. A., and others. Can business prevent unemployment? (F '26)
- Morley, F. Unemployment relief in Great Britain. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Unemployment relief in Great Britain. Morley, F. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- Unholy experiment. Armfield, C. (My '25)
- Unhurryng chase. Prescott, H. F. M. (O '25)
- Uninvited guests. Farjeon, J. J. (Ag '25)
- United mine workers of America
- Lewis, J. L. Miners' fight for American standards. (D '25)
- United socialist soviet republics
- Graham, S. Dividing line of Europe. (N '25)
- United States
- Air service
- Mitchell, W. Winged defense. (N '25)
- Biography
- Bradford, G. Wives. (N '25)
- Powers, S. L. Portraits of a half century. (Ja '26)
- Root, E. Men and policies. (My '25)
- Seitz, D. C. Uncommon Americans. (N '25)
- Civilization
- Brown, R. W. Creative spirit. (My '25)
- Climate
- Ward, R. De C. Climates of the United States. (F '26)
- Commerce
- Greenbie, S. and M. Gold of Ophir. (Ja '26)
- Constitution
- Baker, N. D. Progress and the Constitution. (D '25)
- Beck, J. M. Constitution of the United States. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Bennett, J. L., comp. Essential American tradition. (Ag '25)
- Judson, H. P. Our federal republic. (D '25)
- Leigh, R. Citadel of freedom. (My '25)

Warren, C: Congress, the Constitution, and the Supreme court. (F '26)

Description and travel

Cresswell, N: Journal of Nicholas Cresswell, 1774-1777. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Gruening, E. H., ed. These United States. (Ap '25)

Diplomatic and consular service

Lay, T. H. Foreign service of the United States. (N '25)

Economic conditions

Berridge, W: A., and others. Purchasing power of the consumer. (D '25)
 Carver, T: N. Present economic revolution in the United States. (N '25)
 Chase, S. Tragedy of waste. (D '25)
 Faulkner, H. U. American economic history. (F '26)

Economic policy

Nearing, S., and Freeman, J. Dollar diplomacy. (F '26)

Foreign population

Bercovici, K. On new shores. (N '25)
 Foreign student in America. Commission on survey of foreign students in the United States of America. (Ja '26)
 Speranza, G. C: Race or nation. (D '25)

Foreign relations

Adams, R. G. History of the foreign policy of the United States. (My '25)
 Belmont, P. National isolation an illusion. (S '25)
 Blakeslee, G: H. Recent foreign policy of the United States. (Ja '26)
 Child, R: W. Diplomat looks at Europe. (D '25)
 Clarke, J: H. America and world peace. (N '25)
 Dennett, T. Roosevelt and the Russo-Japanese war. (Ap '25)
 Hudson, M. O. Permanent court of international justice. (Je '25)
 Lodge, H: C. Senate and the League of nations. (D '25)
 Nearing, S., and Freeman, J. Dollar diplomacy. (F '26)

Frontier and pioneer life

Paxson, F: L. History of the American frontier, 1763-1893. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Genealogy

Virkus, F: A., ed. Abridged compendium of American genealogy. (My '25)

History

Channing, E. History of the United States. (N '25)
 Faris, J: T. When America was young. (Ja '26)
 Harlow, R. V. Growth of the United States. (N '25)
 Hockett, H. C. Political and social history of the United States, 1492-1828. (D '25)
 Paxson, F: L. History of the American frontier, 1763-1893. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Pollard, A. F: Factors in American history. (N '25)
 Schlesinger, A. M. Political and social history of the United States, 1829-1925. (D '25)

Bibliography

Waldman, M. Americana. (F '26)

Colonial period

Andrews, C: M. Colonial background of the American revolution. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
 Osgood, H. L. American colonies in the eighteenth century. (N '25)

Revolution

Cresswell, N: Journal of Nicholas Cresswell, 1774-1777. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Fitzpatrick, J: C. Spirit of the Revolution. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Maclay, E. S. History of American privateers. (Mr '25)

Middlebrook, L: F. Maritime Connecticut during the American revolution, 1775-1783. (D '25)

Nevins, A. American states during and after the Revolution. (Ap '25)

Willard, M., ed. Letters on the American revolution, 1774-1776. (Je '25)

Wortley, E. S., ed. Prime minister and his son. (S '25)

Revolution—Causes

Andrews, C: M. Colonial background of the American revolution. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)

Revolution—German mercenaries

Pettengill, R. W., tr. Letters from America, 1776-1779. (Ag '25)

Revolution—Personal narratives

Pettengill, R. W., tr. Letters from America, 1776-1779. (Ag '25)

Fiction

Sherman, E. B. Mistress Madcap. (F '26)

Constitutional period, 1789-1809

Bowers, C. G. Jefferson and Hamilton. (Ja '26)

War of 1812

Maclay, E. S. History of American privateers. (Mr '25)

Pratt, J. W: Expansionists of 1812. (Ag '25)

Civil war

Adams, E. D. Great Britain and the American Civil war. (S '25)

Buchan, J: Two ordeals of democracy. (Je '25)

Channing, E: History of the United States (N '25)

Stories

Lamprey, L. Days of the leaders. (Ja '26)

1865-

Shippee, L. B. Recent American history. (My '25)

Spanish-American war

Stories

Lamprey, L. Days of the leaders. (Ja '26)

History, Naval

Green, F. Our naval heritage. (N '25)

Intellectual life

Brown, R. W. Creative spirit. (My '25)

Navy

Bywater, H. C. Great Pacific war. (O '25)

Politics and government

Abbott, W. C. New barbarians. (Mr '25)

Baker, N. D. Progress and the constitution. (D '25)

Belmont, P. National isolation an illusion. (S '25)

Bennett, J. L., comp. Essential American tradition. (Ag '25)

Bowden, R. D. Evolution of the politician. (My '25)

Bowers, C. G. Jefferson and Hamilton. (Ja '26)

Rutler, N: M. Faith of a liberal. (Mr, My '25)

Clarke, I. C. Uncle Sam needs a wife. (Je '25)

Conover, M. Working manual of original sources in American government. (My '25)

Davis, O. K. Released for publication. (D '25)

Hockett, H. C. Political and social history of the United States, 1492-1828. (D '25)

Judson, H. P. Our federal republic. (D '25)

McDougall, W: Indestructible union. (My '25)

Mott, R. L. Materials illustrative of American government. (F '26)

United States—Politics and government—Cont.
 Munro, W: B. Current problems in citizenship. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
 Munro, W: B. Government of the United States. (O '25)
 Pepper, G: W. Men and issues. (Ap '25)
 Rice, S. A. Farmers and workers in American politics. (Ag '25)
 Robinson, E. E. Evolution of American political parties. (Ap, My '25)
 Schlesinger, A. M. Political and social history of the United States, 1829-1925. (D '25)
 Wallace, S. C. Our governmental machine. (Je '25)
 Wilson, W. Public papers, college and state. (Ag '25)

Colonial period

Osgood, H. L. American colonies in the eighteenth century. (N '25)

Public lands

Hibbard, B. H. History of the public land policies. (Ap '25)

Race question

Woofter, T: J. Basis of racial adjustment. (Ag '25)

Religion

Rowe, H: K. History of religion in the United States. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Social conditions

Mencken, H: L., ed. Americana, 1925. (F '26)
 Myers, G. History of American idealism. (My '25)

Social life and customs

Faris, J: T. When America was young. (Ja '26)
 Gruening, E. H., ed. These United States. (Ap '25)

Colonial period

Crevecoeur, M. G. S-J. de. Sketches of eighteenth century America. (D '25)

Territorial expansion

Nearing, S., and Freeman, J. Dollar diplomacy. (F '26)
 Pratt, J. W: Expansionists of 1812. (Ag '25)

United States. Congress

Warren, C: Congress, the Constitution, and the Supreme court. (F '26)

United States. Congress. Senate

Lodge, H: C. Senate and the League of nations. (D '25)

United States. Department of labor

Babson, R. W. Recent labor progress. (Ag '25)

United States. Post-office department

Rich, W. E. History of the United States post office to the year 1829. (Ap '25)

United States. Supreme court

Scott, J. B. Sovereign states and suits before arbitral tribunals and courts of justice. (D '25)

Warren, C: Congress, the Constitution, and the Supreme court. (F '26)

United States steel corporation

Gulick, C: A. Labor policy of the United States steel corporation. (Ja '26)
 Tarbell, I. M. Life of Elbert H. Gary. (Ja '26)

Universe

Luckiesh, M. Foundations of the universe. (S '25)

University debaters' annual, 1923-1924. Phelps, E. M., ed. (Je '25)

University debaters' annual, 1924-1925. Phelps, E. M., ed. (N '25)

Unknown goddess. Wolfe, H. (N '25)

Unknown tribes, uncharted seas. Brown, L. M. A. (Mr '25)

Unmasking our minds. Seabury, D: (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Unscientific essays. Jones, F: W. (My '25)

Unveiled. Seymour, B. K. (Je '25)

Uruguay

Description and travel

Carpenter, F. G: Along the Paraná and the Amazon. (S '25)

Usury and usury laws. Ryan, F. W. (F '26)

Vaccination

White, B: Smallpox and vaccination. (Je '25)

Vachell, Horace Annesley

Vachell, H. A. Fellow-travellers. (Ag '25)

Vacuum pumps

Newman, F. H. Production and measurement of low pressures. (Ja '26)

Val sinistra. Morton, M. (Mr '25)

Valentine, Douglas, pseud. See Williams, V. (Mr '25)

Valley of eyes unseen. Collins, G. (Ap '25)

Valley of strife. Hall, M. R. (S '25)

Valor of the range. Erskine, L. Y. (Ja '26)

Valuation of industrial securities. Badger, R. E. (D '25)

Van Gogh, Vincent

Piérard, L: Tragic life of Vincent Van Gogh. (O '25)

Vanished cities of Arabia. Erskine, B. (N '25)

Vanishing tribes of Kenya. Orde-Browne, G. St J: (O '25)

Variety. Connell, R: (My '25)

Vast Sudan. Dugmore, A. R. (Ja '26)

Vedette, pseud. See Williams, V. (Mr '25)

Vegetables

Diseases and pests

Chupp, C: Manual of vegetable-garden diseases. (S '25)

Venereal diseases

Snow, W: F. Venereal diseases. (S '25)

Venereal diseases. Snow, W: F. (S '25)

Venetian glass nephew. Wylie, E. (O '25)

The venture. Mackenzie, J. K. (Je '25)

Versailles, Treaty of, 1919

Wells, G. What is truth? (Ap '25)

Veterans all. (O '25)

Victory. Aminoff, L. (Ag '25)

Viennese medley. O'Shaughnessy, E. L. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)

Viewpoints in modern drama. Drury, F. K. W. (Je '25)

Village sermons by a novelist. Frenssen, G. (Ap '25)

Violin

Bachmann, A. A. Encyclopedia of the violin. (O '25)

Laurie, D: Reminiscences of a fiddle dealer. (My '25)

Violinists

Bachmann, A. A. Encyclopedia of the violin. (O '25)

Virginia

Historic houses, etc.

Jett, D. C. In tidewater Virginia. (S '25)

Virtuous husband. Tilden, F. (N '25)

Visiting teachers

Sayles, M. B. Problem child in school. (Ja '26)

Vital statistics

Hexter, M. B. Social consequences of business cycles. (Je '25)

Vitamines

Plimmer, R. H: A. and V. G. Food and health. (D '25)

Vocational education

Ernst, C. H., ed. What shall I be? (Ap '25)

Vocational guidance

Fryer, D. Vocational self-guidance. (Ag '25)

Ricciardi, N: Boy and his future. (My '25)

Vocational self-guidance. Fryer, D. (Ag '25)

Voice from the dark. Phillpotts, E. (My '25)

Voices of the stones. Russell, G: W: (S '25)

Volcano. Straus, R. (N '25)

Volonor. Winship, G. B. (D '25)

- Vondel, Joost van den
Barnouw, A. J. Vondel. (My '25)
- The vortex. Coward, N. (O '25)
- Voyage of the Argonauts. Bacon, J. R. (My '25)
- Voyagers. Colum, P. (Ja '26)
- Voyages and travels
Banning, G. H. In Mexican waters. (S '25)
Benson, S. Little world. (N '25)
Clements, R. Gipsy of the Horn. (S '25)
Coolidge, J. G. Random letters from many countries. (Ap '25)
Dixon, G. C. From Melbourne to Moscow. (S, N '25)
Frothingham, R. Around the world. (F '26)
Halliburton, R. Royal road to romance. (Ja '26)
Hope, S. Rolling round the world—for fun. (F '26)
Kippis, A. Captain Cook's voyages. (My '25)
Lockhart, J. G. Mysteries of the sea. (O '25)
MacDonald, J. R. Wanderings and excursions. (S '25)
Mitchell, E. V., ed. Steamer book. (Ag '25)
Perry, F. Fair winds and foul. (O '25)
Reynolds, H. Spanish waters. (D '25)
Wells, F. De W. Last cruise of the Shanghai. (My '25)
- Voyages and travels, Juvenile
Putnam, D. B. David goes voyaging. (N '25)
- Voyages around the world
Muhlhauser, G. H. P. Cruise of the Amarylhis. (Je '25)
- Wages
Douglas, P. H. Wages and the family. (S '25)
Feis, H., ed. Collection of decisions presenting principles of wage settlement. (N '25)
Wages and the family. Douglas, P. H. (S '25)
Wagner as man and artist. Newman, E. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Wagner, Richard
Newman, E. Wagner as man and artist. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Waists. Kneeland, N. (Ag '25)
- Waldorf-Astoria hotel
Hungerford, E. Story of the Waldorf-Astoria. (S '25)
- Wall Street
Lefevre, E. Making of a stockbroker. (S '25)
- Walls
Vanderwalker, F. N. Interior wall decoration. (S '25)
Walt Whitman; a study. Whitman, W. (Ap '25)
Wandering Eros. Bianchi, M. G. (Ap '25)
Wanderings. Hamilton, C. (Ja '26)
Wanderings. Herrick, R. (O '25)
Wanderings and excursions. MacDonald, J. R. (S '25)
Wanderings through ancient Roman churches. Lanciani, R. A. (Mr '25)
- War
Custance, R. N. Study of war. (Ag '25)
Eddy, S., and Page, K. Abolition of war. (Ap '25)
Liddell Hart, B. H. Paris. (D '25)
Richet, C. R. Idiot man. (F '26)
- War (international law)
Spaight, J. M. Air power and war rights. (My '25)
- War of lost opportunities. Hoffman, M. (Ja '26)
- Ward, Arthur Sarsfield. See Rohmer, S., pseud. (Ag '25)
- Warde, Margaret, pseud. See Dunton, E. K. (F '26)
- Warning to the curious. James, M. R. (F '26)
- Washington, George
Haworth, P. L. George Washington, country gentleman. (Ag '25)
Washington, G. Diaries of George Washington, 1748-1799. (Ja '26)
- Washington, D.C.
Social life and customs
Colman, E. M. Seventy-five years of White House gossip. (Mr '25)
- Washington Irving, esquire. Hellman, G. S. (Je '25)
- Waste (economics)
Chase, S. Tragedy of waste. (D '25)
- Watch-dogs. Richardson, E. H. (O '25)
- Water-color painting
Richmond, L., and Littlejohns, J. Technique of water-colour painting. (F '26)
- Water supply
Cleverdon, W. S. L. Water supply of buildings and rural communities. (S '25)
Water supply of buildings and rural communities. Cleverdon, W. S. L. (S '25)
Watling's. Vachell, H. A. (My '25)
Way of all earth. Delano, E. (Ag '25)
Way of stars. Beck, L. A. (Ag '25)
Way of the makers. Wilkinson, M. O. (Ag '25)
Way of the wild. Sass, H. R. (D '25)
Way to peace, health, and power. Condé, B. (S '25)
Way to sketch. Blake, V. (D '25)
Wayfarer in Czecho-Slovakia. Robson, E. I. (N '25)
Wayfarer in Hungary. Hannay, J. O. (N '25)
Ways of life. Lull, R. S. (S '25)
Ways of the mind. Adams, H. F. (Mr '25)
We. Zamiatin, E. I. (Mr '25)
We must march. Morrow, H. (N '25)
We visit old inns. Northend, M. H. (S '25)
- Wealth
Campbell, C. G. Common wealth. (N '25)
Robson, W. A. Relation of wealth to welfare. (Ap '25)
- Weber, Joseph M.
Isman, F. Weber and Fields. (Mr '25)
Weber and Fields. Isman, F. (Mr '25)
- Wedgwood ware
Barnard, H. Chats on Wedgwood ware. (Mr '25)
- Week-end. Brackett, C. (S '25)
- Weekes, Agnes Russell. See Pryde, A., pseud. (My '25)
- Wellington, Arthur Wellesley, 1st duke of Fortescue, J. W. Wellington. (F '26)
Wellington. Fortescue, J. W. (F '26)
- Wells, Herbert George
Brown, I. J. C. H. G. Wells. (Ag '25)
- West, Elizabeth, pseud. See Wilson, M. (O '25)
- West
Description and travel
Ferguson, M. F. Motor camping on western trails. (My '25)
Flagg, J. M. Boulevards all the way—maybe. (Ja '26)
- History
Aikman, D., ed. Taming of the frontier. (N '25)
Paxson, F. L. History of the American frontier, 1763-1893. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
Wheeler, H. W. Buffalo days. (Ja '26)
- Social life and customs
Gerould, K. Aristocratic West. (Ja '26)
- West Indies
Description and travel
Manington, G. West Indies. (D '25)
West Indies. Manington, G. (D '25)
West of the Pacific. Huntington, E. (D '25)
- Western Australia
History
Battye, J. S. Western Australia. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
Western Australia. Battye, J. S. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
Western civilization and the Far East. King-Hall, S. (Ap '25)
Western shore. Crane, C. (Je '25)

- Whaling
Villiers, A. J. Whaling in the frozen South. (Ja '26)
- Whaling in the frozen South. Villiers, A. J. (Ja '26)
- Wharton, Anthony, pseud. See McAllister, A. (Ag '25)
- Wharton, Mrs Edith Newbold (Jones)
Lovett, R. M. Edith Wharton. (Ag '25)
- What a man wants. O'Brien, H. V. (Ja '26)
- What ails our youth? Coe, G. A. (Ap '25)
- What I believe. Russell, B. (Je, O '25)
- What I have seen and heard. MacNeill, J. G. S. (O '25)
- What I remember. Fawcett, M. (My '25)
- What is truth? Wells, G. (Ap '25)
- What men do. Jackson, W. M. (Ja '26)
- What of it? Lardner, R. W. (My '25)
- What shall I be? Ernst, C. H., ed. (Ap '25)
- What shall we play? Geister, E. (D '25)
- What the Coal commission found. Hunt, E. E., an others, eds. (Ja '26)
- What's o'clock. Lowell, A. (O '25)
- Wheat
Bailey, C. H. Chemistry of wheat flour. (Ja '26)
- When America was young. Faris, J. T. (Ja '26)
- When I grew up to middle age. Burt, M. S. (N '25)
- When life loses its zest. Myerson, A. (Ap '25)
- When the movies were young. Griffith, L. (D '25)
- White Indian. Sabin, E. L. (Je '25)
- White mountains
Atkinson, J. B. Skyline promenades. (Je '25)
- O'Kane, W. C. Trails and summits of the White mountains. (Ag '25)
- White Star line
Hayes, B. F. Hull down. (Ag '25)
- White trail's end. Von Ziekursch, T. (O '25)
- Whither. Powell, D. (My '25)
- Whither England? Trotsky, L., pseud. (N '25)
- Who should have wealth. Janes, G. M. (Ag '25)
- Who's who in the Bible. Allen, E. F. (Ag '25)
- Why China sees red. Weale-F., pseud. (F '26)
- Why I am a Christian. Crane, F. (S '25)
- Why I am a spiritual vagabond. Masson, T. L. (Je '25)
- Why we behave like human beings. Dorsey, G. A. (F '26)
- Wide-Open-Eye. Purdy, N. S. (O '25)
- Wife-ship woman. Penderexter, H. (Ap '25)
- Wiggin, Kate Douglas (Smith) (Mrs George Christopher Riggs)
Smith, N. A. Kate Douglas Wiggin as her sister knew her. (D '25)
- Wild-animal round-up. Hornaday, W. T. (F '26)
- Wild berry wine. Cannan, J. (Je '25)
- Wild birds. Totheroh, D. (Je '25)
- Wild geese. Ostenso, M. (D '25)
- Wild harvest. Oskison, J. M. (N '25)
- Wild marriage. Lehman, B. H. (Mr '25)
- Will-o-the-wisp. Dow, D. (Ag '25)
- William. Young, E. H. (O '25)
- William Austin. Austin, W. (S '25)
- William Austin Smith. Slattery, C. L. (Ap '25)
- William Blake in this world. Bruce, H. L. (Je '25)
- William Crawford Gorgas. Gorgas, M. D., and Hendrick, B. J. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- William Dean Howells. Firkins, O. W. (F '26 and 1924 Annual)
- William Graham Sumner. Starr, H. E. (S '25)
- William Mason. Draper, J. W. (My '25)
- William Robertson Nicoll. Darlow, T. H. (F '26)
- Williams, John Sharp
Dickson, H. Old-fashioned senator. (N '25)
- Wilmot, David
Going, C. B. David Wilmot, free-soiler. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Wind. (D '25)
- Windlestraw. Whitman, J. M. (My '25)
- Windows of night. Williams, C. (N '25)
- Winds and tides. Isham, J. C. (My '25)
- Winged defense. Mitchell, W. (N '25)
- Wings of desire. Dekobra, M. (D '25)
- Winners and losers. Rice, A. C. and C. Y. (N '25)
- Winning game. Dejeans, E. (Ag '25)
- Winter. Reymont, W. S. (Mr '25)
- Winter sports
Domville-Fife, C. W. Things seen in Switzerland in winter. (Ja '26)
- White, W. D. Book of winter sports. (Ap '25)
- Wisdom of the Hebrews. Brown, B., ed. (Ag '25)
- Witchcraft
Gemmell, W. N. Salem witch trials. (My '25)
- Watson, F. Philosophy of witchcraft. (S '25)
- With pencil, brush and chisel. Fuchs, E. (Ap '25)
- With shotgun and rifle in North American game fields. Robinson, B. W. (My '25)
- With this ring. Lea, F. H. (Ap '25)
- Wives. Bradford, G. (N '25)
- Wolf. Terhune, A. P. (S '25)
- Wolf man. Machard, A. (S '25)
- Wolseley, Garnet Joseph Wolseley, 1st viscount Maurice, F., and Arthur, G. C. A. Life of Lord Wolseley. (Mr '25)
- Wolves and the lamb. Fletcher, J. S. (Mr '25)
- Woman
Bousfield, E. G. P. Sex and civilization. (Je '25)
- Johnston, W. A. These women. (My '25)
- Biography
Bradford, G. Wives. (N '25)
- Mayne, E. C. Enchanters of men. (N '25)
- Employment
Levine, L. Women's garment workers. (Mr '25)
- Pruette, L. Women and leisure. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Health and hygiene
De Normandie, R. L. Expectant mother. (S '25)
- Sadler, W. S. Personality and health. (My '25)
- History and condition
George, W. L. Story of woman. (My '25)
- Royden, A. M. Church and woman. (Ag '25)
- Social and moral questions
Kirchwey, F., ed. Our changing morality. (Ap, Je '25)
- Ludovici, A. M. Lysistrata. (S '25)
- Pruette, L. Women and leisure. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Russell, D. W. Hypatia. (S '25)
- Woman I am. Lee, A., pseud. (My '25)
- Woman suffrage
Fawcett, M. What I remember. (My '25)
- Women. Tarkington, B. (F '26)
- Women and leisure. Pruette, L. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
- Women as ministers
Royden, A. M. Church and woman. (Ag '25)
- Women in politics
Clarke, I. C. Uncle Sam needs a wife. (Je '25)
- Women in Rome
Ferrero, G. Women of the Caesars. (S '25)
- Women of the Caesars. Ferrero, G. (S '25)
- Women's clubs
Winter, A. Business of being a club woman. (D '25)
- Women's garment workers. Levine, L. (Mr '25)
- Wonder book of plant life. Fabre, J. H. C. (Je '25)
- Wonder clock plays. Goldsmith, S. L. (Ja '26)
- Wonder of life. Blau, J. (S '25)
- Wood
Berry, J. B. Southern woodland trees. (Ag '25)
- Wood finishing
Jeffrey, H. R. Wood-finishing. (D '25)
- Woolen and worsted manufacture
Hickey-Freeman company. Story of cloth. (Ja '26)
- Words and Idioms. Smith, L. P. (O '25)

- Wordsworth, William
 Gingerich, S. F. Essays in the romantic poets. (Je '25)
 Morley, F. V. Dora Wordsworth, her book. (My '25)
Workers' education in England and the United States. Hodgen, M. T. (S '25)
Working manual of original sources in American government. Conover, M. (My '25)
Workmen's compensation insurance. Michelbacher, G. F., and Nial, T. N. (S '25)
World after the Peace conference. Toynbee, A. J. (D '25)
World and its meaning. Patrick, G. T. W. (My '25)
World court. Bustamente y Sirvén, A. S. de. (F '26)
World of the Incas. Hanstein, O. von. (O '25)
World of to-day. Johnston, H. H., and Guest, L. H. (Ap '26)
World politics
 Birkenhead, F. E. S., and others. Approaches to world problems. (Ap '25)
Wrangel island
 Stefánsson, V., and Knight, J. I. Adventure of Wrangel island. (Je '25)
Wright, Frances. See Darusmont, F. (Mr '25)
Writing of fiction. Wharton, E. N. (N '25)
Writing the one-act play. Hillebrand, H. N. (D '25)
- Y. Y., pseud. See Lynd, R. (Ap '25)
Yacht America. Thompson, W. M., and others. (N '25)
Yachts and yachting
 Thompson, W. M., and others. Yacht America. (N '25)
Year in the wonderland of birds. Hawksworth, H. (F '26)
Year of prophesying. Wells, H. G. (Ap, My '25)
Years of my pilgrimage. Ross, J. (Ap '25)
Yes, Lady Saheb. Seton, G. (D '25)
Yiddish newspapers
 Soltes, M. Yiddish press. (D '25)
Yiddish press. Soltes, M. (D '25)
You and I. Wadsley, O. (Je '25)
- You who have dreams. Anderson, M. (Ja '26)
Young, Brigham
 Werner, M. R. Brigham Young. (Ag '25)
Young Archimedes. Huxley, A. L. (Ag '25 and 1924 Annual)
Young delinquent. Burt, C. L. (F '26)
Young folk's book of discovery. Bridges, T. C. (O '25)
Young folk's book of the heavens. Proctor, M. (O '25)
Young man's fancy. McIntyre, J. T. (Je '25)
Young mischief and the perfect pair. De Sélin-court, H. (Ap '25)
Young Mrs Cruse. Meynell, V. (My '25)
Young people's cook book. McFee, I. N. (F '26)
Your home beautiful. Taylor, L. D. (Ja '26)
Your voice and you. Rogers, C. K. (D '25)
- Youth
 Coe, G. A. What ails our youth? (Ap '25)
 Hunter, A. A. Youth's adventure. (Ja '26)
Youth and the East. Candler, E. (D '25)
Youth in conflict. Van Waters, M. (Ag '25)
Youth rides west. Irwin, W. (Mr '25)
Youth's adventure. Hunter, A. A. (Ja '26)
- Yucatan
 Gann, T. W. F. In an unknown land. (Mr '25)
- Yugoslavia
 Gordon, J. and C. Two vagabonds in the Balkans. (Ap '25)
- Yule fire. Wilkinson, M. O. (Ja '26)
Y'understand. Glass, M. M. (D '25)
- Zionism
 Cohen, I. Journal of a Jewish traveller. (S '25)
 Friedman, E. M. Survival or extinction. (My '25)
 Lewisohn, L. Israel. (Ja '26)
 Roth, S. Now and forever. (S '25)
 Tharaud, J. and J. Next year in Jerusalem (S '25)
- Zoology
Nyasaland
 Coudenhove, H. My African neighbors. (N '25)

Directory of Publishers

- A. L. A. American Library Association, 86 E. Randolph St, Chicago
- Abingdon Press, 150 5th Av, N.Y.; 581 Boylston St, Boston; 405 5th Av, Pittsburgh, Pa.; 28 Elizabeth St, E. Detroit, Mich.; 420 Plum St, Cincinnati; 740 Rush St, Chicago; 1121 McGee St, Kansas City, Mo.; 7 City Hall Av, San Francisco; 304-313 Artisans Bldg, Portland, Ore.
- Adelphi Co. Adelphi Company, 10 E 43d St., N.Y.
- Allyn. Allyn & Bacon, 50 Beacon St, Boston (9) 1006 S Michigan Av, Chicago; 11 E 36th St, N.Y.
- Am. Child Health Assn. American Child Health Association, 370 7th Av, N.Y.
Formerly the Child Health Organization of America.
- Am. Electric Railway Assn. American Electric Railway Association, 8 W 40th St, N.Y.
- Am. Library Service. American Library Service, 500 5th Av, N.Y.
- Appleton. D. Appleton & Company, 29-35 W 32d St, N.Y.; 25 Bedford St, Covent Garden, London
Selling agents for University of Pennsylvania Publications
Have acquired the publications of Stewart-Kidd Company
- Assn. Press. Association Press, 347 Madison Av, N.Y.
- Associated Publishers, Inc., 1538 9th St, NW, Washington, D.C.
- Atlantic Monthly. Atlantic Monthly Press Publications
Books distributed by Little, Brown & Company
- Baird. Henry Carey Baird & Company, Inc., 2 W 45th St, N.Y.
- Baker, W.H. Walter H. Baker & Co., 41 Winter St, Boston
- Ballou, R.O. Robert O. Ballou, 6148 Ellis Av, Chicago
- Barnes, A. S. & Co. A. S. Barnes & Company, 7 W 45th St, N.Y.
- Benziger. Benziger Bros., 36-38 Barclay St, N.Y.; 205 W Washington St, Chicago; 343 Main St, Cincinnati
- Blakiston. P. Blakiston's Son & Co., 1012 Walnut St, Philadelphia
- Bobbs. Bobbs-Merrill Company, University Sq, Indianapolis, Ind.; 185 Madison Av, N.Y.
- Boni, A. & C. Albert and Charles Boni, 66 5th Av, N.Y.
Have acquired the publications of Lieber and Lewis
- Boni & Liveright. Boni & Liveright, 61 W 48th St, N.Y.
- Boyle, P. G. Peter G. Boyle, 275 W 17th St, N.Y.
- Brentano's, 5th Av & 27th St, N.Y.
- Brown, N. L. Nicholas L. Brown, See Maurice Christopher Pub. House. Christopher Publishing House, 1140 Columbus Av, Boston (20)
- Clark, A. H. Arthur H. Clark Company, 4027-4035 Prospect Av, Cleveland, O.
- Clode. E. J. Clode, 156 5th Av, N.Y.
- Codex Bk. Codex Book Company, Inc., 461 8th Av, N.Y.
- Columbia Univ. Press. Columbia University Press, Columbia University, N.Y.
Columbia university studies are published by Longmans
- Cosmopolitan Bk. Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, 119 W 40th St, N.Y. (formerly Hearst's International Lib.)
- Covici, P. Pascal Covici, Publisher, 208 S Wabash Av, Chicago
- Crofts. F. S. Crofts & Co., 66 5th, N.Y.
- Crowell. T. Y. Crowell Company, 387-393 4th Av, N.Y.
- Dial Press (Lincoln MacVeagh), 152 W 13th St, N.Y.
- Ditson. Oliver Ditson Company, 179 Tremont St, Boston
- Dodd, Dodd, Mead & Company, 4th Av & 10th St, N.Y.
Purchased the business of Moffat, Yard & Co.
- Doran. George H. Doran Company, 244 Madison Av, N.Y.; American Agents for Hodder & Stoughton, Ltd., London
- Dorrance. Dorrance & Co., Inc., Drexel Bldg, 5th and Chestnut St, Philadelphia
- Doubleday. Doubleday, Page & Company (Country Life Press) Garden City, N.Y.
- Drake, F.J. Frederick J. Drake & Co., 1006 S Michigan Av, Chicago
- Duffield. Duffield & Company, 211 E 19th St, N.Y.
- Dutton. E. P. Dutton & Company, 681 5th Av, N.Y.; American Agents for the London firms of J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd., George Routledge & Sons, Ltd., Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner Co.
- Essex inst. Essex Institute, Salem, Mass.
- Faxon. F. W. Faxon Company, 83 Francis St, Back Bay, Boston (17)
- Four Seas. Four Seas Company, 454 Stuart St, Boston
- French. S. Samuel French, 25 W 45 St, N.Y.
- Funk. Funk & Wagnalls Company, 354-360 4th Av, N.Y.; 134 Salisbury Sq, London, E.C. 4
- Ginn. Ginn & Company (Educational publishers), 15 Ashburton Place, Boston (2); 2301-2311 Prairie Av, Chicago; 70 5th Av, N.Y., 95 Luckie St, Atlanta, Ga.; 1913 Bryan St, Dallas, Tex.; 199 E Gay St, Columbus, O.; 45 2d St, San Francisco; 7 Queen Sq, Southampton Row, London, W.C. 1
- Greenberg, Publisher, Inc., 112 E 19th St, N.Y.
- Carnegie Inst. Carnegie Institution of Washington, 16th & P St., NW, Washington, D.C.
- Century. Century Company, 353 4th Av, N.Y.
- Chelsea House, 79-89 7th Av, N.Y.
- Chemical Catalog Co. Chemical Catalog Co., Inc., 19 E 24th St, N.Y.
- Chemical pub. co. Chemical Publishing Company, 300 N 3d St, Easton, Pa.

Haas. R. K. Haas, Inc., 218 W 40th St, N.Y.
 Harcourt. Harcourt, Brace & Company, 383
 Madison Av, N.Y.; American Agents for G.
 Bell & Sons, Ltd., London
 Harper. Harper & Brothers, 49 E 33d St, N.Y.
 Harvard Univ. Press. Harvard University
 Press, Cambridge (38), Mass.
 Holt. Henry Holt & Company, 1 Park Av,
 N.Y.; for educational books only: 2451 Prairie
 Av, Chicago; 6 Park St, Boston; 149 New Montgomery St, San Francisco
 Houghton. Houghton Mifflin Company (Riverside Press, Cambridge), 2 Park St, Boston;
 16 E 40th St, N.Y.; 2451-2459 Prairie Av, Chicago; 612 Howard St, San Francisco
 Huebsch, B. W. See Viking Press
 Hyman-McGee. See Washington Bk. Co.

International Pub. Co. International Publishers Co., Inc., 381 4th Av, N.Y.

Jacobs. George W Jacobs & Co. See Macrae
 Smith Co.
 Jewish Pub. Jewish Publication Society of America, Broad St & Girard Av, Philadelphia; 148 E 57th St, N.Y.
 Johns Hopkins. Johns Hopkins Press, Homewood, Baltimore

Knopf. Alfred A. Knopf, 730 5th Av, N.Y.

Lantern press. Lantern Press, Gelber, Lilienthal, Inc. (At the Sign of the Lantern), 336
 Sutter St, San Francisco
 Lauriat. Charles E. Lauriat Company, 385
 Washington St, Boston
 Lawren. Joseph Lawren, 220 W 42d St, N.Y.
 Lieber & Lewis. See Boni, A. & C.
 Lippincott. J. B. Lippincott Company, East
 Washington Sq, Philadelphia; 2126 Prairie Av,
 Chicago
 Little. Little, Brown & Company, 34 Beacon St,
 Boston
 Longmans. Longmans, Green & Company, 55
 5th Av, Cor 12th St, N.Y.; sole American agents for Edward Arnold, London
 Lothrop. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., 275 Congress St, Boston
 A consolidation of Lee & Shepard and The Lothrop Company
 Luce, J.W. John W. Luce & Co., 212 Summer
 St, Boston
 Lyons & Carnahan, 221 E 20th St, Chicago; 131
 E 23d St, N.Y.

Macaulay. Macaulay Company, 115-117 E 23d
 St, N.Y.
 McBride. Robert M. McBride & Company, 7 W
 16th St, N.Y.
 McClurg. A. C. McClurg & Company, 330-352
 E Ohio St, Chicago
 McGraw. McGraw-Hill Book Company, Penn
 Terminal Bldg, 370 7th Av, N.Y.; 6-8 Bouverie
 St, London, E.C. 4
 Macmillan. The Macmillan Company, 60 5th
 Av, N.Y.; Prairie Av & 25th St, Chicago; 330
 S Harwood St, Dallas, Tex.; Huntington
 Chambers, Copley Sq, Boston; 17 Houston St,
 Atlanta, Ga.; 350 Mission St, San Francisco;
 St Martin's House, 70 Bond St, Toronto, Canada; St Martin's St, Leicester Sq, London,
 W.C. 2; American Agents for Cambridge University Press
 Macrae Smith Co. Macrae Smith Company, 1712
 Ludlow St, Philadelphia
 Purchased the business of George W.
 Jacobs & Company

Manual Arts Press, 237 N Monroe St Peoria, Ill.
 Marquis. A. N. Marquis & Company, 440 S
 Dearborn St, Chicago
 Marshall Jones. Marshall Jones Company, 212
 Summer St, Boston
 Maurice. Frank Maurice, Inc., 15 W 37th St,
 N.Y.
 Acquired the publications of N. L. Brown
 prior to 1926
 Medici Soc. Medici Society of America, 755
 Boylston St, Boston
 Miner. William Harvey Miner Company, 712
 Pine St, St Louis
 Acquired the publications of the Torch
 Press of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and the Sigma Publishing Co.
 Minton, Balch & Co. Minton, Balch & Company,
 11-17 E 45th St, N.Y.
 Morehouse. Morehouse Publishing Company,
 1801 Fond du Lac Av, Milwaukee, Wis.,
 American Agents for A. R. Mowbray & Co.,
 London

National Bur. of Economic Research. National Bureau of Economic Research, 474 W 24th St,
 N.Y.
 N. Y. Univ. Press. New York University Press,
 32 Waverly Pl, N.Y.
 Nickerson & Collins Co. Nickerson & Collins
 Company, 5707 W Lake St, Chicago

Open ct. Open Court Publishing Company, 122
 S Michigan Av, Chicago
 Oxford. Oxford University Press (American Branch), 35 W 32d St, N.Y.
 Agents for the publications of Henry
 Frowde

Penn. Penn Publishing Company, 925 Filbert
 St, Philadelphia
 Pitman. Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, 2-6 W 45th
 St, N.Y.
 Prentice-Hall, Inc., 70 5th Av, N.Y.
 Princeton Univ. Press. Princeton University Press, Princeton, N.J.
 Putnam. G. P. Putnam's Sons (Knickerbocker Press), Putnam Bldg, 2-6 W 45th St, N.Y.;
 24 Bedford St, Strand, London

Rand. Rand McNally & Company, 538 S Clark
 St, Chicago; 270 Madison Av, N.Y.; 125 E
 6th St, Los Angeles, Cal.
 Reilly & Lee. Reilly & Lee Co., 536 Lake Shore
 Drive, Chicago
 Renard. The Charles Renard Company, 21 E
 40th St, N.Y.
 Republic Pub. Co. Republic Publishing Company, 421 W 21st St, N.Y.
 Revell. Fleming H. Revell & Company, 158 5th
 Av, N.Y.; 17 N Wabash Av, Chicago; 21 Paternoster Sq, London, E.C. 4
 Richards. B.G. Bernard G. Richards Co., Inc.,
 414 Madison Av, N.Y.
 Ronald. Ronald Press Company, 15 E 26th St,
 N.Y.
 Russell Sage Foundation, 130 E 22d St, Cor.
 Lexington Av, N.Y.

Scientific American Pub. Scientific American
 Publishing Co., 233 Broadway, N.Y.
 Scientific Bk. Corp. Scientific Book Corporation,
 15 E 26th St, N.Y.
 Successors to U.P.C. Bk.

Scott. Scott, Foresman & Company, 623-633 S Wabash Av, Chicago; 3-5 W 19th St, N.Y.
 Scribner. Charles Scribner's Sons, 597 5th Av, N.Y.; 320 E 21st St, Chicago; American Agents for the Architectural Publication of B. T. Batsford, Ltd., London
 Seltzer. Thomas Seltzer, Inc., 5 W 50th St, N.Y.
 Shaw, A. W. A. W. Shaw Company, 660 Cass St, Chicago; 342 Madison Av, N.Y.; 43-4 Shoe Lane, London, E.C. 4
 Siebel Pub. Corp. Siebel Publishing Corporation, 32-34 W 20th St, N.Y.
 Silver. Silver Burdett & Co., 41 Union Sq, W, N.Y.; 221 Columbus Av, Boston; 221 E 20th St, Chicago; 39 Division St, Newark, N.J.; 149 New Montgomery St, San Francisco
 Simmons-Boardman. Simmons-Boardman Publishing Co., 30 Church St, N.Y.
 Simon & Schuster. Simon & Schuster, Inc., 37 W 57th St, N.Y.
 Small. Small, Maynard & Company, 41 Mt Vernon St, Boston
 State Co. State Company, Columbia, S.C.
 Stechert. G. E. Stechert & Co., [Alfred Hafner], 31-33 E 10th St, N.Y.
 Stewart Kidd. See Appleton
 Stokes. F. A. Stokes Company, 443-449 4th Av, N.Y.
 Stratford. Stratford Company, 234-240 Boylston St, Boston (9)
 Sully. George Sully & Co., 114 E 25th St., N.Y.

Teachers College, Columbia University, 525 W 120th St, N.Y.
 Times-Mirror. Times-Mirror Printing & Binding House, 118 S Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal.
 Torch Press. See Miner.

U. P. C. Bk. U. P. C. Book Company, see Scientific Bk. corp.
 Univ. of Cal. University of California, Berkeley, Cal.
 Address University Press, California Hall, Berkeley
 Univ. of Chicago Press. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago

Univ. of Ill. Press. University of Illinois Press, Urbana, Ill.
 For Univ. studies, address Editor, 305 University Hall, Urbana, Ill.
 Univ. of N.C. University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N.C.
 Univ. of Pittsburgh. University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Van Nostrand. D. Van Nostrand Company, 8 Warren St, N.Y.
 Viking Press, Inc., 30 Irving Pl, N.Y.
 B. W. Huebsch, publishing house, has been merged with this company
 Vinal. H. Vinal, 45 E 55th St, N.Y.

Washington Bk. Co. Washington Book Company, 1012 N Rush St, Chicago
 Successors to Hyman-McGee
 Watt, G. Howard. G. Howard Watt, 1819 Broadway, N.Y.
 Wiley. John Wiley & Sons, 432 4th Av, N.Y.
 Williams & Wilkins. Williams & Wilkins Company, Mt Royal and Guilford Aves, Baltimore
 Wilson. H. W. H. W. Wilson Company, 958-972 University Av, N.Y.
 Winston. John C. Winston Company, 1006-1016 Arch St, Philadelphia; 629 S Wabash St, Chicago
 World Bk. World Book Company, Park Hill, Yonkers-on-Hudson, N.Y.; 2126 Prairie Av, Chicago; 108 W Peach Tree St, Atlanta, Ga.; 1307 Pacific Av, Dallas, Tex.; 149 Montgomery St, San Francisco; 100 5th St, Portland, Ore.
 Purchased the business of the Globe School Book Co.
 Writers Pub. Co. Writers Publishing Co., Inc., 9 W 64th St, N.Y.

Yale Univ. Press. Yale University Press, 143 Elm St, New Haven, Conn.; 522 5th Av, N.Y.

R

Z

1219

C95

1925

2-28-60

51376

GTU LIBRARY

3 2400 00643 0718

Reference Room
San Francisco Theological Seminary
MUST NOT BE REMOVED

2/ ch

